Right of Bank to apply Funds of Customer to meet Acceptance.—In an action against a banker for not honouring a customer's cheque for 7l. 11s., it appeared that on the 20th March the balance in his favour was 21l. 4s. On that day an acceptance of the customer, made payable by him at his banker for 42l., was presented and paid. The cheque was presented a week afterwards. On the 20th, after the acceptance had been paid, a clerk of the banker called on the customer to know what should be done about that acceptance, not stating that it had been paid; he directed that it should not be paid; the clerk endeavoured to get the money back, marking the acceptance as paid and cancelled by mistake, but did not succeed; and the banker, on the 24th March, honoured a cheque drawn by the same customer for 13l. 13s.—Held, that the banker had authority to apply the funds of the customer in his hands towards payment of the acceptance; and that what took place afterwards did not alter or destroy the authority. Keymer v. Laurie, 18 L. J., Q. B. 218; 13 Jur. 426.

The plaintiff was holder of a foreign bill of exchange which the acceptor had made payable at the defendant's banking house in London. The bill was delivered to the defendant by the plaintiff's banker on the morning of the day it became due. The defendant (acting throughout according to the practice of London bankers), intending to pay the bill, and having sufficient assets of the acceptor in his hands, drew lines across and along the name of the acceptor; but in the course of the day, having received orders from the acceptor not to pay, he wrote upon the bill the words, "cancelled by mistake; orders not to pay," and in that state returned it the same afternoon to the plaintiff's bankers.—Held, first, that this was a cancellation and defacing of the acceptance; secondly, that it was a cancellation by error and mistake; thirdly, that the defendant had taken due care to prevent the acceptance from being defaced; fourthly, that the defendant was not liable to pay the amount of the bill; and, lastly, that the only duty imposed on him was to take due care of the bill, and if he did not choose to pay it, to return it uncanceled, unless cancelled by mistake, and in that case to indicate that it had been so cancelled. Warwick v. Rogers, 5 M. & G. 340; 6 Scott, N. R. 1; 12 L. J., C. P. 113.

In an action by a customer of a bank against bankers to try their right to debit him with a bill, it appeared that the plaintiff was drawer of the bill, which was accepted payable at the bank. The plaintiff discounted the bill with the bank, and indorsed it to them; they re-discounted the bill, and indorsed it to the re-discounter. On the maturity of the bill, it was presented by the holder at the bank, along with several other bills payable there, all of which bore the bank's indorsement. The bank paid the amount of the whole without any indication of whether they paid as indorsees or as agents for the acceptors. The account of the acceptor of this bill was at this time overdrawn; he stopped payment on that day, and on the next notice of dishonour was given by the bank to the plaintiff, and he was debited with the amount. It was left to the jury to say whether the bank paid the bill on their own account as indorsees, or as agents of the acceptor. The jury found that they paid as indorsees.—Held, that the question was properly left, that the bank had a right to pay the bill as indorsees, reserving to themselves time to inquire whether they would honour the bill or not, that it was a question of fact whether they intended to do so, and that there was no obligation on them to inform the holders in what capacity they paid. Pollard v. Ogden, 2 El. & Bl. 459; 22 L. J., Q. B. 439.

Bank dishonouring Acceptance—Presentment made after Banking Hours.—Where a customer of the Bank of England was in the habit of making his acceptances payable at the bank, and one of such acceptances being presented for payment at eleven o'clock in the morning was dishonoured for want of assets, and was presented again by a notary at six o'clock in the evening when the same answer was given by a person stationed for that purpose.—Held, that the bank, although they had before six o'clock received assets, was not bound to pay the bill, it being after the usual hours of business. Whitaker v. Bank of England, 1 C., M. & R. 744; 5 Tyr. 268; 6 C. & P. 700; 1 Gale, 54.

6. AUTHORITY TO ACCEPT AGAINST BILLS OF LADING.

A customer of a bank having desired them to procure to be accepted bills of exchange which a correspondent of his would draw against bills of lading he should send, and the bank having got their agents to accept the bills of exchange on a document which was sent to them as, and purported to be, the bill of lading referred to, but which was in fact a forgery, no goods having been shipped, and the transaction being a fraud on the part of the customer's correspondent.—Held, that the bank was entitled to recover from the customer the amount they had paid in respect of the bills of exchange. Woods v. Thiedemann, 1 H. & C. 478; 10 W. R. 846.

7. ACTING AS AGENTS.

The defendant kept an account with the Hull Bank, upon the terms that they should procure P. & Co., their London agents, to accept on their credit bills drawn by the foreign correspondents of the defendant against their consignments to them, and of which P. & Co. were advised by the Hull Bank. The defendant paid the Hull Bank a quarter per cent. on the amount of the acceptances, and P. & Co. a fixed annual sum for transacting his London business. When a bill was accepted by P. & Co. the Hull Bank debited the defendant with the amount, and they charged him interest from the time the bill was due. The Hull Bank became bankrupt, and P. & Co. paid all bills accepted by them which were due after the bankruptcy:—Held, that the assignees of the Hull Bank, and not P. & Co., were entitled to recover from the defendant the amount of such bills. Barkworth v. Ellerman, 6 H. & N. 605; 7 Jur., N. S. 829; 9 W. R. 377—Ex. Ch.

8. SECURITIES, DEPOSIT, PLEDGE, AND MORTGAGE.

Right of Bank to negotiate Bills of Customer—Pledge and Deposit.—Bankers may pledge bills deposited with them by a customer, though such customer is a creditor, when the parties receiving the bills are unacquainted with that circumstance. Collins v. Martin, 1 B. & P. 648; 2 Esp. 250.

So, they may negotiate them to such an extent as the necessary demands of the customer require, without his express authority. Thompson v. Giles, 3 D. & R. 733.

Where indorsed bills of exchange are deposited by a customer with a banker, the latter has the absolute power of disposing of them. Such absolute power, however, may be qualified by circumstances: as where the banker is agent for his country correspondent, to receive and pay bills for him, with an allowance for so doing; or, where, in an annual account stated between them, the banker has entered the bills as the property of the correspondent in the one case, considering him as a factor, and the bills as remitted for a particular purpose, viz., to be received and carried to account as cash when due, and his power over them limited to that object: in the second case, raising an express declaration of trust. Pearce, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 232; 19 Ves. jun. 25.

When a banker's acceptances exceed the cash balance in his hands, he holds collateral securities for value. Bosanquet v. Dudman, 1 Stark. 1.

He may recover against the acceptor of an accommodation bill (deposited with him as a collateral security before it became due), although the party who deposited the bill had it in his hands when it became due, and had received satisfaction from the drawer. Id.

A., having been in partnership with B., on the dissolution undertook to collect and pay the partnership debts. A. and B., during their partnership, had kept a joint account with a branch bank; but after the dissolution there was only a single account of A. kept there. A., having greatly overdrawn that account, obtained a promissory note from B., his former partner, which he endorsed to the bank as a security for his debt, just previous to a quarterly inspection of the accounts of the branch, the clerk who managed the branch promising that it should not be presented. He, however, kept it, and it was found among the securities of the branch, in his portfolio, when he was discharged from his situation:—Held, that the directors of the bank might recover the amount from B. Bosanquet v. Forster, 9 C. & P. 659.

Bills not due—Bankruptcy of Bank before Bills become Due.—A customer was in the habit of indorsing, and paying into his bankers' hands, bills not due, which were immediately entered as cash to his credit, to the full amount, and he was then at liberty to draw for that amount by cheques on the bank. The bankers became bankrupt, and at the period of their bankruptcy they had in their possession bills paid in by their customer, but not then due; and there was likewise at that time a balance of cash, independently of the bills, in favour of the customer. The evidence failed to show that the customer knew of the manner in which the bankers had dealt with the bills, although it was admitted that there was an understanding between the customer and the bankers, that the latter should deal with the bills as their property whenever the state of the account might require it:—Held, that the bills did not form part of the bankrupts' assets; and their assignees were accordingly ordered to deliver them up to the customer. Barkworth, Ex parte, 2 De G. & J. 194; 27 L. J., Bk. 5; 4 Jur., N. S. 547.

Shares deposited by Partner—Subsequent Bankruptcy of Firm.—M., senior partner of M. & L., was owner of railway shares, which he had deposited with a bank where the firm had a joint account, and where he also had a separate account. The deposit was accompanied with a written memorandum that the shares were to be held as a collateral security for a note of his own which had been discounted by the bank, or for any other sum or sums of money in which he might thereafter become indebted to them; and he empowered the bank to sell the shares should the note, or any other advance, not be regularly paid at maturity. The shares subsequently became the property of the firm. M. & L. became bankrupt. On their bankruptcy there was a large sum due from them to the bank, which was unsecured:—Held, that the bank was not entitled to hold and retain the shares as security for the debt due from the bankrupts jointly. McKenna, Ex parte, Mortimore, In re, 30 L. J., Bk. 20; 7 Jur., N. S. 588; 9 W. R. 490.

Note paid to Bank—Death of Maker insolvent—New Note by Wife—Her Liability.—A banking firm advanced money to A., and took a note for such advance, which was signed by A. and his wife, who had no separate property. A. died insolvent; nine days after his death, one of the partners in the bank went to the house of the widow, taking with him a proper stamp, and asked her if she could pay any money on account, and on her answering that she could not, obtained her signature to a new note written by himself upon the stamp. It being doubtful whether the widow knew that she was not liable upon the original note and nothing having been mentioned at the interview concerning her non-liability:—Held, that the note so obtained was invalid. Coward v. Hughes, 1 Kay & Johnson, 443.

— When note made jointly by Husband and Wife.—But where a woman, with separate estate, joined with her husband in a note, payable on demand, to secure the balance against him at his bankers, and the balance continued against him till his death, which happened seven years afterwards, and after that event she signed a note for the unsecured balance:—Held, that the foregoing transaction constituted a good consideration for the latter note. La Touche v. La Touche, 3 H. & C. 576; 34 L. J., Ex. 85; 11 Jur., N. S. 271; 13 W. R. 563; 11 L. T. 773.

Negligence—Claim of Banker.—Where the bankers of an individual member of a firm, knowing that the firm banked elsewhere, received from and discounted for their customer bills of exchange, purporting to be drawn and indorsed by the firm, and also indorsed by the customer, the signatures of the firm as drawers and indorsers and of the customer as indorser, as well as the whole of the bills with the exception of the signatures of the acceptors, being in the customer's handwriting:—Held, that the transaction shewed on its face a conversion by the customer of partnership property to his own purposes; and that the bankers had been guilty of great negligence in abstaining from inquiry; and they could only claim as against the customer's co-partners so far as the customer himself might have claimed compensation from them in respect of moneys paid by him out of his private account for partnership purposes. Darlington District Joint Stock Banking Company, Ex parte, Riches, In re, & De G., J. & S. 581.

Improper Sale of Bonds—Measure of Damages.—A banking company who were mortgagees of Spanish bonds, employed the defendant to raise money upon them by deposit in his own name; the party with whom the defendant deposited them called on the defendant for repayment, and, on default, sold the bonds, with the concurrence of the defendant, without the knowledge of the company, and paid the balance of the proceeds to the defendant. The company was afterwards compelled by their mortgagor to replace the bonds or their value:—Held, that the defendant was answerable to the company for the market price of the bonds at the time of the actual sale, and that he was not answerable for the value of the bonds at any other time. Gordon v. Pym, 3 Hare, 223.

Effect of Security—Onus of Proof.—On a question of evidence whether a security was intended to cover a particular debt (present or future) or the balance of an account current, the burden of proof is on those who assert that it was intended to secure the balance of the account current. Boys, In re, Eedes v. Boys, 10 L. R., Eq. 467; 39 L. J., Ch. 655.

Benefit of Securities.—By the Australian Act, 22 & 23 Vict. 1859, the South Australian Branch of the National Bank of Australia is constituted a bank of issue, with all such powers as are usual for establishments carrying on the business of banking; and by s. 7, such bank is empowered to take and hold for reimbursement only, not for profit, freehold and leasehold lands, houses, &c., in satisfaction of any debt due to the bank, or security for any liability previously incurred, but not in anticipation of such, and to sell and dispose of the same; provided, that it shall not be lawful for the bank to advance or lend money upon the security of lands, houses, &c. A., who had an account with the bank in 1861, obtained leave to overdraw to the extent of 10,000*l.* on the security of the deposit of title deeds respecting lands; having, however, in 1866, overdrawn to an amount exceeding 13,000*l.*, the bank brought an action against him for that amount, and recovered judgment, but agreed not to enforce the judgment in consideration that the title deeds so deposited were to remain as security for the money due, for which judgment was, after the approaching harvest, to be signed, and the land sold for the liquidation of such debt. Judgment was accordingly signed; but before the lands were sold he was declared insolvent, and the bank, under the provisions of the Colonial Insolvent Act of 1860, required the assignees, to whom the title deeds were delivered, to sell the lands, which they accordingly did, and paid the proceeds of the sale into court. To a bill filed by the bank against the assignees claiming the benefit of these securities, and for the proceeds of the sale, the assignees put in a general demurrer on the ground, that the title deeds were deposited for future advances to be made by the bank contrary to the provisions of the act of 1869:—Held, that there being in 1866 a valid subsisting debt between the bank and A., the agreement then made was within the enabling part of the 7th section of the act, and the demurrer overruled. National Bank of Australasia v. Cherry, 3 L. R., P. C. 299.

Charge on Calls.—A company being in want of funds, its directors obtained an advance from the company's bankers, for which they gave their promissory notes, and passed resolutions making the advance a charge on a call then made and on one made a few months previously. The directors were called upon to pay and paid the balance due on their promissory notes, and they also advanced other moneys for the benefit of the company:—Held, that the bankers had obtained a valid charge on the calls, and that the directors were entitled to the benefit of that charge as well for what they had paid in respect of their promissory notes as for what they had advanced independently. International Life Assurance Society, In re, Gibbs, Ex parte, 10 L. R., Eq. 312; 39 L. J., Ch. 667; 23 L. T. 350; 18 W. R. 970.

Mortgage.—A company in difficulties, but not in the immediate prospect of winding-up, deposited the deeds of freehold property with their bankers, to secure their current account, then largely overdrawn. They afterwards continued to draw upon their account, and to pay in moneys for a period of two months until the bank stopped payment. The company resolved upon a voluntary winding-up rather more than six months after the transaction:—Held, that the mortgage was valid. Patent File Company, In re, Birmingham Banking Company, Ex parte, 6 L. R., Ch. 83; 40 L. J., Ch. 190.

A banker holding securities which have been deposited with him by way of equitable mortgage, must deliver up the securities upon being paid the amount covered by the deposit. Adair, Ex parte, Gross, In re, 24 L. T. 198.

Trust Money.—A trustee laid out trust-money, together with other money in his hands, upon mortgage in his own name, and executed a declaration of trust as to so much of the mortgage debt as represented the trust-money. He afterwards deposited the mortgage deed with his bankers as security for money advanced to him, and absconded. In the absence of negligence on the part of the cestui que trust, the deposit of the deed passed no interest in the trust fund to the bankers. Stackhouse v. Jersey (Countess), 30 L. J., Ch. 421.

Debt growing Due.—N. arranged with a banking company that all his acceptances should be made payable at the bank, he providing the bank with approved remittances prior to the maturity of such acceptances. He afterwards handed to the bank bills drawn by him on and accepted by a third party. Before these bills arrived at maturity he mortgaged to the bank all remittances in cash, bills, or produce then on their way to him from Barbadoes; and it was agreed that such remittances should be held by the bank as a security to it as long as any debt should be due or growing due from him to the bank under the existing or any future arrangement. The bills were dishonoured:—Held, that the contingent liability of N. in respect of the bills was a debt growing due within the meaning of the security. Merchants' Bank of London v. Maud, 19 W. R. 657.

Proving.]—A banking company at the request of A., a speculator in cotton, issued a letter of credit authorizing J., a merchant at Pernambuco, to draw upon them to the amount of 10,000*l.*, the drafts to be covered by bills of lading of cotton, to be addressed to the company by the same mail which should bring the acceptances; on receipt of which bills the company engaged to honour the draft. A similar letter of credit for 17,000*l.* was issued to J. at the request of B., another speculator in cotton. J. accordingly drew drafts under the first letter of credit to the amount of 9,690*l.* 0*s.* 9*d.*, and under the second letter of credit to the amount of 13,062*l.* 15*s.* 1*d.* The first set was accepted by the banking company, which received the corresponding bills of lading. The second set was not presented till after the banking company had stopped payment, and was therefore not accepted. The first set was dishonoured:—Held, that the cotton represented by the bills of lading was the property of the banking company, and that J. could only prove against the company for the amount of the several bills after deducting the value of the cotton which was sold, and the proceeds received by J. Banner v. Johnston, Barned's Banking Company, In re, 5 L. R., H. L. 157; 40 L. J., Ch. 730; 24 L. T. 542.

Extent of Security.]—The articles of association of a company provided that all securities made on behalf of the company should be sealed with the company's seal, signed by two of the directors and countersigned by the secretary, and when so sealed, signed, and countersigned, should be valid and enforceable against the company. The company requiring accommodation from their bankers, the directors passed a resolution, that certain title deeds should be deposited with the bankers as collateral security for bills under discount, and the deeds were deposited accordingly. The bankers then discounted bills directly for the company, and also bills for third persons on which the company was liable, and the company being afterwards wound up, the bankers sold the property comprised in the title deeds for a sum greater than would cover the amount due on the bills directly discounted, but less than their general debt:—Held, first, that the deposit was only intended as a security for bills discounted directly for the company. General Provident Assurance Company, In re, National Bank, Ex parte, 14 L. R., Eq. 507; 41 L. J., Ch. 823; 27 L. T. 433; 20 W. R. 939.

Held, secondly, that the bankers not being officers of the company had not imposed upon them the duty of seeing that the formalities required by the articles of association were complied with; and that the equitable mortgage by deposit was valid, although these formalities were not complied with, and although it was not registered under the Companies Act, 1862, s. 43. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the bankers had, as mortgagees, a right to retain as against the liquidators of the company the balance which would remain in their hands after paying the amount due on the bills directly discounted for the company, in satisfaction of their general debt. Ib.

H. & Co., at Manchester, consigned goods for sale to L. & Co., at Hong Kong, upon the terms that the proceeds should be remitted to H. & Co. to meet the acceptances of L. & Co. L. & Co. indorsed the bill of lading for consideration to their bankers, and on the arrival of the goods they were delivered to the bankers. The bill of lading omitted the words "or order of assigns:—" Held, that the omission of these words did not operate as notice of the agreement between H. & Co. and L. & Co., and that the bankers had a good legal and equitable title to the goods. Henderson & Co. v. Comptoir d'Escompte de Paris, 5 L. R., P. C. 253; 42 L. J., P. C. 60; 29 L. T. 192; 21 W. R. 873.

A wool broker gave to a bank, to secure an advance, a letter of hypothecation on certain wools, promising to lodge warehouse warrants for them next day. The bank made repeated application for the warrants, but did not obtain them. After a few days, the broker having left his house, the bankers by pressure obtained the keys of his warehouse, where the wool was stored, and took possession. Part of the wool had belonged to a customer of the broker, but he was under advances and made no claim:—Held, that the bank acquired a valid charge on the wool under the provisions of the Factors Act, 6 & 7 Vict. c. 39. North Western Bank, Ex parte, Slee, In re, 15 L. R., Eq. 69; 42 L. J., Bk. 6; 27 L. T. 461; 21 W. R. 69.

In leaving his house the broker was, as it turned out, absconding:—Held, that the bank had no notice of this. Ib.

By an instrument under seal dated the 2nd of November, a customer gave to his bankers a charge on the premises mentioned in the schedule as a security for all moneys then due or thereafter to become due from him to them, subject to a prior mortgage of the 3rd of October to a building society, and he covenanted to execute a legal mortgage when required. The schedule described the property as "three leasehold houses in Coity held by the mortgagor under a lease of the 25th of September." The lease of the 25th of September in fact comprised only one house. There was evidence that on the 2nd of November the bankers agreed to make further advances to the customer, upon his giving them satisfactory security; that he then offered to give them a charge upon three leasehold houses, which he pointed out to the manager; that the manager agreed to accept those three houses as security; and that the deed of charge was then drawn up at the bank, the description in the schedule being inserted from the customer's instructions. One only of the three houses thus pointed out was comprised in the lease of the 25th of September, and the two others were comprised in a lease of the 31st of December, which, as well as the lease of the 25th of September, was subject to a prior mortgage to the building society:—Held, that this evidence was admissible, and that the bankers were entitled to a charge on the two houses comprised in the lease of the 31st of December. Boulter, In re, National Provincial Bank of England, Ex parte, 4 Ch. D. 241; 46 L. J., Bk. 11; 35 L. T. 673; 25 W. R. 100.

Bankers at Lima established a credit agency with the General Company in London, and agreed to send remittances within ninety days to cover drafts. The General Company, being in difficulties, obtained an advance of money from the Peruvian Bank, to be repaid out of expected remittances from the Lima Bank, to cover bills then current, and the Peruvian Bank employed as agents to receive and select from the expected securities, the managing director of the General Company and their own managing director, who had been, two years previously, the manager of the General Company, and was cognizant of and party to the arrangement with the Lima Bank. The securities were selected by and handed over to the Peruvian Bank upon their arrival, and the following day the General Company stopped payment and was wound up:—Held, that the Lima Bank had no title to recover the securities from the Peruvian Bank. Banco de Lima v. Anglo-Peruvian Bank, 8 Ch. D. 160; 38 L. T. 130.

A merchant in London obtained from his bankers a letter of credit for 15,000*l.* as security; the merchant, who was shipping goods to S. in Uruguay, handed to the bankers the shipping documents and bills drawn by him upon and accepted by S., and also authorized the bankers to realize the goods in case of a deficiency. Some of the bills were dishonoured on presentation, and on the bankers threatening to sell the goods, the merchant handed to them 2,500*l.* as collateral security for payment of the bills, at the same time asking them to adopt such measures for the settlement of the business as were likely to cause the merchant the least possible loss. Subsequently an arrangement was made between S. and the bankers, to which he was not a party, and by which the materials were to be realized by the bankers, and the bills to be given up to S. The value of the materials and the 2,500*l.* did not together amount to 15,000*l.*:—Held, that the merchant was not entitled to recover from the bankers the 2,500*l.*, as the cancellation of the bills, although absolute as far as the right to sue upon them was concerned, did not take away their right to retain the 2,500*l.* under their contract with the merchant. Yglesias v. Mercantile Bank of the River Plate, 3 C. P. D. 330; 38 L. T. 464; 26 W. R. 454.

Liability for Loss or Theft of Securities—Deposit for Safe Custody—Bank not receiving Commission.—Securities deposited by a customer with his bankers for safe keeping, were stolen by a clerk of the bankers:—Held, that the bankers were not liable unless the loss was occasioned by their gross negligence. Giblin v. M'Mullen, 2 L. R., P. C. 317; 38 L. J., P. C. 25; 21 L. T. 214; 17 W. R. 445.

A customer deposited with his bankers a box containing securities, of which he kept the key. The box was kept in a strong room of the bank, where the manager's box was, containing the securities of the bank. Access to the strong room was only obtained by passing through a compartment where a cashier sat by day and a messenger slept by night. In this compartment was a door leading to the strong room, which room had two iron doors opened by separate keys, which during the day were kept by the cashier who occupied the compartment. This cashier stole the securities. The bank received no consideration for taking care of the securities of their customers:—Held, that, under the circumstances, there was no evidence of negligence to render the bank liable for the loss of his securities. Id.

A customer, who kept an account with a banker, made a special deposit of certain bonds for safe keeping, paying nothing for the privilege; the bonds were stolen by the teller of the bank, who had always borne a good character:—Held, first, that the bank was a gratuitous bailee, and as such not liable, except for gross negligence. Scott v. National Bank of Chester Valley, 10 Canada L. J., N. S. 182.

Held, secondly, that neither the fact, that the bank might have discovered that the latter was dishonest, by a more frequent or accurate examination of his accounts, nor that he was allowed to keep the individual ledger, which was the only book which was a check upon him, nor that he was not dismissed when it was discovered that he had made a successful speculation in stocks, was such negligence as to render the bank liable. Id.

Held, thirdly, that nothing short of knowledge or reasonable grounds of suspicion by the bank that the teller was unfit to be appointed or retained would render the bank liable. Id.

—Receiving Commission.—An owner of railway shares in two companies deposited the certificates for safe custody with a banking company, who undertook to receive the dividends for a small commission. On receiving the certificates from the railway companies, he gave his address in one instance at the office of the bank, and in the other at a club. The manager of the bank, who had the key of the safe where the certificates were kept, fraudulently sold the shares, and forged the name of the owner to the transfer. The companies wrote to him informing him of the transfers, and receiving, in one instance, no answer, and in another an answer in his name forged by the manager, registered the transfer. He afterwards, on discovery of the fraud, brought suits against the two companies and the transferees of the shares, in which he recovered the shares, but the court gave him no costs. The banking company being wound up, he claimed to prove against the company for the amount of his costs in the suits which had been occasioned by their negligence:—Held, that the banking company was a bailee for reward of the certificates, and that they had been guilty of culpable negligence in keeping them, but that the loss of the costs was too remote a consequence of the negligence of the company for them to be held liable for it. United Service Company, In re, Johnston, Ex parte, 6 L. R., Ch. 212; 40 L. J., Ch. 286; 24 L. T. 115; 19 W. R. 467. Affirming 9 L. R., Eq. 181; 39 L. J., Ch. 390.

Allowing Income Tax on Mortgages.—Bankers cannot refuse to allow income tax to a customer upon interest accruing on a mortgage security. Mosse v. Colt, 32 L. J., Ch. 756.

Misappropriating Securities.—See 24 & 25 Vict. c. 86, ss. 75, 76, and CRIMINAL LAW.

9. LIEN.

General Lien of Banker.—The Oriental Bank kept three accounts at the Agra Bank, namely, a loan account, a discount account, and a general account. They from time to time received advances from the Agra Bank, which were entered in the loan account, and to meet which they deposited securities with the Agra Bank. In the course of the transactions the Oriental Bank deposited three bills of exchange with the Agra Bank, accompanied by a letter stating that they proposed to draw upon them for 10,500*l.*, but that as their credit would not afford a margin to that extent, they sent these bills as a collateral security. The Oriental Bank became insolvent and was wound up:—Held, that there was nothing in the course of dealing or in the terms of the letter to exclude the general rule that a banker has a lien on the securities deposited by a customer for the customer's general balance, and that the balance of the loan account being satisfied, the Agra Bank might retain the bills for the balance of the general account. European Bank, In re, Agra Bank's Claim, 8 L. R., Ch. 41; 27 L. T. 732; 21 W. R. 45—L. J. Affirming 20 W. R. 937.

Bankers have a general lien on all securities deposited with them as bankers by a customer, unless there be an express contract or circumstances that shew an implied contract inconsistent with the lien:—Held, that the bankers having acquiesced in the finding of the first court, that the securities deposited with them were in respect of specific sums and not on the general account, and not having objected thereto in their grounds of appeal to the Supreme Court, were precluded from raising that question in appeal to the Privy Council. London Chartered Bank of Australia v. White, 4 App. Cas. 413; 48 L. J., C. P. 75.

Simple interest only should be allowed on such specific amount, as to a mortgagee. Ib.

Bankers improperly or without title retaining moneys overpaid to them as mortgagees are chargeable with interest thereon. Ib.

A banking company incorporated by charter, which contained a clause declaring that it should not be lawful for the company to advance money on the security of merchandise, advanced money on the faith of receiving as security a preferential lien on the wool of an ensuing clip to be shorn from the sheep of the party in whose favour the advances were made, but who was not in the actual possession of the sheep, though a part owner of the sheep and the agent of the other owners for whose benefit the advances had been made:—Held, in an action of trover by the company on such agreement giving them a preferable lien, that it was maintainable, and that the banking company was entitled to recover for the value of the wool on such preferential lien. Ayers v. South Australian Banking Company, 3 L. R., P. C. 548; 40 L. J., P. C., 22; 19 W. R. 860; 7 Moore, P. C. C., N. S. 432.

Bankers have a lien upon bills or notes paid into their houses for the balance of a general account. Jourdaine v. Lefevre, 1 Esp. 66.

A customer lodges bills of exchange in the hands of his banker generally, and when the banker advances money to him he applies it to the discount of such of the bills as happen to be nearest in value to the sum advanced, but without any special agreement to that effect: this does not invalidate the banker's general lien upon all the other bills in his hands, but he may retain them, in order to secure the payment of his general balance. Davis v. Boucher, 5 T. R. 481.

A banker has a lien for the amount of his balance upon money securities paid in by a customer on his running account. Scott v. Franklin, 15 East, 428.

Stockbrokers advancing to bankers, their customers, a specific loan upon specific securities, have thereon not only a specific lien in respect of such loan, but also a general lien in respect of whatever else may be due to them from the bankers on account of their general business transactions; the rule in such cases being that the general lien is not excluded by special contract, unless the special contract be inconsistent with it. Jones v. Peppercorne, Johns. 430; 28 L. J., Ch. 153; 5 Jur., N. S. 140.

The circumstance that the securities, though treated by the bankers as their own, belonged, in fact, to third parties, if not known to the brokers when making the advance, does not affect their right to general lien. Ib.

Bonds payable to bearer, and passing by delivery only, were deposited with bankers for safe custody, and the bankers afterwards fraudulently deposited them with their brokers as a security for money advanced, and became bankrupt:—Held, that the bonds were subject to the general lien of the brokers for all money advanced by them to the bankers, and not merely for the advance made upon the security of those particular bonds. Ib.

A banker who has discounted bills for a customer, or accepted bills for his accommodation, has, while such bills remain unpaid, a lien on any negotiable securities of that customer which may come to his hands. And where, taking into account the bills on both sides, the customer has a balance in his favour of a sum not equal to the amount of any one of them, this surplus cannot be appropriated to any one of the bills in reduction of the claim of the bankersuing any of the parties to the bill. Bolland v. Bygrave, R. & M. 271.

The general lien of bankers is part of the law merchant, and is to be judicially noticed, like the negotiability of bills of exchange. Brandao v. Barnett, 12 C. & F. 787; 3 C. B. 519.

A banker's lien does not arise on securities deposited with him for a special purpose, as where exchequer bills are placed in his hands to get interest upon them, and to get them exchanged for new bills; such a special purpose is inconsistent with the existence of a general lien. Ib.

Where a person who is in reality the agent of another deposits exchequer bills with his own bankers, without informing them whose property these bills are, the bankers may be held entitled to consider these bills as the depositor's property, and to hold them as security for any money due to them from him, if the mode of deposit, or the circumstances attending it, give them a lien on the bills as against him. Ib.

A. was the London agent of B., a Portuguese merchant, and in that character purchased exchequer bills for him, received interest on them, and at proper intervals got them exchanged for others. He acted in the same manner for several other foreign customers. A. kept an account with C. as his banker, and at C.'s banking-house had several tin boxes, in which he deposited these exchequer bills, and of which he kept the keys. One day A. took out of a tin box several exchequer bills, which he delivered to C., requesting C. to get the interest due on them, and to get the exchequer bills exchanged for others. C. did so. Before A. came to take back the exchequer bills, acceptances of his, beyond the amount of his cash credit account, were presented at C.'s bank, and paid. A. afterwards became a bankrupt :—Held, that C. had not a lien on the exchequer bills in his hands for the balance due to him on A.'s account. Ib.

On Securities generally.]—A banker's lien upon all securities deposited with him by a customer, and received by him bonâ fide, is not affected by any equities which may exist between that customer and a third party. Misa v. Currie, 1 App. Cas. 544; 45 L. J., Ex. 414; 35 L. T. 414; 24 W. R. 1049—H. L.

At the commencement of the bankruptcy of the firm of A. & W. there were standing registered in the name of A. shares in a bank, whose articles of association provided that all the shares of every shareholder should be subject to a lien in favour of the bank for any debt due to the bank from him alone or jointly with any other person. The shares in question, which were originally the private property of A., became partnership assets when he entered into partnership with W., but the bank had no notice that anyone but A. was interested in the shares. The bank sought to prove against the joint estate of the firm for a large debt contracted after the shares became partnership assets :—Held, that the lien of the bank on the shares was a security on the joint estate, and that the bank could not prove for the amount of their debt without deducting the value of the shares. Manchester and County Bank, Ex parte, Collicie, In re, 3 Ch. D. 481; 45 L. J., Bk. 149; 35 L. T. 23; 24 W. R. 1035—C. A.

Scrup certificates, by which it was certified that, after the payment of certain instalments, the bearer thereof would be entitled to be registered as the holder of shares in a banking company, were issued to the plaintiff, and by him deposited with a stockbroker for the purpose of paying the instalments remaining due, and dealing with such certificates as the plaintiff should direct. The broker, in fraud of the plaintiff, and without his authority, deposited the scrip with the defendants as security for an amount due from him, the broker, to the defendants. The defendants were not aware of the fraud. It was proved that the usage among bankers, discounters, money dealers, and on the Stock Exchange, had been for many years to treat such scrip certificates as negotiable instruments transferable by mere delivery :—Held, that the defendants were entitled to the scrip certificates as against the plaintiff, first, on the ground that by reason of the usage the certificates had become negotiable instruments transferable by mere delivery, and, secondly, on the ground that the plaintiff, by depositing with his broker instruments purporting to be transferable by delivery to a bonâ fide holder for value, was estopped from denying that they were so transferable. Rumball v. Metropolitan Bank, 2 Q. B. D. 194; 46 L. J., Q. B. 346; 36 L. T. 240; 25 W. R. 366.

S. discounted with a bank bills of exchange drawn against goods consigned to India, handing over the bills of lading as security. The bank carried a part of the discount value of the bills to a suspense account till advice of the payment of the bills, to form a margin or an additional security against a fall in price of the goods, and gave accountable receipts for such margins. S. deposited three of such receipts with a party, who gave notice to the bank. The bills having been duly honoured :—Held, that the bank was entitled to a lien on the marginal receipts for such sums as were actually due and payable to them by S. at the times when the marginal receipts respectively became payable, in respect of liabilities contracted before notice of the deposit was received, but not to a lien for sums not actually due. Jeffryes v. Agra and Masterman's Bank, 2 L. R., Eq. 674; 35 L. J., Ch. 686; 14 W. R. 889.

The principle established in Ex parte Waring (19 Ves. 345), that securities held by a banker against his acceptances are available to the bill holders, if both acceptor and drawer are insolvent, does not apply where the acceptor or drawer is a joint stock company which has been ordered to be wound up, unless it is shewn that the company is actually insolvent. New Zealand Banking Corporation, In re, Hickie, Ex parte, 4 L. R., Eq. 226; 36 L. J., Ch. 809; 16 L. T. 654.

A security given by a customer to his bankers for the balance "which shall or may be found due on the balance of" the account covers the existing balance only, and is not a continuing security for the floating balance. Medewe or Meadows, In re, 26 Beav. 588; 28 L. J., Ch. 891; 5 Jur., N. S. 421; 32 L. T., O. S. 252; 7 W. R. 319.

On Title Deeds.]—A company deposited title deeds with a bank as collateral security for bills under discount. At the time the company was wound up it was indebted to the bank in respect of other bills than those actually discounted, and the securities realised more than was sufficient to cover the latter bills :—Held, that the company could effect a mortgage by deposit of deeds without complying with the formalities required by its articles of association upon the execution of mortgage deeds; that the bankers were not in the position of officers of the company, who are bound to see that the required formalities were complied with, and that the bank was entitled to hold the balance of the proceeds upon the sale of the securities, to meet the whole amount due to it by the company. General Provident Assurance Company, In re, National Bank, Ex parte, 14 L. R., Eq. 507; 41 L. J., Ch. 823; 27 L. T. 433; 20 W. R. 939.

Title deeds, which had been handed by the plaintiff to his brother, B., to enable the latter to borrow 600*l.* from H. for seven days, were deposited by B. with a bank, with a memorandum purporting to be signed by the plaintiff, and stating that the deposit was made in consideration of the bank lending B. 1,000*l.* for seven days. The bank made him no loan for seven days, but, during the seven days next after the deposit, they allowed him to draw by cheques to an amount exceeding 900*l.* Upon a bill filed by the plaintiff against the bank for the delivery up of the deeds, on the grounds, first, that the memorandum of deposit was a forgery; and secondly, that the bank had not lent B. 1,000*l.* for seven days:—Held, that the question of forgery was one for a jury only, but that, assuming the memorandum to be genuine, the bank had no right to retain the deeds, inasmuch as they had not fulfilled the condition on which the deposit was made. Burton v. Gray, 8 L. R. Ch. 932; 43 L. J., Ch. 229.

A bank allowed T. & J., partners, to overdraw their account, having good security from deposit of deeds relating to separate property of T. The partners presented their petition, and the bank voted in favour of resolutions for composition, the resolutions saying nothing about their security. Afterwards, in accordance with the resolutions, a deed was executed, and this distinctly reserved to the bank their collateral security. The composition was paid to all the creditors, including the bank. On the application of T., the county court judge declared the securities forfeited, and directed the bank to deliver them up to T.:—Held, on appeal, that in a composition the county court judge had no jurisdiction to make such an order, and that the bank was entitled to retain their securities. Manchester and Liverpool District Banking Company, Ex parte, Little, In re, 18 L. R., Eq. 249; 43 L. J., Bank. 73; 30 L. T. 539; 22 W. R. 567.

But a banker has no lien on muniments casually left in his banking-house after he has refused to advance money on them as a security. Lucas v. Dorrien, 7 Taunt. 278; 1 Moore, 29.

A customer deposited with his bankers a deed of conveyance, including two distinct properties, giving to them at the same time a memorandum pledging one of the properties as a security for a specific sum advanced, and also for his general balance:—Held, that as the deposit of the deed of conveyance was for the special purpose of giving a security upon one property only, the bankers could claim no general lien, by the custom of bankers, on the other property. Wyde v. Radford, 33 L. J., Ch. 51; 9 Jur., N. S. 1169; 9 L. T. 471; 12 W. R. 38.

A conveyance of land is not a security within the custom which gives to bankers a general lien on securities deposited by their customers. Id.

A testator died indebted to his bankers, who held as a security title-deeds of his estate. His executrix being his widow was empowered by his will to charge his real estates in aid of his personal estate. She drew from the bank on the account of the testator's executors, and deposited other title-deeds of the testator's estate as a further security. The sums thus drawn were misapplied by her:—Held, that, in the absence of notice of any breach of trust, the bank was entitled to hold the title-deeds as security for the moneys advanced to the executrix. Farhall v. Farhall, 7 L. R., Eq. 286; 38 L. J., Ch. 281.

—Loan by equitable Mortgagees after Notice of Contract of Sale.—The owner of land, after depositing the title-deeds with a bank as security for all sums then or thereafter to become due on the general balance of his account with the bank, contracted with the knowledge of the bank to sell the land to one who had notice of the terms of the deposit. The vendor afterwards paid into his own account at the bank, sums which in the whole exceeded the debt due to the bank on his balance at the time of the contract of sale, so that, on the principle of Clayton's Case (1 Mer. 585), that debt was discharged. The bank, without giving notice to the purchaser, continued the account and made fresh advances to the vendor, so that on the general balance there was always a debt to the bank. The purchaser, who never had notice of the fresh advances, paid the purchase-money by instalments to the vendor:—Held, that on the principle of Hopkinson v. Rolt (9 H. L. C. 514) the bank had no charge on the land as against the purchaser for the fresh advances. London and County Banking Company v. Ratcliffe, 6 App. Cas. 722; 51 L. J., Ch. 28; 45 L. T. 322; 30 W. R. 109—H. L.

Held, also, that the bank had no charge upon the purchase-money. Id.

—Duty of Purchaser without Notice.—A purchaser of land, with notice that the title deeds have been deposited with a bank as security for the general balance on the vendor's present and future account, is not bound to inquire whether the bank has, after notice of the purchase, made fresh advances. The burden lies on the bank advancing on the security of the unpaid vendor's lien to give the purchaser notice that it has so done or intends to do. Id.

Lien on Shares of Shareholders.—By the articles of association of a bank, the bank would have a lien on the shares of a shareholder for all moneys due to the bank by the shareholder. The bank was wound up, and the assets were sold, one of the terms being that certain shareholders in the bank should be paid 2*l.* per share:—Held, that the bank had, on the money so to be paid to a shareholder, a lien for moneys due to the bank by the shareholder. General Exchange Bank, In re, Lewis, In re, 6 L. R., Ch. 818; 40 L. J., Ch. 429; 24 L. T. 787; 19 W. R. 791.

By one clause of a deed of settlement of a colonial banking company, the directors had power to issue shares on such terms as they thought expedient. By another clause the company was to have a lien for debts due to the company from the shareholders upon any shares of the debtors. The directors issued shares with powers of attorney for the express purpose of enabling the persons to whom they were issued to remit them to England, and to deal with them as negotiable securities or as money payments:—Held, that no lien attached to the shares so issued. Hunter v. Stewart, 4 De G., F. & J. 168.

Articles of association of a banking company provided that the bank should have a paramount lien on the shares of any shareholder for all moneys due to them from him, and that they might decline to register any transfer whilst the transferring shareholder was indebted to them. A shareholder being unable to meet certain bills of exchange accepted by him and held by the bank, the bank took from him renewed bills for the same amount. Before the renewed bills arrived at maturity the shareholder transferred his shares, but the bank declined to register the transfer:—Held, that the renewed bills, though they suspended the remedy, did not discharge the antecedent debt, and that consequently the bank had a lien on the shares and was not bound.

to register the transfer. London, Birmingham and South Staffordshire Bank, In re, 34 L. J., Ch. 418; 11 Jur., N. S. 316; 12 L. T. 45; 13 W. R. 446.

A deed of settlement of a banking company provided, that the directors should have a lien on the shares and stock of every shareholder for debts due from him to the company, and that the directors might cancel and declare forfeited or sell the shares of such shareholder, or otherwise deal with the same as the case might require, for obtaining payment of such debts:—Held, that the bank had a lien, not only on the shares, but also on the dividends of a shareholder who had overdrawn his account. Hague v. Dandeson, 2 Ex. 741; 17 L. J., Ex. 269.

— When forming Part of Trust Estate.—Trust funds were invested in the purchase of transferable shares in a banking company, in the name of one of the trustees, who was also a holder of shares in his own right in the company, and afterwards made various sales and purchases of shares therein. There was no distinguishing mark by which the shares could be traced, the same being in the nature of capital, expressed by quantity. The trustees agreed to assign some of the shares standing in his name to the company as security for repayment of advances which had been made to him, but no transfer was made. He afterwards became bankrupt, without having shares sufficient to satisfy the trusts and his agreement to assign:—Held, first, that the company had no lien on any of the shares which had been held in trust. Murray v. Pinkett, 12 C. & F. 764.

Held, secondly, that, although the shares held in trust might have been charged by sale and repurchase, the trustee must be considered as holding for the purposes of the trust the same number of shares, out of a larger number that were standing in his name at the time of his bankruptcy. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that, as no shares were transferred in pursuance of the agreement, no question as to whether the bank directors were purchasers with or without notice could arise, and of the two equities for the cestuis que trustent and for the bank, the former must be preferred. Ib.

On Cash Balance for Discount.—A banker who has discounted bills for a customer has no implied lien on that customer's cash balance during the currency of the bills. Bower v. Foreign and Colonial Gas Company, 22 W. R. 740.

On Boxes containing Securities.—Bankers have no general lien on boxes containing securities deposited with them for safe custody. And a customer, who had deposited such boxes for safe custody, having become lunatic, and his committee having been appointed:—Held, that the bankers had no right to retain or open the boxes as against the committee. Leese v. Martin, 17 L. R., Eq. 224; 43 L. J., Ch. 193; 29 L. T. 742; 22 W. R. 230.

The bankers who claimed such a lien having obtained garnishee orders against debtors of their lunatic customer through information obtained after opening the boxes, the court granted an injunction to prevent them from enforcing their garnishee orders, with respect to the securities in question, but refused damages for the opening of the boxes. Ib.

Mortgage of Leasehold Premises.—By an indenture dated 3rd of October, 1865, a ship-building yard and works held under a lease for 999 years were assigned to the debtor, to hold as to the leasehold premises for the residue of the term, and as to the machinery and tenant's fixtures absolutely. The recitals stated the purchase-money to be 2,000*l.* for the leasehold premises and 500*l.* for the tenant's fixtures. The debtor borrowed the purchase-money from his bankers, and deposited with them as security the indentures of lease and assignment, without any memorandum. He afterwards erected considerable new machinery, and carried on business on the premises till 1876, when he became bankrupt, having incurred a further debt to his bankers:—Held, first, that the equitable security created by the deposit did not comprise tenant's fixtures. Tweedy, Ex parte, Trethowan, In re, 5 Ch. D. 559; 46 L. J., Bk. 43; 36 L. T. 70; 25 W. R. 399.

Held, secondly, that tenant's fixtures could not be assigned by the leaseholder so as to defeat the claim of the trustee, except by compliance with the Bills of Sale Act. Ib.

When leasehold property is equitably mortgaged by simple deposit of deeds, the application as to trade fixtures of the Bills of Sale Act is not excluded. Ib.

A., in whom a lease was vested, deposited it with his bankers by way of equitable mortgage. The bankers afterwards received notice, as the fact was, that he was a mere trustee of the leasehold, but they subsequently obtained from him a formal mortgage of the legal estate:—Held, that the cestuis que trustent had priority over the bankers. Baillie v. McKewan, 35 Beav. 177.

Subsequent Advances.—Held, also, that the equitable mortgage was a security for the bankers' subsequent advances by virtue of their general lien upon the deeds. Tweedy, Ex parte, Trethowan, In re, 5 Ch. D. 559; 46 L. J., Bk. 43; 36 L. T. 70; 25 W. R. 399.

On Goods deposited by Guarantor.—Goods were deposited with bankers on behalf of A., a customer, to secure an advance made by the bankers to B., on the guarantee of A. This advance was made and repaid. Afterwards, and while the goods are still in the hands of the bankers, B. negotiates with them for another loan, to which A. is not proved to be privy; and a second loan is made by the bankers to B., which A. subsequently repays. Trover being brought against the bankers, they pleaded A.'s lien:—Held, that the second advance must be taken to have been made by the bankers on A.'s credit, and that the plea was supported by the proof. O'Connor v. Majoribanks, 5 Scott, N. R. 394; 4 M. & G. 435; 2 L. J., C. P. 161; 7 Jur. 834.

On Securities deposited by Building Societies not authorized to Borrow.—A building society not authorized to borrow money from time to time overdraw their banking account, and deposited deeds and other documents with the bank as security for the overdraft, it being agreed that the amount overdrawn should never exceed 25,000*l.* A portion of this overdraft was applied in the necessary payments of the society. The society was subsequently wound up by order of the court:—Held, that the bankers had a lien upon the deeds in their possession for such part only of the overdrafts as had been so applied in necessary payments, and had not been covered by subsequent payments into the bank, all of which must be appropriated to reduce such lien, and an account was ordered upon that footing from the date when the balance last turned against the society, and so continued. Blackburn Benefit Building Society (Liquidator) v. Cunliffe, 22 Ch. D. 61; 31 W. R. 98—C. A.

—Payments to Bankers during Winding-up Proceedings.—The bankers had, between the date of the presentation of the winding-up petition and the winding-up order, received payments from certain borrowing members and delivered up to them their securities:—Held, that the bankers must account to the society for the sums so received by them. Id.

On Moneys in the Hands of Trustees—Trustees authorized by Cestui que trust to pay Moneys to Bank.—A cestui que trust, entitled to moneys payable out of a fund in the hands of trustees, was indebted to his bankers in a large amount, by which his account was overdrawn, and, in consideration of not being pressed to reduce this amount, he agreed to give the bankers a lien on the moneys coming to him out of the trust fund. He thereupon addressed a note to one of the trustees, requesting and authorizing the trustee to pay to the credit of the account of the cestui que trust at the bank the moneys payable to him out of the trust fund. The trustee was apprized of the arrangement between the parties:—Held, on the cestui que trust becoming bankrupt, that the bank had a good lien, and that the authority given by the note was not countermandable. Steward, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 265.

Of London Bank on Bills paid them by Country Bank.—Where a country banker has short bills of his customer in his possession, and sends them to his London bankers, and becomes bankrupt, the short bills remaining in that condition continue the property of the holder; but the London bankers acquire a lien on the bills, and they are a security to them for the general balance due to them from the country banker. The assets available to the London bankers must be marshalled, and the residue, after satisfying the London bankers' lien, is payable among the short bill holders equally. Froggatt, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 322; 7 Jur. 910. See Barkworth, Ex parte, 2 De G. & J. 194; 27 L. J., Bk. 5.

Acceptances of Customer given to Bank to meet Acceptances of Bank—Insolvency of Bank—Rights of Holders of Customer's Acceptances.—B. was in the habit of drawing bills on H. & Co., bankers, and of remitting bills to them to an amount fully sufficient to meet their acceptances. H. & Co. became bankrupt. At that time there were in the hands of holders for value undue bills to a large amount drawn by B. upon H. & Co., and accepted by them; but H. & Co. had misappropriated the greater part of the bills remitted, to meet them:—Held, that B. could not claim to have returned to him such of the remitted bills as remained in the hands of H. & Co. at the time of their bankruptcy, but that they must be applied so far as they would extend in payment of the bills accepted by H. & Co. Currick, Ex parte, 2 De G. & J. 208.

On Partner's Separate Account for Debt due from Firm.—Bankers have no lien on the deposit of a partner on his separate account for a balance due to the bank from a firm. Watts v. Christie, 11 Beav. 546; 18 L. J., Ch. 173; 13 Jur. 244, 845.

A partner continued with the bankers of his firm, who were also his private bankers, a deposit of the certificates of railway shares which he had originally purchased in his own name; with a memorandum to the effect that the object of the deposit was to secure sums of money due on promissory notes of the partner discounted by the bankers, and any future sums in which he might become indebted to them. The firm, as between themselves and the partner, had previously to the date of the memorandum adopted the purchase of the shares. The moneys raised by the discount were employed for the purpose of the firm, who made to the bankers payments on account of the money due on the promissory notes. On the firm becoming bankrupt, with a large balance due from them on their partnership account with the bankers, and a smaller balance due from the partner on his separate account:—Held, that neither the above state of circumstances, nor the general lien of the bankers, entitled them to hold the shares as a security for the balance due from the firm. McKenna, Ex parte, Laurence, In re, 3 De G., F. & J. 629; 30 L. J., N. S., Bk. 20.

Charge on Negotiable Instrument Stolen.—A bank advanced moneys to a customer upon promissory notes, on the back of each of which he placed an indorsement by which he charged all his property, shares, or securities, which then were, or which might be, at any time prior to the payment of the note, "in the possession or power of the holder thereof for the time being," with the payment of the promissory note, and interest. After several such transactions had taken place, the customer obtained an advance upon a French bond, payable to bearer and transferable by delivery, and he subsequently handed the bank another French bond, and requested that both might be sold on his account. On the latter occasion he obtained no advance of money. On the bonds being sent to the bank's brokers for sale it was discovered for the first time that both had been stolen:—Held, that as to the first bond, the bank had a charge upon it, since an advance had been obtained upon it, but that, as to the second bond, there was no such charge, since no advance having been made upon it, there could be no charge otherwise than by virtue of the charge endorsed upon the promissory note, which did not apply to the case, because it could only apply to property of the drawer of the note placed in the possession or power of the holder for a purpose not inconsistent with an assertion of such a charge, and the bond in question was not so situated. Symons v. Mulhern, 46 L. T. 763; 30 W. R. 875.

Lien of Army Agents for Balance due to them.—K., an officer in the army, mortgaged to R., to secure 5,000*l.*, all moneys which should be realized by sale of his commission. In December, 1877, K. obtained leave to retire from the army, and his commission was valued at 3,000*l.*, which on the 6th of December, 1877, was paid by the Paymaster-General to C. & Co., the army agents of the regiment, and was carried to the deposit account kept by C. & Co. with the Army Purchase Commissioners, there to remain till K.'s retirement was gazetted. K. kept an account current with C. & Co. as his bankers, which was overdrawn to the amount of 647*l.* K.'s retirement was gazetted on the evening of the 18th of December, and as soon as C. & Co.'s office opened on the 19th, R. gave them notice of his security. R. having claimed payment of the 3,000*l.*, C. & Co. claimed to retain out of it the 647*l.*:—Held, by Bacon, V.-C., that C. & Co. received the 3,000*l.* as K.'s bankers, and had a banker's lien upon it for the balance due to them, and were, therefore, entitled to retain the 647*l.*:—Held, on appeal, that as soon as K.'s retirement was gazetted the 3,000*l.* became money had and received by C. & Co. for his use, and for which he could have brought an action at law; that they had a right to set off the balance due to them against this demand; that this set-off was equally available against R., of whose security C. & Co. had no notice until after their right to set off had arisen; and that, therefore, independently of any question of banker's lien, C. & Co. were entitled to retain the 647*l.* Roeburghe v. Cor, 117 Ch. D. 520; 50 L. J., Ch. 772; 45 L. T. 225; 30 W. R. 74—C. A.

Handing over Securities not a Fraudulent Preference.—Bankers agreed to allow their customer W. to overdraw his account to the extent of 1,800*l.* upon his brother, father, and the bank manager becoming sureties for him to that amount. W.'s overdraft exceeded 2,400*l.*, and the bankers repeatedly pressed him to reduce his account within the limits of their security. Subsequently the manager, at an interview with W., who said "he was fast," pressed him to square his account, whereupon he handed to the manager 2,460*l.* in cheques and bills, against which he had drawn largely. The same evening the manager wrote to W. that the bank would not honour any more of his cheques. W. filed a liquidation petition within a week after this interview, and the creditors having resolved upon a liquidation by arrangement, the trustee claimed repayment of the 2,460*l.* upon the ground that the delivery of the cheques and bills constituted a fraudulent preference and an act of bankruptcy:—Held, in the absence of evidence to shew that the payment was made with a view to release the sureties, or otherwise than in the ordinary course of a current account, the general lien of the bankers attached for their benefit; and that the payment was neither a fraudulent preference within s. 92, nor an act of bankruptcy within s. 6 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. Carlisle Banking Company, Ex parte, Walton, In re, 36 L. T. 522. See S. C., on appeal, 5 Ch. D. 882.

Notice to affect Lien.—In a suit which had been registered as a lis pendens, a decree was made for the administration of a testator's estate. The executrix subsequently deposited an asset of the testator with a bank as security for advances. The bank had not actual notice of the suit:—Held, that the registration of the suit as a lis pendens was not notice to the bank of the decree for administration which prevented the executrix from dealing with the assets, and that the bank obtained a lien on the property deposited. Berry

A customer deposited the title-deeds of an estate with his bankers, and signed a memorandum charging the estate with payment of a sum due from him to them. He afterwards married, and in consideration of such marriage he settled the estate by articles, and shortly after marriage executed a settlement conveying the legal estate to a trustee. During the negotiations he told the lady's solicitor that he was entitled to the estate free from incumbrances, and that the deeds were at his bank for safe custody:—Held, that the solicitor ought to have inquired of the bankers whether they had a charge upon the deeds, and that, as he omitted to do so, all persons claiming under the settlement were fixed with constructive notice of the charge. Marfield v. Burton, 17 L. R., Eq. 15; 43 L. J., Ch. 46; 29 L. T. 571; 22 W. R. 148.

B. and C. carried on business together in partnership, under articles by which the real estate upon which their business was carried on, and of which they were seised as tenants in common in fee, was made partnership assets. B., to secure a separate debt, mortgaged his moiety of the estate to bankers, who were aware when they took the mortgage that the premises were in the occupation of the partners, and that they carried on their business thereon. B. absconded, leaving partnership debts which C. was obliged to pay:—Held, that the bankers had constructive notice that the property belonged to the partnership, and that C. was entitled to be paid out of the property what was due to him from the partnership in priority to the bankers' claim under their mortgage. Cavander v. Bullock, 9 L. R., Ch. 79; 43 L. J., Ch. 370; 29 L. T. 710; 22 W. R. 177. Reversing 28 L. T. 620; 21 W. R. 647.

The directors and secretary of a company joined in depositing the certificates of shares belonging to them with a bank, as a security for money advanced:—Held, that this transaction amounted to a sufficient notice to the company of an equitable assignment of the shares belonging to the secretary, so as to support the title of the equitable mortgagee against his assignees in bankruptcy. Stewart, Ex parte, Shelly, In re, 24 L. J., Bk. 6; 11 Jur., N. S. 25; 11 L. T. 554; 13 W. R. 356.

10. RECEIVING DIVIDENDS.

By Power of Attorney—Payment by Bank to Creditor of Payee.—C. and M., since deceased, holders of stock as trustees, had given a power of attorney to bankers, to receive the dividends and pay them to the cestui que trust, a married woman. She had given them directions to pay the dividends, when received, to S., who had lent money to her and her husband. Subsequently, however, she wrote to the bankers that in consequence of the death of one of the trustees she had been obliged to have a new power of attorney made to receive her own dividends, and that she would not trouble them any longer to receive them. No new power of attorney was in fact made. After this letter the bankers received a dividend, and paid it over to S.:—Held, that an action by C. against the bankers for not paying the dividend to the cestui que trust could not be sustained, as her letter did not amount to a revocation of the direction to pay S. Clarke v. Lawrie,

Entered in Books as Received—Stock Sold by Partner in Bank by Forged Powers of Attorney.]

—Stock was vested in trustees, to pay the dividends to A. during his life, and after his death, for his wife and children. M. & Co. were the bankers of the trustees, and employed by them to receive the dividends. During the life of A. the dividends were regularly carried to his account in the books of the firm, and drawn for and received by him. A. died on the 23rd of January, 1824, and on his death a new account was opened with the trustees in the books of the bankers; and in that account credit was given to the trustees for dividends, as received in April and July, 1824, and the trustees were debited with several sums paid by cheques drawn upon the house, on the presumption that the dividends had been actually received. In point of fact, these dividends had not been received by M. & Co.; F., a partner in that house, having, in the lifetime of A., sold and transferred the stock, by means of forged powers of attorney. F. continued after this transfer to enter in the day-book of M. & Co. the amounts of the half-yearly dividends, on the days when they would have become due, as if he had duly received the same at the Bank of England, which amounts were in the course of business regularly posted from such day-book to the credit of the trustees by the clerks of M. & Co. Commissions of bankrupt issued against M. & Co. in September and October, 1824:—Held, that at the date of those commissions they were not indebted to the trustees for the balance of the dividends appearing by the books to have been received. Hume v. Bolland, 1 C. & M. 130; 2 Tyr. 575; R. & M. 371.

Evidence as to Receipt.]—Held, also, that although the entries in the books, coupled with the payments on account of the supposed dividends, were prima facie evidence against the firm that they had received the dividends to the use of the trustees; yet, that inasmuch as the transfer under the forged powers was absolutely void, the property in the stock and dividends due thereon remained in the trustees; and that, as they were entitled to receive the dividends at the Bank of England, they could not treat those dividends as money had and received to their use by the bankers, although the bankers might be liable to an action for deceit, in which damages might be recovered in proportion to the injury arising from their untrue representation that they had received the dividends for the use of the trustees. Id.

11. INVESTING MONEYS.

Where a partner in a banking-house undertook to invest a sum of money on good security for a customer of the firm, and such person was induced, from the belief that she was dealing with him as a partner, to advance the money, and the representations of the partner proved to be fraudulent:—Held, that in the absence of evidence of notice to the other partners, they could not be made liable for such a transaction. Bishop v. Jersey (Countess), 2 Drew. 143; 2 Eq. R. 545; 23 L. J., Ch. 483; 18 Jur. 765.

It is not part of the business of bankers to invest money generally for their customers. Id.

12. EFFECT OF BANK STOPPING PAYMENT.

Money Paid to Credit of another Person, conditionally—Who takes the Risk.]—Payment of money into a banking-house to be placed to the credit of another, upon a condition, the money in the meantime to stand in the bankers' books in the name of the party paying it in; it is at his risk, and the loss is his, if the bankers fail before the condition is complied with, though the other party had written to desire it to be paid in generally. Colley v. Short, Coop. C. C. 148.

A landowner agreed to sell his land to a company, and the company, requiring immediate possession of it, offered to deposit the purchase-money in a bank in the names of the vendor and the chairman of the company, pending the investigation of the title. The vendor assented to the deposit being made, but in a different bank, and stipulated also that he should be paid 5l. per cent. interest from the time possession was given. The deposit was accordingly made, and possession taken by the company. Before the conveyance was completed the banker with whom the money stood became bankrupt, and most of it was lost:—Held, that the loss must be borne by the vendor, the deposit, having been made and accepted as payment, and not merely as security. N. Paul v. Birmingham, Wolverhampton, and Stour Valley Railway Company, 11 Hare, 305; 17 Jur. 1176.

Money Paid in after Hours and not carried to Customer's Account—Bank Stopping Payment next Day.]—By the custom of a bank, money paid in after banking hours was put into a separate place of deposit, and entered in a counter book, but not carried to the customer's account till next day. A customer paid in a bank-note after the banking hours, and the banker, having before resolved not to open his bank again, placed the note in such separate place of deposit, without carrying it to the account of the customer, and next morning stopped payment and became bankrupt. The note was held to remain the property of the customer. Sadler v. Belcher, 2 M. & Rob. 489.

Money was paid into a bank, through the clerk of the bank, on Saturday evening, after office hours. On the same evening one of the partners of the bank made a declaration of insolvency, in the absence and without the knowledge of his partner. The bank never again opened for business, and the other partner concurred in allowing it to remain closed. Both partners were subsequently adjudicated bankrupts:—Held, that the money so deposited passed to the assignees. Clutton, Ex parte, 1 Fomb. N. R. 167.

Payment of Goods by Bank-notes after Failure of Bank—Where Vendor Guilty of Laches.]

Where goods were paid for by country bank-notes, in the afternoon of a day, in the morning of which the bankers had stopped payment, without the knowledge of the vendor or vendee, and the former offered to return the notes to the latter, demanding payment of them:—Held, that the vendor should have promptly presented the notes to the insolvent bankers, and given notice of non-payment to the vendee according to the law-merchant, and by his neglecting to do so he had made the notes his own. Camidge v. Allenby, 9 D. & R. 391; 6 B. & C. 373.

On the 23rd November country bank-notes were paid by A., a purchaser of goods, to B., the vendor. On the 28th, B. requested the purchaser's shopman as a favour to exchange the notes for money, and received the amount accordingly. The bank, which was situated at a considerable distance from the place where the shopman gave the money, had stopped payment two hours before. A., the purchaser, heard of it on the 29th, and on the 30th wrote to B., to inform him of the event, and that he, B., was to be liable for the notes, but did not tender them to him then or for some days after, nor were they ever presented at the bank:—Held, that A. should have returned them to B. without delay, or presented them at the bank as holder; and that having done neither, he could not recover the amount from B. Rogers v. Langford, 1 C. & M. 637; 3 Tyr. 654.

— Vendor not Guilty of Laches.—Where a bank has suspended its payments, and notes of such bank have been promptly returned or tendered back to the party from whom they were received, the want of presentment at the bank is no defence to an action for money had and received to recover the amount of the notes. Turner v. Stones, 1 D. & L. 122; 12 L. J., Q. B. 303; 7 Jur. 745.

Failure after Money paid in, but before Advice of Receipt.—The plaintiff's broker, by his direction, was accustomed to pay his dividends into the defendant's bank in London to the plaintiff's credit, in account with K. and Co., bankers at Abingdon, where the plaintiff resided. On the 14th October, 1847, the broker so paid into the bank 127l. 5s. 9d. On the 15th, and before advice of the receipt, K. and Co. stopped payment. The plaintiff having sued the defendant for the sum so paid into his bank:—Held, that the payment into the defendant's bank was a payment to K. and Co., and that the banker was entitled to a verdict. Williams v. Deacon, 4 Ex. 397—Ex. Ch.

A. deposited with a banking company 80l., consisting partly of notes of a country bank, payable either at that bank or in London, and representing 80l. The company gave a receipt as follows: "Received of A. 80l., for which we are accountable; 80l. at three per cent. interest, with fourteen days' notice." The company sent the notes on the same day to their agents in London, who presented them on the following day, when they were dishonoured. The agents sent them back by that evening's post to the company, who on the following day gave notice of dishonour to A., and, on A.'s giving fourteen days' notice of withdrawal, tendered the notes back, which he refused. The company refused to pay the notes. The country bank, which was about five miles from the office of the company, had stopped payment from the close of the day on which the notes were deposited:—Held, that A. could not recover the amount of the notes from the company, either as money lent, or as money had and received. Timmins v. Gibbins, 18 Q. B. 722; 21 L. J., Q. B. 403; 17 Jur. 378.

Bond—Payment by Notes of Bank which Failed—Discharge of Sureties.—A treasurer of a poor-law board entered with sureties into a bond, with a condition that he should honestly, diligently, and faithfully perform the duties of his office, one of which was to pay orders for money which should be drawn upon him by the guardians. He was a banker issuing his own notes. On a Friday he paid orders drawn upon him by the guardians, partly in cash and partly in his own notes: and again on Monday forenoon paid similar orders in a similar way, and also gave in exchange for their order, in favour of persons from London, a banker's draft upon London, afterwards dishonoured. The bank stopped payment on Monday afternoon:—Held, that the sureties were discharged, because as to the notes given on Friday, the guardians, having kept them during Saturday, conclusively elected to treat the orders as paid; as to all the notes, the guardians, who were entitled to receive cash, thought fit to receive the notes; and as to the banker's draft upon London, the guardians received it for their own convenience. Lichfield Union v. Greene, 1 H. & N. 884; 26 L. J., Ex. 140; 3 Jur., N. S. 247.

V. LETTERS OF CREDIT AND CIRCULAR NOTES.

Letters of Credit—Proving against Company.]

—A banking company, at the request of D., a speculator in cotton, issued a letter of credit, authorizing C., a merchant at Bombay, to draw upon them to the amount of 23,150l., the drafts to be accompanied by bills of lading of cotton to be delivered on their acceptance of the drafts. A similar letter of credit for 50,000l. was issued to C., at the request of another speculator in cotton. C. accordingly drew drafts under the first letter of credit to the full amount, and under the second letter of credit to the amount of 33,635l. The first set was accepted by the banking company, which received the corresponding bills of lading. The second set was not presented till after the banking company had stopped payment, and was therefore not accepted. The first set was dishonoured:—Held, that C. could only prove against the company for the amount of the several bills, after deducting the value of the cotton which was sold, and the proceeds received by C. and Co. Barned's Banking Company, In re, Coupland, Ex parte, 5 L. R., Ch. 167; 39 L. J., Ch. 287; 21 L. T. 807.

A banking company addressed to a firm of merchants a letter of credit in these terms:—"No. 394. You are hereby authorized to draw upon this bank, at six months' sight, to the extent of 15,000l., and such drafts I undertake duly to honour on presentation. This credit will remain in force for twelve months from this date, and parties negotiating bills under it are requested to indorse particulars on the back hereof. The bills must specify that they are drawn under credit No. 394 of the 31st of October, 1865." The merchants drew bills under the letter to the amount of 6,000l., and sold them to third persons, who duly indorsed particulars. The bank, on payment of the bills being demanded, set up a cross claim against the merchants for 7,000l.:—Held, that the purchasers of the bills had a clear right in equity to recover the amount free from the cross claim. Agra and Masterman's Bank, In re, Asiatic Banking — Paying.—A letter of credit saying, "Please to honour the drafts of A. to the amount of 460*l.*, and charge the same to the account of B." is an authority to make the payment, but the possession of it by the person to whom it is addressed does not prove that the payment has been made. Orr v. Union Bank of Scotland, 1 Macq. H. L. Cas. 513; 2 C. L. R. 1566; 24 L. T. 1—H. L.

To shew that the payment has been made there must be a draft by A. Ib.

The person presenting a letter of credit is not necessarily the person who is entitled to make the draft. Ib.

Therefore a banker, to whom a letter of credit is addressed, ought to see that the signature to the draft is genuine. If he does not, the loss will be his own. Ib. See 16 & 17 Vict. c. 59, s. 19.

When, for a sum paid down, a banker grants a letter of credit, he must shew that it has been complied with, or pay back the money. Ib.

In such a case the banker cannot insist on having the letter of credit brought back to him. Ib.

The rules applicable to negotiable securities do not hold with respect to letters of credit. Ib.

On payment of a sum of money by B. into a bank, a letter of credit for the amount was given by the bank in favour of A. It was presented to the bank's agent with the name A. K., a forgery, indorsed on it:—Held, that payment upon this forgery did not discharge the bank. British Linen Company v. Caledonian Insurance Company, 4 Macq. H. L. Cas. 107; 7 Jur., N. S. 587; 4 L. T. 162; 9 W. R. 581—H. L.

— Contract created by.—Letters of credit, containing a promise to accept bills, create a contract between the giver of the letters and the person who advances money on the faith of them only when such letters are intended to be shewn to third persons for the purpose of obtaining advances, or where the giver of the letters has so conducted himself that such an intention may fairly be presumed. Union Bank of Canada v. Cole, 47 L. J., C. P. 100—C. A.

Documents in the form of letters of credit were addressed by the defendants to S. & Co., corn merchants, authorizing them to draw bills on the defendants against shipments of grain. To the documents certain conditions were appended. S. & Co. drew bills upon the defendants under the credit so opened without performing the conditions. The plaintiffs, having notice of the conditions, and knowing that they were unfulfilled, advanced money on the bills so drawn, which the defendants refused to accept. In an action against the defendants for not accepting the bills:—Held, that if the documents created a contract between the plaintiffs and defendants, that contract was subject to such of the conditions as were not necessarily subsequent to the advance. Ib.

The defendants at New York granted to M. & Co., of Rio and New York, a letter of credit dated 1st February, 1864, authorizing M. & Co. to draw on the defendants' house in London at ninety days' sight, for any sums not exceeding 20,000*l.*, for the invoice cost of coffee, to be shipped from Rio to New York, Philadelphia or Baltimore; advice of the bills to be given to the defendants in London accompanied by bills of lading filled up to order of the shipper, and blank indorsed with abstract of invoice thereon for the property shipped; all the bills of lading issued (except one to be forwarded by the vessel to the defendants at New York, and the one retained by the captain of the vessel) to be forwarded direct to the defendants in London; and the defendants by the letter of credit, agreed with the drawers, indorsers, and bonâ fide holders of bills, drawn in compliance with the terms of it, that the same should be duly honoured on presentation at their office in London. On the 11th October, 1864, M. & Co. having purchased coffee at Rio, drew upon the defendants in London, under the letter of credit, for the invoice price of the coffee to the order of the plaintiffs at ninety days' sight; and the plaintiffs, having referred to the letter of credit, purchased or cashed the bill. The coffee was shipped at Rio, and four bills of lading, all of the same tenor, and dated 14th October, 1864, were given by the captain, in which the vessel was stated to be "bound for St. Thomas for orders." Two of these documents were delivered by M. & Co. to the plaintiffs, but only one of them was forwarded by the latter to the defendants in London; and with it was also sent to the defendants in London, a letter of advice from M. & Co., dated 17th October, 1864, stating that the coffee was shipped to St. Thomas for orders, for either New York, Philadelphia, or Baltimore. On the bill of exchange being presented by the plaintiffs to the defendants in London, on the 21st November, 1864, together with the bills of lading and letter of advice, the latter refused to honour the bill of exchange on the ground that the bills of lading were not in accordance with the terms of the letter of credit. In pursuance of written directions sent by M. & Co., at the request of the defendants in New York, on the 2nd December, to the captain of St. Thomas, the vessel proceeded thence to New York, and on arrival there on the 30th December, 1864, the coffee was landed and sold, realizing less by 1,500*l.* than the amount of the bill of exchange. In an action, by the plaintiffs to recover that deficiency from the defendants, as damages for their refusal to honour the bill of exchange:—Held, that the conditions in the letter of credit on which the defendants engaged to accept to the amount of 20,000*l.* were unperformed, and consequently the obligation upon them to accept under the letter of credit never attached, and the action therefore could not be maintained. Brazilian and Portuguese Bank v. British and American Exchange Banking Corporation, 18 L. T. 823.

A bonâ fide holder of a bill of exchange drawn under an open letter of credit, and taken by him on the faith of such letter of credit, has a right of action against the grantor of the letter of credit in case of his refusal to accept the bill. Maitland v. Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London and China, 2 H. & M. 440; 38 L. J., Ch. 363; 12 L. T. 372.

M. & Co., by their bill of complaint, averred that according to the ordinary course of dealing in reference to letters of credit granted to foreign firms, the foreign firm could only obtain letters of credit upon the guarantee of some English firm, and that the foreign firm stipulated to use the letters of credit only for the purpose of buying goods to be consigned to England, and to transmit the bills of lading to the English firm as a security for the repayment of the bills of exchange drawn under the letters of credit by a mail not later than that which carried the bills of exchange. Open letters of credit were granted to F. & Co., a China firm, on the guarantee of M. & Co., an English firm, and F. & Co., in fraud and violation of their agreement with M. & Co., drew bills under them not protected by shipping documents and indorsed them for value to the C. bank, who had no actual notice of the agreement between F. & Co. and M. & Co. :—Held, that the C. bank was entitled to require the grantors of the letters of credit to accept the bills, and that M. & Co. had no equity to restrain them from procuring such acceptance. Ib.

Held, also, that in reference to open letters of credit, no such custom exists as M. & Co. averred, and that even if there was such a custom, the rights of the C. bank as bona fide holders for value could not be affected by the mere constructive notice of the agreement between M. & Co. and F. & Co. which the custom would imply. Ib.

— Not specific Appropriation.—A letter by bankers, stating that a special credit for a certain sum has been opened by them at the instructions of their customer, in favour of any particular person who supplies goods on the faith of it, does not constitute a specific appropriation or an equitable assignment of that sum in their hands, for which they are liable to be sued in a Court of Equity as if they were trustees for the person in whose favour the credit had been opened. Morgan v. Larivière, 7 L. R., H. L. 423; 44 L. J., Ch. 457; 32 L. T. 41; 23 W. R. 537.

L. had contracted to supply the French Government with a certain number of cartridges by a given time, and in consequence of his request for some guarantee for the payment of the price, the bankers in London of the government wrote by direction of the agent of the government a letter advising L. that by such direction a special credit for 40,000*l.* had been opened with them in his favour, and that it would be paid rateably as the goods were delivered, upon receipt of certificates of reception issued by the agent of the French Government :—Held, that this letter did not constitute an assignment in equity, or a specific appropriation, so as to impress a trust upon the moneys in the bankers' hands, for which they could be sued in equity. Whatever responsibility they incurred under that letter could be enforced at law. Ib.

The French Government did not appear to the bill, nor in any way submit to the jurisdiction of the court :—Held, that if the fund had been affected by the trust, the court would have administered it in the absence of the government interested in the moneys. Ib.

— Effect of Failure of Bank.—A bank granted a letter of credit to a company on terms that the company should ship tea and forward bills of lading, invoices, and policy of insurance on the tea to the bank, and should also draw on B. & Co. bills, to be accepted by B. & Co. to an amount sufficient to cover the amount authorized by the letter of credit. B. & Co. guaranteed the performance by the company of these terms, "holding themselves responsible for the same."

The company drew on the bank, and the bank accepted the bills, but owing to the failure of the bank after the dates when the bills were drawn and before they became due the company shipped no tea, and did not perform any of the terms agreed on. All the bills were eventually paid :—Held, that the failure of the bank was no reason why the company should not have performed its part of the contract, and that B. & Co. were not relieved from their guarantee. Agra Bank, Ex parte, Barber, In re, 9 L. R., Eq. 725; 39 L. J., Bk. 39.

When a bank has issued a letter of credit, on the terms that the bills which they agree to accept are to be covered by bills of lading to a like amount, suspension of payment by the bank before there has been time for the letter of credit to be used, is not a breach or a repudiation of contract; inasmuch as permission might have been given to the liquidators under the winding-up to negotiate the bills; and a claim by the holder of the letter of credit, for damages for the alleged breach, was disallowed. Agra Bank, In re, Tondeur, Ex parte, 5 L. R., Eq. 160; 37 L. J., Ch. 121; 16 W. R. 270.

— Circular Notes.—A banker cannot be called upon to return the amount paid for a circular note so long as such note is outstanding and there remains a possibility of his being called upon to pay a correspondent who may cash the same. Conflans Stone Quarry Company v. Parker, 3 L. R., C. P. 1; 37 L. J., C. P. 51; 17 L. T. 283; 16 W. R. 127.

Where, therefore, the plaintiffs, who had purchased certain circular notes of a bank, posted them with the usual letter of indication to their agent at Paris, whose name appeared, both in the notes and letter, as the person who was to receive the amount of such notes, and the letter, but not the notes, duly reached him, and it did not appear what had become of the notes, or by whose fault they had been lost :—Held, that as there was a possibility of the notes being made available and of the bank becoming liable to repay any of the indicated correspondents who might cash them, there was no obligation on the bank to refund to the plaintiffs the money they had paid simply on their offer to return the letter of indication. Ib.

Semble, that they had a claim to equitable relief on giving the bank a sufficient indemnity against the outstanding notes, but such claim could only be enforced at law by application to the court or a judge, under the C. L. P. Act, 1854, s. 87. Ib.

— Fraudulent Alteration of.—G., who had a circular letter of credit for 210*l.*, from a bank in New York, authorizing him to draw for that amount on the Union Bank of London, in favour of certain named correspondents in foreign countries, went to St. Petersburg, and having fraudulently altered the figures in the letter of credit, so as to make it appear to be a letter of credit for 5,210*l.*, presented it so altered to W. & Co., of St. Petersburg, one of the correspondents, and drew in their favour, on the Union Bank, a cheque for 1,200*l.* This cheque was cashed for G. by W. & Co., who sent it to London and had it presented at the Union Bank, and the bank, discovering the fraud, refused to pay it :—Held, that G. was not indictable for an attempt to obtain the 1,200*l.* by false pretences from the Union Bank, since, if W. & Co. had obtained payment it would not have been in pursuance of G.'s wish or desire, and W. & Co. would have obtained the money for their own, and therefore there would have been no obtaining of any money by him. Reg. v. Garrett, Dears. C. C. 232; 23 L. J., M. C. 20. See 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 89.

VI. SAVINGS BANKS.

Legal Status of.]—A savings bank company is not necessarily a banking company within the acts relating to joint-stock companies. Coe, Ex parte, 3 De G., F. & J. 335; 10 W. R. 138.

Action by Depositor.]—Since 9 Geo. 4, c. 92, an action is not maintainable by a depositor against the trustees of a savings bank; the only mode of adjusting disputes is by arbitration, as pointed out by s. 45. Crisp v. Bunbury, 1 M. & Scott, 646; 8 Bing. 394.

Where money belonging to the depositors has been embezzled, the remedy of the depositors is not by action against the trustees and managers, but by mandamus to compel them to appoint an arbitrator. Re v. Mildenhall Savings Bank, 2 N. & P. 278; 6 A. & E. 952.

Claim made Seven Years after Death of Depositor.]—Where, by a rule of a savings bank, no claim for any sum of money could be made more than seven years from the death of a depositor, the court discharged a rule nisi for a mandamus to the trustees of such a bank to appoint an arbitrator, to decide a dispute as to money, the alleged depositor of which had been dead more than seven years. Reg. v. Northwich Savings Bank (Trustees), 1 P. & D. 477; 9 A. & E. 729.

Deposit by one Person in Name of another—Withdrawal without Authority.]—By the rules of a savings bank, deposited with the clerk of the peace pursuant to 57 Geo. 3, c. 130, s. 2, entries of deposits were to be made in a book kept by the bank for that purpose, and in a duplicate account-book to be kept by the party making the deposit, which duplicate was to be a voucher for the party producing it, and a receipt for the bank when handed over to them. A deposited in the name of B., and afterwards, without B.'s authority, received back the amount and delivered up the duplicate account-book:—Held, that B. still continued to be a depositor. Re v. Cheadle Savings Bank (Trustees), 3 N. & M. 418; 1 A. & E. 323.

Arbitration.]—A party is not entitled to a mandamus to compel a savings bank to refer to arbitration, unless he shews himself to be at the time a depositor. Ib.

The directors were not compellable to appoint an arbitrator under 9 Geo. 4, c. 92, s. 45, for the purpose of deciding upon the claims of persons professing to apply on behalf of a body of depositors, if it was a matter of dispute whether the applicants were entitled to represent the body. Re v. Witham Savings Bank, 3 N. & M. 416; 1 A. & E. 321.

Deposits in fictitious Names—Illegality.]—By the 26 & 27 Vict. c. 87, s. 38, it is provided that it shall not be lawful for a depositor in a savings bank to make any deposit in any other account at the same or any other savings bank, and that every depositor at the time of the first deposit, and at such other times as such depositor shall be required so to do by the trustees and managers of the bank, shall make a declaration that he is not entitled to any deposit in or any benefit from the funds of any savings bank other than that into which such deposit shall be made, or any other funds in the said savings bank; and if such declaration shall not be true, or if any person shall at any time have any deposit or funds in more than one savings bank within the United Kingdom (except as provided by the act), every such person shall, if such deposit be, in the opinion of the barrister-at-law appointed under the act, made with a fraudulent intention, forfeit all right to any deposit in or funds of any and every such savings bank. By s. 48 it is provided that if any dispute shall arise between the trustees and managers of any savings bank and any individual depositor therein, or his personal representatives claiming to be entitled to any money deposited in such savings bank, the matter in dispute shall be referred to the barrister appointed under the act, whose award shall be binding and conclusive. By the 39 & 40 Vict. c. 52, s. 2, the duty of determining any such disputes is transferred to the assistant-registrar of friendly societies in Ireland. C., after the passing of the act 26 & 27 Vict. c. 87, placed various sums of money on deposit in a savings bank in fictitious names, with, however, the knowledge of the officers of the bank. He had also deposits remaining in his own name previously made. The deposits in the aggregate exceeded considerably 200*l.*, notwithstanding that the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt had directed that the trustees of any savings bank should not add interest to any annual account so long as it continued at or above 200*l.* C. died in 1880, leaving these moneys on deposit. His personal representatives claimed them, but the trustees refused to pay the sums deposited in fictitious names. On an application by C.'s personal representatives for a mandamus to the assistant-registrar of friendly societies to hear and determine his claim as a dispute between him and the trustees:—Held, first, that there was no forfeiture of the deposits under the 38th section. Reg. v. Littledale, 10 L. R., Ir. 78. Affirmed, 12 L. R., Ir. 97.

Held, secondly, that the claim made by the personal representatives, and resisted by the trustees, constituted a dispute within the meaning of s. 48, which the assistant-registrar had jurisdiction to entertain. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the deposits in the fictitious names having been made illegally, and in wilful contravention of the 38th section, and contrary to the policy of its provisions, the writ of mandamus, which is one in subsidium justitiæ, ought not to be granted. Ib.

I. STATUTES.

[The present Bankruptcy Act is 45 & 46 Vict. c. 52.]

The bankrupt statutes do not bind the crown. Russell, Ex parte, 19 Ves. 165.

Though the crown is named in some of the sections of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, it is not bound by the other provisions of the Act. In particular, the relation back of the title of the trustee in a liquidation to the filing of the petition does not affect the rights of the crown under an extent issued against the property of the debtor between the filing of the petition and the appointment of a trustee. Notwithstanding the filing of a liquidation petition and the appointment of a receiver by the court on the application of the debtor, his property remains vested in him as before, until the creditors have determined what they will do, and the property is bound by an extent issued by the crown between the filing of the petition and the appointment of a trustee. Postmaster-General, Ex parte, Bonham, In re, 10 Ch. D. 595; 48 L. J., Bk. 84; 40 L. T. 16; 27 W. R. 325—C. A.

The 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, does not extend to the colony of New Zealand. Bunny v. Hart, 11 Moore, P. C. C. 189.

The 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, does not interfere with rights accruing under any of the acts repealed by the 1st section, notwithstanding such rights may have accrued after the passing of the act. Birch or Bissell, In re, 2 Kay & J. 328; 25 L. J., Ch. 323; 2 Jur., N. S. 370.

A bankrupt had been guilty of an offence against 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 251, in not surrendering himself to the court, and an information had been laid before a magistrate, who had issued a warrant for his apprehension. Subsequently the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, came into operation, which, by s. 230, repeals 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 251, subject to the exceptions therein contained. The bankrupt was afterwards indicted and convicted under the repealed enactment:—Held, that this was a proceeding pending within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 230; and, secondly, that the word "penalty" in that section extends to any penal consequences whatsoever, and is not restricted to a pecuniary penalty only. Reg. v. Smith, 1 L. & C., C. C. 131; 9 Cox, C. C. 110; 31 L. J., M. C. 105; 8 Jur., N. S. 199; 5 L. T. 761; 10 W. R. 271.

The effect of an act of bankruptcy under the former law is saved by the repealing section of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 83, s. 20. Snowball, Ex parte, Douglas, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 534; 41 L. J., Bk. 49; 26 L. T. 894; 20 W. R. 786.

II. COURTS OF BANKRUPTCY.

1. JURISDICTION OF COURT.

a. Generally.

Under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134.—The jurisdiction in matters of insolvency transferred to the commissioners in bankruptcy by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, is exercisable by them in the same manner, and subject to the same right of appeal, as their ordinary business in bankruptcy. Perkins, Ex parte, 34 L. J., Bk. 37; 11 Jur., N. S. 895; 12 L. T. 784; 13 W. R. 1001.

When creditors have by the requisite statutory majority resolved under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, s. 110, to suspend proceedings in bankruptcy, and to have the estate wound up by trustees, the Court of Bankruptcy has still power under s. 136 to determine any questions that may arise in the winding up of the estate by the trustees, and will, therefore, restrain a chancery suit for the administration of the estate. Penyston, Ex parte, Partridge, In re, 31 L. T. 259—L. J.

The Bankruptcy Act, 1861, s. 137, does not apply to a sale of a bankrupt's interest in a partnership of which some of the partners are solvent. Motion, In re, Maule v. Davis, 9 L. R., Ch. 192; 43 L. J., Bk. 59; 29 L. T. 757; 22 W. R. 225.

Under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 71.]—The Court of Bankruptcy has jurisdiction to decide questions between a debtor and a secured creditor who has opposed a composition, if the composition forms part of a scheme that has been approved and carried out by the court under which the bankruptcy of the debtor has been annulled. Lenard, Ex parte, Chidley, In re, 1 Ch. D. 177; 45 L. J., Bk. 49; 33 L. T. 553; 24 W. R. 182—C. A.

A bill was filed by a debtor, who had presented a petition for an arrangement with his creditors under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 70, against his trustees, praying for the rectification of certain deeds, and that accounts might be taken against his trustees on the ground of wilful default and neglect. A demurrer to this bill was allowed, on the ground that by 7 & 8 Vict. c. 70, s. 15, that act was to be construed by the existing bankruptcy laws, and that under the present act the Court of Bankruptcy had jurisdiction to give the debtor the relief he sought. Hutchinson v. Baslam, 35 L. T. 467; 25 W. R. 54.

Where Trustee's Right more extensive than Bankrupt's.]—Where a trustee in bankruptcy claims only the same right as the bankrupt himself would have had, the Court of Bankruptcy ought not to assume jurisdiction, but ought to leave the matter to be dealt with by the ordinary tribunals. But where, by the operation of the law of bankruptcy, the trustee has a higher and better title than the bankrupt (where, for instance, a transaction is impeached as a fraudulent preference or an act of bankruptcy), the Court of Bankruptcy ought to decide the matter itself. Brown, Ex parte, Yates, In re, 11 Ch. D. 148; 48 L. J., Bk. 78; 40 L. T. 402; 27 W. R. 651—C. A.

Action of Account.]—A liquidating debtor had consigned goods to commission merchants for sale, and they had made advances to him. They alleged that a balance was due to them from his estate, and the trustee in the liquidation alleged that a balance was due from them to the estate. They had not, however, tendered any proof or made any formal claim against the estate:—Held, by the chief judge and by the Court of Appeal, that, inasmuch as, if the trustee was right, there was a mere money demand by him against a stranger to the liquidation, the Court of Bankruptcy ought not, on the application of the trustee, to order accounts to be taken of the dealings between the debtor and the commission merchants; but that the trustee ought to proceed by action in the High Court. Musgrave, Ex parte, Wood, In re, 10 Ch. D. 94; 48 L. J., Bk. 39; 39 L. T. 647; 27 W. R. 372—C. A. Affirming 26 W. R. 915.

Simple Money Demands.]—The Court of Bankruptcy, even if it possesses jurisdiction under s. 72 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, to enforce a simple money demand by the trustee of a bankrupt's property against a third party, ought not to exercise jurisdiction, but ought to leave the demand to be enforced by the trustee in an action in the ordinary way. Dicken, Ex parte, Pollard, In re, 8 Ch. D. 377; 38 L. T. 860; 26 W. R. 731—C. A.

Commission agents accepted bills drawn upon them by their principals for part of the value of goods consigned to the agents for sale. After the principals had filed a liquidation petition the agents sold the goods in order to reimburse themselves the amount of one of the bills which they had paid, and to provide funds to meet the others which were soon to become due. Before the latter bills were paid the agents filed a liquidation petition. They had spent all the proceeds of the sale. Their creditors agreed to accept a composition, which was paid to the holders of the bills, some of whom claimed to prove in the liquidation of the principals. The principal's trustee applied to the county court for an order that the agents should pay to him the balance of the proceeds of sale, after deducting the amount of the bill which they had paid in full, and the composition which they had paid in respect of the others:—Held, by the chief judge, that the trustee was not entitled to the order. 1b.

Held, by the Court of Appeal, that the trustee's demand against the agents was a mere demand for a debt due to the principal's estate, and that the Court of Bankruptcy ought not to assume jurisdiction to try it. 1b.

A trader opened with a railway company a credit account for freight, by which it was agreed that the company should have a general lien for all moneys due by him to them on any account on all goods belonging to him in their hands. He afterwards filed a liquidation petition, under which a receiver of his property and manager of his business was appointed. In order to carry on the business the receiver bought some goods, which he paid for with his own money, and sent them to the company consigned to the trader. The company claimed the benefit of the agreement, and refused to deliver the goods until they were paid the amount which the trader owed them for freight due at the time of the filing of the petition. The receiver, in order to obtain the goods, paid the company 50*l.* under protest, and then applied to the Court of Bankruptcy to order the company to repay him the 50*l.*, and an order was made accordingly:—Held, that the Court of Bankruptcy had no jurisdiction to make the order. Great Western Railway Company, Ex parte, Bushell, In re, 22 Ch. D. 470; 52 L. J. Ch. 734; 48 L. T. 196; 31 W. R. 419—C. A.

Election of Remedy in other Court.]—A judgment creditor levied execution against his debtor, and the sheriff took possession of the debtor's goods; but before the sale took place the debtor filed a petition for liquidation, and a receiver was appointed, who obtained an injunction restraining the sale on giving an undertaking to abide by any order as to damages. The liquidation proceedings became abortive, and a petition for adjudication was presented, under which the debtor was adjudicated bankrupt, and the sheriff gave up the goods to the trustee. The execution creditor then brought an action against the sheriff for damages sustained by his parting with the goods. The action was determined in the sheriff's favour, on the ground that the debtor was a trader, and had committed an act of bankruptcy by suffering the execution. Afterwards, the execution creditor made an application in bankruptcy for damages under the undertaking given by the receiver, in which he relied on the same point as in the action, namely, that the debtor was not a trader:—Held, that the matter was res judicata, and as the creditor had elected to take his remedy at law against the sheriff, the Court of Bankruptcy could not entertain the question. Harper, Ex parte, Bremner, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 379; 44 L. J., Bk. 57; 32 L. T. 317; 23 W. R. 433.

Superseding or overriding Jurisdiction in Chancery.—Articles of partnership between a father and his son provided that upon the father's death the son's share in the business should vest in the father's executors. The father died, and the son, who was constituted his sole executor, continued for about a year to carry on the business with the testator's assets. An administration suit was instituted by the creditors of the father. Shortly afterwards the son presented a petition for liquidation by arrangement, and a trustee was appointed, who took possession of the property belonging to the business, and sold a considerable portion of it. The bill was then amended by making the trustee a defendant to the suit, and praying an injunction to restrain him from meddling with the testator's assets. An application by the trustee to the Court of Bankruptcy for an order to restrain proceedings in the suit was refused, and an order was made in the suit directing the trustee to deposit in a bank the proceeds realized by the sale of the property, to be dealt with as the Court of Chancery should direct, and in default of his making such deposit, awarding an injunction against him as prayed by the bill:—Held, that the Court of Bankruptcy was the proper tribunal to determine the questions arising in the matter, and that an injunction must be awarded restraining the proceedings in chancery as against the trustee, in respect of any property coming to his hands under the liquidation. Morley v. White, White, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 214; 42 L. J., Bk. 76; 27 L. T. 736; 21 W. R. 746.

A partner in a distillery business filed a bill in chancery against his co-partners for the dissolution of the partnership, and a decree was made for a dissolution, and afterwards an order was made for a sale of the business and property as a going concern by public auction. During the progress of the suit he became bankrupt, and the creditors' assignee sold the bankrupt's interest in the partnership property to his co-partners, and procured an order of the Court of Chancery sanctioning the sale. The co-partners then sold the whole business to a purchaser, and the creditors were paid 20s. in the pound out of the purchase-money. New assignees were afterwards appointed, who obtained an order in the Court of Bankruptcy, at the instance of the bankrupt, to set aside the sales as being made collusively, and at an undervalue:—Held, that there was no breach of trust on the part of the assignee in selling the share of the bankrupt partner by private contract, and that there was no proof of collusion in obtaining the order for sale; but it appearing to the court that the valuation of the property for the purposes of the sale had in some respects been made on an erroneous principle, a reference was directed as to the true value of the property, the purchaser consenting to pay any excess which might be found due from him on such reference. Motion, In re, Maule v. Davis, 9 L. R., Ch. 192; 43 L. J., Bk. 59; 29 L. T. 757; 22 W. R. 225. S. C., Cor. C. J. R.; 28 L. T. 905; 21 W. R. 904.

The 72nd section of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, does not enable the Court of Bankruptcy to draw within its jurisdiction property or the owners of property not vested in the trustee, and not originally subject to the administration in bankruptcy; and a fortiori does not authorize that court to work out a decree which has been made in chancery against such persons. Id.

Concurrent Chancery Jurisdiction.—When a suit would, but for the fact of a bankruptcy, be fit to be entertained by the Court of Chancery, the jurisdiction is not taken away by the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. Ellis v. Silber, 8 L. R., Ch. 83; 42 L. J., Ch. 666; 28 L. T. 156; 21 W. R. 346.

Therefore, when the trustee has, in respect of the bankrupt's estate, a claim against a third person, that claim may be prosecuted at law or in equity, and is not subject to the jurisdiction of the Court of Bankruptcy. Id.

S., having created an equitable mortgage in favour of the plaintiff of his share in the assets or a partnership, subsequently became bankrupt. To a bill by the plaintiff against the trustee under the bankruptcy, praying for the appointment of a receiver of the property, subject to the mortgage, and that the defendant might be restrained from obtaining possession thereof, demurrer for want of jurisdiction overruled. Coulthurst v. Smith, 29 L. T. 714—C. A. Affirming 29 L. T. 243.

A composition deed, by which all the creditors of a debtor agreed to accept a composition of 7s. 6d. in the pound on the amount of and in full discharge of their debts, was duly executed by all the creditors and registered under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, and all the property of the debtor was assigned to a trustee to provide for the composition. The payment of part of one of the debts to which the plaintiffs were now entitled was afterwards agreed to be postponed till all the other creditors had received their composition in full, and the entire estate then available was distributed in paying the composition on all the debts except the portion of the plaintiffs' which was postponed. Some years elapsed, and it was then discovered that there was real estate at Monte Video which had become vested in the trustee of the composition deed, and had remained unadministered, and the plaintiffs instituted a suit in the Chancery Division to have this property realized with a view to payment of the balance still due:—Held, on motion by the trustee of the composition deed to have the proceedings stayed on the ground that the case ought to be dealt with by the Court of Bankruptcy, that the Chancery Division had at least concurrent jurisdiction, and that the fact that there was no body of creditors amongst whom a fund was to be distributed was a circumstance which made it expedient to exercise that jurisdiction. Jenney v. Bell, 2 Ch. D. 547; 43 L. J. 369; 34 L. T. 485; 24 W. R. 550.

Held, also, that the fact of the deed containing a clause which made it doubtful whether it came within ss. 192 and 197 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, would of itself be a strong ground for not compelling the parties to go to the Court of Bankruptcy. Ib.

The plaintiffs brought an action against the trustee of a composition deed, registered in bankruptcy, to compel him to sue for some of their debtor's estate, outstanding in Trinidad. The plaintiffs were the only creditors interested under the deed. They relied upon this: that the deed contained clauses which, since it was executed, had been decided to be invalid. The defendant objected to the jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery:—Held, that the Court of Bankruptcy had not the exclusive jurisdiction; and a motion to stay the action, and transfer the matters to that court, was therefore refused, with costs. Ib.

Jurisdiction of Chancery exclusively.]—The jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery is not ousted by a limited statutory jurisdiction conferred upon another court, and is properly invoked where the purposes for which the limited jurisdiction is conferred are at an end, or where the limited jurisdiction is not equal to the comprehension of the matter in dispute or can only be exercised on terms destructive of the right claimed. Troup v. Ricardo, 4 De G., J. & S. 489; 34 L. J., Ch. 91.

An insolvent debtor's estate had been fully administered in the Insolvent Debtors Court, and a sum paid out of court to him as surplus; but he had obtained no order to annul the insolvency or to re-vest his property in him:—Held, that he was nevertheless entitled to sue in chancery, in order to impeach the dealings of his assignees in insolvency with his property. Ib.

Extraordinary Jurisdiction of Court, Objection to.]—An objection to the exercise of the extraordinary jurisdiction conferred on the Court of Bankruptcy by s. 72 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, ought to be taken at the earliest opportunity, and it is too late to take such an objection after the objecting party has taken the chance of a decision in his favour on the merits. But the court itself may at any time decline mero motu to exercise the jurisdiction. Swinbanks, Ex parte, Shanks, In re, 11 Ch. D. 525; 48 L. J., Bk. 120; 40 L. T. 825; 27 W. R. 898—C. A.

An uncertificated bankrupt carried on business for several years after his bankruptcy, with the knowledge of his assignees and executors, who were his creditors at the time of the bankruptcy. He died possessed of considerable property. On a claim filed by one of his executors against the other, and the official assignee under the bankruptcy:—Held, that the creditors subsequent to the bankruptcy were entitled to priority over the former creditors, and that the estate ought to be administered in chancery. Tucker v. Hernemann, 4 De G., M. & G. 395; 1 Eq. R. 360.

Vested Reversion of Deceased Insolvent falling into Possession.]—Sect. 9 of the act 5 & 6 Vict. c. 116, applies only to a living insolvent, and does not enable the assignee of a deceased insolvent to obtain possession of property which, though it becomes vested in the insolvent in reversion expectant on a life estate after his final order, does not fall into possession until after his death. In such a case the proper remedy of the unsatisfied creditors under the insolvency is to commence an action for the administration of his estate. Welchman, Ex parte, Hare, In re, 11 Ch. D. 48; 40 L. T. 45; 27 W. R. 774—C. A.

Time for taking Objection to Jurisdiction.]—The trustee in a bankruptcy applied to a county court to set aside as fraudulent a mortgage which the bankrupt had executed. The court directed the trial of certain issues by a jury, and the jury found that the deed was executed by the bankrupt without consideration, and with intent to defeat and delay his creditors. The county court then declared the deed to be void, and ordered it to be delivered up to be cancelled. The mortgagee applied for a new trial, but the application was refused. He appealed to the Chief Judge from the order which declared the deed void, but did not appeal from the refusal of a new trial. On the hearing of the appeal, the objection was taken that the case was not one in which the Court of Bankruptcy ought to exercise its extraordinary jurisdiction under s. 72:—Held, that the objection was raised too late after the mortgagee had taken his chance of a decision in his favour on the merits in the county court. Butters, Ex parte, Harrison, In re, 14 Ch. D. 265; 43 L. T. 2; 28 W. R. 876—C. A. Reversing S. C., 13 Ch. D. 603; 49 L. J., Bk. 30; 28 W. R. 280; nom. Harrison, Ex parte, Harrison, In re.

Objection, how raised.]—A foreigner properly raises his objection to the jurisdiction by applying to have an order for service of a bankruptcy petition on him discharged. Blain, Ex parte, Sawers, In re, 12 Ch. D. 512; 41 L. T. 46; 28 W. R. 334—C. A.

Costs on Appeal when Objection not taken below.]—No costs given on appeal when objection to jurisdiction not raised in court below. Eutough, Ex parte, Cliffe, In re, 42 L. T. 95; 28 W. R. 433.

Exercising Jurisdiction over Third Parties.]—On the 23rd of May the tenant for life of a mansion-house and lands demised the same, for the rest of his life, at a gross undervalue, to a confidential servant, and seven days afterwards left Ireland, taking his servant with him. On the 15th of June he was adjudicated a bankrupt:—Held, that under these circumstances, the Irish Court of Bankruptcy had jurisdiction to decide on the validity of the lease. Domvile, In re, 9 Ir. R., Eq. 456; 23 W. R. 369.

The Court of Bankruptcy has jurisdiction to take an account, between a debtor and the trustees under a composition deed, of a fund paid to the trustees for distribution among the creditors. Carew, Ex parte, Carew, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 308; 44 L. J., Bk. 67; 32 L. T. 318; 23 W. R. 459.

C. bought goods on credit from H. After delivery, but before the time for payment, C. became bankrupt. H., when the time for payment arrived, commenced an action against S., for the price, alleging that C. had bought the goods by the authority of S., and either on account of S. or on the joint account of S. and C. S. thereupon served the trustee with a notice under Ord. XVI. r. 18, of the Rules of Court, 1875. The trustee then applied for and obtained in bankruptcy an order restraining S. from taking or continuing any proceedings against the trustee under Ord. XVI.:—Held, that this order must be discharged, for that the case between H. and S. could not be tried in bankruptcy, and that S., if found liable in the action, ought not to have to try the same question again in bankruptcy between himself and the trustee. Smith, Ex parte, Collic. In re, 2 Ch. D. 51; 45 L. J., Bk. 116; 34 L. T. 603; 24 W. R. 310—C. A.

When a stranger to a bankruptcy is willing to submit to the court of bankruptcy the determination of his rights in relation to property of the bankrupt, it is improper for the trustee in the bankruptcy to raise objections to the exercise of jurisdiction by that court. Such a person ought to be encouraged to submit to the jurisdiction. Fletcher, Ex parte, Hart, In re, 9 Ch. D. 381; 39 L. T. 187; 26 W. R. 843—C. A.

— Under Old Law.—The court had no jurisdiction over strangers to the fiat. Holder, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 518; S. P., Pease, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 242; 19 Ves. 47; Bennett, Ex parte, 10 Ves. 382; Crow, Ex parte, Mont. & Mac. 281; Wackerbeth, Ex parte, 2 Gl. & J. 156.

— To prevent or restrain Acts of Injury by Injunction.—The Court of Bankruptcy has jurisdiction upon a summary application on notice, or upon ex parte application, to grant an injunction against persons strangers to the bankruptcy, restraining them from doing acts which may be material to the estate of the bankruptcy. Ander-son, In re, 5 L. R., Ch. 473; 39 L. J., Bk. 49; 22 L. T. 361; 18 W. R. 715.

When an order for such an injunction is obtained ex parte by the assignee or trustee, it must be upon an absolute personal undertaking as to damages, and not an undertaking limited to the estate of the bankrupt, and it must put the person obtaining it upon terms of actively prosecuting the claim upon which it is founded. Id.

When at the time of the filing of a liquidation petition the grantee of a bill of sale given by the debtor is in actual uncontrolled possession of the property comprised in the deed, the court ought not to interfere by injunction with the exercise of the grantee's legal rights upon the mere suggestion that, if an injunction is granted, it is possible that the trustee in the liquidation, when appointed, may be able to raise a case for impeaching the validity of the deed. In order to justify such an interference the applicant for the injunction must at least swear to his belief of some facts which, if established, would render the deed invalid, as against the trustee in the liquidation. Bayly, Ex parte, Hart, In re, 15 Ch. D. 223; 43 L. T. 181; 29 W. R. 28—C. A.

— Sequestration to compel Appearance—Action against Bankrupt in Colonial Court.—Before issuing a sequestration against real estate of a bankrupt situate in a colony, for the purpose of compelling his appearance in an action in the Colonial Court to realize a mortgage given by him of other real estate in the colony, the leave of the Court of Bankruptcy ought to be obtained. Rogers, Ex parte, Boustead, In re, 16 Ch. D. 663; 44 L. T. 357—C. A.

— Issued without Leave—Undertaking.—But where such a sequestration had been issued without leave, and an appearance had been entered in the colonial action:—Held, that it was sufficient that the plaintiffs in the action should undertake not to use the sequestration for any other purpose. Id.

— Restraining Actions.—The power of the Court of Bankruptcy to restrain suits in other courts by injunction is untouched by the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 24, sub-s. 5, and remains as before the passing of the act. Dutton, Ex parte, Woods, In re, 1 Ch. D. 557; 45 L. J., Bk. 87; 34 L. T. 100; 24 W. R. 289—C. A.

An order was made in the London Court of Bankruptcy restraining an equitable mortgagee of certain property of a bankrupt from proceeding in a foreclosure suit against the trustee, and ordering him to give up the deed to the trustee, and concur with him in selling the property; and that on completion of the purchase the sum claimed by the mortgagee should be paid into the Court of Bankruptcy. On appeal the court varied the order, directing that the mortgagee should not give up the deed till payment into the Court of Bankruptcy of the amount claimed by the mortgagee. Id.

The court will, on the motion of a petitioning creditor, restrain creditors proceeding in their actions against the debtor, provided it has some guarantee that the petitioning creditor will proceed with his petition. Davies, In re, 21 L. T. 685.

A suit in chancery was instituted by legatees under the will of a testator against his executors, and against the continuing partners of a firm of which he had been a member at the time of his death, and D., another partner who had retired after the testator's death, for the purpose of winding up the affairs of the partnership as they existed at the time of the testator's death, and obtaining payment to his estate of the share of the capital which was due to him. After the bill was filed the continuing partners filed a petition for liquidation by arrangement, and a trustee was appointed. The trustee was made a party to the suit by a supplemental order, but no relief was prayed against him. The trustee having applied to the Court of Bankruptcy for an injunction to restrain the proceedings in the suit as against him, Bacon, C. J., held, that the court had no jurisdiction to grant the injunction. After the order was made D. also filed a petition for liquidation:—Held, that the chief judge was right in refusing the injunction, D. being then solvent. Gordon, Ex parte, Dixon, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 555; 42 L. J., Bk. 41; 28 L. T. 858; 21 W. R. 690.

Held, also, on evidence, that D. had also become a liquidating debtor, that all the matters in question in the suit might be properly determined in bankruptcy, and that the trustee was entitled to the injunction asked for. Id.

Quære, whether the jurisdiction under sect. 13 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, to restrain proceedings can be exercised in an action. Leman v. Yorkshire Railway Waggon Company, 50 L. J., Ch. 293; 29 W. R. 466.

— Fraud.—The Court of Bankruptcy has no jurisdiction to restrain an action for false representation or fraud. Baum, Ex parte, Edwards, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 673; 44 L. J., Bk. 25; 31 L. T. 12.

Therefore, when an action had been commenced against a debtor for damages for breach of contract and for a tort by reason of a false representation, both grounds of complaint having arisen out of the same transaction, the Court of Bankruptcy in proceedings under a composition under the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, restrained the plaintiff in the action from proceeding therewith only so far as concerned the breach of contract, but did not restrain him from proceeding in respect of the tort:—Held, that the claimant was put to his election between his remedies, and if he proceeded with his action upon the tort, he could not also prove under the composition. Ib.

A. filed a bill against B., praying that an agreement might be cancelled and a sum of money paid under it repaid, on the ground of fraudulent misrepresentations by B. Before the suit came to a hearing B. became a liquidating debtor, and the suit was revived against his trustee. The trustee then applied to the Court of Bankruptcy for an injunction to restrain the suit in chancery:—Held, that A. had a right to prosecute his remedy against the debtor personally in the suit, notwithstanding the proceedings in liquidation, and the injunction was refused. Coker, Ex parte, Blake, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 652; 44 L. J., Bk. 126; 24 W. R. 145.

The Court of Bankruptcy will not restrain proceedings in a suit or an action to which the discharge of the debtor in bankruptcy would be no defence. Ib.

—Tort.—After the registration of liquidation proceedings a creditor, who was not included in the debtor's statement of affairs, and who had no notice of the proceedings, brought an action against the debtor for money had and received, and also in detainue:—Held, that, so far as the action was founded on the count in detainue, it was an action in tort, and that the court had no power to restrain it, and that in other respects the court, in the exercise of the discretion given by r. 289 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1870, ought not to restrain the action. Meade, In re, Harold, Ex parte, 3 Ch. D. 119; 45 L. J., Bk. 121; 34 L. T. 649; 24 W. R. 903.

—Foreclosure Action.—After an adjudication in bankruptcy, a foreclosure action was commenced against the trustee of the bankrupt by an alleged equitable mortgagee. The trustee pleaded that nothing was due on the mortgage, which he alleged was a sham to defraud the bankrupt's creditors. An application by the trustee to restrain the mortgagee from proceeding with the action, and for an order directing him to deliver up the title deed to the trustee was refused by the court, with liberty to either party to apply in the matter after the determination of the foreclosure action. England, In re, Pannell, Ex parte, 6 Ch. D. 335; 37 L. T. 450; 26 W. R. 194—C. A.

—Administration Action.—A., B., and C. were in partnership together, carrying on business under the style or firm of T. C. and Co., and were also individually trustees of the will of T. C. deceased, a former partner in the firm. The firm having presented a liquidation petition, under which resolutions were passed for a composition, was subsequently adjudicated bankrupt. Previously, however, to the adjudication, an administration action had been brought by beneficiaries under the will of T. C. deceased, charging A., B., and C., and also a firm of B. and Co., with breaches of trust and fraud in the administration of the testator's estate, under which a receiver had been appointed, and he, by order of the court, had taken possession of the property of the firm, and was carrying on the partnership business:—Held, that an order in bankruptcy restraining the administration action was an improper exercise of the power of the court, inasmuch as the matters in dispute could be better considered in the administration action in chancery than by the Court of Bankruptcy. Charlton, Ex parte, Charlton, In re, 38 L. T. 295; 26 W. R. 468.

—Action by Equitable Second Mortgagees for Redemption and Foreclosure.—An equitable second mortgagee commenced an action against the liquidation trustee of the mortgagor, and the first mortgagees, claiming an equitable charge on the property, redemption against the second mortgagees, and, if necessary, foreclosure. Order of County Court in bankruptcy, restraining the action, discharged. Hirst, Ex parte, Wherly, In re, 11 Ch. D. 278.

—Restraining Executions.—A creditor obtained a judgment, but before he delivered the writ of execution to the sheriff he had notice that the debtor had filed his petition, and had obtained an interim injunction, restraining further proceedings in the action. A composition was afterwards resolved upon, and the injunction was made absolute:—Held, that the order making the injunction absolute was right, and that the creditor was bound by the composition. Mauthner, Ex parte, Lewis, In re, 3 Ch. D. 113; 45 L. J., Bk. 125.

—Notice of Injunction—Proper Mode of Giving.—A London solicitor, who obtains an order from the Court of Bankruptcy in London restraining a sale under an execution in the country, ought, instead of telegraphing the order to the sheriff's officer, to telegraph it to a solicitor at the place, as his agent, asking him to give notice of it to the persons affected. Langley, Ex parte, Smith, Ex parte, Bishop, In re, 13 Ch. D. 110; 49 L. J., Bk. 1; 43 L. T. 181; 28 W. R. 174—C. A.

—Notice by Telegram.—Sufficient notice of the granting of an injunction may be given by telegram; but, if it is sought to commit for contempt a person who, after receiving such a notice, disregards it, the court must decide upon the particular facts, whether he had in fact notice of the injunction, and it is the duty of those who ask for the committal to prove this beyond reasonable doubt. Ib.

—Committal of Person believing Telegram a Hoax.—A person who has violated an injunction will not be committed for contempt when he swears that, though he had received notice of it by telegram, he bona fide believed that no injunction had been granted, and the circumstances show that such a belief was not unreasonable. Ib.

—Duty of Sheriff's Officer receiving Telegram.—It is the duty of a sheriff's officer who receives notice by telegram, purporting to be sent by solicitors in London, of an injunction being granted by the Court of Bankruptcy to restrain a sale in the country under an execution, to telegraph to the Court of Bankruptcy, or to the London agents of the sheriff, to ascertain whether an injunction has really been granted. Ib.

— Duty of Auctioneer.—This, however, is not the duty of the auctioneer who is conducting the sale; he is only bound to communicate with the sheriff's officer who has instructed him to sell. Ib.

— Liability of Sheriff's Officer for acts of Deputy.—A sheriff's officer, who is not himself present at the sale, and who has no actual notice of the injunction, is not responsible for the act of his deputy who allows the sale to be continued after receiving notice by telegram. Ib.

— After Bankruptcy Annulled.—A trader was adjudicated bankrupt on the petition of a creditor who was, under an execution, in possession of chattels belonging to the trader. Under orders of the court, the bankruptcy was afterwards annulled, and the property of the debtor was assigned by him to the same person who was trustee in the bankruptcy, on trust to secure payment of a composition which the majority of the creditors had agreed to accept. The execution creditor then threatened to proceed with his execution:—Held, that as the assignment had been made, and the composition had been accepted with the approval of the court, the court retained jurisdiction over the execution creditor, though the bankruptcy had been annulled. Chidley, In re, Lennard, In re, 1 Ch. D. 177; 45 L. J., Bk. 49; 33 L. T. 553; 24 W. R. 182—C. A.

Held, also, that the chattels were vested in the trustee discharged from the execution, and that the creditor ought to be restrained from proceeding with the execution. Ib.

— Appointment of Guardians ad litem.—The Court of Bankruptcy has power to appoint a guardian ad litem, to represent and protect the interests of minors in property that is being dealt with by the court, and will exercise such jurisdiction in cases where complete justice cannot otherwise be done. Darcy, In re, 11 Ir. R., Eq. 13.

— Reference to Arbitration—Compelling Attendance of Witnesses.—A matter in dispute between a trustee in a liquidation and a third party was, by an order made by consent, referred to arbitration. A witness refused to attend before the arbitrator:—Held, that the court could issue a subpoena for the attendance of the witness before the arbitrator. Ackary, In re, Bolland, Ex parte, 3 Ch. D. 125; 45 L. J., Bk. 133; 34 L. T. 666; 24 W. R. 932.

— Property.—S. was a woolbroker and warehouseman in Liverpool who also acted as the Liverpool agent of C. & Co., wool merchants, of London. S. pledged the wools of C. & Co. to a bank as security for advances made to him by the bank under the Factors Acts. Subsequently to these advances S. absented himself from his home, and while the intention of his absence was still doubtful, the bank obtained possession of the wools hypothecated. S. was adjudicated bankrupt as an absconding debtor. C. & Co. claimed these wools against the bank; the trustee in the bankruptcy who had also originally claimed them withdrew his claim:—Held, that the Court of Bankruptcy had no jurisdiction under these circumstances to try the right to the goods as between the bank and C. & Co. North Western Bank, Ex parte, Slee, In re, 41 L. J., Bk. 72; 20 W. R. 980.

It is not the intention of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, that the Court of Bankruptcy should draw within its jurisdiction all property that may be claimed as against the trustee of a bankrupt's estate by a third party. Pannell, Ex parte, England, In re, 6 Ch. D. 335; 37 L. T. 450; 26 W. R. 194—C. A.

Therefore, when a person, claiming to be equitable mortgagee of property, commenced a foreclosure action in the Chancery Division against the trustee of the estate of the mortgagor who had been adjudicated a bankrupt, and the trustee, alleging that the mortgage was a sham, applied to the Court of Bankruptcy for an order that the plaintiff in the action should deliver up the title-deeds to him, the Court of Bankruptcy refused the application, with liberty to either of the parties to apply after the conclusion of the proceedings in the action. Ib.

H., having borrowed 120*l.* from P., for the repayment of which sum and interest T. was surety, an agreement was entered into in September, 1875, between H. and T., that H. should execute a mortgage of certain premises to P., to secure the repayment of the loan and interest. The agreement contained a proviso that if T. should at any time be called upon and compelled to pay the 120*l.* and interest, or if H. should become bankrupt or file a petition for liquidation, it should be lawful for T. immediately to enter upon the premises so agreed to be mortgaged. T. having been served with a writ, jointly with H., to pay the 120*l.* and interest, paid the money in August, 1876, and immediately entered upon the premises agreed to be mortgaged, which were in the occupation of H., and upon which H. had expended considerable sums. In September, 1876, H. filed a liquidation petition, and in June, 1882, the trustee in the liquidation sought to have the agreement set aside as fraudulent and void, and that T. might be ordered to withdraw from possession upon payment into court by the trustee of 125*l.* in respect of the debt and interest:—Held, that the provision for re-entry upon the bankruptcy of H., not having come into operation, the Court of Bankruptcy had no jurisdiction to decide the matter. Hutchinson, Ex parte, Holt, In re, 47 L. T. 483.

Semble, the Court of Bankruptcy ought not after the lapse of six years to entertain such an application. Ib.

— Bills of Sale.—The Court of Bankruptcy has power to restrain a creditor from bringing against the trustee under a liquidation an action upon a bill of sale given by the debtor, the validity of which is disputed by the trustee. Cohen, Ex parte, Sparke, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 20; 41 L. J., Bk. 17; 25 L. T. 473; 20 W. R. 69.

L. filed a petition for liquidation by arrangement or composition. B. was appointed receiver, and took possession of the stock-in-trade of the bankrupt. By an extraordinary resolution, which was duly registered, the creditors accepted a composition of 7*s.* 6*d.* in the pound, to be paid in three instalments. When two instalments had been paid and the third provided for by promissory notes, B., who had previously given up possession of the stock-in-trade, sent in a bill of costs to L. for 400l. L. agreed to the amount, entered into a covenant under seal to pay it, and by the same instrument assigned his stock-in-trade to B. by way of bill of sale. B. subsequently took possession of part of the property under the assignment. Thereupon L. moved in the Court of Bankruptcy for an order for B. to bring in a bill of costs to be taxed, to deliver up the property, and that the bill of sale might be delivered up to be cancelled:—Held, that the court had no jurisdiction to entertain the application. Lyon, Ex parte, Lyon, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 494; 41 L. J., Bk. 41; 26 L. T. 491; 20 W. R. 566.

Semle, that if the stock-in-trade had remained in B.'s possession qua receiver and therefore subject to his lien on it for his costs, and if no covenant under seal had been entered into, the court on application by L. to have the stock-in-trade delivered up would have had jurisdiction to order, and would have ordered an account of B.'s charges to be taken in bankruptcy. Ib.

Foreclosure of Mortgaged Property of Bankrupt.]—An order having been made by the Court of Bankruptcy foreclosing the trustee of a bankrupt in respect of leasehold property mortgaged by the bankrupt, six months being allowed for redemption, the mortgagee appealed, insisting that, as the trustee had admitted that he had no assets of the bankrupt other than the equity of redemption of the mortgaged property, only one month ought to be allowed for redemption:—Held, that the trustee was entitled to six months in which to redeem. Fletcher, Ex parte, Hart, In re, 10 Ch. D. 610; 27 W. R. 622—C. A.

Held, also, that no application having been made by the mortgagee to the registrar for a sale of the property under r. 78 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1870, an order for sale could not be made on the appeal without the consent of the trustee. Ib.

Observations on the jurisdiction of the Court of Bankruptcy with regard to foreclosure. Ib.

When a mortgagee or other person having rights outside the bankruptcy comes to the court and submits his rights to be determined there, the court has jurisdiction to order the trustee to deliver up possession, without compelling the mortgagee to assert his right by action. Fletcher, Ex parte, Hart, In re, 9 Ch. D. 381; 39 L. T. 187; 26 W. R. 843—C. A.

Semle, that in a proper case the Court of Bankruptcy would also have jurisdiction to decree foreclosure. Ib.

Order made that the trustee in a bankruptcy should deliver possession of a house, of which the bankrupt had been weekly tenant, to the lessee of the house, who, as between himself and the bankrupt, was mortgagee of the lease from the bankrupt. Ib.

The trustee in bankruptcy of an equitable mortgagee by deposit may bring an action in the Chancery division for foreclosure against the trustee in bankruptcy of the mortgagor instead of applying in bankruptcy to have the property sold. Waddell v. Toleman, 9 Ch. D. 212; 38 L. T. 910; 26 W. R. 802.

Realisation of Mortgage Securities—Concurrent Chancery Jurisdiction.]—When a trustee has been appointed under a liquidation of the affairs of an equitable mortgagor, the mortgagee may, instead of applying in bankruptcy, proceed in chancery against the trustee for the purpose of having the security realized, the jurisdiction in chancery not being taken away by the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. White v. Simmons, 6 L. R., Ch. 555; 40 L. J., Ch. 689; 19 W. R. 939.

Interpleader.]—Where goods seized by a sheriff under a writ of fi. fa. issued by the London Court of Bankruptcy, are claimed adversely, that court has jurisdiction, on the application of the sheriff, to make an interpleader order. Middlesex (Sheriff) Ex parte, Buck, In re, 10 Ch. D. 575; 48 L. J., Bk. 33; 39 L. T. 653; 27 W. R. 309—C. A.

Impounding Documents.]—The court has no power to retain a deed which has been produced by a witness merely out of courtesy and to facilitate proceedings. Till, In re, Parson, Ex parte, 19 W. R. 325.

A witness having a lien upon a deed was asked by the court to produce it. The deed was, upon its production, impounded by the court:—Held, that the court had no power to retain the deed, even though it might be fraudulent. Ib.

To award Damages for excessive Distress.]—A landlord seized goods under a distress prior to, and sold them subsequently to, the commencement of the tenant's bankruptcy, and the trustee was declared by a county court in bankruptcy to be entitled to damages for an excessive distress:—Held, on appeal, that there was no jurisdiction in bankruptcy to make the order appealed from. Eatough, Ex parte, Cliffe, In re, 42 L. T. 95; 28 W. R. 433.

In Cases of Composition Deeds.]—The Court of Bankruptcy has jurisdiction, under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 72, to decide all questions necessary to make a complete distribution under a deed of composition registered under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, even though the deed contains no assignment by the debtor of his estate. Rumbold, Ex parte, Taylor, In re, 6 L. R., Ch. 842; 40 L. J., Bk. 82; 25 L. T. 253; 19 W. R. 1102.

See further, post, COMPOSITION DEEDS.

Order for Payment of Assets admitted on Examination.]—An application to a registrar under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 98, that A. may be ordered to pay to the applicant assets of the bankrupt in his possession, without notice to A., is irregular and improper. Schofield v. Holt, Lumb, In re, 19 W. R. 525.

S., alleging that H. had admitted assets of certain bankrupts in his possession, applied to the registrar of a county court that H. might be ordered to pay the same with costs. No notice at the time was given to H. of the intended application. The registrar made an order for the payment by H. of the amount therein specified, but not the whole amount of the assets alleged to be admitted. S. appealed to the county court judge, who simply rescinded the order, without specifying anything as to the payment of any money by H. S. appealed:—Held, that the order of the county court judge was right, and that the appeal must be dismissed with costs; the proper course for S., on the rescission of the registrar's order, being to commence de novo, as if no such order had been made. Ib.

To Imprison.]—A person who has been ordered to repay to the trustee of a bankrupt's estate money which he had received by way of fraudulent preference does not hold the money in a fiduciary capacity within the meaning of s. 4 of the Debtors Act, 1869, and cannot, therefore, if he makes default in payment of the money, be committed to prison under that section. Hooson, Ex parte, Chapman, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 231; 42 L. J., Bk. 19; 28 L. T. 4; 21 W. R. 152—L. J.

The 9th section of the Debtors Act, 1869, is only intended to preserve to the Court of Bankruptcy the special powers of imprisonment conferred upon it by such sections as the 19th, 70th, and 98rd of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and is not intended to preserve to the Court of Bankruptcy any powers of imprisonment for debt which have been taken away from other courts by the Debtors Act, 1869. Ib.

Money received by a creditor, who was a married woman, by way of fraudulent preference, does not constitute a trust fund for the benefit of the bankrupt's estate, and the non-compliance by the creditor with the order of the court to pay the fund over to the trustee in the bankruptcy does not subject such creditor to imprisonment, as being within the third exception to the 4th section of the Debtors Act, 1869. Wood, Ex parte, Chapman, In re, 21 W. R. 71.

To modify special Resolutions.]—When special resolutions in a bankruptcy proper are submitted to the court for approval, the court can only confirm or reject the resolutions, and cannot alter the same, or annex conditions thereto. Hunt, Ex parte, Winn, In re, 19 W. R. 714.

To close Bankruptcy—Where Bankrupt without Assets.]—The court has power, under s. 47 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, to make an order closing a bankruptcy in a case where it does not appear that the bankrupt has any assets. Pitt, Ex parte, Gosling, In re, 20 Ch. D. 308; 51 L. J., Ch. 733; 47 L. T. 263; 30 W. R. 763—C. A.

To re-open Proceedings.]—After an order has been made closing a bankruptcy, the court has, under s. 71, power to re-open it. Ib.

To tax Bills of Costs.]—The jurisdiction of the Court of Bankruptcy to tax the bill of costs of the solicitor to the estate is independent of the Attorneys and Solicitors Act, 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 37, and the registrar is bound to tax such bill, without special circumstances, notwithstanding the lapse of twelve months from its delivery. Blair, Ex parte, Machle, In re, 5 L. R., Ch. 482; 39 L. J., Bk. 45; 22 L. T. 287; 18 W. R. 615.

To entertain Claim against Debtor.]—The Court of Bankruptcy has no jurisdiction to entertain a claim for a personal demand against the debtor himself, when there is no property for the court to administer. Lacey, Ex parte, Lacey, In re, 16 Ch. D. 131; 50 L. J., Ch. 207; 43 L. T. 579; 29 W. R. 299—C. A.

Over Creditor residing out of Jurisdiction.]—

A foreign creditor, residing out of the jurisdiction of the Court of Bankruptcy, by proving a debt in a bankruptcy or liquidation, brings himself within the general jurisdiction of the court as to the administration of the estate, just as if he were residing within it. An order can therefore be made on him to restore property of the bankrupt or debtor improperly in his possession. Robertson, Ex parte, Morton, In re, 20 L. R., Eq. 733; 44 L. J., Bk. 99; 32 L. T. 697; 23 W. R. 906.

b. London Court of Bankruptcy.

Sect. 65 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, confers on the London Court of Bankruptcy for the purposes of that act all the jurisdiction formerly possessed by the Superior Courts of Common Law. Middlesex (Sheriff), Ex parte, Buck, In re, 10 Ch. D. 575; 48 L. J., Bk. 33; 39 L. T. 653; 27 W. R. 309—C. A.

When proceedings have been instituted in the London Bankruptcy Court, and that court, pursuant to s. 74 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, requests a local court to act as auxiliary to it, and to hear and determine some matter arising in such proceedings, the finding and order of the local court on such matter will be treated as an original order of such local court, and an appeal will accordingly lie therefrom to the chief judge in bankruptcy. Jackson, Ex parte, Vaughan, In re, 36 L. T. 711; 25 W. R. 561. Affirmed nom. Fletcher, Ex parte, 6 Ch. D. 350; 37 L. T. 282; 25 W. R. 870—C. A.

Debtors with London Agents.]—C. & Co. had their chief business offices at Sheffield, and were tenants of three rooms in London, in which an agent carried on business on behalf of the firm. On their becoming bankrupt:—Held, that the Bankruptcy Court of Sheffield, and not the Bankruptcy Court in London, had jurisdiction in the matter. Charles, Ex parte, Charles, In re, 13 L. R., Eq. 638; 41 L. J., Bk. 43; 20 W. R. 524.

Bank Clerk.]—A debtor, who was employed as a clerk in a bank, the office of which was within the district of the London Bankruptcy Court, is, within the meaning of r. 17 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1870, "carrying on business" within the district of that court, and consequently, that court had jurisdiction to grant a debtor's summons against him. Breull or Brewell, Ex parte, Bowie, In re, 16 Ch. D. 484; 50 L. J., Ch. 384; 43 L. T. 580; 29 W. R. 299—C. A.

Residence.]—The debtor's private residence was in one of the suburbs, outside the district of the London court:—Held, by James, L. J., that he was also, within the meaning of r. 17, "residing" within the district of the London court. Ib.

c. County Courts.

Before the Bankruptcy Act, 1869.]—When a debtor petitions for adjudication in the county court it is not necessary that he should wait till he has ascertained with absolute certainty the amount of his debts; it is sufficient if he makes a bonâ fide estimate of their probable amount. And if the debts should turn out to exceed 300*l.* the bankruptcy will not be annulled if he took reasonable pains to ascertain their true amount. Rose, Ex parte, 4 L. R., Ch. 648; 20 L. T. 688; 17 W. R. 938.

Where the registrar of a county court of the district in which a debtor is in gaol, upon being satisfied that his debts do not exceed 300*l.*, has made an order of adjudication in bankruptcy, and directed that it shall be prosecuted in the county court for the district in which the debtor had resided for the previous six months, the latter court has jurisdiction, notwithstanding it should turn out that the debts in fact exceed 300*l.* Harrison, In re, 1 H. & C. 319; 32 L. J., Ex. 159; 9 Jur., N. S. 338; 7 L. T. 829; 11 W. R. 467.

The 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 94, does not apply to a prisoner presenting a petition in form a pauperis, and owing debts exceeding 300*l.* Coombes, In re, 3 B. & S. 296; 32 L. J., Q. B. 65; 9 Jur., N. S. 572; 7 L. T. 379; 11 W. R. 114.

Therefore, where in such a case a judge of a county court of the district in which a bankrupt was in prison adjudicated him bankrupt, and transferred the proceedings to the county court of the district in which the bankrupt had resided for six months next before the filing of the petition:—Held, that the judge of the latter county court was right in refusing to entertain the case. Ib.

A., shortly before the bankruptcy, which took place under the act of 1861, purchased from his uncle, a bankrupt, pictures, constituting the principal part of the estate, and paid for them 4,000*l.*, the object of the sale being to enable the bankrupt to pay his creditors a composition, which a large majority of them had agreed to accept. The assignee, upon an ex parte application alleging that the sale had been made at an under value, obtained from the county court, to which the bankruptcy had been referred, an order restraining A. from proceeding with a sale of the pictures which had been advertised:—Held, that the county court had jurisdiction to grant such an order. Anderson, In re, 5 L. R., Ch. 472; 39 L. J., Bk. 49; 23 L. T. 274; 18 W. R. 1124.

In such case the appeal from the order of the county court judge lies to the chief judge in bankruptcy, and not to the court of appeal. Ib.

Under Bankruptcy Act, 1869.—After proceedings had been instituted in a county court for winding up a debtor's affairs in liquidation:—Held, that an application relating to costs claimed under a deed of assignment executed by the creditor should have been made by proceedings in bankruptcy, not by plaint in equity. Graham v. Winterson, 16 L. R., Eq. 243; 42 L. J., Ch. 633; 28 L. T. 803; 21 W. R. 722.

The order of a local court sitting in bankruptcy directing payment of a sum to the trustee of a bankruptcy does not impress upon the debtor a fiduciary relation towards the creditors of the bankrupt within the Debtors Act, 1869, s. 4, sub-a. 3, so as to make him liable to committal in default of payment. The powers of arrest and imprisonment preserved by s. 9 are those only which are created by the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. Hooson, Ex parte, Chapman, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 231; 42 L. J., Bk. 19; 28 L. T. 4; 21 W. R. 152.

The Bankruptcy Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 71), s. 72, enacts that "every court having jurisdiction in bankruptcy under this act shall have full power to decide all questions, whether of law or fact, arising in any case of bankruptcy coming within the cognizance of such court, or which the court may deem it expedient or necessary to decide for the purpose of doing complete justice, or making a complete distribution of property in any such case":—Held, that this section gives any Court of Bankruptcy jurisdiction to determine as matter of fact the expediency or necessity for entertaining and deciding any question which affects the realization and distribution of the property of the bankrupt,—subject only to the appeal given to the chief judge in bankruptcy and the Court of Appeal in chancery by s. 71. Halliday v. Harris, 9 L. R., C. P. 668; 43 L. J., C. P. 350; or Harris v. Halliday, 30 L. T. 680; 22 W. R. 756.

Therefore, where a judge of a county court had deemed it expedient to restrain a person trading in London from enforcing in a vice-admiralty court abroad a claim of lien on a ship (part of the bankrupt's estate) for necessaries supplied abroad on the orders of the captain after the filing of the petition, and to direct an issue to try the matter in his court, the court refused to grant a prohibition,—holding that the county court had by its decision given itself jurisdiction, subject only to appeal. Ib.

Seemle, per Brett, J., that the matter was not one which a county court having no admiralty jurisdiction ought to have entertained. Ib.

A county court judge, in the exercise of his bankruptcy jurisdiction, has power, under s. 72 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, to grant an injunction restraining an action for foreclosure brought by a mortgagee of the bankrupt and then pending in the Chancery Division; and it makes no difference that such action has been commenced before the institution of the bankruptcy proceedings. Snow v. Sherwell, 25 W. R. 433—C. A.

d. Court of Appeal.

The primary jurisdiction in bankruptcy being, by 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 12, transferred to the commissioners, and the jurisdiction of the vice-chancellor under that act having been exclusively appellate, and transferred to the court of appeal by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 83, the court of appeal cannot order the payment of money out of the bankruptcy court, unless the application is made by way of appeal from a commissioner. Cheetham, In re, 2 De G., Mac. & G. 223; 21 L. J., Bk. 5.

A commissioner refused to adjudicate a trader a bankrupt:—Held, that upon a just exposition of the whole of 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, the court of appeal has jurisdiction to declare whether there is upon the evidence sufficient to warrant an adjudication, and to remit the matter to the commissioner. Crabb, Ex parte, 25 L. J., Bk. 45; 2 Jur., N. S. 628—L. J.

It is not incumbent on the appellate court to decide a question as to the scale of charges of an agent employed by the assignees to sell a bankrupt's stock by tender, although the parties submit to its jurisdiction. Hurst, Ex parte, 5 De G., Mac. & G. 387.

2. OFFICERS OF COURT.

a. Commissioners.

Jurisdiction.—The senior commissioner having transacted the business before him, left the court for the day. This was held an unavoidable absence within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 20, so as to enable a junior commissioner, present in court, to act for the senior commissioner in the matter of the application. Sewell, Ex parte, 22 L. J., Bk. 29; 17 Jur. 333.

Commissioners, authorized to act in the prosecution of fiats, although constituted courts of record, as they possess no common-law jurisdiction, have no other powers than those which the statutes of bankruptcy give, or which are necessary incidents to those powers. Watson v. Bodell, 14 M. & W. 37; 14 L. J., Ex. 281; 9 Jur. 626.

They may commit for a contempt of court in the same manner as any other court of record. Id.

Liability.—Commissioners of bankruptcy are liable to be sued in trespass for false imprisonment, if they arrest in a case where they have no jurisdiction. Wright v. Maude, 10 M. & W. 527; 2 D., N. S. 517; 12 L. J., Ex. 22; 6 Jur. 953.

Discretion—Appeal.—The sale of a bankrupt's estate is a matter peculiarly within the discretion of the commissioner, with which the court of appeal will not interfere upon a mere doubt. Ford, Ex parte, 5 De G., Mac. & G. 398; 24 L. J., Bk. 1.

Commissioners may Act for each Other.—A petition was allotted by ballot to commissioner G., but the subsequent proceedings were either before commissioner H. or commissioner F., and the summons to surrender required the bankrupt to appear on a day named before commissioner G., whereas commissioner G. did not sit on that day:—Held, on an indictment under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 251, against the bankrupt for not surrendering, that one commissioner might sit and act for another, and the proceedings were therefore valid. Reg. v. Gordon, Dears. C. C. 586; 25 L. J., M. C. 19; 2 Jur., N. S. 67.

Appeal from Decision.—Where a mortgagee submitted the validity of his security to the jurisdiction of a commissioner, on an application of the petitioning creditor to set it aside:—Held, that the commissioner, in deciding the question, acted judicially, and not as an arbitrator, and that his decision was subject to appeal. Bland, Ex parte, 6 De G., Mac. & G. 757.

Jurisdiction to Re-hear.—Where the residence of the party applying for a re-hearing was at Buenos Ayres, and it was necessary for him to obtain further evidence in support of his case than that which was before the commissioner on the original hearing, notwithstanding the twenty-one days limited by 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 12, had expired:—Held, that the commissioner had jurisdiction to re-hear the case, there being no laches on the part of the applicant. Imbert, Ex parte, 1 De G. & J. 152; 26 L. J., Bk. 65; 3 Jur., N. S. 801.

Facts giving Commissioner Jurisdiction under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 223, must be stated in Order of Adjudication.—Where under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 223, a commissioner adjudicated a trader, who petitioned under s. 211, to be a bankrupt, he must state in the order of adjudication the facts giving him jurisdiction so to do under s. 223, otherwise the order of adjudication was void. Lee v. Rowley, 8 El. & Bl. 857; 27 L. J., Q. B. 193; 4 Jur., N. S. 583.

Deputy.—A registrar appointed to act in the place of a commissioner under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 119, s. 6, has no jurisdiction after the commissioner's death. Corles, Ex parte, 3 De G. & J. 484; 28 L. J., Bk. 15; 5 Jur., N. S. 110; 32 L. T. 326; 7 W. R. 220.

b. Registrars.

Under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 27.—This section, enabling the registrar to sit for the commissioner during the vacation, applies to the 19th of August, and is not confined to courts where there is only one commissioner. Burnett, Ex parte, 4 De G. & S. 54; 20 L. T., Bk. 3; 15 Jur. 617.

— Powers of Registrars sitting for a Commissioner.—The registrar, sitting for the commissioner, extended the time for shewing cause against an adjudication to a specified day. When the time arrived the parties attended, and the registrar (who had not the power of reversing an adjudication) again sat for the commissioner, and further adjourned the time for shewing cause beyond the extended time authorized by the act:—Held, that the registrar sitting for the commissioner could so adjourn it. Washbourne, Ex parte, 4 De G. & S. 193.

Bankrupts gave a notice on the 27th December of their intention to shew cause on the 29th of that month against an adjudication. On the 29th December, in the absence of the commissioner, the registrar made an order extending the time for shewing cause, and in the interim suspending advertisements:—Held, that such order was not ultra vires the registrar. Jacobson, Ex parte, 7 Jur., N. S. 322; 4 L. T. 102—L. J.

An order made by a registrar acting as the deputy of a commissioner, should shew upon the face of it that he was appointed by, and duly authorized to act for, the commissioner. Morgan, Ex parte, 32 L. J., Bk. 61; 9 Jur., N. S. 881; 7 L. T. 778; 11 W. R. 1048.

A registrar acting as the deputy of the commissioner has power to grant orders of discharge in unopposed cases. The order of discharge in such cases ought to be signed by the registrar and by the commissioner. Lees, Ex parte, 33 L. J., Bk. 25; 12 W. R. 697.

Under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 119, s. 6.—A registrar appointed to act in the place of a commissioner under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 119, s. 6, had no jurisdiction after the death of the commissioner. Corles, Ex parte, 3 De G. & J. 484; 28 L. J., Bk. 15; 5 Jur., N. S. 110; 32 L. T. 326; 17 W. R. 220.

Under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 71.—The registrar, when holding a meeting in a district court of bankruptcy, had no jurisdiction to make an order for the delivery up by the creditors' assignee of documents of the bankrupt in his custody. Thwaites, Ex parte, 16 W. R. 660.

Nature of Proceedings before.—The examination of a prisoner in gaol by a registrar was a public judicial proceeding; and therefore a fair and correct report, without comment, of the examination was privileged, even though it may have contained statements which injuriously affected the character of a third person. Ryalls v.

Sitting as Chief Judge.—The registrar sitting as chief judge ought only to act in cases where he has the decisions of the chief judge or of the court to guide him. English Joint Stock Bank, Ex parte, Finney, In re, 6 L. R., Ch. 79; 40 L. J., Bk. 43; 23 L. T. 652; 19 W. R. 140—L. J.

The registrar, sitting as chief judge, ought not to decide points of novelty and difficulty, but should reserve them for the opinion of the chief judge. Llynvi Coal and Iron Company, Ex parte, Hide, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 28; 41 L. J., Bk. 5.

Power to Re-hear.—A registrar sitting as chief judge may re-hear a case, although his order has been appealed from and varied by a court of appeal, if the special point to be re-argued was not dealt with on the appeal. Mackay, Ex parte, Jeavons, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 127; 43 L. J., Bk. 105; 29 L. T. 713; 22 W. R. 198.

Registration of Resolutions.—The office of the registrar is purely ministerial with regard to the registration of resolutions passed by creditors. Levy, Ex parte, Varbetian, In re, 11 L. R., Eq. 619; 40 L. J., Bk. 40; 24 L. T. 332; 19 W. R. 586.

The registrar has no power when a resolution is brought in for registration to institute an inquiry, or examine the debtor upon oath at the instance of a dissenting creditor, who objects to the registration. He must satisfy himself upon the evidence before him that the requirements of the statute have, or have not, been complied with, and register or refuse to register accordingly. Id.

The registrar can reject such of the resolutions tendered to him for registration as are ultra vires, and register the remainder. Ashworth, Ex parte, Hoare, In re, 18 L. R., Eq. 705; 43 L. J., Bk. 142; 30 L. T. 906; 22 W. R. 925.

Affidavits by.—The court disapproves of its registrars making affidavits in proceedings concerning matters that have come before them in their official capacity. Till, Ex parte, Ratcliffe, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 631; 44 L. J., Bk. 103; 32 L. T. 521; 23 W. R. 670.

Power to tax Costs.—A solicitor who tenders a proof in the bankruptcy of his client, in respect of costs due to him by the client, is not entitled to insist on having his bill referred for taxation to the taxing master, but the registrar has jurisdiction to determine the amount due, availing himself, if necessary, of the advice of the taxing master. Ditton, Ex parte, Woods, In re, 13 Ch. D. 318; 28 W. R. 402—C. A.

Appeal.—An appeal from the decision of a registrar sitting as judge cannot be heard by a county court judge, but must be to the chief judge in bankruptcy, or the lords justices of appeal, as the case may be. Nicholson, Ex parte, Marsden, In re, 34 L. T. 592.

An appeal from the registrar of a county court, sitting as registrar, must be before the judge of his court in the first instance. Sidey, Ex parte, 24 L. T. 143.

Deputy.—The deputy registrar of a county court may have delegated to him by the judge the power of making an adjudication. Lindsay,

Ex parte, Lindsay, In re, 19 L. R., Eq. 52; 44 L. J., Bk. 5; 31 L. T. 415; 23 W. R. 44.

See post, ASSIGNEES OR TRUSTEES.

d. Receivers.

Appeal against Appointment.—Immediately after a debtor had filed a liquidation petition two sets of persons, each professing to be a majority in value of his creditors, respectively signed two nomination papers, nominating and appointing two different persons to be receiver of the debtor's property. Upon the application of one of these sets of persons the registrar appointed their nominee receiver:—Held, that the nominee of the other persons had no locus standi to appeal from the registrar's order, though the persons who had nominated him would have had a right to appeal. Cooper, Ex parte, Joseph, In re, 6 Ch. D. 256; 46 L. J., Bk. 123; 37 L. T. 283; 25 W. R. 860—C. A.

When Creditors may Appoint.—The power of appointing a receiver given to the creditors by the first part of r. 262 of the Bankruptcy Rules 1870, can only be exercised when no receiver has been appointed by the court. Rylands, Ex parte, Chesters, In re, 6 Ch. D. 57; 46 L. J., Bk. 120; 36 L. T. 839; 25 W. R. 786—C. A., affirming: 36 L. T. 524; 25 W. R. 516.

The latter clause of the rule means that the nominee of the creditors, after they have acquired the status of creditors by proving their debts at the first meeting, shall be substituted for the receiver previously appointed by the court, the object being to provide for the possibility of the creditors at the first meeting not being able to agree upon a trustee, and adjourning the meeting for the further consideration of his appointment. Id.

Receiver already appointed by Court.—When creditors are desirous that the receiver nominated by themselves should displace the receiver appointed by the court under r. 262, they must make a substantive application to the court and shew, first, that it is the right thing to do; and, secondly, that the receiver to be displaced has been, or will be fully indemnified against all costs, charges, and liabilities incurred by him. Rylands, Ex parte, Chesters, In re, 36 L. T. 264.

There is no rule in bankruptcy requiring that the high bailiff of the court is invariably to be appointed receiver under a liquidation petition. Where, upon the application of creditors for the appointment of a certain person as receiver and manager under a liquidation petition, the judge of a county court appointed the high bailiff of the court to that office, the appointment was on appeal discharged and the nominee of the creditors appointed. Walton, Ex parte, Walton, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 539; 46 L. T. 433; 30 W. R. 642.

Right to Issue Debtor's Summons.—A receiver in chancery has a right, without any authority or direction from the Court of Chancery, to issue a debtor summons to compel payment of a debt due to him in his character of receiver. Harris, Ex parte, Lewis, In re, 2 Ch.

D. 423; 45 L. J., Bk. 71; 34 L. T. 261; 24 W. R. 851.

Interference with or Dispossession of.]—When a receiver has been appointed by the Court of Bankruptcy, it is a contempt of court for the holder of a valid bill of sale of goods of the bankrupt to oust the receiver from possession which he has taken of such goods. Cochrane, Ex parte, Mead, In re, 20 L. R., Eq. 282; 44 L. J., Bk. 87; 23 W. R. 726.

The only person who may interfere with the possession of a receiver is a landlord distraining for a year's rent. Id.

Any other person who claims a better title than the receiver ought to apply to the court for leave to enforce his rights. Id.

A firm of merchants having filed a petition for liquidation, and a receiver having been appointed, the solicitor of the debtors induced the receiver not to interfere with the continuance of the business by the debtors, and undertook to indemnify him:—Held, that such interference with its officer was a contempt of the Court of Bankruptcy, and that such court could declare the party who had interfered, for such interference, and not because he was the solicitor, liable for the loss sustained by the estate through the continuance of the business, and direct an account for the purpose of ascertaining such loss, but that the account ought to be taken against the receiver jointly with the solicitor. Hayward, Ex parte, Plant, In re, 45 L. T. 326—C. A.

Undertaking to Answer for Damages.]—A petition for liquidation having been presented, a receiver was appointed and ordered to take possession of the fixtures and stock-in-trade at the debtor's brewery; and an injunction was granted restraining a mortgagee, who was in possession of the brewery under a bill of sale, from intermeddling with the chattels in the brewery. When the injunction was granted the receiver and the debtor gave undertakings to be answerable for damages. The mortgagee afterwards established his title to the brewery and the chattels in it, and then applied for an inquiry as to damages sustained by the occupation of the receiver:—Held, that the receiver must be treated as the agent of the creditors, and not of the mortgagee, and could not charge the mortgagee with the expense of carrying on the business; and that he was liable, under his undertaking, for damage for deterioration of the property, and for rent for use and occupation of the fixtures and stock-in-trade; and an inquiry was directed accordingly. Warren, Ex parte, Joyce, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 222; 32 L. T. 288; 23 W. R. 401.

Enforcement—Delay.]—An application to enforce an undertaking to be answerable in damages, given by a receiver in bankruptcy on the granting of an injunction to restrain proceedings in relation to property alleged to form part of the bankrupt's estate, ought to be made within a reasonable time after it is ascertained that the injunction has been improperly granted. Hall, Ex parte, Wood, In re, 23 Ch. D. 644; 52 L. J., Ch. 907; 49 L. T. 275; 32 W. R. 179—C. A.

Unexplained and unreasonable delay in making such an application will be a sufficient ground for refusing it, even if the bankruptcy proceedings are still pending and the receiver has not obtained his discharge:—Held, that an unexplained delay of nearly four years in making such an application was a sufficient answer to it, though the applicant had shewn a prima facie case. Id.

Right to expend Money on behalf of the Estate.]—A receiver and manager of the property and business of traders who had filed a liquidation petition was appointed by the court under r. 260. Without obtaining any previous sanction from the court or the creditors, he expended a considerable sum in obtaining a valuation of the debtor's assets, and he also employed the debtors to assist in managing the business at a weekly salary:—Held, that the court had a discretion as to allowing the sums so expended, and that under the circumstances they had been properly allowed. Gordon, Ex parte, Gomersall, In re, 20 L. R., Eq. 291; 44 L. J., Bk. 97.

Held, also, that the sanction of the court to the expenditure could be given after it had been made. Id.

It is the duty of a receiver, whether appointed by the court or nominated by the creditors, to investigate the state of the debtor's affairs, and inform the creditors at their first meeting what he believes to be the value of the debtor's assets. Id.

Costs and Charges—Application of Funds in Receiver's Hands.]—In administering the estate of a liquidating debtor the trustee should, after deducting his own actual disbursements, apply the amount actually in his hands, first, in payment of the receiver's charges under the petition, and then of the solicitor's costs under the liquidation. Johnston, In re, Royle, Ex parte, 20 L. R., Eq. 780; 32 L. T. 39; 23 W. R. 908.

When, therefore, the trustee paid the taxed costs of the solicitor in the matter of a petition without first communicating with his co-trustee, who had been the receiver, and six months afterwards the receiver sent in his bill of costs, which was taxed at 14l. 8s. 10d.:—Held, that the trustee must pay the receiver's charges although he had but 2l. 10s. in hand. Id.

Accountant appointed Receiver is entitled to Charge for Services.]—A debtor prior to filing a liquidation petition, employed an accountant to post up his books. Upon the filing of the liquidation petition, the accountant was appointed receiver and manager, but the liquidation proceedings having been superseded by a bankruptcy, the receiver paid over to the trustee in the bankruptcy the balance of the debtor's property in his hands. The receiver subsequently applied to the trustee for payment of his bill of charges for services rendered by him prior to the liquidation:—Held, upon appeal, that the services of the receiver having been beneficial to the bankrupt's estate, he was entitled, under the 7th Bankruptcy Rule, 1871, to payment of his charges so incurred. Greener, Ex parte, George, In re, 41 L. T. 739.

Taxation.]—Under r. 5 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1871, the charges of a receiver and manager of a business for disbursements out of pocket (e.g., travelling expenses and salaries of assistants) are liable to taxation. Izard, Ex parte, Bushell,

In re (No. 1), 23 Ch. D. 75; 52 L. J., Ch. 678; 48 L. T. 751; 31 W. R. 418—C. A.

Money advanced without Authority of Court—Right to Indemnity.]—A receiver and manager of a business who desires to advance money of his own for the purposes of the business may, before doing so, apply to the court for its authority, and the court will, as a general rule, allow him interest at 5 per cent. on the amount which it authorizes him to advance, and will give him a charge on the debtor's assets for the advance and the interest. If the receiver and manager advances money without such a previous authority, he is entitled to an indemnity out of the assets, but he cannot obtain a personal order against the trustee for payment. Id.

Bill of Sale given to Receiver to secure Charges.]—A debtor filed a petition for liquidation by arrangement or composition, and a receiver of his property was appointed. The creditors agreed to accept a composition, and the receiver was appointed trustee. He afterwards delivered to the debtor an account of his charges, and the debtor gave him a bill of sale of his stock-in-trade to secure the amount claimed. The debtor applied to the Court of Bankruptcy for an order that the receiver should bring in his bill of charges for taxation, that he should deliver up the debtor's property to him, and give an account of all moneys received by him, and that the amount due from him to the debtor might be taxed, and that he might be ordered to pay what should be found due from him to the debtor, and that the bill of sale might be delivered up to be cancelled:—Held, that the Court of Bankruptcy had no jurisdiction to entertain the application, inasmuch as the substance of it was an attempt to set aside the bill of sale. Lyons, Ex parte, 7 L. R., Ch. 494; 41 L. J., Ch. 41; 26 L. T. 491; 20 W. R. 566.

Payment of Remuneration, from what Fund.]—A receiver in bankruptcy or liquidation has no lien upon the assets for his remuneration; he is only entitled to be paid out of the net assets. Broune, Ex parte, Maltby, In re, 16 Ch. D. 497; 43 L. T. 682; 29 W. R. 921—C. A.

Complaint against Trustee.]—He is not entitled to come to the court to complain of the conduct of the trustee in the administration of the assets; such a complaint can be made only by the creditors. Id.

Action by Debtor against—Stay of Proceedings.]—Any proceeding against a receiver appointed by the Court of Bankruptcy in respect of acts done virtute officii must be taken into that court. Where, therefore, a liquidating debtor had commenced an action in the High Court of Justice against the receiver in the liquidation, claiming damages done to his goods when in the possession of the receiver:—Held, that the debtor will be personally restrained from instituting any proceedings against the receiver elsewhere than in bankruptcy. Day, Ex parte, Potter, In re, 48 L. T. 912.

e. Solicitors.

Right of Audience—Solicitor's Clerk.]—A commissioner in bankruptcy is not bound to hear a person who, although a duly-admitted solicitor of the court, does not appear as the solicitor of the party for whom he appears, but only as the clerk of such solicitor. Broadhouse Ex parte, 2 L. R., Ch. 655; 36 L. J., Bk. 29; 17 L. T. 126; 15 W. R. 126.

B. gave notice to dispute an adjudication which had been made against him, the notice being signed by D. & L., as his solicitors. When the validity of the adjudication came on for argument before the commissioner, R., who was the managing clerk of D. & L., and who was himself a solicitor of the court, appeared for the bankrupt. The commissioner, however, declined to hear him, and, although the bankrupt, who was in court, said that he wished R. to be heard on his behalf, the commissioner confirmed the adjudication with costs against the bankrupt:—Held, that the commissioner was right in refusing to hear R., so long as he appeared in the character of clerk to D. & L.; but that the bankrupt ought to have been more fully informed of the position in which he stood, and to have had an opportunity of constituting R. his solicitor if he desired to do so. Id.

Right to Costs.]—Where a solicitor persuaded a party to sue out a fiat as petitioning creditor (who was afterwards chosen assignee), upon an invalid act of bankruptcy, which was concerted between the solicitor and the bankrupt, and there did not appear any other act of bankruptcy to support the fiat, the court refused to make an order on the assignee to pay the solicitor's bill of costs up to the choice of the assignees. Woodward, Ex parte, 2 Mont. D. & D. 249; 5 Jur. 733.

Statute of Limitations.]—A bill for business done in relation to a bankruptcy after the choice of assignees became due to a solicitor, the last item in which occurred more than six years before 1844. In 1844 a sum of money belonging to the bankrupt's estate came into the hands of the official assignee. The solicitor presented a petition that his bill might be paid by the official assignee out of this sum. There was no imputation on the conduct of the solicitor, and the delay was explained to the satisfaction of the court:—Held, that the Statute of Limitations did not apply to such a case, and that he was entitled to the payment of his bill. Brutton, Ex parte, 1 De Gex, 116; 14 L. J., Bk. 15; 9 Jur. 96.

Lien.]—A solicitor, claiming to have a lien on a deed of a bankrupt for professional business done for him, was summoned to attend before the commissioner acting in the prosecution of the fiat, to be examined touching the estate of the bankrupt, and to produce the deed. The solicitor obeyed the summons and produced the deed, when the commissioner, being of opinion that he had no lien, ordered him to deliver up the deed to the solicitor of the fiat, and, on his declining to do so, unless his lien was first discharged, directed an officer of the court to seize the deed:—Held, that the commissioner, in making such order, exceeded his jurisdiction. Lewellin, Ex parte, 8 Jur. 816.

Where the claim of a solicitor to a lien on a deed of the bankrupt is disputed, the remedy of the assignees for recovering the deed is by an action of trover. Id.

Assignees have no higher rights with regard to deeds belonging to a bankrupt's estate, on which a solicitor claims a lien for costs, than the bankrupt himself had. Underwood, Ex parte, 9 Jur. 632.

A partner in a trading firm, which had become bankrupt, was also one of a firm of solicitors whom the trading firm had employed in the conduct of suits which were pending at the time of the bankruptcy. The assignees, having retained other solicitors, were not entitled to an order for a delivery up to them of the papers in the possession of the solicitors, subject to their existing lien. Moss, In re, 1 L. R., Eq. 345; 35 L. J., Ch. 554.

A trustee was removed from his office and a new trustee appointed. The old trustee's solicitor, on being applied to, gave up all the account books of the estate, but refused to deliver up certain documents and papers on which he had expended labour as solicitor, and upon which he claimed a lien for costs. Thereupon the new trustee applied to the court for an order upon the old trustee and his solicitor to deliver up all documents relating to his office as trustee:—Held, that the solicitor was entitled to a lien on the documents which he had retained, and that the old trustee was not bound to discharge that lien by paying the costs out of his own pocket. Yalden, Ex parte, Austin, In re, 4 Ch. D. 129; 46 L. J., Bk. 59; 35 L. T. 720; 25 W. R. 134—C. A.

—Money received after Fiat.—Where a solicitor was employed by the trustees under a trust-deed in the preparation of the deed, and the execution of the trusts, and the trustees were afterwards chosen assignees under a subsequent fiat issued against the party who had assigned his effects under the trust-deed:—Held, that the solicitor could not retain a sum which had come to his hands since the bankruptcy, in satisfaction of his charges relating to the trust-deed. Dean, Ex parte, 2 Mont. D. & D. 438.

—Refusal to act as Solicitor.—Traders, before their bankruptcy, deposited their books with a solicitor, with a view to his effecting for them a compromise with their creditors. Terms were arranged, but the bankrupts were unable to comply with them, and the solicitor refused to act further in the matter. Adjudication followed, and the solicitor, although ordered to deliver up to the official assignees the books of the bankrupts in his hands, refused to do so, alleging a lien on them for costs. A commissioner ordered him to be committed for contempt:—Held, that the solicitor was entitled to the lien which he claimed. Jabet, Ex parte, 6 Jur., N. S. 387.

—Solicitor for Mortgagor and Mortgagee—Sale of Equity of Redemption.—On a mortgage of property the same solicitor acted both for mortgagor and mortgagee. At the time of the mortgage the solicitor had a lien on the deeds against the mortgagor for costs and charges. Being also solicitor to the mortgagee, he, on the completion of the mortgage, continued to hold the deeds. The mortgagor filed a petition for liquidation, and a trustee was appointed, and the same solicitor acted for the trustee. The property was sold, subject to the mortgage, and the solicitor received the price for the equity of redemption. In an account between the solicitor and the trustee, the solicitor deducted the amount due to him from the debtor, on the ground that he had a lien on the deeds as security:—Held, that the solicitor had a lien on the deeds for the amount due to him. Calvert, Ex parte, Messenger, In re, 3 Ch. D. 317; 45 L. J., Bk. 134; 34 L. T. 920.

—Solicitor constituting himself Trustee for Creditors.—The creditors of a debtor who had filed a liquidation petition resolved to accept a composition, payable in two instalments, the second instalment being secured by the joint and several promissory note of two sureties. No trustee was appointed. The debtor's solicitor registered the resolution; and he, by means of money supplied to him by the debtor, paid the creditors the first instalment. A sum sufficient to provide for the payment of the second instalment was placed in the solicitor's hands, partly by the debtor, but mainly by one of the sureties. The debtor gave the surety a bill of sale as security for the amount which he advanced. The solicitor sent a circular to the creditors, stating that he should be prepared on a specified day to pay them the second instalment at his office. He after this paid some of the creditors, but most of them were left unpaid. One of the latter applied to the court for an order that the solicitor should pay him. The solicitor claimed a lien on the moneys in his hands for costs due to him by the debtor, who had absconded:—Held, that he had constituted himself a trustee of the money for the creditors, and that the court had jurisdiction to order him to pay the applicant his proportion of the second instalment, which he was accordingly ordered to pay, with costs. Clarke, In re, Newland, Ex parte, 4 Ch. D. 515; 35 L. T. 916; 25 W. R. 275.

—Costs—Country Solicitor attending Appeals in London.—A country solicitor who attends an appeal to the chief judge, instead of employing his London agent, is entitled to the extra costs of such attendance. Foster, In re, Dickens, Ex parte, 8 Ch. D. 598; 26 W. R. 915.

—One-sixth taxed off.—One of three co-assignees, who, in opposition to the wish of his co-assignees, proceeded to tax the solicitor's bill, and succeeded in taxing off one-sixth of the amount, is entitled to his extra costs incurred in so doing, by being obliged to employ a solicitor for himself. Fosbrooke, Ex parte, 1 Mont. D. & D. 533; 5 Jur. 370.

—Bankrupt Solicitor—Liability of Assignees.—Upon a taxation under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 37, assignees of a bankrupt solicitor are personally liable for the costs of taxation of a bill of costs delivered by them, where more than one-sixth is taken off. Peers, In re, 21 Beav. 520.

—Application to Tax.—The solicitor to the fiat having delivered his bill of costs, and retained the amount of it before the end of 1850, was discharged in July, 1851. No application for taxation was made before October, 1852:—Held, that it was not consistent with safety or propriety to direct taxation in a summary way, even if the court had jurisdiction to do so. Pemberton, Ex parte, 2 De G., Mac. & G. 960; 22 L. J., Bk. 76.

—Taxation made Ex parte—Re-taxation.—The solicitors of the assignees of a bankrupt had their bills of costs taxed in 1851, by the registrar of a district court of bankruptcy. The taxation was made ex parte, without notice to the assignees. In 1853 the assignees and several of the creditors applied to the district court for a retaxation of the bills which had not been paid:—Held, that such re-taxation ought to be ordered. Bateman, Ex parte, 23 L. J., Bk. 8; 18 Jur. 455.

f. Messengers.

Seizing Goods of Wrong Person.—A messenger under a warrant to seize the goods of A., seized the goods of B., acting bonâ fide with the intention to carry the warrant into execution:—Held, that he was not entitled to the demand of a perusal and a copy of the warrant under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 107, and that he was liable in trespass brought against him alone, though no such demand had been made or left at his usual place of abode. Munday v. Stubbs, 10 C. B. 422; 1 L. M. & P. 675; 20 L. J., C. P. 59.

Conversion of Property after Notice from Messenger.—If the messenger shews his warrant to a person supposed to be in possession of some bacon, the property of the bankrupt, and the person says, "I have it not; I have some that came from a shop in Exeter;" (which was that of the son and daughter of the bankrupt); and the messenger desires him to take care of it, and not to part with it, as more would be heard about it, and he afterwards suffered it to be removed; this is a conversion. Hawkes v. Dunn, 1 Tyr. 413; 1 C. & J. 519.

Power to Break open Houses.—The 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 27, similar to s. 109 of the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, did not give power to break open all houses, &c., where the bankrupt's property was reputed to be, but only any houses, &c., of the bankrupt. Edge v. Parker, 8 B. & C. 700.

Claim for Goods Seized—Jurisdiction of Court.—There is no jurisdiction in bankruptcy to order goods seized by a messenger to be delivered up to a person claiming them as his. Craggs, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 25.

An accountant who had a demand against a bankrupt for making up his books before the bankruptcy, was deprived of the books by the messenger. On a petition praying either the restoration of the books or the payment of the demand, the court ordered that the assignees should either restore the books, without prejudice to any question, or at their election should pay the demand. Southall, Ex parte, 17 L. J., Bk. 21; 12 Jur. 576.

Remedy against Messenger.—The messenger is to enter and seize, at his own hazard, the property of the bankrupt; but if he enters the house and seizes the property of another, acting under authority, he cannot be turned out, but the party must take his remedy at law. Page, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 1; 17 Ves. 59.

Where the messenger was put out of possession of property on board a ship, by threatening to throw him overboard, the parties also using contemptuous language, they were ordered to give security for answering the bankrupt's interest. Dixon, Ex parte, 8 Ves. 104.

Fees.—In an action by a messenger against J. S. for fees due from him as petitioning creditor under a fiat:—Held, that he proved a prima facie case by putting in the proceedings under the fiat, without shewing the identity of the defendant with the J. S. named therein as the petitioning creditor. Hamber v. Roberts, 7 C. B. 861.

A trade assignee under a fiat is not personally liable to the messenger for work done in his time, unless there is either an express contract or an express employment of the messenger by the trade assignee. Stubbs v. Twynam, 7 C. B., N. S. 719; 30 L. J., C. P. 8.

The petitioning creditor is personally liable under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 406, s. 114, for the fees of the messenger, down to the choice of assignees. And the trade assignee is liable for the expenses incurred subsequently, where there is evidence of personal interference by him, such as giving directions as to the management of the bankrupt's property while in the possession of the messenger. Stubbs v. Horn, 1 L. R., C. P. 56; 12 Jur., N. S. 210.

He is also liable to the messenger under a commission of bankruptcy, for the costs and expenses attending it, notwithstanding such messenger was employed by the solicitor. Hart v. White, Holt, 376.

But he is only liable to the messenger for necessary expenses. Billings v. Waters, 1 Stark. 363.

Therefore, he is not liable for the expenses of an unnecessary and fruitless journey to the Isle of Man, unless upon special contract. Ib.

The trade assignee in insolvency was not liable under the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 116, and 7 & 8 Vict. c. 96, s. 4, as such, to pay for the messenger's charges for keeping possession of the insolvent's goods under the petition. Hamber v. Hall, 10 C. B. 780; 20 L. J., C. P. 157; 15 Jur. 682.

The solicitor is not liable in the first instance to the messenger whom he nominates for his bill of fees; but if the solicitor agrees with the petitioning creditor to work a commission for a sum certain, and receives a great part of that sum, he will be liable to such messenger. Hartop v. Jukes, 2 M. & Scott, 438; 2 Rose, 263.

An assignee was not liable, under 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 25, to repay the messenger the costs incurred by him previously to the appointment of the assignee. Burwood v. Felton, 4 D. & R. 621; 3 B. & C. 43.

In an action by a messenger against a sole assignee of a commission under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, for the costs of advertising a meeting of the creditors, and for the hire of the room in which the meeting was held:—Held, that it was not necessary for him to prove an employment by the assignee, nor any express recognition of him as messenger, as the fact of his having acted as a messenger and of the expenses incurred must have been known to the assignee. Hamber v. Purser, 2 C. & M. 209; 4 Tyr. 41.

III. WHO MAY BE BANKRUPT.

1. ALIENS.

Aliens.—An alien non-trader domiciled abroad who contracts debts in England, is liable to be made a bankrupt under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, if he commits an act of bankruptcy in England, although he may have left England before the petition for adjudication is presented. But he cannot be made a bankrupt upon an alleged act of bankruptcy committed abroad. Crispin, Ex parte, 8 L. R., Ch. 374; 42 L. J., Bk. 65; 28 L. T. 483; 21 W. R. 491.

Foreigner who has never been in England.]—A foreigner who has never been in England is not subject to the bankruptcy law. Blain, Ex parte, Savers, In re, 12 Ch. D. 522; 41 L. T. 46; 28 W. R. 334—C. A.

— Trading in England but Resident Abroad.]—A bankruptcy petition was presented against a firm trading in England, two of its partners being Chilian subjects domiciled in Chili, and never having been in England. The alleged act of bankruptcy was an execution against the goods of the firm, for a judgment for more than 50*l.*, for a debt contracted in England:—Held, that the order for service of the petition upon the Chilian partners must be set aside. Id.

— Not a Debtor.]—He is not a debtor within s. 6 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. Id.

— Member of English Firm.]—Where he is a member of a firm against which judgment has been recovered by default, and whose goods have been taken in execution, this is no "act or default" of his such as to constitute an act of bankruptcy within s. 6 of the act. Id.

2. AUCTIONEERS.

Quære, whether an auctioneer is a trader. Semble, he is. Moore, Ex parte, Moore, In re, 3 Mont. & A. 130; 2 Dea. 287; 6 L. J., Bk. 72; 1 Jur. 184.

3. BILL BROKERS.

Bill Broker—Evidence of Trading.]—A person ostensibly carrying on the profession of a proctor may be made a bankrupt as a bill-broker, and the evidence to prove the trading is generally "that he procured bills to be discounted, that he carried on the business of a bill-broker, and that on one occasion he was employed to get a bill for 48*l.* discounted:—"Held, that this was insufficient evidence of the trading, as the affidavits did not specify the name of any party to whom the bankrupt applied to discount any bills, or with whose money the same was cashed, nor even stated the whole of the particulars of any one of such bills. Harvey, Ex parte, 1 Dea. 571; 2 Mont. & A. 593.

— Accommodation Bills.]—A mere dealing in accommodation bills will not constitute a trading as a bill-broker; more especially when there is no proof that the party had any counting-house or capital for carrying on the alleged business, and no particulars are given of any one bill alleged to have been discounted. Phipps, Ex parte, 2 Dea. 487; 6 L. J., Bk. 93; 1 Jur. 561.

Merely drawing bills on a person's own account, at the expense of paying a quarter per cent. commission, besides interest at 5 per cent. for their being discounted, and borrowing accommodation notes in exchange for his own to the same amount, will not make a man an object of the bankrupt laws. Hankey v. Jones, Cowp. 745.

4. BRICKMAKERS.

Own Materials.]—Before 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 65, a person who rented a brick-ground, and made bricks thereon for public sale, was held subject to the bankrupt laws. Wells v. Parker, 1 T. R. 34; 1 Bro. P. C. 545. But afterwards held, that a man, whether termor or freeholder, who sells bricks made from the produce of his soil, is not a trader within the bankrupt laws; but he is if he purchases the materials of his manufacture. Gallimore, Ex parte, 2 Rose, 424.

And where a devisee for life of an estate, part of which was a brick-ground, made bricks there for sale generally, with a view to profit, he was not a trader though he purchased the coals and some of the wood used in burning the bricks, and occupied the same ground as a brickmaker for general sale before the estate came to him by devise: for this is but a more beneficial mode of enjoying his own estate, by carrying the soil to market in an ameliorated state; and it is not a buying of any commodity to sell it again. Sutton v. Weeley, 7 East, 442; 3 Smith, 445; S. P., Burgess, Ex parte, 2 Glyn. & J. 183.

If a person manufactures bricks from his own estate, and according to the usual mode of burning the clay into bricks, he buys chalk and burns it with the clay, not for the purpose of carrying on lime-burning as a business, but as the most convenient mode of burning the clay into bricks; it is not a trading, although the use of the chalk was not necessary for the manufacture of the bricks, and he subsequently sells the lime produced in the process. Paul v. Dowling, M. & M. 263; 3 C. & P. 500.

A person purchasing land for the purpose of making bricks from it, and selling them, and agreeing to pay 4*s.* per thousand bricks in part of the purchase-money, and making and selling bricks accordingly, is not a trader. Hearne v. Rogers, 4 M. & R. 486; 9 B. & C. 577.

Taking Clay from the Waste.]—A brickmaker taking the earth off the waste, for which he afterwards paid a consideration, and selling the bricks, is a trader. Harrison, Ex parte, 1 Bro. C. C. 173.

5. BUILDERS.

Building on his own Land.]—A builder is a person who builds either on his own or another's land for a profit. Neiricks, Ex parte, 2 Mont. & Ayr. 384; 1 Dea. 78.

Finishing Carcasses.]—A party who bought six carcasses of houses for the purpose of finishing them, and selling them again when he had made them habitable, and who ordered materials for this purpose, representing himself to be a builder, might be made a bankrupt as a builder. Id.

A man, by purchasing land with unfinished houses upon it, and employing persons to complete these houses, is not a trader unless he holds himself out as a builder, or expresses his intention of continuing in that business. Edwards, Ex parte, 4 Jur. 153.

— By Mortgagees.—Two attorneys in partnership lent money on mortgage to a party engaged in a building speculation; and the mortgage being forfeited, they took possession of the carcasses of the houses, and finished them at their own expense, for the purpose of selling or letting them; they also purchased a few other carcasses, not in their character of mortgagees, which they employed a builder to finish, for the same purpose:—Held, that this was not a joint trading as builders, within the meaning of the bankrupt laws. Edwards, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 3.

Isolated Building Transactions.—A barrister bought land in two several places, and commenced building a number of houses thereon, which he sold as opportunity occurred. He had also built and sold another house in a different place, and had on one occasion accepted a bill describing him as a builder. The jury found that these were isolated transactions, and not part of a general system of business:—Held, that he was not liable to be made a bankrupt as a builder. Stewart v. Sloper, 3 Ex. 700; 3 De G. & S. 557; 18 L. J., Ex. 321; 18 L. J., Bk. 14; 13 Jur. 581.

6. BUTCHERS.

A butcher is within the bankrupt laws. Dalby v. Smith, 4 Burr. 2148.

7. CLERGYMEN.

If a clergyman trade, though illegal, he is liable to be made a bankrupt. Meymot, Ex parte, 1 Atk. 196.

8. COACH PROPRIETOR.

Semble, coach proprietor, as such, is not a trader. Walker, In re, 2 Mont. & A. 267.

9. COMPANY, MEMBERS OF.

Even before 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 92, holders of stock in public companies were not liable to the bankrupt laws, in that character merely. Bull, Ex parte, 15 Ves. 257.

Banking Company under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46.—A member of a banking company established under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, cannot be proceeded against in bankruptcy for a debt due from the company, no judgment for the debt having been recovered against the public officer of the company, although the company may have ceased to carry on business, and an order has been obtained for winding it up prior to such proceedings. Darison v. Farmer, 6 Ex. 242; 20 L. J., Ex. 177.

10. COWKEEPERS.

Cows kept to consume Roots.—A farmer, who was under covenant with his landlord to consume the whole of the turnips and other roots upon his farm, kept cows as part of his stock, the milk from which, beyond what was consumed by himself and family, he was in the habit of selling, and for that purpose he daily sent a man to sell and deliver the milk, some of the purchasers being regular, and some chance customers; if he had not sold the milk, he would have sustained a loss by keeping so many cows upon the farm; but keeping cows to the extent he did, and selling their milk, was a husbandlike and profitable way of using the farm:—not a cowkeeper. Bell v. Young, 15 C. B. 254; 24 L. J., C. P. 66; 1 Jur., N. S. 167; S. P., Dering, Ex parte, 1 De Gex, 398; 16 L. J., Bk. 3; 11 Jur. 92.

11. EXECUTORS.

An executor, who carries on the business for the benefit of the testator's children, may be a bankrupt. Viner v. Cadell, 3 Esp. 88.

12. FARMERS AND GRAZIERS.

Farmer Dealing in Horses.—A farmer buying and selling horses to an extent unauthorized by his character of farmer may be a bankrupt as a horse-dealer, although he may have so bought and sold without a licence to deal in horses. Gibbs, Ex parte, 2 Rose, 38.

Feeding Pigs for Sale.—A person who buys pigs or other stock with a view to a resale of them, as ancillary to the profitable occupation of his farm, and in the interval feeds them wholly or principally on the produce of his farm, does not thereby become a trader. Patten v. Browne, 7 Taunt. 409.

Mixing bought Seed with own Crop.—A farmer bought rye-grass seed, mixed it with seed of his own growth, and sold the mixture; he bought pigs, put them on his farm, fed them on the stubbles, and resold them, some after a week, some after longer periods:—Held, that neither of these was an act of trading. Id.

Occasional Buying and Selling.—Nor does a farmer, who occasionally buys hay, corn, horses, &c., with a view to sell them again for profit, thereby become a trader. Stewart v. Hall, 2 N. R. 78. But see Bartholomew v. Sherwood, 1 T. R. 573, n.

Habitual Buying and Selling.—A farmer, who is in the habit of buying half as many more sheep as are necessary to stock his farm, and of selling the surplus at a profit, is a trader as a sheep salesman. Newall, In re, 3 Deac. 33.

Buying and Selling Pigs.—A., an officer in the army, retired to the country, where he rented a dwelling-house and three acres of land, bought pigs, and consumed part in his family, and sold the rest at a neighbouring market; he made no show as a dealer, and was proved not to have bought more than fourteen pigs in one year:—Held, a trader. Newland v. Bell, 221.

Buying standing Crops.—Buying standing crops of grass, cutting them down, and making them into hay, is a trading within the bankrupt law. Bloxham v. Graham, Peake's Add. Cas. 3.

Selling Lime off Farm.—A farmer, making lime from a lime pit, opened and worked before the commencement of his term, and selling the surplus beyond what he required for manure, is not a trader. Ridge, Ex parte, 1 Ves. & B. 360.

Dealing in Cattle.—A farmer and grazier, exercising also the business of a drover, by buying and selling cattle from time to time, beyond the occasions of his farms, was exempted from the operation of the bankrupt laws by 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 40. And the purchase of hay for the support of his cattle, and the sale of part of it again, because it was more than was required for their consumption, did not make him a trader. Belton v. Soverby, 11 East, 274.

One who bought cattle at one fair, kept them three or four days on his own ground, and drove them to another fair to sell, was a drover within 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 40. Mills v. Hughes, Bull. N. P. 39.

13. FELONS.

Person attainted.—Quære, whether a commission cannot issue against a person attainted, as he may be sued in a civil action even when attainted of treason. Ramsay v. McDonald, 1 W. Bl. 30; S. C. nom. Ramsden v. Macdonald, 1 Wils. 217.

Convicted Felon not complying with Debtor's Summons.—Notwithstanding the provision contained in s. 8 of the act 33 & 34 Vict. c. 23, that every convicted felon shall, during the time while he shall be subject to the operation of the act, be incapable of alienating or charging any property, such a convict can pay a debt which is claimed by a debtor's summons issued and served on him after his conviction, and if he fails to pay the debt within the time limited by the summons, he will commit an act of bankruptcy, upon which an adjudication can be made against him. Graves, Ex parte, Harris, In re, 19 Ch. D. 1; 51 L. J., Ch. 1; 45 L. T. 397; 30 W. R. 51; 46 J. P. 70; 14 Cox, C. C. 629; 15 Cox, C. C. 118—C. A.

14. FISHERMEN.

A fisherman buying fish of other boats at sea, and selling it on shore, is a trader. Heaney v. Birch, 1 Rose, 356; 3 Camp. 233.

A fisherman who buys occasionally fish to make up for market a cargo otherwise deficient is not a trader. Gallimore, Ex parte, 2 Rose, 424.

15. HORSE DEALERS AND LIVERY STABLE KEEPERS.

Dealing without a Licence.—Buying and selling horses with an avowed intention to take out a licence, and become a dealer, is sufficient to constitute a trading, however limited the trading, and though no licence has been actually taken out. Wright v. Bird, 1 Price, 20.

Buying Dead Horses.—But a person who purchases dead horses for his dogs, and sells the skins and bones, does not thereby become a trader, although he might sell such skins at a profit. Summersett v. Jarvis, 6 Moore, 56; 3 B. & B. 2.

Selling Hay and Straw.—A person who keeps livery stables and buys large quantities of hay and straw and oats, which he supplies to the horses standing in the stables, and sells to any person generally, is a trader. Cunnam v. Deneo, 3 M. & Scott, 761; 10 Bing. 292.

Widow continuing Business without a Licence.]

—A. was a horse dealer and livery-stable keeper: after his death his widow carried on the business of the livery stable, but without any licence, and bought horses to let, which she occasionally sold to customers:—Held, a sufficient trading to support a commission against her. Martin v. Nightingale, 3 Bing. 421; 11 Moore, 305.

16. INFANTS.

Before 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106.—A commission of bankruptcy could not be supported against a person under age. O'Brien v. Currie, 3 C. & P. 283; S. P., Adam, Ex parte, 1 Ves. & B. 494.

Such a commission was void, and not merely voidable. Belton v. Hodges, 9 Bing. 365; 2 M. & Scott, 496.

But if a petition to annul the adjudication on the ground of infancy is not presented within the time required by the statute, it is unimpeachable and valid. West, In re, 3 De G., Mac. & G. 198; 22 L. J., Bk. 71.

A fiat was superseded with costs to be paid by the petitioning creditor, on the ground of the bankrupt's minority. Hehir, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & Chit. 107.

Infant Partner.—A partnership of three becoming insolvent, and one being an infant, a joint commission against the other two was superseded, as separate commissions ought to have been taken out. Henderson, Ex parte, 4 Ves. 163; S. P., Layton, Ex parte, 6 Ves. 440.

A joint commission was superseded, on the ground of the infancy of one partner, on the petition of the assignees under a separate commission. Barwis, Ex parte, 6 Ves. 601.

Since 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134.—An infant, whether a trader or not, is liable to the operation of the bankrupt laws. Smedley, In re, 10 L. T. 432.

Infant Partner.—An infant entered into partnership with two adults. During the absence of all the partners, a clerk, who held a power of attorney from the two adult partners, signed a bill of exchange on behalf of the firm. This bill was presented for payment to the infant, who refused it, denying his liability. The holders of the bill thereupon presented a petition under the Insolvent Traders Act (Barbadoes), and obtained an adjudication of insolvency against the infant and his partners:—Held, first, that there was no petitioning creditor's debt; and, secondly, that being an infant, he could not be adjudicated insolvent, and that therefore the proceedings in the court must be superseded. Maclean v. Dummett, 22 L. T. 710—P. C.

Fraudulent assertion of Full Age.—The decided cases only establish that an infant may be made bankrupt where he has obtained credit and contracted debts by means of a false and fraudulent assertion that he was of age. Id.

— Liability to Pay.—To create an equitable liability in an infant to pay, on the ground of fraud, it is necessary to prove express representations by him that he was of age and that they were reasonably believed in and relied on by the person to whom they were made. Jones, In re, Jones, Ex parte, 18 Ch. D. 109; 50

L. J., Ch. 673; 45 L. T. 193; 29 W. R. 747—C. A. Reversing 44 L. T. 588.

A trader who, being an infant, has represented himself to be of age, may, after majority, be adjudicated bankrupt in respect of a debt incurred under age. Lynch, In re, 2 Ch. D. 227; 45 L. J., Bk. 48; 34 L. T. 34; 24 W. R. 375.

Filing Liquidation Petition by Infant does not alter his Status.—An infant who had carried on business, and become indebted for goods supplied in the course of such trading, filed a petition for liquidation, but no resolutions were passed, and the liquidation proceedings fell through. Subsequently alleged trade creditors filed a petition for adjudication in bankruptcy against him, and the county court judge adjudicated him a bankrupt. The infant had not represented himself to be an adult.—Held, that the infant did not by merely trading constitute himself a debtor; that by taking the step, which only an adult trader could take, of presenting a liquidation petition, he did not alter his status or give the court jurisdiction under s. 125, sub-s. 12 of the Bankruptcy Act to adjudicate him bankrupt. Lynch, In re, Lynch, Ex parte (2 Ch. D. 227), overruled. Jones, In re, Jones, Ex parte, 18 Ch. D. 109; 50 L. J., Ch. 673; 45 L. T. 193; 29 W. R. 747—C. A. Reversing 44 L. T. 588.

Since 37 & 38 Vict. c. 62.—An infant cannot be adjudicated a bankrupt in respect of debts contracted since the Infants Relief Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 62), and falling within its provisions. I., an infant, carried on trade in conjunction with S. They effected an arrangement in the Court of Bankruptcy, suppressing the fact of I.'s infancy, and passed their promissory notes for the composition payable in the matter. They failed to carry out the arrangement, and subsequently made an assignment of all their property to trustees for the benefit of their creditors. Both I. and S. were adjudicated bankrupts on the petition of creditors in respect of a debt incurred after the Infants Relief Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 62), came into operation. The petitioning creditors had proved in the arrangement, and held composition notes of I. and S. I., having shewn cause against the adjudication.—Held, that there was no sufficient petitioning creditor's debt to support the adjudication as against I., and that the cause shewn by him should be allowed. Rainey, In re, 3 L. R., Ir. 459.

W. was convicted under s. 12 of the Debtors Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 62), for that he, within four months before the presentation of a bankruptcy petition against him upon which he was adjudged bankrupt, quitted England, taking with him, with intent to defraud, property exceeding 20*l.*, which ought by law to have been divided amongst his creditors.—At the times when he quitted England and when he was adjudged bankrupt, W. was an infant. The debts proved against his estate in the bankruptcy were trade debts, contracted since the passing of the Infants Relief Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 62), and it did not appear that any debts for necessities supplied to him existed.—Held, by Cockburn, C. J., Huddleston, B., Lindley, Manisty, and Hawkins, J.J., that the conviction could not be upheld. Reg. v. Wilson, 5 Q. B. D. 23; 14 Cox. C. C. 378; 49 L. J., M. C. 13; 41 L. T. 480; 28 W. R. 307; 44 J. P. 105.

17. LANDOWNERS.

When a Trader.—If a man exercises a manufacture from the produce of his own land, as a necessary or usual mode of enjoying that produce, he will not be considered as a trader, though he buys necessary ingredients to fit it for the market; but where the produce of the land is merely the raw material of the manufacture, and the manufacture not the necessary mode of enjoying the land, there he is a trader. Wells v. Parker, 1 T. R. 34; 1 Bro. P. C. 545. And see S. C., 1 T. R. 783.

Selling Timber.—A man may sell such timber as he cuts down on his own land, without subjecting himself to the bankrupt laws. Holroyd v. Gwynne, 2 Taunt. 176; 1 Rose, 113.

Selling Lime.—If a person burns chalk, not the produce of his own land, and sells the lime, it is a trading. Paul v. Dowling, M. & M. 263; 3 C. & P. 500.

18. LODGING AND BOARDING HOUSE KEEPERS.

An innkeeper or a victualler was not a trader as such. Saunderson v. Bowles, 4 Burr. 2064.

Selling Food to Lodgers.—A boarding and lodging house keeper, who also keeps a stock of wine, which she supplies to her boarders and lodgers by a bottle at a time as each of them may require it, is an hotel keeper. Gibson v. King, Car. & M. 458; 10 M. & W. 667; 12 L. J., Ex. 9; 6 Jur. 1044; S. C., Birch, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 659; Daniell, Ex parte, 7 Jur. 334; King v. Simmons, 1 H. L. Cns. 754; 12 Jur. 903.

A keeper of a private lodging-house, who also seeks a profit by furnishing her guests with provisions, is subject to the bankrupt laws as an hotel keeper, although the provisions are set apart as the separate property of each guest. Smith v. Scott, 9 Bing. 14; 2 M. & Scott, 35.

Buying Furniture for furnishing Lodgings.—A party who lets furnished lodgings is not a trader, notwithstanding he buys the furniture for the purpose of being let with the lodgings. Bowers, Ex parte, 2 Deac. 99.

Nurse keeping Lodgings.—It is settled law that a lodging-house keeper who supplies his lodger with board at a profit is an hotel keeper, and is therefore a trader within the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and it makes no difference that the lodging-house keeper is a professional nurse who only receives invalids recommended to her by medical men and other persons. Jones, In re, Thorne, Ex parte, 3 Ch. D. 457; 45 L. J., Bk. 158; 35 L. T. 532; 25 W. R. 186—C. A.

A professional nurse, who keeps a lodging house for invalids and supplies them with board at a profit, as well as lodging and nursing, is a keeper of an hotel, and therefore a trader within the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. Id.

Lodgers in House used by Debtor's Wife as Boarding-school.—A foreman tailor's cutter, who took in lodgers at his house where his wife also kept a boarding-school, is a trader within

19. LUNATICS.

Lunatic.—Leave given to the committee of the estate of a lunatic trader to consent to an adjudication in bankruptcy against the lunatic. Lee, In re, 23 Ch. D. 216; 48 L. T. 193; 31 W. R. 802—C. A.

A lunatic may be a bankrupt, if the act of bankruptcy is committed during a lucid interval. Anon., 13 Ves. 590.

20. MARKET GARDENERS.

A tenant of 130 acres who, under a farming lease, which obliged him to fallow or plant with peas or potatoes every third year, had on his farm twelve acres of young potatoes and twenty acres of green peas growing in open fields every year, and consigned the produce, for table consumption, to London salesmen, to whom he allowed such commission as is usually allowed by market gardeners, is not a market gardener. Hammond, Ex parte, De Gex, 93; 14 L. J., Bk. 14; 9 Jur. 358.

21. MARRIED WOMEN.

By 45 & 46 Vict. c. 75, s. 1, sub-s. 5, every married woman carrying on a trade separately from her husband shall, in respect of her separate property, be subject to the bankruptcy laws in the same way as if she were a feme sole.

A sole Trader in London.—A wife being a sole trader in London is liable to a commission of bankruptcy, and her assignees will come in paramount to the assignees of the husband, though his was the prior bankruptcy. La Vie v. Philips, 1 W. Bl. 570; 3 Burr. 1776.

Wife of a Convict.—The wife of a convict sentenced to transportation may be a trader and a bankrupt, although the husband is only on board the hulks, and she has occasional intercourse with him. Franks, Ex parte, 7 Bing. 762; 1 M. & Scott, 1.

Trading before Marriage.—A commission having issued against a married woman, on a trading before marriage, it was superseded. Mear, Ex parte, 2 Bro. C. C. 266.

Prosecution of Fiat suspended.—After the issuing of a fiat, the petitioning creditor heard and believed that the party against whom it was issued was a married woman. The court would not for this cause, on the petition of the petitioning creditor, order the fiat to be annulled, but merely suspended the prosecution of it. Harland, Ex parte, 1 Deac. 75.

Married Woman adjudged Bankrupt on Representation of Widowhood.—A married woman, on her own petition, in which she stated herself to be a widow, was adjudicated bankrupt, and she was afterwards indicted for concealment and embezzlement of her property, with intent to defraud her creditors, and two other persons were also indicted with aiding her. The examinations and answers of the three in bankruptcy were given in evidence in support of the prosecution. No caution was given to them by the commissioner on such examination, and they did not object to answer on the ground that their answers might tend to criminate them:—Held, that although the wife was adjudicated a bankrupt, the property belonged to her husband, and that the property was not proved as laid in the indictment. Reg. v. Robinson, 1 L. R., C. C. R. 80; 36 L. J., M. C. 78; 16 L. T. 605; 15 W. R. 966; 10 Cox, C. C. 467.

Plea of Bankruptcy Proceedings pending against Married Woman is good so long as such Proceedings remain undisturbed.—A writ of summons was issued for goods sold and delivered against a wife trading separately from her husband; part of the defence raised was, that proceedings in bankruptcy were then pending:—Held, that as long as these proceedings remained undisturbed, an application to recover the debt must be made in bankruptcy, and leave was given to go in and prove for the debt and the costs of the action. Day v. Freund, 35 L. T. 551; 25 W. R. 222.

Cannot be adjudicated Bankrupt on Debt incurred before Marriage.—A married woman was sued at law by a creditor for a debt contracted by her before her marriage, which took place in 1872, and a judgment was obtained against her. The creditor then sued out a debtor summons, and, the debt not being satisfied, filed a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy against her. She had no separate property:—Held, that she could not be adjudicated a bankrupt. Holland, Ex parte, Heneage, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 307; 43 L. J., Bk. 85; 30 L. T. 106; 22 W. R. 425.

Quære, whether a married woman can be made a bankrupt if she has separate property. Per Mellish, L. J. Id.

Under 33 & 34 Vict. c. 93.—A married woman is not liable to the bankrupt law, even though she has separate estate and has contracted engagements after her marriage. The Married Women's Property Act, 1870, has made no difference in this respect. Jones, Ex parte, Grissell, In re, 12 Ch. D. 484; 48 L. J., Bk. 109; 40 L. T. 790—C. A.

22. MEDICAL PRACTITIONERS.

A surgeon who dispenses and is paid for medicines administered to his own patients is an apothecary within the meaning of the bankrupt laws, and liable as such to become bankrupt. Crabb, Ex parte, 8 De G., Mac. & G. 277; 24 L. J., Bk. 45; 2 Jur., N. S. 628.

Retailing of drugs by a surgeon apothecary makes him a trader. Selling drugs, as ancillary to the business of a surgeon, is not a trading. Daubenny, Ex parte, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 16, 17; 2 Deac. 72.

23. MINE OWNERS.

A., who held a lease of mines of coal and ironstone, and carried on the business of smelting, adding to the iron ore produced from his own mines from 65 to 70 per cent. of ore which he bought elsewhere, and smelting the whole into pig iron, which he sold in the market, is a trader within the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 65. Turner v.

Hardcastle, 11 C. B., N. S. 683; 31 L. J., C. P. 193.

The owner of a colliery, buying articles and selling them to his own pitmen, is not a trader. Gallimore, Ex parte, 2 Rose, 424.

One who buys a coal mine, and works it, and sells the coals, is not a trader. Port v. Turton, 2 Wils. 169; S. P., Wells v. Parker, 1 T. R. 38.

The owner of a phosphate mine who sells the phosphate is not a trader within the meaning of the bankruptcy laws. Schomberg, Ex parte, Schomberg, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 172; 31 L. T. 665; 23 W. R. 204.

A., in conjunction with T., took a lease of salt-works and brine pits, for the purpose of manufacturing and selling salt, which was made by them chiefly from the springs and rock salt upon the premises demised; but some of the brine they obtained by channels from adjoining premises:—Held, that this was not a trading, as a workmanship of goods and commodities, within 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 2. Atkinson, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 300.

A person who works a slate quarry in the ordinary way, upon lease from the owner, is not a trader within the meaning of the bankrupt laws; and purchasing a stock of tools and materials and selling them again to the quarry men, which appears to be the custom in quarries, does not constitute a trading on the part of such a person. Cleland, In re, 2 L. R., Ch. 466; 36 L. J., Bk. 33; 16 L. T. 403; 15 W. R. 681.

A person selling stone delivered from his own quarry, is not a trader. Gardner, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 377; 1 Mont. & Bligh, 45.

24. PARLIAMENT, MEMBERS OF.

Under 45 Geo. 3, c. 124.—A trader having privilege of parliament, by not paying money under an order of court, committed an act of bankruptcy. Read v. Phillips, 16 Ves. 437.

Under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 66.—A member of parliament may become bankrupt under the above section. Griffiths, Ex parte, 3 De G., Mac. & G. 174; 22 L. J., Bk. 50; 17 Jur. 655.

The direction in the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 122, that if within the time therein mentioned the order of adjudication against a bankrupt member of the House of Commons is not annulled and his debts are not fully paid or satisfied, the court shall certify the same to the Speaker of the House of Commons, is not, by s. 125, sub-s. 7, made applicable in the case of a member who has not become bankrupt but whose affairs are in liquidation. Pooley, Ex parte, Russell, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 519; 41 L. J., Bk. 67; 26 L. T. 813; 20 W. R. 735.

Peers of the Realm.—A peer, whether trader or non-trader, was capable of being adjudicated a bankrupt under the Act of 1861, and no privilege exists exempting a member of parliament from liability to be made a bankrupt. The privilege which such persons have at common law of freedom from arrest is not affected by the Bankruptcy Acts. Newcastle (Duke) v. Morris, 4 L. R., H. L. 661; 40 L. J., Bk. 4; 23 L. T. 569; 19 W. R. 26. Affirming, 5 L. R., Ch. 172.

25. PAWNBROKERS.

Pawnbrokers are traders.—Rawlinson v. Pearson, 5 B. & A. 124.

26. PUBLISHERS.

The publisher of a newspaper, buying the whole daily impression from the proprietors, reselling it at a profit, and bearing the loss of such as remain unsold, is a trader. Gimingham v. Laing, 2 Marsh. 236; 6 Taunt. 532; 2 Rose, 472.

27. SCAVENGERS.

Semble, that a scavenger is not a trader. Collins, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 373.

28. SCHOOLMASTERS.

A schoolmaster buying books and shoes, and selling them at an advanced price to his scholars, is not a trader. Valentine v. Vaughan, 1 Peake, 108.

29. SCRIVENERS.

Who is a Scrivener.—A scrivener within the bankrupt laws is one who, with an intention thereby to get a living, receives into his custody other men's money to be laid out on their account, according to the purpose for which it is deposited. The mode of his remuneration, whether by procuration fees, by a charge for commission, or otherwise, is a circumstance immaterial; the actual deposit of, and complete control over, the money of others till invested, and the intention thereby to get a living, being the essence of this species of trading. Malkin, Ex parte, 2 Rose, 27; 2 Ves. & B. 31.

A scrivener has been held to be a person entrusted with the money of his employer, and who, for commission, finds a borrower. Bath, Ex parte, 1 Mont. 82; S. P., Yeo v. Allen, 3 Dougl. 214.

Attorney.—An attorney is not necessarily a scrivener. Malkin, Ex parte, 2 Ves. & B. 175.

Unless he has been in the habit of having money deposited with him for the purpose of laying it out on securities. Adams v. Malkin, 3 Camp. 534. See Hurd v. Brydges, Holt, 654.

An attorney does not become a scrivener, liable to be made a bankrupt, by lending the money of clients and charging a procuration fee to the borrowers. Lott v. Melville, 3 M. & G. 40; 3 Scott, N. R. 346; 9 D. P. C. 882; 5 Jur. 436.

A transaction in which an attorney calls in and receives the money of a client, and retains the money in his possession, paying interest to that client upon the amount, is not a trading as a money scrivener. Id.

A scrivener is one whose trade is to procure loans for such persons as want to borrow money, and investments for those who wish to lend, who charges procuration fees for this work. Id.

But, in order to bring him within the statute, so as to be liable to be a bankrupt, he must be one whose business is (as a general means of obtaining a livelihood) to receive other men's moneys or estates for the purpose of so laying them out in securities. Id.

Where an attorney was in the habit of having the money of his clients deposited with him to lay out for them upon mortgage, and received from others a compensation or gratuity for procuring loans of money for them, besides his charges for preparing the mortgage securities, he was held to be a trader as a money broker and a person receiving other men's moneys into his trust or custody, whether or not he might be considered liable to the bankrupt law as a banker or scrivener. Gem, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 99; 5 Jur. 683.

A partner in a firm of two solicitors received moneys belonging to the sister of the other, for investment, and in a few instances without any specific security having been arranged. The usual charges of an attorney or solicitor were alone made upon the transactions:—Held, not to amount to trading as a scrivener. Dufaur, Ex parte, 2 De G., Mac. & G. 246; 21 L. J., Bk. 38. See Harman v. Johnson, 2 El. & Bl. 61; 3 C. & K. 272; 22 L. J., Q. B. 297; 17 Jur. 1096.

An attorney employed to receive money and pay it to the client's account, paid it to his own; and, on the client bringing an action, vexatiously defended it, and filed a bill (which was dismissed) to restrain execution. He was afterwards found bankrupt as a scrivener:—Held, that the conduct of the bankrupt was not conduct as a scrivener, so as to be capable of being regarded in reference to the allowance of his certificate. Spicer, Ex parte, 3 De G. & S. 601; 14 Jur. 30.

On an indictment against an attorney for not surrendering to the fiat:—Held, that he was liable to be made a bankrupt as a scrivener, it being shewn that in one or more instances he had acted as such in procuring loans of and lending other persons' money out on interest; and that one such instance being shewn, it might be presumed that he carried on the business, until the contrary was shewn. Reg. v. Hughes, 1 F. & F. 726.

30. SHIPBROKERS.

Shipbrokers may be bankrupts. Pott v. Turner, 6 Bing. 702; 4 M. & P. 551.

31. STOCKBROKERS.

The word "brokers" includes not only brokers who buy and sell goods, but stockbrokers. Anon., Cullen, Bkt. Laws, 18.

32. UNDISCHARGED BANKRUPTS.

Undischarged Bankrupt, Second Adjudication of.—An adjudication of bankruptcy against a debtor who has not obtained his discharge under a previous adjudication and has been allowed by the trustee to resume business is not void. Watson, Ex parte, Roberts, In re, 12 Ch. D. 380—C. A.

33. WHAT CONSTITUTES TRADING.

Trading to England.—One who has traded to England, whether native, denizen, or alien, though never a resident trader in England, but comes over here occasionally, and commits an act of bankruptcy, is an object of the bankrupt laws. Alexander v. Vaughan, Cowp. 398. And see Smith, Ex parte, Cowp. 402.

Buying in England.—A person residing in the Isle of Man, but coming from time to time to this country, and buying goods here, which were afterwards sold in that island, is a trader against whom a commission of bankruptcy may issue in this country, although he only bought and never sold any goods here. Allen v. Cannon, 4 B. & A. 418.

Drawing Bills upon England.—A person residing in India, and trading there, and in the course of that trading drawing bills upon England for the value of other bills sent thither, upon which he got a profit by the exchange, and in the course of that sort of dealing contracting debts in England, is a trader. Ingliss v. Grant, 5 T. R. 530.

Buying in England through Agent.—A trader in London purchases goods to be sold by A. & B., partners in trade in Dublin, and charges them to A. & B. at prime cost; this creates a debt due from B. in England, and makes him a trader here. Williams v. Nunn, 1 Taunt. 270; 1 Camp. 152.

Number of Acts of Trading.—Whether or not a person is a trader, does not depend upon his occasionally doing acts of trading, but upon the intention generally so to get his living. Patterson, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 402; S. P., Maginnis, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 84; Patman v. Vaughan, 1 T. R. 572.

Generally, the trifling amount of trading is immaterial, if there is an intention to continue the trading. Moole, Ex parte, 14 Ves. 603.

Therefore, the purchase of one lot of timber, with intent to sell again, will make a man a trader. Holroyd v. Gwynne, 2 Taunt. 176; 1 Rose, 113.

But one solitary act of dealing is not sufficient to prove the trading, unless coupled with evidence of a general intention to trade. Wilkes, Ex parte, 2 Deac. 2.

A single act of buying and selling by a farmer, with evidence of intent to continue, is a sufficient act of trading. Lavender, Ex parte, 4 Deac. & Chit. 487; 2 Mont. & Ayr. 11.

Where a person engaged in the Greenland whale fishery made three purchases of oil, one of which he sold again:—Held, that it was a question for the judge to determine, whether these dealings constituted a trading. Gale v. Halfknight, 3 Stark. 56.

Pretended Trading.—A country attorney hired a room in Bell Court, Brook's Market, London, which he kept for four weeks, and in which he put eighty-two old volumes of books, sticking up a paper in the window, in which his name was written, with the addition of bookseller; a fiat having been issued against him by this description, was annulled on the ground of fraud. Dart, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & Chit. 543.

Profit on Act of Trading.—The smallness of the profit is no consideration, and one act of buying and selling is sufficient to constitute a trader. Newland v. Bell, 1 Holt, 221.

Illegal Trading.—A smuggler, dealing in contraband goods, by buying and selling, is a trader, and therefore liable to a commission, although such buying and selling are illegal. Cobb v. Symonds, 1 D. & R. 111; 5 B. & A. 516.

A trader may be a bankrupt, although he may not have taken out a licence necessary to legalize his trade. Saunderson v. Bowles, 4 Burr. 2064.

But a buying in connection with others, to carry on a system of fraud, is not a trading. Milliken v. Brandon, 1 C. & P. 380.

If a clergyman trade, though illegal, he is liable to be made a bankrupt. Meymot, Ex parte, 1 Atk. 196.

34. CEASING TO TRADE.

— Debts Contracted Prior thereto.—A man who has retired from business may become a bankrupt in respect of debts contracted during the period of his trading. Willoughby v. Thornton, 1 Selw. N. P. 175; S. P., Doe d. Barnard v. Lawrence, 2 C. & P. 134; Dawe v. Holdsworth, Peake, 64; Dewdney, Ex parte, 15 Ves. 495.

— Ceasing to Manufacture, but soliciting Orders.—So, if a trader ceases to manufacture, but still continues to solicit orders and to execute them, and holds himself out to the world as capable of executing them. Wharam v. Routledge, 5 Esp. 235.

— Pawnbroker continuing to Sell Unredeemed Pledges.—A person who had formerly taken in goods on pledge, and had ceased to do so, but continued to sell the unredeemed pledges, is still a trader as a pawnbroker. Rawlinson v. Pearson, 5 B. & A. 124.

Discontinuance of Trade with Intention of resuming it.—Whether or not a trader has ceased his trading does not depend upon the mere discontinuance of it, or the absence of any specific act of trading, but whether there is an intention to exercise or resume it, and that is a question for a jury. Paterson, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 402; S. P., Cundy, Ex parte, 2 Rose, 357; Dance v. Wyatt, 4 M. & P. 201.

Where a party having manufactured goods for sale discontinues the sale almost entirely, and uses all his produce himself, but occasionally allows parties applying to have small quantities on payment, it is a question for the jury whether these sales are with the intention of continuing trade, or for the accommodation of the applicants; and in the latter case he ceases to be a trader. Paul v. Dowling, M. & M. 263; 3 C. & P. 500.

If a debtor, who has been a trader, is not actually carrying on trade at the time when it is alleged by a petitioning creditor that he has done or omitted to do that, the doing or omission of which would be an act of bankruptcy only if it was done or omitted by a trader, it is a question of intention, to be decided on the evidence, whether the debtor has permanently ceased to trade, or has only temporarily discontinued his trade with the intention of resuming it. In the latter case he is still a trader within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act. The law on this point is still as it was laid down in Paterson, Ex parte (1 Rose, 402), and Cundy, Ex parte (2 Rose, 357). Salaman, Ex parte, Taylor, In re, 21 Ch. D. 394; 47 L. T. 495; 81 W. R. 282—C. A.

Traders—Persons who were such at Time when Act came into Operation.—The Bankruptcy Act, 1869, has no retrospective operation, and where it speaks of traders, it means such persons only as were traders at the time when it first came into operation. Bailey, Ex parte, Jecks, In re, 13 L. R., Eq. 314; 41 L. J., Bk. 1; 25 L. T. 918; 20 W. R. 76.

— Trading Debts Contracted before Commencement of Act.—Therefore where a person had ceased to trade in 1868, but in 1871 owed various debts contracted during the period he was in trade:—Held, that he was not a trader within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. Id.

— "Being a Trader"—Assignment of Business—Time of Ceasing to Trade.—The act of bankruptcy, alleged in a petition, was that the debtor had, being a trader, departed from his dwelling-house or otherwise absented himself with intent to defeat or delay his creditors. As a fact the debtor, who had been in trade, upon the 4th of October, 1882, executed an assignment of his business, and later on in the same day left his place of business and went abroad:—Held, that upon the execution of the deed of assignment of his business, the debtor ceased to be a trader. Reynolds, Ex parte, Reynolds, In re (No. 2), 52 L. J., Ch. 431; 47 L. T. 448; 31 W. R. 323.

— "Departing from Dwelling-house or otherwise absenting himself"—Summary Adjudication.—The words "being a trader," in sub-s. 3 of s. 6 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, are to be construed in the same way as the same words in sub-s. 6 of the section, and they mean in sub-s. 3 that the debtor must be actually carrying on a trade at the time when he is alleged to have committed any of the acts therein mentioned as acts of bankruptcy if committed by a trader. It is not sufficient that he was carrying on a trade at the time when the petitioning creditor's debt was contracted. A summary adjudication cannot be obtained under r. 65, unless the debtor was a trader at the time when he is alleged to have "departed from his dwelling-house or otherwise absented himself." McGeorge, Ex parte, Stevens, In re, 20 Ch. D. 697; 51 L. J., Ch. 909; 47 L. T. 213; 30 W. R. 817—C. A.

35. PROOF OF TRADING.

Accounts in Debtor's Handwriting—Whether Written before or after Bankruptcy.—A fiat issued on the 7th of March, 1842, and in an action by the assignees, for goods pledged by the bankrupt on the 28th of February, the trading was disputed. The bankrupt was a boarding-house keeper, and sold wine to her boarders:—Held, that a paper in the handwriting of the bankrupt, purporting to be an account between her and one of her boarders, from December, 1840, to May, 1841, was not receivable to prove the trading, unless it could be shewn to have been written before the bankruptcy. Gibson v. King, Car. & M. 458.

Held also, that a book containing accounts between the bankrupt and one of her boarders, of dates all antecedent to the bankruptcy, and to which the word "settled" was added in the bank-rupt's handwriting, was also not receivable, unless it was shewn that the entries were written before the bankruptcy. Ib.

Declarations by Debtor.]—The declarations of a bankrupt to a party with whom he is dealing, respecting his transactions in trade, are not evidence to prove the trading of such bankrupt. Brinley v. King, 1 C. & P. 646; S. P., nom. Bromley v. King, R. & M. 228.

But declarations made by a party, of his object in buying a particular article, are admissible in evidence to prove his intention, and whether he thereby became a trader. Gale v. Halfknight, 3 Stark. 56.

An acknowledgment by a person that he was in partnership with another as a trader, who afterwards became bankrupt, is sufficient to constitute a trading, although no acts of buying or selling were proved to have taken place during the partnership. Parker v. Barker, 3 Moore, 226; 1 B. & B. 9.

Fact of Trading is a Question of Law.]—Whether a man is a trader within the bankrupt law is a question of law, and not of fact. Hankey v. Jones, Cowp. 752.

Intention a Question of Fact.]—A trading, to support a commission, depends not upon the quantity, but upon the intention; and it is a question for a jury whether there is enough to evidence that intention. Maginnis, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 84; S. P., Putman v. Vaughan, 1 T. R. 572.

When Time presumed.]—Where a trader has been proved to have traded in the usual course once, he will be presumed to have continued to carry on his business in the same manner until the time of his bankruptcy. Heanney v. Birch, 1 Rose, 356; 3 Camp. 233.

Onus of Proof.]—If a petitioning creditor alleges that the debtor has committed an act of bankruptcy which can be committed only by a trader, the onus is on him to prove that the debtor was, within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, a trader at the time when the act was committed. Salaman, Ex parte, Taylor, In re, 21 Ch. D. 394; 47 L. T. 495; 31 W. R. 282—C. A.

36. IRISH TRADERS.

The time of a trader's "residing or carrying on business in Ireland," within 20 & 21 Vict. c. 60, s. 31, means the time of presenting the petition. Sanderson, In re, 11 Ir. Ch. Rep. 421.

The Irish court has exclusive jurisdiction over such trader, though he owes debts contracted in England, while he was residing and trading there. Ib.

To constitute a person a trader within the meaning of the Irish Bankruptcy Act, 20 & 21 Vict. c. 60, s. 90, it is not necessary that he should be exclusively engaged in manufacture or trade; therefore, a manufacturer of artificial teeth for sale, who also practised as a dentist, is a trader. Brophy, In re, 19 W. R. 176.

IV. ACT OF BANKRUPTCY.

1. GENERALLY.

Where committed.]—The act of bankruptcy must be committed within England or Wales. Smith, Ex parte, Cowp. 402. And see Ingles v. Grant, 5 T. R. 530.

Though the act must be committed in this country, yet a letter from a trader who has gone abroad in the course of his trade, connected with circumstances here, may be sufficient evidence of such act. Hague, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 150.

After Party has ceased to Trade.]—The act of bankruptcy may be committed after the trading has ceased. Doe d. Barnard v. Lawrence, 2 C. & P. 134. S. P., Bamford, Ex parte, 15 Ves. 449.

A., not a trader, was indebted to B. to the amount of 100*l.*, and afterwards became a trader. After A. had ceased to be a trader (the debt to B. still existing) he committed an act of bankruptcy:—Held, that a commission might be supported upon B.'s debt. Baillie v. Grant, 2 M. & Scott, 193; 9 Bing. 121; 1 C. & P. 238.

"Trader"—Discontinuance of Trade with Intention of resuming it.]—If a debtor, who has been a trader, is not actually carrying on trade at the time when it is alleged by a petitioning creditor that he has done or omitted to do that, the doing or omission of which would be an act of bankruptcy only if it was done or omitted by a trader, it is a question of intention, to be decided on the evidence, whether the debtor has permanently ceased to trade, or has only temporarily discontinued his trade with the intention of resuming it. In the latter case he is still a trader within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act. The law on this point is still as it was laid down in Paterson, Ex parte (1 Rose, 402), and Cundy, Ex parte (2 Rose, 357). Salaman, Ex parte, Taylor, In re, 21 Ch. D. 394; 47 L. T. 495; 31 W. R. 282—C. A.

By Agent.]—A man cannot commit an act of bankruptcy by the conduct of his agent, without his knowledge. Cotton v. James, M. & M. 273; 3 C. & P. 505.

A man cannot commit an act of bankruptcy by an act of his agent which he has not authorized, and of which he is not cognizant. Blain, Ex parte, Sawers, In re, 12 Ch. D. 512; 41 L. T. 46; 28 W. R. 334—C. A.

By Partners.]—To support a joint commission of bankrupt there must be separate acts of bankruptcy by each partner. Allen v. Hartley, 4 Dougl. 20.

Where one of three partners in a banking concern, who resided at the place where the banking-house was, and was the only partner who transacted business, the other two residing at a distance from it, absented himself from the banking-house, shut it up and stopped payment:—Held, that this was not evidence of a joint act of bankruptcy by all three. Mills v. Bennett, 2 M. & S. 556; 2 Rose, 269.

Who may take Advantage of.]—Parties who were privies, and had assented to a deed of assignment, could not set it up as an act of bankruptcy. Bamford v. Baron, 2 T. R. 594; S. P., Marshall v. Barkworth, 1 N. & M. 279; 4 B. & A. 508.

Assignees of Bankrupt.]—A commission being sued out upon the petition of a creditor, who had not concurred in a deed of conveyance, and who, together with others who had so concurred, was chosen assignee:—Held, that it was no objection to an action by them as assignees, for the recovery of part of the bankrupt's estate, that some of them had concurred in such deed. Tuppender v. Burgess, 4 East, 230; 1 Smith, 33.

The assignees of a bankrupt, though neither of them are petitioning creditors, cannot avail themselves of an act of bankruptcy, of which the petitioning creditor would be estopped from availing himself. Type v. Hockin, 9 D. & R. 881; 7 B. & C. 101.

— Deed of Assignment—Creditor not Assenting.—Execution by a trader of a deed of assignment of all his estate and effects for the benefit of his creditors, although purporting to be made under the arrangement clauses of the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 224, was an act of bankruptcy, of which any creditor who had not executed or acceded to the deed might, prior to its execution by the required majority of six-sevenths in number and value of the creditors, avail himself in support of his petition for adjudication against the trader. Alsop, Ex parte, 1 De G., F. & J. 289; 29 L. J., Bk. 7; 6 Jur., N. S. 282.

— Creditors Acquiescing.—But where a creditor had advised the trader respecting a sale under such a deed, he had acquiesced in it so as to be precluded from treating it as an act of bankruptcy. ib.

A debtor having called his creditors together, proposals were made as to a composition. The creditors insisted on an assignment of his property to trustees for their benefit. He refused to make it; but, after the meeting had broken up, he executed such an assignment. One of his creditors was present during the preparation of this assignment, and, though he denied having been present at its execution, the court came to the conclusion that he had acquiesced in its being executed, and taken a benefit under it, by having the property protected from execution:—Held, that this creditor could not avail himself of the deed as an act of bankruptcy, although it might be that he had not so far assented to it as to be bound by its provisions. Stray, Ex parte, 2 L. R., Ch. 374.

A creditor who, by standing by and not objecting, assents to the execution by the debtor of a trust-deed, cannot afterwards rely on the execution of that deed as an act of bankruptcy. Amon, 8 Ir. R., Eq. 51.

— Creditors' Solicitor Assenting to Resolutions.—A bankrupt previous to the fiat, having called a meeting of his creditors at Manchester, H. & Co., creditors at Halifax, wrote to G., an attorney at Manchester, to attend the meeting on their behalf, saying, "We will leave our interest in your hands." In pursuance of the resolutions passed at the meeting, which were communicated to H. & Co., a trust-deed was prepared by G., and executed by the bankrupt and many other creditors, but not by H. & Co. A dividend was afterwards declared by the trustees, of which H. & Co. were also informed, without making any objection to the arrangement:—Held, that they could not afterwards set up this deed as an act of bankruptcy. Tealdi, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 210.

— Creditors obtaining Adjudication upon fiat Sued out by Debtor.—Traders executed an assignment of all their effects in trust for their creditors, and afterwards sued out a fiat against themselves, but did not apply for adjudication. Two creditors who could have sued out a fiat against the bankrupts, and who could, under it, have impeached the deed, applied for and obtained an adjudication:—Held, that the assignees could successfully impeach the deed. Jackson, Ex parte, 1 De Gex, 609; 17 L. J., Bk. 19; 19 Jur. 770.

Concerted Act of Bankruptcy.—By 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 115, no fiat shall be annulled, nor any petition dismissed, nor any adjudication reversed, by reason only that the fiat, petition or adjudication, or act of bankruptcy, has been concerted or agreed upon between the bankrupt and his solicitor, or agent, or any of them, and any creditor or other person. See Marshall v. Barkworth, 1 N. & M. 279; 4 B. & Ad. 508; Clare, Ex parte, 3 Jur. 1003.

— Under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 122.—The 5 & 6 Vict. c. 122, s. 8, providing that no fiat shall be invalid by reason of the act of bankruptcy being concerted, did not enable a creditor to sue out a fiat founded on a trust-deed executed with his concurrence; and such a fiat might be annulled at the instance of another creditor. Hayne, Ex parte, 1 De G. 534; 11 Jur. 568.

Operation of Act.—The effect of an act of bankruptcy under the former law is saved by the repealing section of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 83, s. 20. Snowball, Ex parte, Douglas, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 534; 41 L. J., Bk. 49; 26 L. T. 894; 20 W. R. 786.

2. ACTS OF BANKRUPTCY RELATING TO THE PERSON OF THE DEBTOR.

a. Departing the Realm or remaining Abroad.

Irish Trader.—If a trader, whose house of trade is in Ireland, comes to England on business, and again quits this country to avoid an arrest, it is a departing the realm with intent to delay his creditors, sufficient to constitute an act of bankruptcy. Williams v. Nunn, 1 Taunt. 270; 1 Camp. 152.

Intention.—But a trader who leaves England, and proceeds to Ireland, where he carries on trade, with an honest intention, compatible with trade, does not thereby commit an act of bankruptcy. Windham v. Paterson, 2 Rose, 466; 1 Stark. 144.

— When presumed.—If the necessary consequence of a trader's departing the realm is that his creditors must be delayed, he thereby commits an act of bankruptcy. Ramsbottom v. Lewis, 1 Camp. 279.

Where a debtor absents himself from this country for three years, and thereby delays his creditors, the intent to delay will be presumed (and be a valid act of bankruptcy), although he may be pursuing his regular course of business; and it will rest upon the party wishing to supersede to negative the intent to delay the creditors. Rhodes, Ex parte, 5 Jur. 580.

When a debtor knows that the necessary consequence of his going abroad will be to defeat or delay certain creditors, he will be held to have gone abroad with intent to defeat or delay his creditors, and will be adjudicated a bankrupt accordingly. Goater, Ex parte, Finney, In re, 30 L. T. 620; 22 W. R. 935—L. J.

Departing on Business.—A trader has a right to go abroad to look after his concerns, though his creditors may be thereby delayed, and it is no act of bankruptcy. Warner v. Barber, Holt, 175; S. P., Mutrie, Ex parte, 5 Ves. 574.

Power of Attorney.—If a trader goes abroad, leaving a general power of attorney with his clerk to transact all his business for him, but provides no means for paying bills of exchange which fall due in his absence, he commits an act of bankruptcy. Turner, Ex parte, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 722; 2 Deac. 824.

Evidence of Intention.—Where a trader appointed to meet A. respecting some accounts in which B. was interested, and failed to do so, but left this country for France, leaving a letter for B., in which he stated that he should be back in ten days, and in the meantime would make proposals to the creditors; and on the following day he wrote another letter to B. from Calais, stating that the account current between them might be speedily settled; and a month afterwards he wrote another letter from Paris, stating that he was under the necessity of remaining in France:—Held, that the departing the realm and absence abroad, being a continuous act, these letters were admissible in evidence, and sufficient to establish an act of bankruptcy, by shewing the intent with which such trader departed. Ravson v. Haig, 9 Moore, 217; 2 Bing. 99; 1 C. & P. 77. And see Bateman v. Bailey, 5 T. R. 512.

Intention of Returning.—A trader, being in debt to several persons, left this country in June, 1831, for America, with some intention of returning, but did not actually return, nor did he make provision for the payment of all his debts:—Held, that the continued absence of the bankrupt, under these circumstances, amounted to an act of bankruptcy. Kirkman, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & Chit. 451.

Remaining Abroad.—An English trader having gone abroad, and remaining there, with the intent to defeat or delay his creditors, is, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 67, guilty of a continuing act of bankruptcy. Bunny v. Hunt, 11 Moore, P. C. C. 189.

Whether his going abroad was or was not an act of bankruptcy. Bunny, Ex parte, 1 De G. & J. 119; 26 L. J., Bk. 83; 3 Jur., N. S. 1141.

Foreigner temporarily in England returning Home, not Absconding Debtor.—When a debtor summons is issued against a foreigner, who is in England for a merely temporary purpose, and he then prepares to return home, there is no presumption (as there might be in the case of a domiciled Englishman going abroad) that he is going away with the intention of avoiding payment of the summoning creditor's debt. Gutierrez, Ex parte, Gutierrez, In re, 11 Ch. D. 298; 40 L. T. 555; 27 W. R. 497—C. A.

A non-trader, a subject of, and domiciled in Portugal, contracted a debt in England, where he was temporarily resident. The creditor served him while in England with a writ of summons issuing out of the Court of Exchequer. The alien entered an appearance to the writ, and left England for Portugal the next day, alleging as his reason for doing so that he had been disappointed of some money which he expected, and could not pay his way in England. He afterwards said that he had left England in consequence of being served with the writ:—Held, that there was no sufficient evidence that he left England in order to defeat and delay his creditors, and that no act of bankruptcy had been committed. Crispin, Ex parte, 8 L. R., Ch. 374; 42 L. J., Bk. 65; 28 L. T. 483; 21 W. R. 491.

Although, in the case of a domiciled Englishman, the fact of his leaving England after service of a writ, and so escaping a debtor summons, would afford a strong presumption that he intended to defeat and delay his creditors, yet the same presumption does not apply to a foreigner who is returning to his own country. Ib.

In order to constitute an act of bankruptcy by remaining out of England, it is necessary that the debtor should be a person who has his home or place of business in England. Ib.

b. Departing from Dwelling-house.

What a Departure.—Departure from home, with intent to delay creditors, is an act of bankruptcy, although there has been no actual delay of any creditor. Rouch v. Great Western Railway Company, 4 P. & D. 686; 1 Q. B. 51; 2 Railw. Cas. 505; 5 Jur. 826.

A letter therefore written by a trader during his absence from home; stating that he was absent to avoid writs that were out against him, is evidence of an act of bankruptcy, without proof aliunde that any such writs were out, or that he was under any pressure from creditors. Ib.

B., being considerably indebted, left his house without leaving any money, and taking his tools and the greater part of his furniture, without saying why or where he was going, and leaving directions to that effect. He was in the same month duly declared bankrupt:—Held, a departing with intent to defeat or delay his creditors, and therefore an act of bankruptcy. Hobson v. Brown, 1 Jur., N. S. 920; S. P., Birch, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 659.

The act of bankruptcy, by leaving his house to avoid a creditor, without collusion, is complete at the instant of his departure; and therefore not affected by a subsequent residence with the petitioning creditor. Gardner, Ex parte, 1 Ves. & B. 45; 1 Rose, 377.

What a Dwelling-house.—A trader, who has no settled house or counting-house, but takes up a temporary abode at a public-house, in the place to which his business carries him, commits an act of bankruptcy by departing from such public-house with intent to delay his creditors. Holroyd v. Gwynne, 2 Taunt. 176; 1 Rose, 113.

Partners.—Where there were two partners, one of whom resided in Manchester and the other in London, and the London partner having left his own home without intent to delay his creditors, and having been a few days on a visit at Manchester, both of them left the house of business there to avoid an arrest, at the same time carrying their books of account along with them:—Held, that they both thereby committed an act of bankruptcy. Spencer v. Billing, 3 Camp. 314; 1 Rose, 362.

Debtor must be shewn to be Alive.]—A petitioning creditor, who alleges that his debtor has committed an act of bankruptcy, by departing from his dwelling-house with intent to defeat and delay his creditors, is bound to shew that the debtor is alive and in some other place. Geisel, Ex parte, Stanger, In re, 22 Ch. D. 436; 48 L. T. 408; 31 W. R. 264—C. A.

Cause of Departure.]—Leaving his house to avoid his creditors is a sufficient act of bankruptcy, though no creditor called in his absence. Hammond v. Hicks, 5 Esp. 139; S. P., Wydown's case, 14 Ves. 86.

A departure to avoid an arrest is an act of bankruptcy. Warner v. Barber, 175.

Though under a groundless apprehension. Bamford, Ex parte, 15 Ves. 447; S. P., Newman v. Stretch, M. & M. 338.

Domestic Dissensions.]—And where a trader departs from his dwelling-house on account of domestic dissensions, if he makes no arrangement for carrying on his business in his absence, and he foresees that, as a necessary consequence, his establishment must be broken up, and his creditors must be delayed, which events accordingly happen, he thereby commits an act of bankruptcy. Holroyd v. Whitehead, 3 Camp. 530; 2 Rose, 145; S. P., Vincent v. Prater, 4 Taunt. 603; 2 Rose, 275.

Question for Jury.]—Where a trader, whose goods are under seizure, quits his home, it is for a jury to say whether he departs with the bona fide intention to endeavour to procure the means of removing the execution, or, whether, having gone for that purpose, he stays away for the purpose of avoiding his creditors. Batchelor v. Vyse, 4 M. & Scott, 552; 1 M. & Rob. 331.

Intention must be Absolute.]—Semble, that in order to constitute an act of bankruptcy by departing from the dwelling-house, the departure must be with an absolute intent to delay creditors. If only with intent to delay creditors in case a particular event occurs, and that event does not occur, it is not an act of bankruptcy. Fisher v. Boucher, 10 B. & C. 705.

Intention is Essential.]—A petition against a trader which alleges as an act of bankruptcy that he has departed from his dwelling-house or otherwise absented himself, must allege that he did so with intent to defeat or delay his creditors, otherwise the petition will be demurrable, and must be dismissed. Such a defect is a matter of substance, not a merely formal defect, and it cannot be cured by amendment. Coates, Ex parte, Shelton, In re, 5 Ch. D. 979; 37 L. T. 43; 25 W. R. 800—C. A. Affirming, 36 L. T. 806.

"Being a Trader"—Assignment of Business.]—The act of bankruptcy, alleged in a petition, was that the debtor had, being a trader, departed from his dwelling-house or otherwise absented himself with intent to defeat or delay his creditors. As a fact the debtor, who had been in trade, upon the 4th of October, 1882, executed an assignment of his business, and later on in the same day left his place of business and went abroad:—Held, that upon the execution of the deed of assignment of his business, the debtor ceased to be a trader. Reynolds, Ex parte, Reynolds, In re (No. 2), 52 L. J., Ch. 431; 47 L. T. 448; 31 W. R. 323.

"Trader"—Discontinuance of Trade with Intention of resuming it.]—If a debtor, who has been a trader, is not actually carrying on trade at the time when it is alleged by a petitioning creditor that he has done or omitted to do that, the doing or omission of which would be an act of bankruptcy only if it was done or omitted by a trader, it is a question of intention, to be decided on the evidence, whether the debtor has permanently ceased to trade, or has only temporarily discontinued his trade with the intention of resuming it. In the latter case he is still a trader within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act. The law on this point is still as it was laid down in Paterson, Ex parte (1 Rose, 402), and Cundy, Ex parte (2 Rose, 357). Salaman, Ex parte, Taylor, In re, 21 Ch. D. 394; 47 L. T. 495; 31 W. R. 282—C. A.

Proof of Intention—Declarations by Debtor.]—A declaration by a bankrupt of his motives for absenting himself from his home, made at the time, is evidence in an action by the assignees against a creditor of the bankrupt, in order to prove the act of bankruptcy. Bateman v. Bailey, 5 T. R. 512.

But the declarations of a trader, made shortly after an absence, are not admissible to prove such absence an act of bankruptcy. Lees v. Marton, 1 M. & Rob. 210.

The declaration of a bankrupt on his return, that he had absented himself to avoid a writ against him, is sufficient evidence of an act of bankruptcy, without any other proof of the existence of the writ, or of the debt on which it was founded, or of the creditor of the bankrupt. Newman v. Stretch, M. & M. 388.

Letters Written before Departure.]—A trader, in embarrassed circumstances, absented himself from his house from the 16th of February till the 9th of March. Upon an issue, whether he had committed an act of bankruptcy on or before the 5th of March, two letters, written by him on the 16th of January preceding, asking for time on two bills of exchange, payable by him in February, were receivable to shew the motive of his absence. Smith v. Cramer, 1 Scott, 541; 1 Bing. N. C. 1; 1 Hodges, 124.

Letters found in Debtor's Possession.]—Letters bearing post-marks before the act of bankruptcy, and found in the alleged bankrupt's possession after it, containing statements of matters material to the act of bankruptcy, are admissible, without calling the writer as evidence against the alleged bankrupt, to shew that he received intimation of these facts, though not to prove their truth. Cotton v. James, M. & M. 373; 3 C. & P. 505.

Evidence—Solicitor and Client.]—Where a trader, at the suggestion of his attorney, called a meeting of his creditors, to be held at a given time and place, and on the morning of that day went to the attorney's office, and inquired of him whether he could safely attend the meeting without being arrested for debt; the attorney having advised him to remain at the office, until it was ascertained whether the creditors would engage to give him a safe conduct; the trader remained at the office accordingly, for upwards of two hours, to avoid being arrested by some or one of his creditors, until after the attorney had attended at and returned from the meeting:—Held, that what passed between the attorney and the trader was admissible in evidence, upon an issue whether the latter had committed an act of bankruptcy on that occasion. Bramwell v. Lucas, 4 D. & R. 367; 2 B. & C. 745.

— Evidence—Subsequent Conduct of Debtor. ]

—Upon an issue directed to try whether P. had committed an act of bankruptcy on a given day, it appeared that on the preceding day he sent a letter from his dwelling-house at Greenwich to his place of business addressed to his son, stating that he was unable to meet his engagements, and desiring that he might be denied to any creditor who might call, and immediately after despatching this letter he left home, and remained absent during the whole of that and the following day. A witness proved that P. called on the day in question at her brother's house in London; that he expressed to her an apprehension of being sent to the Fleet, and stated that he was in no hurry to get home, and would not go very early, as he had creditors who would lay hold of him, and that he did not leave till after dark. The jury were told, that if they believed the statements made by the witness, P. on that occasion committed an act of bankruptcy; they said they did believe the witness, but they did not think P. spoke bonâ fide:—Held, that P. had committed an act of bankruptcy; and that evidence of his conduct and conversations, on the day subsequent to the date mentioned in the issue, was not admissible to explain his conduct on that day. Johnston v. Woolf, 2 Scott, 372.

— Question of Fact. ]—Whether a departing the dwelling-house is accompanied with an intent to delay a creditor, is a question of fact for a jury to decide upon all the circumstances. Aldridge v. Ireland, 1 Taunt. 273, n.

c. Otherwise Absenting.

From what Place. ]—Absenting, unless from the place of abode or place of business, or to avoid a creditor, is not an act of bankruptcy. Bernasconi v. Farebrother, 10 B. & C. 549; 5 M. & R. 364.

But a trader does commit an act of bankruptcy by absenting himself from some place at which he would, in the ordinary course of his life and business, be expected to be found, or at which he has appointed to meet particular creditors. Id.

Where a man, in the habit of frequenting the Exchange to collect news, left it at the sight of a creditor, desiring a friend to say he was not there, it is an act of bankruptcy. Gimingham v. Laing, 2 Marsh. 236; 6 Taunt. 532; 2 Rose, 472.

Intention must be Absolute. ]—If a trader, fearful that he may receive an unpleasant letter from a creditor, quits his house, and desires the letter to be forwarded to him at a turnpike; and if the letter was unfavourable, it was not his intention to return; but, if favourable, it was his intention to proceed on his regular business; and the letter which is favourable is forwarded, and he proceeds on his regular business, it is not an act of bankruptcy. Fisher v. Boucher, 10 B. & C. 705.

What an Absenting. ]—A creditor called upon a bankrupt by appointment. The bankrupt left the room and did not return, and his wife told the creditor he had gone out:—Held, that this was sufficient evidence to warrant the jury in inferring that the bankrupt left the house for the purpose of avoiding his creditor. Charrington v. Brown, 11 Moore, 341.

A trader left a message at his house for a creditor, who had in his absence called for a debt, that he could spare no money, and would not pay him that day, and would go out of the way and stay till dinner time:—Held, that it was for the jury to consider, whether he absented himself to delay the creditor; and this evidence warranted their conclusion that he did not. Vincent v. Prater, 4 Taunt. 603; 2 Rose, 275.

Where a trader went to his neighbour, and told him that he expected to be arrested, and while he remained there, was informed that a sheriff's officer was going towards his house, upon which he concealed himself in the back room, and desired his neighbour to watch; and when told that the officer had gone past his house, and had left the street, immediately returned home:—Held, that this was an act of bankruptcy, within the words "otherwise absenting himself to the intent to delay creditors," although it appeared not only that no creditor was delayed, but that none could possibly be delayed. Chenoweth v. Hay, 1 M. & S. 676; S. C., nom. Chenoweth v. Hayley, 2 Rose, 137.

Where a trader, at the suggestion of his attorney, called a meeting of his creditors, to be held at a given time and place, and on the morning of that day went to the attorney's office, and inquired of him whether he could safely attend the meeting without being arrested for debt; the attorney having advised him to remain at the office until it was ascertained whether the creditors would engage to give him a safe conduct; the trader remained at the office accordingly for upwards of two hours, to avoid being arrested by some or one of his creditors, until after the attorney had attended at and returned from the meeting:—Held, that he had committed an act of bankruptcy on that occasion. Bramwell v. Lucas, 4 D. & R. 367; 2 B. & C. 745.

Where a trader, upon being arrested, escaped from the officer, and fled into the house of another, and was pursued by the officer, and inquired for at the house, but was denied, and the door kept fast, and, whilst he remained there, declared that he did it for fear of other creditors; and when it was dark returned home to his own house, and gave directions to deny him to any one who called, and continued nearly a month in his bedchamber:—Held, that this constituted an act of bankruptcy, under the words

"otherwise absenting himself." Bayley v. Sheffield, 1 M. & S. 338; 2 Rose, 100.

A trader abstaining from going to a particular place through the apprehension of process (whether such apprehension is well-founded or not), thereby absents himself with intent to delay his creditors, and commits an act of bankruptcy. Robson v. Rolfe, 2 M. & Scott, 786; 9 Bing. 648.

— Closing Doors and Windows.—If bankers close the doors and windows of the bank, it seems to be an act of bankruptcy by absenting. Cumming v. Bailey, 6 Bing. 363; 4 M. & P. 36.

— Remaining Absent.—One of three partners, bankers, left his house at Bath, and went to London to raise funds; and having failed in his efforts to do so, he remained there three days:—Held, that the jury were warranted in finding that he absented himself with an intent to delay his creditors. Ib.

Where a trader at B. left her dwelling-house and went to London, for the purpose of persuading a creditor to withdraw his execution, and left word of the place to which she had gone, but, failing to procure the withdrawing of the execution, did not return to her dwelling-house:—Held, that this was no act of bankruptcy. Aldridge v. Ireland, 3 Dougl. 397; 1 Taunt. 273, n.

— Breaking an Appointment.—The mere failure to keep an appointment made with a creditor is not an act of bankruptcy. Key v. Shaw, 1 M. & Scott, 462; 8 Bing. 320; S. P., Tuleman v. Jones, 9 Moore, 24; S. C., nom. Tucker v. Jones, 2 Bing. 2; Loes v. Marton, 1 M. & Rob. 210.

Where a man, in the habit of attending the Royal Exchange, broke an appointment he had made with a creditor to meet him there; or (being the proprietor of a theatre) retired behind the scenes to avoid a sheriff's officer, at the same time giving orders to be denied to him:—Held, that each of these was an act of bankruptcy. Gimingham v. Laing, 2 Marsh. 236; 6 Taunt. 532; 2 Rose, 472.

Where a debtor, upon applications made to him by creditors for payment of their debts, made appointments with them to meet him at specified times and places with reference to a settlement of their demands, but failed to keep such appointments:—Held, that the failures to keep the appointments constituted acts of bankruptcy, although the places at which the appointments were made were not his usual places of business. Russell v. Bell, 10 M. & W. 340.

A trader made an appointment with his creditor to call at the creditor's house on a particular day to make arrangements for taking up the trader's acceptance, falling due on that day; the trader failed to keep the appointment, and did not pay any money on account of the bill:—Held, the not keeping the appointment was an act of bankruptcy. O'Neill, In re, 9 Ir. Ch. Rep. 279.

The mere fact that a trader has failed to keep a promise which he has made to a creditor, that he will call at a specified time and pay him his debt, is not sufficient evidence of an absenting himself with intent to defeat or delay his creditors. Meyer, Ex parte, Stephany, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 188; 41 L. J., Bk. 33; 25 L. T. 733; 20 W. R. 173.

A debtor promised to call at an appointed time on a creditor and pay the debt. Having failed to procure the money he did not call; but he was to be found at his own place of business:—Held, that the failure to keep the appointment did not constitute an absenting himself with intent to defeat or delay the creditor, and that no act of bankruptcy had been committed. Ib.

— Absence on Business.—A trader absented himself for three or four days from his place of business, and in his absence a bill of exchange was presented for payment and was dishonoured; and application was also made for payment of other bills. The trader was adjudicated bankrupt, the act of bankruptcy being this absence with intent to delay his creditors. A commissioner in the country annulled the bankruptcy, the bankrupt swearing that his absence was occasioned by an attempt of his to get up evidence of perjury against one of his workmen, and to obtain pecuniary assistance. Pending this dispute as to the adjudication, the trader signed a declaration of insolvency. On appeal, the decision of the commissioner was affirmed, on the ground that there was not sufficient evidence to support the adjudication; but the court refused to allow the trader his costs, as his declaration of insolvency while applying to annul an adjudication was inconsistent with an honest desire for the equal distribution of his assets. Barney, Ex parte, 32 L. J., Bk. 41; 7 L. T. 488.

Two traders in partnership left their shop, and told their shopman that they were going out to endeavour to get some bills of exchange discounted, and directed him to say that they were not in the way, or to make some excuse for them in case a creditor should call. On that and the following day a creditor called, when they were both at home, and desired to see either one or the other of them; when the shopman denied them without being authorized by them so to do:—Held, that the jury were warranted in concluding that they absented themselves with an intent to delay their creditors. Cupper v. Desanges, 3 Moore, 4; S. C., nom. Deffe v. Desanges 8 Taunt. 671.

— Evidence as to Reason for Absenting.—A petition for adjudication against two partners alleged, as the act of bankruptcy, that they had absented themselves with intent to defeat or delay their creditors. This petition was directed to be heard forthwith. One had gone away only to take his wife and children to Paris, and returned immediately. He appeared when the petition was heard, admitted insolvency, but opposed the adjudication, stating that he wished to present a petition for liquidation, and he tendered evidence; but the registrar, on learning that it only related to the circumstances of his going abroad, disregarded it as immaterial, and adjudged the partners bankrupts:—Held, that this order could not be sustained, for that the 65th rule of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1870, only applies where the debtor is keeping out of the way so that the ordinary course of proceedings cannot be taken; and that, if he appears, he is entitled to insist on the proceedings being conducted in the ordinary course. Lopez, Ex parte, Brelaz, In re, 6 L. R., Ch. 894; 25 L. T. 403; 19 W. R. 1106.

made.]—Where the order to be denied is on one day, and the denial on another, the act of bankruptcy is on the latter day. Hawkes v. Sands, 3 Dougl. 429.

Denial by shutting up Doors.]—An act of bankruptcy by beginning to keep house, may be by closing the doors, without change of place or denial to creditors. Cumming v. Bailey, 6 Bing. 363; 4 M. & P. 36.

If bankers close the doors and windows of the bank, and their customers cannot obtain admission, and the jury find that they are so closed as to exclude the customers, and the bankers remain within, it is an act of bankruptcy by beginning to keep house. Ib.

By Partners.]—Where one of several partners in a bank, who resided at the place of business, and was the only partner who transacted the business (the others residing at a distance), shut up the banking-house, and absented himself from it and stopped payment:—Held, that this was not evidence of a joint act of bankruptcy by all three. Mills v. Bennett, 2 M. & S. 556; 2 Rose, 269.

Denial at unseasonable Times.]—It is not an act of bankruptcy for a debtor to cause himself to be denied to a creditor calling by the debtor's appointment for payment on a Sunday. Preston, Ex parte, 2 Rose, 21; 2 Ves. & B. 311.

So, a denial, at a late hour, after retirement to rest, is not an act of bankruptcy. Hughes v. Gilman, 10 Moore, 480; 2 C. & P. 32.

If a trader is denied to a clerk of a creditor, at his shop, it appearing by the evidence that the shop was shut up for the evening, but at an earlier hour than usual; it is proper to be left to the jury to say, whether the bankrupt had himself denied, to delay his creditor; or whether it was because the clerk called at an unseasonable hour. Ib.

At what Place.]—A creditor has a right to call upon his debtor for money due to him, at the lodgings of the latter, or any other place where he knows he may be found, although it is not his place of business; and a denial to a creditor there is equally an act of bankruptcy, as though he were denied at his place of business. Park v. Prosser, 1 C. & P. 176.

Although the debtor is always accessible at his place of business in London. Ib.

Where a country trader was in the habit of coming up occasionally to London, and staying a day or two at a friend's house, where he wrote his letters, and used to order goods to be sent to him there; a creditor of his lived in the same street; he told his friend not to inform the creditor that he was in town, because the latter would be asking him for his money; and shortly afterwards the creditor called at the house upon business, whereupon the bankrupt went into a back warehouse for ten minutes or a quarter of an hour, to avoid seeing him:—Held, that this was a beginning to keep house. Curtis v. Willes, 4 D. & B. 224; R. & M. 58; 1 C. & P. 211.

To what Creditor.]—The denial should be to a creditor; but a denial to several persons, who a witness proved had called frequently, and who he believed were creditors, but could not

Denial.]—A trader, having a creditor who called for money, was seen peeping over his partition another occasion, seeing a creditor behind a partition at the shop, and his wife coming forward, and he was not at home:—Held, that a creditor directed to consider whether he was in his house; had wilfully secreted himself, had withdrawn himself from the house where he was likely to be seen by a more retired part. Key v. Key, 1 M. & Scott, 462.

A debtor himself denied to a creditor frequently, and he does not come forward, remaining quiescent is from an act of bankruptcy, it is an act of bankruptcy, although he has given no direction to the creditor. Moon, M. & M. 458.

Bankruptcy is complete when Denial is in fact say whether they were or not, is evidence to go to the jury. Jameson v. Eamer, 1 Esp. 381.

A denial to a collector of queen's taxes is an act of bankruptcy; as a denial to him is equivalent to a denial to any other creditor. Sanderson v. Laforest, 1 C. & P. 46; S. P., Jeffs v. Smith, 2 Taunt. 401; 1 Rose, 117.

So, a denial to the collector of church and highway rates, who called for assessments due from him, after he had given a general order to his wife to be denied to all comers, is an act of bankruptcy. Lloyd v. Heathcote, 5 Moore, 129; 2 B. & B. 388.

It has been held not to be an act of bankruptcy in a trader who denies himself, when at home, to a creditor who merely demands payment of a debt, but does not ask to see him personally. Dudley v. Vaughan, 1 Camp. 271; 9 East, 491.

The denial to a creditor who called, not for money, but to buy goods, meaning to take his debt out in that way, is an act of bankruptcy. Harris, Ex parte, 2 Rose, 67.

A denial to a clerk of a creditor, who only asks to see the debtor, but does not ask for money, is an act of bankruptcy, if in fact the clerk did, to the knowledge of the debtor, call for money. Hughes v. Gilman, 10 Moore, 480; 2 C. & P. 32.

If a trader denies himself to a person, who desires that he may be told that a certain bill of exchange, mentioning the particulars of it, is dishonoured, and that he wishes to see him in consequence, such denial is an act of bankruptcy, without further proof of the party's being a creditor, if the jury believe that the bankrupt so considered him. Bleasby v. Crossley, 3 Bing. 430; 2 C. & P. 213.

So is a denial to a servant, calling for a debt by the direction of the acknowledged agent of the creditor, and by the appointment of the debtor. Bamford, Ex parte, 15 Ves. 449.

A trader bought goods to be paid for by bill. A few days after the goods had been delivered the seller called and demanded a return of his goods, and at the same time threatened to have the trader arrested for swindling in taking in the goods when he knew he was in insolvent circumstances. He requested to see the trader, who refused to see him:—Held, not sufficient to raise a presumption of a beginning to keep house with intent to delay a creditor, so as to constitute an act of bankruptcy. Clements v. McKibben, 2 H. & N. 62.

e. Lying in Prison or Escaping therefrom.

Before 6 Geo. 4, c. 16.]—The lying in prison under 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 2, meant two months of actual uninterrupted imprisonment. Barnard v. Palmer, 1 Camp. 509.

Where a person lay in prison two months for debt, subsequently to a criminal process which had been discharged:—Held, that this constituted an act of bankruptcy, though it did not appear that he had personal notice of his discharge. Rez v. Page, 3 Moore, 666; 1 B. & B. 308; 7 Price, 616.

Where a person was arrested, but on account of illness was permitted to remain a few days in his own house, in the custody of the officer's follower, who was not named in the warrant, but who kept the key of the house in his possession, and he was then removed to gaol, where he continued for the remainder of two months:—Held, that this was a legal imprisonment, so as to constitute an act of bankruptcy. Stevens v. Jackson, 1 Marsh. 469; 6 Taunt. 106; 4 Camp. 164; 2 Rose, 285.

For what Debt.]—A penalty due to the crown was a debt within the 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 2; and, therefore, where a trader lay in prison more than two months, being unable to pay Exchequer penalties for smuggling, he committed an act of bankruptcy. Cobb v. Symonds, 5 B. & A. 516.

When Act of Bankruptcy complete.]—The act of bankruptcy, by lying in prison twenty-one days, did not relate to the first day of imprisonment, under the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 5, but only to the last of them. Moser v. Newman, 6 Bing. 556; 4 M. & P. 333; S. P., Higgins v. McAdam, 3 Y. & J. 1; Tucker v. Barrow, 3 C. & P. 85; M. & M. 137.

Where a trader was arrested on the 20th of March, committed to prison on the 21st of April, and discharged from prison on the 26th of May:—Held, that an adjudication of bankruptcy against him upon a petition filed on the 20th of May in the following year could not be supported, such lying in prison not having been an act of bankruptcy within twelve months previously to the filing of the petition, within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 69. Wallace v. Blackwell, 3 Drew. 538; 25 L. J., Ch. 644; 2 Jur., N. S. 656.

3. ACTS OF BANKRUPTCY RELATING TO THE PROPERTY OF THE DEBTOR.

a. Generally.

Under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, similar to 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106.]—The words "either within this realm or elsewhere" were inserted, because under 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, a person resident in India, and trading there, drawing bills upon England for the value of other bills sent thither, did not commit an act of bankruptcy by assigning, while resident in India, all his effects in trust for creditors. Inglis v. Grant, 5 T. R. 530.

The word "fraudulent" applies to each of the words "gift," "delivery," and "transfer." Cook v. Caldecott, 4 C. & P. 315; M. & M. 522.

The word "delivery" is of very general signification; but, being connected with the words "gift or transfer," it seems that, in interpretation, it must be confined to transactions of the same nature. Cotton v. James, M. & M. 273; 3 C. & P. 505.

Property or Interest must pass.]—A delivery of goods to be an act of bankruptcy within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 67, must pass, or purport to pass, some property or interest in the goods. Leitt v. Beeston, 4 L. R., Ex. 169; 38 L. J., Ex. 89; 20 L. T. 371; 17 W. R. 620.

Deed not Void against future Creditors.]—A deed for the transfer of a trader's property is not void as against future creditors, although the execution of it is an act of bankruptcy. Oswald v. Thompson, 2 Ex. 215; 17 L. J., Ex. 234.

Deed must be read as a whole.—Upon the question whether the execution of a deed is an act of bankruptcy, one part of it cannot be separated from the rest. Snowball, Ex parte, Douglas, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 534; 41 L. J., Bk. 49; 26 L. T. 894; 20 W. R. 786.

Partners.—If one only of several partners executes a deed, which on the face of it purports to convey for himself and the other partners all their personal property, the deed operates to convey the share of that one, and where one of two partners executed such an assignment of the partnership property before, and the other did not execute it until after a fiat in bankruptcy had issued:—Held, in the absence of anything to shew that the deed was delivered as an escrow, that the former had committed an act of bankruptcy. Bowker v. Burdekin, 11 M. & W. 128; 12 L. J., Ex. 329.

An assignment by one of two insolvent partners of all his interest in the partnership assets to the other, in consideration of a covenant by the latter to pay all the partnership debts, is an act of bankruptcy, and is fraudulent and void as against their joint creditors. Mayou, Ex parte, 11 Jur., N. S. 433; 12 L. T. 254; 13 W. R. 629—C. A.

Where one partner makes a fraudulent grant by deed to another partner, it is an act of bankruptcy in the former, but not in the latter. Whitwell v. Thompson, 1 Esp. 68.

Power to sell Debtor's Goods.—McF., shortly before being made a bankrupt, being indebted to the defendant, gave him a bill for the amount and the power of selling, in case the bill was not met at the end of seven days, certain brandies which comprised all McF.'s property and which had been previously landed by the defendant and warehoused in his name and at his expense. This item was included in the bill:—Held, that the transaction was not an act of bankruptcy, not being "a conveyance, gift, transfer, or delivery" within the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 6, sub-s. 2. Philps v. Hornstedt, 1 Ex. D. 62. Affirming, 8 L. R., Ex. 26; 42 L. J., Ex. 12; 21 W. R. 174. But see Cooper, Ex parte, Baum, In re, 10 Ch. D. 313; 48 L. J., Bk. 54; 39 L. T. 523; 27 W. R. 299—C. A.

Family Settlements.—A solicitor and money scrivener, being in insolvent circumstances, upon his marriage with a woman with whom he had for seven years previously cohabited, by a deed of settlement and articles of agreement executed prior to the marriage, conveyed and assigned his real and personal estate to trustees, for his wife, with a joint power of appointment among the children of the marriage (including an illegitimate daughter), but reserving no interest to himself; immediately after the marriage the power was exercised in favour of the illegitimate daughter. The property remained under the control of the husband; and, within two months after the marriage, a fiat issued against him:—Held, that the settlement was itself an act of bankruptcy; and void as against the assignees. Colombine v. Penhall, 1 Sm. & G. 228.

Sale of Goods.—A fair and bona fide sale of the whole of a trader's property is not of itself an act of bankruptcy. Rose v. Haycock, 3 N. & M. 645; 1 A. & E. 460.

A party who impeaches the sale of the whole of a bankrupt's property must shew some facts from which fraud may be inferred. Ib.

A sale by a trader of his goods at prices considerably below their marketable value, is not of itself a fraudulent transfer. Lee v. Hart, 11 Ex. 880; 25 L. J., Ex. 135; 2 Jur., N. S. 308—Ex. Ch.

To render the transaction fraudulent, the seller must have intended by such sale to defeat or delay his creditors, and the purchaser must have had reason to know that such was the object of the seller. Ib.

If a trader raises money by selling his goods at an under value (not for the purpose of carrying on his business, but in contemplation of stopping payment, and for the purpose of cheating his creditors), to one who has notice, either by express information, or from the nature of the transaction that he is selling his goods, not in order to carry on his business, but with a fraudulent intention, the sale is an act of bankruptcy, and void, and the assignees may recover the goods from the purchaser. Froser v. Lery, 6 H. & N. 16.

A sale of the whole of a trader's stock-in-trade, with an intention to abscond with the money and cheat his creditors, to a bona fide purchaser, who is ignorant of the trader's design, is not an act of bankruptcy. Baxter v. Pritchard, 3 N. & M. 638; 1 A. & E. 456.

A sale by a trader in insolvent circumstances, and on the eve of bankruptcy, of his stock-in-trade and the bulk of his property to one of his creditors, the consideration being in part an old debt, is not per se an act of bankruptcy, though the effect is to stop the trading. Hell v. Simpson, 2 H. & N. 410; 26 L. J., Ex. 363.

A creditor, who had recovered judgment against a trader for a sum exceeding 50*l.*, issued execution, and the sheriff seized six horses belonging to the debtor. It was afterwards agreed between the creditor (who knew that the debtor was insolvent) and the debtor, that the sheriff should withdraw, and that the debtor should sell the horses to the creditor for a sum just large enough to cover the debt and the amount of the sheriff's charges, the debtor continuing in possession of the horses and paying so much a day for the use of them:—Held, that this transaction was a fraudulent transfer of a part of the debtor's property, within the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 6, sub-s. 2. Pearson, Ex parte, Mortimer, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 667; 42 L. J., Bk. 44; 28 L. T. 796; 21 W. R. 688.

Voluntary Preference of Creditor.—A voluntary preference of a creditor, though it can be set aside as a fraud on the bankruptcy law, is not an act of bankruptcy. Stubbins, Ex parte, Wilkinson, In re, 17 Ch. D. 58; 60 L. J., Ch. 547; 44 L. T. 877; 29 W. R. 653—C. A.

b. Fraudulent Surrender of Copyholds.

This was not, under 1 Jac. 1, c. 15, s. 2, an act of bankruptcy, because it was said it could not be done with intent to defeat or delay creditors, as they could not have execution of copyhold lands. Cockshot, Ex parte, 3 Bro. C. C. 502.

c. Fraudulent Execution.

Suffering Judgment by Default.—A person, by suffering judgment to go by default, does not procure his goods to be taken in execution, so as to be an act of bankruptcy, although his goods are afterwards taken in an execution sued out upon that judgment. Gibson v. King, Car. & M. 458.

Act not Complete until Seizure.—An act of bankruptcy, by procuring the party's own goods to be taken in execution, is not committed till the actual seizure. Belcher v. Gummow, 9 Q. B. 873; 16 L. J., Q. B. 155; 11 Jur. 286.

Bills of Exchange.—Under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 3, a party procuring bills of exchange, his property, to be taken in execution with intent to defeat creditors, after the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 12, committed an act of bankruptcy, though at the time when 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, passed, bills of exchange were not liable to be taken in execution. Edwards v. Cooper, 11 Q. B. 33.

Judgment for Debt accruing Due—Execution levied after Accrual of Debt.—In May, 1842, a tenant owed arrears of rent, and, on the pressing application of his landlord, executed a warrant of attorney for the amount of those arrears and of the current year's rent, upon the understanding that judgment was to be entered up thereon, and a fi. fa. delivered to the sheriff; but that it was not to be executed unless other writs against the tenant came to the sheriff's hands. In October, 1842, application was made to the tenant for payment of the rent, he being expressly informed that another year's rent had become due; and on that occasion he paid a sum on account, and undertook to pay the remainder before the Christmas following. In November, 1842, other writs against the tenant having come to the sheriff's hands, the fi. fa. issued on the judgment on the warrant of attorney was executed:—Held, that the giving of the warrant of attorney under the circumstances was not an act of bankruptcy by the tenant as a procuring of his goods to be taken in execution. Gore v. Lloyd, 12 M. & W. 463; 13 L. J., Ex. 366.

Execution not at Instance of Debtor.—A trader owed money to his brother, and the latter issued a fi. fa. and took the whole of the bankrupt's property. A commissioner considered that issuing the execution had not been at the instance of the bankrupt, and that, therefore, there had been no valid act of bankruptcy to support an adjudication under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 67. On appeal the court refused to interfere with the discretion of the commissioner. Boyd, Ex parte, 31 L. J., Bk. 6; 6 L. T. 142—L. J.

d. Giving Money or Security to Petitioning Creditor.

Assignees entitled to Recover.—The defendants on whose petition a fiat had issued received a payment from the bankrupt, whereby they obtained more in the pound than his other creditors.

The fiat not having been proceeded in was annulled, and another fiat issued on the petition of a creditor whose debt was due before the payment made to the defendants:—Held, that this payment was an act of bankruptcy within 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 8, in which the last fiat was sustainable, and that as no person had been appointed by the commissioners under that section to whom the money paid was to be returned by the defendants, the assignees of the bankrupt were entitled to recover it. Ellis v. Russell, 10 Q. B. 952; 16 L. J., Q. B. 428; 11 Jur. 821.

Payment made without Knowledge or Consent of Debtor.—An adjudication was made against a trader in 1861, which was afterwards annulled. Another adjudication was made in 1862. The act of bankruptcy on which the second adjudication was founded was the payment of 1,100*l.* to the party at whose instance the adjudication of 1861 was made, in settlement of his demand. The commissioner confirmed the adjudication of 1862. On appeal, the court (having called for other evidence than that which was before the commissioner) was of opinion that the payment of the 1,100*l.* not being proved to have been made by an agent on behalf or with the knowledge or assent of the bankrupt, was not a compounding with the petitioning creditor, within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 71, and annulled the adjudication. Scott Russell, In re, 31 L. J., Bk. 37; 6 L. T. 138—L. J.

e. Assignments for Benefit of Creditors.

Under old Law.—A deed, whereby a trader conveys all his property in trust to divide amongst his creditors, is an act of bankruptcy. Bourne, Ex parte, 16 Ves. 149; S. P., Smith, Ex parte, 1 Ves. & B. 518; 2 Rose, 63.

— Intent presumed.—So it is an act of bankruptcy, although, in so doing, he did not intend to defeat or delay his creditors, as that being the necessary consequence of the assignment, he must, in law, be taken to have intended it. Stewart v. Moody, 1 C., M. & R. 777; 5 Tyr. 493.

— Proviso for Avoidance.—So, though the creditors with whom such deed was in the first instance concerted, afterwards, and when it was executed, changed their purpose, unknown to the bankrupt, and intended to set it up as an act of bankruptcy. And such deed is operative, though it contains a proviso to be void, if the trustees think fit. Tappenden v. Burgess, 4 East, 230; 1 Smith, 33.

— Executed by Trader only.—So, an assignment by a trader of all his estate and effects, for the benefit of all his creditors, executed by the trader, but not executed by the trustee or by any creditor, or further acted on, is an act of bankruptcy. Botcherby v. Lancaster, 3 N. & M. 383; 1 A. & E. 77.

— Deed, whether Void for all Purposes.—Proviso in a lease for re-entry, and that the lease should be void if the lessee assigned without license. The lessee by deed assigned all his property, real and personal, to trustees, for the benefit of his creditors, and was afterwards de-

Act of Bankruptcy.—Held, that the deed of assignment was an act of bankruptcy and void. Wentley v. Bland, 5 D. & R. 35; 5 B. & C. 128.

In October, 1852, E., a trader, assigned to the plaintiff his household furniture and effects at his premises, as a security for money lent, and in default of payment to seize and take possession of the property thereby assigned, and all other goods, chattels and effects which might be found on the premises. In January, 1853, E. assigned all his estate and effects to trustees for the benefit of his creditors. In the following February the plaintiff seized the goods at the premises of E., and in March a fiat of bankruptcy issued against E., the act of bankruptcy being the assignment of his estate and effects to trustees. In an action by the plaintiff against the assignees for selling the goods so seized by them:—Held, that though the assignment by E. of his estate and effects to trustees was void as against creditors, yet it operated to transfer to the assignees the property not included in the assignment to the plaintiff, and so defeated his title, which would otherwise have been valid by the seizure. Carr v. Acraman, 11 Ex. 566; 25 L. J., Ex. 90.

Assignment of Bulk of Property.—An assignment of the principal part of the assignor's property may be an act of bankruptcy, although not executed by the assignor spontaneously, if it appears that the provisions of the deed must necessarily have the effect of delaying and defeating his creditors. Wensley, Ex parte, 1 De G. & M. 273; 32 L. J., Bk. 23; 9 Jur., N. S. 415; 7 L. T. 518; 11 W. R. 241.

Where such an assignment was made to trustees one of whom was an accountant employed with a view to and under the assignment, upon trust out of the proceeds of the property in the first place to pay all costs, charges and expenses due or to become due to the assignor's solicitor, and the professional charges of the accountant trustee, and other expenses, and subject thereto to divide the proceeds rateably among the creditors who should execute the deed, and the deed recited that the assignor was not prepared to pay his debts in full:—Held, that the necessary effect of the deed was to defeat and delay the creditors, and that it was an act of bankruptcy. Ib.

Execution of Assignment to be used in Case of Necessity.—A trader, being pressed by a particular creditor, who had issued a fi. fa. against his goods, under which the sheriff had seized, executed an assignment of all his estate and effects for the benefit of his creditors, and, in the presence of the party to whom the assignment was made, gave it to his attorney, in order that it might be used, if circumstances should render it necessary, as an act of bankruptcy:—Held, that the deed operated as a valid act of bankruptcy. Turner v. Hardcastle, 11 C. B., 158; 31 L. J., C. P. 193.

Under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134.—The registration of trust-deeds under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, ss. 192, 193, although in practice performed by the same officer, is distinct and has different operations; and where, for the want of the papers required by the orders, registration under the former section had been refused by the officer, and the applicant had registered the deed under s. 194:—

Held, that the registration did not prevent the deed, which was an assignment of all the debtor's property, from being an act of bankruptcy. Morgan, Ex parte, 1 De G., J. & S. 288.

Assignment of Part of Property.—A conveyance by a trader of part of his property for the benefit of his creditors, is not an act of bankruptcy, unless executed under circumstances of fraud; and mere conjecture of fraud, arising from extrinsic circumstances, will not be sufficient to affect the title under such conveyance. Cattell v. Corral, 4 Y. & C. 228.

A conveyance by a trader, for the benefit of his creditors, of his effects at a certain place is not an act of bankruptcy, unless it is shewn that he had no other effects. Chase v. Goble, 3 Scott, N. R. 245; 2 M. & G. 930.

Evidence—Unstamped Deed.—A deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors, not registered through want of the necessary assents, may be used, though unstamped, as evidence of an act of bankruptcy. Gouldwell, In re, Squire, Ex parte, 4 L. R. Ch. 47; 38 L. J., Bk. 13; 19 L. T. 272; 17 W. R. 40; overruling Potter, Ex parte, 3 De G., J. & S. 240; 34 L. J., Bk. 46; 11 Jur., N. S. 49; 11 L. T. 435; 13 W. R. 189.

Partners—Separate Creditors.—Where partners by deed, assigned all their partnership effects to trustees for the benefit of their creditors, and some of the separate creditors of one partner did not assent to it, the assignment was fraudulent and void, and an act of bankruptcy. Eckhardt v. Wilson, 8 T. R. 140.

A. and N. being in partnership, executed assignments of all their joint estate to mortgagees, and afterwards A. assigned all his separate estate and effects whatsoever, specifying them in detail, and "all other the estate and effects of him," A., unto a trustee to divide the proceeds arising from the sale amongst such of his separate creditors as should within one month become parties to and execute the deed. The deed was not registered under the Bills of Sale Act, 1854. Upon the day following the date of the last-mentioned deed a petition for adjudication was filed against A. and N., under which they were subsequently declared bankrupts, the acts of bankruptcy relied upon having been committed two or three days before the date of the last deed:—Held, that the last-mentioned deed was an act of bankruptcy, and a preference of separate creditors over the general body of creditors, and that the trustee under the deed was not entitled to the property as against the claims of the trustee under the bankruptcy. McLean, Ex parte, 24 L. T. 144.

rate creditors. Abbott v. Burbage, 2 Bing. N. C. 444; 2 Scott, 656; 1 Hodges, 448.

A partnership which existed between A. and B. was dissolved by mutual consent. A., being separately possessed of freehold and leasehold estates, after the dissolution conveyed them to trustees for sale or mortgage, and empowered them to execute such conveyances as they should think fit, for the purpose of converting his estates into money, in order to enable him to carry on his trade, and to pay his creditors their debts; and it was agreed, that such conveyances might be made and executed by the trustees with or without the concurrence of A., and that they should be seised or interested in the money arising from such sale or mortgage. At the time this deed was executed, A. had stock in trade, and other personal effects to a considerable amount, independently of the partnership assets, which were not sufficient to pay the partnership debts. The trustees were not creditors of either A. or his partner. A. and his partner afterwards gave C. & Co., who were not creditors of either, a power of attorney to make demands of every description, to examine and settle all the accounts, together with other powers to act for them, they agreeing to ratify whatever should be done under it. A deed was afterwards prepared by A. and his trustees, for the purpose of conveying all his freehold and leasehold estates previously conveyed to D. & Co. to sell or mortgage, with a view to raise 130,000*l.*, and 40,000*l.* in negotiable bills of exchange, and to indemnify the drawers and acceptors; but these sums were not advanced, nor were the bills drawn, or any other act done under the latter deed.—Held, that neither the execution of the first conveyance to his trustees, nor the power of attorney, under these circumstances, constituted an act of bankruptcy by A. Berney v. Davison, 4 Moore, 126; 1 B. & B. 408.

So, where such partners, being in insolvent circumstances, stopped payment on the 15th of February, 1819, and dissolved their partnership on that day: and A. being separately possessed of freehold and leasehold estates, conveyed the whole of them on the same day, by indentures of lease and release, to trustees in trust for sale or mortgage, for the purpose of converting such estates into money, it being convenient to A. to raise money at an early period: and subsequently to this conveyance, A. and B. gave a power of attorney to C. & Co. to recover all debts which should be due to them, together with full powers to act for them:—Held, that these circumstances did not constitute an act of bankruptcy by A. Berney v. Vyner, 4 Moore, 322; 1 B. & B. 482.

The separate assignments by partners of their separate estates to trustees for the benefit of their creditors, one of which assignments is registered under the Bankruptcy Act of 1861, and the other not, do not operate as a bankruptcy of the firm so as to bring into operation the provision of the Bankruptcy Act of 1849, s. 171, as to set-off for mutual credits. London, Bombay and Mediterranean Bank v. Narraway, 15 L. R., Eq. 93; 42 L. J., Ch. 329; 27 L. T. 572; 21 W. R. 318.

2. Assignment of Debtor's whole Property.

i. To Secure an Existing Debt.

Generally.—An assignment by a trader of all his estate, stock, and effects to one creditor is in VOL. I.

itself an act of bankruptcy, without any fraud on the part of the trader. Siebert v. Spooner, 1 M. & W. 714; 2 Gale, 135.

An assignment by a trader in insolvent circumstances of all his stock in trade to one creditor, is an act of bankruptcy. Oriental Bank Corporation v. Coleman, 3 Giff. 11; 30 L. J., Ch. 635; 4 L. T. 9; 9 W. R. 432.

The law that a conveyance of a man's whole property to secure a past debt, whether he is a trader or a non-trader, is an act of bankruptcy, has not been altered by the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. Wood, In re, Luckes, Ex parte, 7 L. R., Ch. 302; 41 L. J., Bk. 21; 26 L. T. 113; 20 W. R. 403.

What is whole Property.—Where a debtor, in consideration of a pre-existing debt, executes a bill of sale which is so extensive as to prevent him from carrying on his trade, and is calculated, to his knowledge, to defeat and delay his creditors, he thereby commits an act of bankruptcy, and the conveyance is void as against his assignees. Young v. Fletcher, 4 F. & F. 1081.

A tradesman mortgaged the freehold house in which he carried on his trade, being his only real estate, to secure an existing debt of 1,100*l.*, for which he was liable as surety, which exceeded the value of the mortgaged property. His other property was of very trifling amount. He was at the time liable as surety on a promissory note for 2,000*l.*, and afterwards the other makers having become insolvent, he was called upon for payment, and became bankrupt:—Held, that the mortgage was void as against the assignees in bankruptcy, as being an assignment made to defeat or delay creditors. Goodricke v. Taylor, 2 De G., J. & S. 135; 10 Jur., N. S. 414; 10 L. T. 113; 12 W. R. 632. Affirming, 2 H. & M. 380; 9 L. T. 604; 12 W. R. 301.

A trader conveyed all his property, except his furniture and book debts, to a creditor for securing a previously-existing debt:—Held, that, notwithstanding the reservation, the deed was fraudulent and void, inasmuch as it placed the bulk of his property out of the reach of his other creditors. Fozley, Ex parte, Nurse, In re, 3 L. R., Ch. 515; 13 L. T. 862; 16 W. R. 831.

Pension not Assigned.—A debtor executed as security for an antecedent debt of 1,500*l.*, an assignment which included all his property of any appreciable value, except a pension of 10*s.* 6*d.* a day to which he was entitled as a retired servant of the East India Company:—Held, that as this pension would not pass to a trustee in bankruptcy, and could not be taken in execution by a creditor, it constituted no substantial exception from the assignment, which, being an assignment of substantially the whole of the debtor's property, was an act of bankruptcy. Hawker, Ex parte, Keely, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 214; 41 L. J., Bk. 34; 26 L. T. 54; 20 W. R. 322.

Lease and Book Debts not Assigned.—A trader assigned all her stock-in-trade, fixtures, goods, chattels and effects, in or about her place of business, to secure an antecedent debt of 200*l.* The bill of sale included goods subsequently acquired for the purposes of the business, and was expressed to be in consideration of further future advances, but contained no agreement for making such advances. The lease of the shop and the book debts were not included in the bill of sale. Upon the trader's bankruptcy shortly afterwards, the excepted property realized about the same amount as that included in the bill of sale:—Held, that the lease and book debts formed a substantial exception, and that the bill of sale was not void as an assignment of the debtor's whole property on the eve of bankruptcy. Bolland, Ex parte, Price, In re, 41 L. J., Bk. 60; 20 W. R. 862.

Motive for Assignment Immaterial.]—Where a debtor assigns his whole property as a security for a past debt only, it is an act of bankruptcy, whatever the motives of the parties may have been. If there is a further advance, it is not a question whether the further advance is great or small, but whether there was a bona fide intention of carrying on the business. Ellis, Ex parte, Ellis, In re, 2 Ch. D. 797; 45 L. J., Bk. 159; 34 L. T. 705—C. A.

Bill of Sale—Renewal.]—An advance of 55l. was made to a trader, on the security of bills of sale of all the goods and effects of the trader, which were valued at 600l. There was an agreement between the lender and the trader that the bills of sale should be from time to time renewed, so as to render it not necessary to register them. The bills were accordingly renewed every nineteen days, and this was done three times. The trader then became bankrupt:—Held, that the last bills of sale were invalid, as constituting an act of bankruptcy. Cohen, Ex parte, Sparke, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 20; 41 L. J., Bk. 17; 25 L. T. 473; 20 W. R. 69.

A bill of sale of the whole of the mortgagor's property, given by way of renewal of a former one not registered, is, if no fresh advance is made by the mortgagee, an act of bankruptcy, and void, as against the trustee in bankruptcy of the mortgagor, notwithstanding its registration in due time. Stevens, Ex parte, Stevens, In re, 20 L. R., Eq. 786; 44 L. J., Bk. 136; 33 L. T. 135; 23 W. R. 908.

The forbearance of the grantee under an unregistered bill of sale of the whole of the grantor's property, given for value, to seize the property comprised in it is not, as against the trustee in bankruptcy of the grantor, good consideration for the giving of a new bill of sale in lieu of the first, but the new bill of sale given under such circumstances without any fresh advance to the grantor is an act of bankruptcy, and void as against the trustee in bankruptcy of the grantor. Payne, Ex parte, Cross, In re, 11 Ch. D. 539; 40 L. T. 296; 27 W. R. 368.

Consideration wrongly stated.]—A. being indebted to several creditors, assigned to one of them, B., all his property by a bill of sale, nominally for further advances of goods, but really for the debt already due. Three days later, C., another creditor, applied to A. for payment of his debt, and was told that all the property on the premises was already assigned to B. for 90l. which he owed him. C. then accepted goods for which he gave no receipt. On the fourth day, B., who had made no further advance of goods, took possession under the bill of sale, and sold off soon afterwards. W., also a creditor, filed a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy against A., but which was not proceeded with, A. having agreed to execute a deed of assignment to trustees of all his estates and effects (being the proceeds of the bill of sale and the furniture). In an action by the trustees against C. for the goods received by him:—Held, first, that the bill of sale to B. was an act of bankruptcy. Topping v. Keynall, 16 C. B., N. S. 258; 33 L. J., C. P. 225; 10 Jur., N. S. 774; 10 L. T. 526; 12 W. R. 756.

Held, secondly, that the statement by A. to C. was notice to C. of an act of bankruptcy. Id.

Held, thirdly, that the trustees under the deed were entitled to recover the goods assigned to C. Id.

From Sheriff.]—A trader being in difficulties, and having five executions against him, all his goods were conveyed to the defendant by a bill of sale from the sheriff, with an understanding that they should remain in A.'s premises to enable him to repurchase them; the jury having found that the object of the transaction was not merely to relieve A. from a forced sale of his goods, but also to protect them from the demands of other creditors:—Held, that the transaction was an act of bankruptcy. Graham v. Furber, 14 C. B. 410; 2 C. & P. 452; 23 L. J., C. P. 51; 18 Jur. 226.

Security for Judgment Debt.]—Execution was levied upon goods on the premises of a trader, who was in insolvent circumstances and had ceased to carry on his trade, for a debt exceeding 50l. The trader executed a bill of sale, by which he mortgaged all his stock in trade and effects to secure the judgment debt, and the sheriff withdrew:—Held, that whatever might have been the case before the passing of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, s. 73, the bill of sale was an act of bankruptcy, for it prevented the creditors from treating the seizure and sale as an act of bankruptcy and obtaining a distribution of the property seized by means of an adjudication in bankruptcy; and that any benefit which might be expected to arise from postponing a forced sale was a benefit only to the execution creditor, and not to the rest of the creditors, who took no benefit under the security. Woodhouse v. Murray, 2 L. R., Q. B. 634; 36 L. J., Q. B. 289; 16 L. T. 559; 15 W. R. 1109; 8 B. & S. 464. Affirmed, 4 L. R., Q. B. 27; 38 L. J., Q. B. 28; 19 L. T. 570; 17 W. R. 206; 9 B. & S. 720—Ex. Ch.

Partners—Assignment of all Personal Property of One Partner.]—One of two partners in trade assigned the whole of his separate assets, and gave a power of attorney to assign all his personal property as security for a previously-existing separate debt. The partnership was at this time insolvent:—Held, that the execution of the deed was an act of bankruptcy, notwithstanding the fact that none of the partnership assets were in terms included in the deed. Trevor, Ex parte, Burghardt, In re, 1 Ch. D. 297; 45 L. J., Bk. 27; 33 L. T. 756; 24 W. R. 301.

Assignment of Partnership Assets—Separate Debt.]—It is a fraud upon the creditors of a firm for one of the partners, who knows that the firm is insolvent, to assign the partnership assets as security for his own private debt, or for future advances to be made to himself. Such an assignment necessarily tends to defeat the creditors of the partnership and is void as an act of bankruptcy. Snobball, Ex parte, Douglas, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 534; 41 L. J., Bk. 49; 26 L. T. 894; 20 W. R. 786.

Such an assignment will be void altogether as an act of bankruptcy, notwithstanding the fact that it is made a security as well for partnership as for private debts. Id.

ii. To Secure an Existing Debt and Present Advances.

Seventeen months before his bankruptcy a trader assigned by deed all his estate and effects by way of security for the repayment of a sum due, and a further advance of a moderate amount:—Held, that, under the circumstances, the deed was not void under 13 Eliz. c. 5, or as an act of bankruptcy. Allen v. Bonnett, 5 L. R., Ch. 577; 23 L. T. 437.

Semble, also, that even if there had not been a further advance, the lapse of twelve months before the bankruptcy prevented the deed from being invalidated as an act of bankruptcy. Id.

Advance to pay Costs of Assignment.—An assignment by a trader of all his property, book debts and stock in trade, in consideration of an old debt of 530*l.*, the only present advance being 20*l.* to pay the trader's attorney the costs of the assignment, amounts to a fraud in the eye of the law, and is an act of bankruptcy, notwithstanding that it was in fact, as between the parties to it, a perfectly fair and bona fide transaction. Penson v. Moon, 15 L. T. 444.

Book debts due to the bankrupt paid to a third party under such an assignment belong to the assignee of the bankruptcy, and may be recovered by him in an action for money had and received. Id.

Right to Seize all after-acquired Property.—A trader, in consideration of a past debt of 240*l.* and a present advance of 200*l.*, conveyed by deed substantially the whole of his property, giving the transferee a right to seize and take all future acquired property, even though it should be purchased with the money which was alleged to be the consideration for the transfer:—Held, that inasmuch as the trader got no equivalent for any part of the stock transferred, and such transfer necessarily defeated and delayed his creditors, though without fraud in fact, it constituted an act of bankruptcy. Graham v. Chapman, 12 C. B. 85; 21 L. J., C. P. 173.

A bill of sale to secure an existing debt and a present advance, which assigns the whole of the grantor's property, including that which he may purchase by means of the advance, is not necessarily void as an act of bankruptcy. Graham v. Chapman (12 C. B. 85) on this point overruled. Hawswell, Ex parte, Hemingway, In re, 23 Ch. D. 626; 52 L. J., Ch. 737; 43 L. T. 742; 31 W. R. 711—C. A.

— With an exception.—A bill of sale including all the existing property of a trader and containing a power to seize all after-acquired property with an exception, was made by him in favour of a creditor, in consideration partly of an existing debt and partly of a sum advanced by such creditor. This advance consisted of a sum paid to another creditor in satisfaction of a debt secured by a previous bill of sale over the same property, for the purpose of redeeming the property which he had already seized under such bill. More than twelve months after the date of the previous bill of sale proceedings were taken for a liquidation of the debtor's affairs by arrangement, and a trustee was appointed:—Held, that the later bill of sale was not an act of bankruptcy. Lomas v. Buxton, 6 L. R., C. P. 107; 40 L. J., C. P., 150; 24 L. T. 137; 19 W. R. 441.

Promise to give Bill of Sale.—When a sum of money is advanced upon the faith of a promise by the debtor to give a bill of sale of his property, the sum so advanced is to be considered as advanced upon the security of the bill of sale; but in such a case the promise must be an absolute one. Fisher, Ex parte, Ash, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 636; 41 L. J., Bk. 62; 26 L. T. 931; 20 W. R. 849.

When a doctor on the eve of bankruptcy assigns all his property to a creditor to secure a past debt as well as a fresh advance, the smallness of the fresh advance, although not necessarily making the assignment an act of bankruptcy, is strong evidence that the advance was made, not to enable the debtor to continue his trade, but to secure the past debt. Id.

A trader applied to a creditor, who had previously advanced him 600*l.*, for a further advance of 100*l.*, which was accordingly made on the debtor giving a conditional promise that if he did not repay the 100*l.* within ten days he would make an assignment of all his property to the creditor to secure both the past and fresh advance. Default was made in payment, and the assignment was executed. Shortly afterwards the debtor became bankrupt, and the property was sold for about 700*l.*:—Held, that, having regard to the conditional nature of the promise and the smallness of the fresh advance, the assignment was an act of bankruptcy and void against the creditors. Id.

Bill of Exchange—Payment by Drawer.—Payment of bills by the drawer at the request of the acceptor, who, in consideration, assigns to the drawer all his property to secure the amount and also certain past debts, is a substantial advance, and prevents the assignment from being an act of bankruptcy. Reed, Ex parte, Tweddell, In re, 14 L. R., Eq. 586; 26 L. T. 558; 20 W. R. 622.

Therefore, when, at the request of T., I., M. & Co. paid the amount due on certain bills drawn by them and accepted by T., and T. assigned to them his interest in certain marine engines and machinery (which constituted his whole property), as security for the moneys due on the bills, and also for other moneys due from him to them:—Held, that the assignment was not an act of bankruptcy. Id.

Further Supply of Goods.—A publican being indebted to his spirit merchants in 668*l.*, ordered from them goods to the value of 92*l.* 11*s.*, part of which was for immediate delivery and the rest in bond; and at the same time paid them on account 50*l.* in cash, and a cheque for 100*l.* The merchants despatched the goods ordered for delivery, which were of the value of 52*l.*, but before they reached their destination the cheque was dishonoured. The merchants stopped the goods in transitu. Thereupon the customer paid the amount of the cheque, but was informed by the merchants that they would not release the goods in transitu, or supply him with more goods, unless he gave security for his account. He then, in consideration of their releasing the goods, torney, called a meeting of his creditors, to be held at a given time and place, and on the morning of that day went to the attorney's office, and inquired of him whether he could safely attend the meeting without being arrested for debt; the attorney having advised him to remain at the office, until it was ascertained whether the creditors would engage to give him a safe conduct; the trader remained at the office accordingly, for upwards of two hours, to avoid being arrested by some or one of his creditors, until after the attorney had attended at and returned from the meeting:—Held, that what passed between the attorney and the trader was admissible in evidence, upon an issue whether the latter had committed an act of bankruptcy on that occasion. Bramwell v. Lucas, 4 D. & R. 367; 2 B. & C. 745.

—Evidence—Subsequent Conduct of Debtor.]

—Upon an issue directed to try whether P. had committed an act of bankruptcy on a given day, it appeared that on the preceding day he sent a letter from his dwelling-house at Greenwich to his place of business addressed to his son, stating that he was unable to meet his engagements, and desiring that he might be denied to any creditor who might call, and immediately after despatching this letter he left home, and remained absent during the whole of that and the following day. A witness proved that P. called on the day in question at her brother's house in London; that he expressed to her an apprehension of being sent to the Fleet, and stated that he was in no hurry to get home, and would not go very early, as he had creditors who would lay hold of him, and that he did not leave till after dark. The jury were told, that if they believed the statements made by the witness, P. on that occasion committed an act of bankruptcy; they said they did believe the witness, but they did not think P. spoke bonâ fide:—Held, that P. had committed an act of bankruptcy; and that evidence of his conduct and conversations, on the day subsequent to the date mentioned in the issue, was not admissible to explain his conduct on that day. Johnston v. Woolf, 2 Scott, 372.

—Question of Fact.—Whether a departing the dwelling-house is accompanied with an intent to delay a creditor, is a question of fact for a jury to decide upon all the circumstances. Aldridge v. Ireland, 1 Taunt. 273, n.

c. Otherwise Absenting.

From what Place.—Absenting, unless from the place of abode or place of business, or to avoid a creditor, is not an act of bankruptcy. Bernasconi v. Farebrother, 10 B. & C. 549; 5 M. & R. 364.

But a trader does commit an act of bankruptcy by absenting himself from some place at which he would, in the ordinary course of his life and business, be expected to be found, or at which he has appointed to meet particular creditors. Id.

Where a man, in the habit of frequenting the Exchange to collect news, left it at the sight of a creditor, desiring a friend to say he was not there, it is an act of bankruptcy. Gimingham v. Laing, 2 Marsh. 236; 6 Taunt. 532; 2 Rose, 472.

Intention must be Absolute.—If a trader, fearful that he may receive an unpleasant letter from a creditor, quits his house, and desires the letter to be forwarded to him at a turnpike; and if the letter was unfavourable, it was not his intention to return; but, if favourable, it was his intention to proceed on his regular business; and the letter which is favourable is forwarded, and he proceeds on his regular business, it is not an act of bankruptcy. Fisher v. Boucher, 10 B. & C. 705.

What an Absenting.—A creditor called upon a bankrupt by appointment. The bankrupt left the room and did not return, and his wife told the creditor he had gone out:—Held, that this was sufficient evidence to warrant the jury in inferring that the bankrupt left the house for the purpose of avoiding his creditor. Charrington v. Brown, 11 Moore, 341.

A trader left a message at his house for a creditor, who had in his absence called for a debt, that he could spare no money, and would not pay him that day, and would go out of the way and stay till dinner time:—Held, that it was for the jury to consider, whether he absented himself to delay the creditor; and this evidence warranted their conclusion that he did not. Vincent v. Prater, 4 Taunt. 603; 2 Rose, 275.

Where a trader went to his neighbour, and told him that he expected to be arrested, and while he remained there, was informed that a sheriff's officer was going towards his house, upon which he concealed himself in the back room, and desired his neighbour to watch; and when told that the officer had gone past his house, and had left the street, immediately returned home:—Held, that this was an act of bankruptcy, within the words "otherwise absenting himself to the intent to delay creditors," although it appeared not only that no creditor was delayed, but that none could possibly be delayed. Chenoweth v. Hay, 1 M. & S. 676; S. C., nom. Chenoweth v. Hayley, 2 Rose, 137.

Where a trader, at the suggestion of his attorney, called a meeting of his creditors, to be held at a given time and place, and on the morning of that day went to the attorney's office, and inquired of him whether he could safely attend the meeting without being arrested for debt; the attorney having advised him to remain at the office until it was ascertained whether the creditors would engage to give him a safe conduct; the trader remained at the office accordingly for upwards of two hours, to avoid being arrested by some or one of his creditors, until after the attorney had attended at and returned from the meeting:—Held, that he had committed an act of bankruptcy on that occasion. Bramwell v. Lucas, 4 D. & R. 367; 2 B. & C. 745.

Where a trader, upon being arrested, escaped from the officer, and fled into the house of another, and was pursued by the officer, and inquired for at the house, but was denied, and the door kept fast, and, whilst he remained there, declared that he did it for fear of other creditors; and when it was dark returned home to his own house, and gave directions to deny him to any one who called, and continued nearly a month in his bedchamber:—Held, that this constituted an act of bankruptcy, under the words

"otherwise absenting himself." Bayley v. Shofield, 1 M. & S. 338; 2 Rose, 100.

A trader abstaining from going to a particular place through the apprehension of process (whether such apprehension is well-founded or not), thereby absents himself with intent to delay his creditors, and commits an act of bankruptcy. Robson v. Rolis, 2 M. & Scott, 786; 9 Bing. 648.

— Closing Doors and Windows.—If bankers close the doors and windows of the shop, it seems to be an act of bankruptcy by absenting. Cumming v. Bailey, 6 Bing. 363; 4 M. & P. 36.

— Remaining Absent.—One of three partners, bankers, left his house at Bath, and went to London to raise funds; and having failed in his efforts to do so, he remained there three days:—Held, that the jury were warranted in finding that he absented himself with an intent to delay his creditors. Ib.

Where a trader at B. left her dwelling-house and went to London, for the purpose of persuading a creditor to withdraw his execution, and left word of the place to which she had gone, but, failing to procure the withdrawing of the execution, did not return to her dwelling-house:—Held, that this was no act of bankruptcy. Aldridge v. Ireland, 3 Dougl. 397; 1 Taunt. 273, n.

— Breaking an Appointment.—The mere failure to keep an appointment made with a creditor is not an act of bankruptcy. Key v. Shaw, 1 M. & Scott, 462; 8 Bing. 320; S. P., Toleman v. Jones, 9 Moore, 24; S. C., nom. Tucker v. Jones, 2 Bing. 2; Lees v. Marton, 1 M. & Rob. 210.

Where a man, in the habit of attending the Royal Exchange, broke an appointment he had made with a creditor to meet him there; or (being the proprietor of a theatre) retired behind the scenes to avoid a sheriff's officer, at the same time giving orders to be denied to him:—Held, that each of these was an act of bankruptcy. Gimingham v. Laing, 2 Marsh. 236; 6 Taunt. 532; 2 Rose, 472.

Where a debtor, upon applications made to him by creditors for payment of their debts, made appointments with them to meet him at specified times and places with reference to a settlement of their demands, but failed to keep such appointments:—Held, that the failures to keep the appointments constituted acts of bankruptcy, although the places at which the appointments were made were not his usual places of business. Russell v. Bell, 10 M. & W. 340.

A trader made an appointment with his creditor to call at the creditor's house on a particular day to make arrangements for taking up the trader's acceptance, falling due on that day; the trader failed to keep the appointment, and did not pay any money on account of the bill:—Held, the not keeping the appointment was an act of bankruptcy. O'Neill, In re, 9 Ir. Ch. Rep. 279.

The mere fact that a trader has failed to keep a promise which he has made to a creditor, that he will call at a specified time and pay him his debt, is not sufficient evidence of an absenting himself with intent to defeat or delay his creditors. Meyer, Ex parte, Stephany, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 188; 41 L. J., Bk. 33; 25 L. T. 733; 20 W. R. 173.

A debtor promised to call at an appointed time on a creditor and pay the debt. Having failed to procure the money he did not call; but he was to be found at his own place of business:—Held, that the failure to keep the appointment did not constitute an absenting himself with intent to defeat or delay the creditor, and that no act of bankruptcy had been committed. Ib.

— Absence on Business.—A trader absented himself for three or four days from his place of business, and in his absence a bill of exchange was presented for payment and was dishonoured; and application was also made for payment of other bills. The trader was adjudicated bankrupt, the act of bankruptcy being this absence with intent to delay his creditors. A commissioner in the country annulled the bankruptcy, the bankrupt swearing that his absence was occasioned by an attempt of his to get up evidence of perjury against one of his workmen, and to obtain pecuniary assistance. Pending this dispute as to the adjudication, the trader signed a declaration of insolvency. On appeal, the decision of the commissioner was affirmed, on the ground that there was not sufficient evidence to support the adjudication; but the court refused to allow the trader his costs, as his declaration of insolvency while applying to annul an adjudication was inconsistent with an honest desire for the equal distribution of his assets. Barney, Ex parte, 32 L. J., Bk. 41; 7 L. T. 488.

Two traders in partnership left their shop, and told their shopman that they were going out to endeavour to get some bills of exchange discounted, and directed him to say that they were not in the way, or to make some excuse for them in case a creditor should call. On that and the following day a creditor called, when they were both at home, and desired to see either one or the other of them; when the shopman denied them without being authorized by them so to do:—Held, that the jury were warranted in concluding that they absented themselves with an intent to delay their creditors. Capper v. Desanges, 3 Moore, 4; S. C., nom. Deffe v. Desanges 8 Taunt. 671.

— Evidence as to Reason for Absenting.—A petition for adjudication against two partners alleged, as the act of bankruptcy, that they had absented themselves with intent to defeat or delay their creditors. This petition was directed to be heard forthwith. One had gone away only to take his wife and children to Paris, and returned immediately. He appeared when the petition was heard, admitted insolvency, but opposed the adjudication, stating that he wished to present a petition for liquidation, and he tendered evidence; but the registrar, on learning that it only related to the circumstances of his going abroad, disregarded it as immaterial, and adjudged the partners bankrupts:—Held, that this order could not be sustained, for that the 65th rule of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1870, only applies where the debtor is keeping out of the way so that the ordinary course of proceedings cannot be taken; and that, if he appears, he is entitled to insist on the proceedings being conducted in the ordinary course. Lopez, Ex parte, Brelaz, In re, 6 L. R., Ch. 894; 25 L. T. 403; 19 W. R. 1106.

d. Beginning to keep House.

Order to Deny.]—A general order to be denied to all comers, and a denial accordingly to some one in particular, is sufficient to constitute an act of bankruptcy. Lloyd v. Heathcote, 5 Moore, 129; 2 B. & B. 388; S. P., Mucklow v. May, 1 Taunt. 479.

But an order to deny, without an actual denial, is not sufficient. Fisher v. Boucher, 10 B. & C. 705; S. P., Wydown's case, 14 Ves. 86.

Where a trader, being under apprehension of arrest, gave directions to his servants to deny him in case A., a sheriff's officer, called:—Held, that the sheriff's officer not having called, this of itself was not any evidence of a beginning to keep house. Ib.

An order to deny, with any act done, as retreating to an unusual part of the house, is an act of bankruptcy. Fisher v. Boucher, 10 B. & C. 705.

And if a trader withdraws from one part of his house where he has before usually sat, and where there was free access to him, to a more retired part of it, to avoid personal application for money, by means whereof his creditors are prevented from importuning him; this will be an act of bankruptcy. Dudley v. Vaughan, 1 Camp. 271; 9 East, 491, c.

An order given to the servants of a trader to deny him, on the ground of being busy, is sufficient to constitute an act of bankruptcy. Stafford v. Clarke, 1 C. & P. 27.

But if a trader directs his servant, that if any one should come whilst he was at dinner, or engaged in business, she should deny him:—Held, that such instructions did not amount to a direction for a general denial; and therefore, although a creditor called, and was denied, it was no act of bankruptcy. Shew v. Thompson, Holt, 159.

Nor, in a similar case, where the trader knew of the coming of a particular creditor. Smith v. Currie, 3 Camp. 349; 1 Rose, 364.

Where a trader ordered his servant to say, if any creditors called, that he was not at home, and he was accordingly denied, but was in bed ill at the time:—Held, that it was properly left to the jury, whether this was a beginning to keep house with an intent to commit an act of bankruptcy; and that they were warranted in finding that it was. Lazarus v. Waithman, 5 Moore, 313.

Acquiescence in Denial.]—A trader, having been denied to a creditor who called for money, was, after a little time, seen peeping over his wife's shoulder. Upon another occasion, seeing a creditor coming, he retired behind a partition at the back of his shop, and his wife coming forward, said he was not at home:—Held, that a jury was properly directed to consider whether the trader had kept his house; had wilfully secluded himself; that is, had withdrawn himself from a part of the house where he was likely to meet a creditor, to a more retired part. Key v. Shaw, 8 Bing. 320; 1 M. & Scott, 462.

If a trader hears himself denied to a creditor by one of his family, and he does not come forward, and his remaining quiescent is from an intention to delay the creditor, it is an act of bankruptcy, though he has given no direction to be denied. Smith v. Moom, M. & M. 458.

Act of Bankruptcy is complete when Denial is made.]—Where the order to be denied is on one day, and the denial on another, the act of bankruptcy is on the latter day. Hawkes v. Sands, 3 Doug. 429.

Denial by shutting up Doors.]—An act of bankruptcy by beginning to keep house, may be by closing the doors, without change of place or denial to creditors. Cumming v. Bailey, 6 Bing. 363; 4 M. & P. 36.

If bankers close the doors and windows of the bank, and their customers cannot obtain admission, and the jury find that they are so closed as to exclude the customers, and the bankers remain within, it is an act of bankruptcy by beginning to keep house. Ib.

By Partners.]—Where one of several partners in a bank, who resided at the place of business, and was the only partner who transacted the business (the others residing at a distance), shut up the banking-house, and absented himself from it and stopped payment:—Held, that this was not evidence of a joint act of bankruptcy by all three. Mills v. Bennett, 2 M. & S. 556; 2 Rose, 269.

Denial at unseasonable Times.]—It is not an act of bankruptcy for a debtor to cause himself to be denied to a creditor calling by the debtor's appointment for payment on a Sunday. Preston, Ex parte, 2 Rose, 21; 2 Ves. & B. 311.

So, a denial, at a late hour, after retirement to rest, is not an act of bankruptcy. Hughes v. Gilman, 10 Moore, 480; 2 C. & P. 32.

If a trader is denied to a clerk of a creditor, at his shop, it appearing by the evidence that the shop was shut up for the evening, but at an earlier hour than usual; it is proper to be left to the jury to say, whether the bankrupt had himself denied, to delay his creditor; or whether it was because the clerk called at an unseasonable hour. Ib.

At what Place.]—A creditor has a right to call upon his debtor for money due to him, at the lodgings of the latter, or any other place where he knows he may be found, although it is not his place of business; and a denial to a creditor there is equally an act of bankruptcy, as though he were denied at his place of business. Park v. Prosser, 1 C. & P. 176.

Although the debtor is always accessible at his place of business in London. Ib.

Where a country trader was in the habit of coming up occasionally to London, and staying a day or two at a friend's house, where he wrote his letters, and used to order goods to be sent to him there; a creditor of his lived in the same street; he told his friend not to inform the creditor that he was in town, because the latter would be asking him for his money; and shortly afterwards the creditor called at the house upon business, whereupon the bankrupt went into a back warehouse for ten minutes or a quarter of an hour, to avoid seeing him:—Held, that this was a beginning to keep house. Curtis v. Willes, 4 D. & R. 224; R. & M. 58; 1 C. & P. 211.

To what Creditor.]—The denial should be to a creditor; but a denial to several persons, who a witness proved had called frequently, and who he believed were creditors, but could not in fact say whether they were or not, is evidence to go to the jury. Jameson v. Eamer, 1 Esp. 381.

A denial to a collector of queen's taxes is an act of bankruptcy; as a denial to him is equivalent to a denial to any other creditor. Sanderson v. Laforest, 1 C. & P. 46; S. P., Jeffer v. Smith, 2 Taunt. 401; 1 Rose, 117.

So, a denial to the collector of church and highway rates, who called for assessments due from him, after he had given a general order to his wife to be denied to all comers, is an act of bankruptcy. Lloyd v. Heatheote, 5 Moore, 129; 2 B. & B. 388.

It has been held not to be an act of bankruptcy in a trader who denies himself, when at home, to a creditor who merely demands payment of a debt, but does not ask to see him personally. Dudley v. Vaughan, 1 Camp. 271; 9 East, 491.

The denial to a creditor who called, not for money, but to buy goods, meaning to take his debt out in that way, is an act of bankruptcy. Harris, Ex parte, 2 Rose, 67.

A denial to a clerk of a creditor, who only asks to see the debtor, but does not ask for money, is an act of bankruptcy, if in fact the clerk did, to the knowledge of the debtor, call for money. Hughes v. Gilman, 10 Moore, 480; 2 C. & P. 32.

If a trader denies himself to a person, who desires that he may be told that a certain bill of exchange, mentioning the particulars of it, is dishonoured, and that he wishes to see him in consequence, such denial is an act of bankruptcy, without further proof of the party's being a creditor, if the jury believe that the bankrupt so considered him. Bleasby v. Crossley, 3 Bing. 430; 2 C. & P. 213.

So is a denial to a servant, calling for a debt by the direction of the acknowledged agent of the creditor, and by the appointment of the debtor. Bamford, Ex parte, 15 Ves. 449.

A trader bought goods to be paid for by bill. A few days after the goods had been delivered the seller called and demanded a return of his goods, and at the same time threatened to have the trader arrested for swindling in taking in the goods when he knew he was in insolvent circumstances. He requested to see the trader, who refused to see him:—Held, not sufficient to raise a presumption of a beginning to keep house with intent to delay a creditor, so as to constitute an act of bankruptcy. Clements v. McKibben, 2 H. & N. 62.

e. Lying in Prison or Escaping therefrom.

Before 6 Geo. 4, c. 16.]—The lying in prison under 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 2, meant two months of actual uninterrupted imprisonment. Barnard v. Palmer, 1 Camp. 509.

Where a person lay in prison two months for debt, subsequently to a criminal process which had been discharged:—Held, that this constituted an act of bankruptcy, though it did not appear that he had personal notice of his discharge. Rex v. Page, 3 Moore, 666; 1 B. & B. 308; 7 Price, 616.

Where a person was arrested, but on account of illness was permitted to remain a few days in his own house, in the custody of the officer's follower, who was not named in the warrant, but who kept the key of the house in his possession, and he was then removed to gaol, where he continued for the remainder of two months:—Held, that this was a legal imprisonment, so as to constitute an act of bankruptcy. Stevens v. Jackson, 1 Marsh. 469; 6 Taunt. 106; 4 Camp. 164; 2 Rose, 285.

For what Debt.]—A penalty due to the crown was a debt within the 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 2; and, therefore, where a trader lay in prison more than two months, being unable to pay Exchequer penalties for smuggling, he committed an act of bankruptcy. Cubb v. Symonds, 5 B. & A. 516.

When Act of Bankruptcy complete.]—The act of bankruptcy, by lying in prison twenty-one days, did not relate to the first day of imprisonment, under the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 5, but only to the last of them. Moor v. Newman, 6 Bing. 556; 4 M. & P. 333; S. P., Higgins v. M. Adam, 3 Y. & J. 1; Tucker v. Barrow, 3 C. & P. 85; M. & M. 137.

Where a trader was arrested on the 20th of March, committed to prison on the 21st of April, and discharged from prison on the 26th of May:—Held, that an adjudication of bankruptcy against him upon a petition filed on the 20th of May in the following year could not be supported, such lying in prison not having been an act of bankruptcy within twelve months previously to the filing of the petition, within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 69. Wallace v. Blackwell, 3 Drew. 538; 25 L. J., Ch. 644; 2 Jur., N. S. 656.

3. ACTS OF BANKRUPTCY RELATING TO THE PROPERTY OF THE DEBTOR.

a. Generally.

Under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, similar to 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106.]—The words "either within this realm or elsewhere" were inserted, because under 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, a person resident in India, and trading there, drawing bills upon England for the value of other bills sent thither, did not commit an act of bankruptcy by assigning, while resident in India, all his effects in trust for creditors. Inglis v. Grant, 5 T. R. 530.

The word "fraudulent" applies to each of the words "gift," "delivery," and "transfer." Cook v. Caldecott, 4 C. & P. 315; M. & M. 522.

The word "delivery" is of very general signification; but, being connected with the words "gift or transfer," it seems that, in interpretation, it must be confined to transactions of the same nature. Cotton v. James, M. & M. 273; 3 C. & P. 505.

Property or Interest must pass.]—A delivery of goods to be an act of bankruptcy within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 67, must pass, or purport to pass, some property or interest in the goods. Leitt v. Beeston, 4 L. R., Ex. 159; 38 L. J., Ex. 89; 20 L. T. 371; 17 W. R. 620.

Deed not Void against future Creditors.]—A deed for the transfer of a trader's property is not void as against future creditors, although the execution of it is an act of bankruptcy. Oswald v. Thompson, 2 Ex. 215; 17 L. J., Ex. 234.

Deed must be read as a whole.—Upon the question whether the execution of a deed is an act of bankruptcy, one part of it cannot be separated from the rest. Snowball, Ex parte, Douglas, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 534; 41 L. J., Bk. 49; 26 L. T. 894; 20 W. R. 786.

Partners.—If one only of several partners executes a deed, which on the face of it purports to convey for himself and the other partners all their personal property, the deed operates to convey the share of that one, and where one of two partners executed such an assignment of the partnership property before, and the other did not execute it until after a fiat in bankruptcy had issued:—Held, in the absence of anything to shew that the deed was delivered as an escrow, that the former had committed an act of bankruptcy. Bowker v. Burdekin, 11 M. & W. 128; 12 L. J., Ex. 329.

An assignment by one of two insolvent partners of all his interest in the partnership assets to the other, in consideration of a covenant by the latter to pay all the partnership debts, is an act of bankruptcy, and is fraudulent and void as against their joint creditors. Mayou, Ex parte, 11 Jur., N. S. 433; 12 L. T. 254; 13 W. R. 629—C. A.

Where one partner makes a fraudulent grant by deed to another partner, it is an act of bankruptcy in the former, but not in the latter. Whitwell v. Thompson, 1 Esp. 68.

Power to sell Debtor's Goods.—McF., shortly before being made a bankrupt, being indebted to the defendant, gave him a bill for the amount and the power of selling, in case the bill was not met at the end of seven days, certain brandies which comprised all McF.'s property and which had been previously landed by the defendant and warehoused in his name and at his expense. This item was included in the bill:—Held, that the transaction was not an act of bankruptcy, not being "a conveyance, gift, transfer, or delivery" within the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 6, sub-s. 2. Philps v. Hornstedt, 1 Ex. D. 62. Affirming, 8 L. R., Ex. 26; 42 L. J., Ex. 12; 21 W. R. 174. But see Cooper, Ex parte, Baum, In re, 10 Ch. D. 313; 48 L. J., Bk. 54; 39 L. T. 523; 27 W. R. 299—C. A.

Family Settlements.—A solicitor and money scrivener, being in insolvent circumstances, upon his marriage with a woman with whom he had for seven years previously cohabited, by a deed of settlement and articles of agreement executed prior to the marriage, conveyed and assigned his real and personal estate to trustees, for his wife, with a joint power of appointment among the children of the marriage (including an illegitimate daughter), but reserving no interest to himself; immediately after the marriage the power was exercised in favour of the illegitimate daughter. The property remained under the control of the husband; and, within two months after the marriage, a fiat issued against him:—Held, that the settlement was itself an act of bankruptcy; and void as against the assignees. Colombine v. Penhall, 1 Sm. & G. 228.

Sale of Goods.—A fair and bona fide sale of the whole of a trader's property is not of itself an act of bankruptcy. Rose v. Haycock, 3 N. & M. 645; 1 A. & E. 460.

A party who impeaches the sale of the whole of a bankrupt's property must shew some facts from which fraud may be inferred. Id.

A sale by a trader of his goods at prices considerably below their marketable value, is not of itself a fraudulent transfer. Lee v. Hart, 11 Ex. 880; 25 L. J., Ex. 135; 2 Jur., N. S. 308—Ex. Ch.

To render the transaction fraudulent, the seller must have intended by such sale to defeat or delay his creditors, and the purchaser must have had reason to know that such was the object of the seller. Id.

If a trader raises money by selling his goods at an under value (not for the purpose of carrying on his business, but in contemplation of stopping payment, and for the purpose of cheating his creditors), to one who has notice, either by express information, or from the nature of the transaction that he is selling his goods, not in order to carry on his business, but with a fraudulent intention, the sale is an act of bankruptcy, and void, and the assignees may recover the goods from the purchaser. Froser v. Levy, 6 H. & N. 16.

A sale of the whole of a trader's stock-in-trade, with an intention to abscond with the money and cheat his creditors, to a bona fide purchaser, who is ignorant of the trader's design, is not an act of bankruptcy. Baxter v. Pritchard, 3 N. & M. 638; 1 A. & E. 456.

A sale by a trader in insolvent circumstances, and on the eve of bankruptcy, of his stock-in-trade and the bulk of his property to one of his creditors, the consideration being in part an old debt, is not per se an act of bankruptcy, though the effect is to stop the trading. Bell v. Simpson, 2 H. & N. 410; 26 L. J., Ex. 363.

A creditor, who had recovered judgment against a trader for a sum exceeding 50l., issued execution, and the sheriff seized six horses belonging to the debtor. It was afterwards agreed between the creditor (who knew that the debtor was insolvent) and the debtor, that the sheriff should withdraw, and that the debtor should sell the horses to the creditor for a sum just large enough to cover the debt and the amount of the sheriff's charges, the debtor continuing in possession of the horses and paying so much a day for the use of them:—Held, that this transaction was a fraudulent transfer of a part of the debtor's property, within the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 6, sub-s. 2. Pearson, Ex parte, Mortimer, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 667; 42 L. J., Bk. 44; 23 L. T. 796; 21 W. R. 688.

Voluntary Preference of Creditor.—A voluntary preference of a creditor, though it can be set aside as a fraud on the bankruptcy law, is not an act of bankruptcy. Stubbins, Ex parte, Wilkinson, In re, 17 Ch. D. 58; 50 L. J., Ch. 547; 44 L. T. 877; 29 W. R. 653—C. A.

b. Fraudulent Surrender of Copyholds.

This was not, under 1 Jac. 1, c. 15, s. 2, an act of bankruptcy, because it was said it could not be done with intent to defeat or delay creditors, as they could not have execution of copyhold lands. Cockshot, Ex parte, 3 Bro. C. C. 502.

c. Fraudulent Execution.

Suffering Judgment by Default.—A person, by suffering judgment to go by default, does not procure his goods to be taken in execution, so as to be an act of bankruptcy, although his goods are afterwards taken in an execution sued out upon that judgment. Gibson v. King, Car. & M. 458.

Act not Complete until Seizure.—An act of bankruptcy, by procuring the party's own goods to be taken in execution, is not committed till the actual seizure. Belcher v. Gummow, 9 Q. B. 873; 16 L. J., Q. B. 155; 11 Jur. 286.

Bills of Exchange.—Under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 3, a party procuring bills of exchange, his property, to be taken in execution with intent to defeat creditors, after the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 12, committed an act of bankruptcy, though at the time when 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, passed, bills of exchange were not liable to be taken in execution. Edwards v. Cooper, 11 Q. B. 33.

Judgment for Debt accruing Due—Execution levied after Accrual of Debt.—In May, 1842, a tenant owed arrears of rent, and on the pressing application of his landlord, executed a warrant of attorney for the amount of those arrears and of the current year's rent, upon the understanding that judgment was to be entered up thereon, and a fi. fa. delivered to the sheriff; but that it was not to be executed unless other writs against the tenant came to the sheriff's hands. In October, 1842, application was made to the tenant for payment of the rent, he being expressly informed that another year's rent had become due; and on that occasion he paid a sum on account, and undertook to pay the remainder before the Christmas following. In November, 1842, other writs against the tenant having come to the sheriff's hands, the fi. fa. issued on the judgment on the warrant of attorney was executed.—Held, that the giving of the warrant of attorney under the circumstances was not an act of bankruptcy by the tenant as a procuring of his goods to be taken in execution. Gore v. Lloyd, 12 M. & W. 463; 13 L. J., Ex. 366.

Execution not at Instance of Debtor.—A trader owed money to his brother, and the latter issued a fi. fa. and took the whole of the bankrupt's property. A commissioner considered that issuing the execution had not been at the instance of the bankrupt, and that, therefore, there had been no valid act of bankruptcy to support an adjudication under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 67. On appeal the court refused to interfere with the discretion of the commissioner. Boyd, Ex parte, 31 L. J., Bk. 6; 6 L. T. 142—L. J.

d. Giving Money or Security to Petitioning Creditor.

Assignees entitled to Recover.—The defendants on whose petition a fiat had issued received a payment from the bankrupt, whereby they obtained more in the pound than his other creditors.

The fiat not having been proceeded in was annulled, and another fiat issued on the petition of a creditor whose debt was due before the payment made to the defendants.—Held, that this payment was an act of bankruptcy within 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 8, in which the last fiat was sustainable, and that as no person had been appointed by the commissioners under that section to whom the money paid was to be returned by the defendants, the assignees of the bankrupt were entitled to recover it. Ellis v. Russell, 10 Q. B. 952; 16 L. J., Q. B. 428; 11 Jur. 821.

Payment made without Knowledge or Consent of Debtor.—An adjudication was made against a trader in 1861, which was afterwards annulled. Another adjudication was made in 1862. The act of bankruptcy on which the second adjudication was founded was the payment of 1,100*l.* to the party at whose instance the adjudication of 1861 was made, in settlement of his demand. The commissioner confirmed the adjudication of 1862. On appeal, the court (having called for other evidence than that which was before the commissioner) was of opinion that the payment of the 1,100*l.* not being proved to have been made by an agent on behalf or with the knowledge or assent of the bankrupt, was not a compounding with the petitioning creditor, within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 71, and annulled the adjudication. Scott Russell, In re, 31 L. J., Bk. 37; 6 L. T. 138—L. J.

e. Assignments for Benefit of Creditors.

Under old Law.—A deed, whereby a trader conveys all his property in trust to be paid amongst his creditors, is an act of bankruptcy. Bourne, Ex parte, 16 Ves. 149; S. P., Smith, Ex parte, 1 Ves. & B. 518; 2 Rose, 63.

— Intent presumed.—So it is an act of bankruptcy, although, in so doing, he did not intend to defeat or delay his creditors, as that being the necessary consequence of the assignment, he must, in law, be taken to have intended it. Stewart v. Moody, 1 C., M. & R. 777; 5 Tyr. 493.

— Proviso for Avoidance.—So, though the creditors with whom such deed was in the first instance concerted, afterwards, and when it was executed, changed their purpose, unknown to the bankrupt, and intended to set it up as an act of bankruptcy. And such deed is operative, though it contains a proviso to be void, if the trustees think fit. Tappenden v. Burgess, 4 East, 230; 1 Smith, 33.

— Executed by Trader only.—So, an assignment by a trader of all his estate and effects, for the benefit of all his creditors, executed by the trader, but not executed by the trustee or by any creditor, or further acted on, is an act of bankruptcy. Botcherby v. Lancaster, 3 N. & M. 383; 1 A. & E. 77.

— Deed, whether Void for all Purposes.—Proviso in a lease for re-entry, and that the lease should be void if the lessee assigned without license. The lessee by deed assigned all his property, real and personal, to trustees, for the benefit of his creditors, and was afterwards declared a bankrupt:—Held, that the deed of assignment was an act of bankruptcy and void. Doe d. Lloyd v. Powell, 8 D. & R. 35; 5 B. & C. 308.

In October, 1852, E., a trader, assigned to the plaintiff all his household furniture and effects then on his premises, as a security for money lent, with a power in default of payment to seize and take possession of the property thereby assigned, and all other goods, chattels and effects which might be found on the premises. In January, 1853, E. assigned all his estate and effects to trustees, for the benefit of his creditors. In the following February the plaintiff seized the goods then on the premises of E., and in March a fiat in bankruptcy issued against E., the act of bankruptcy being the assignment of his estate and effects to trustees. In an action by the plaintiff against the assignees for selling the goods so seized by them:—Held, that though the assignment by E. of his estate and effects to trustees was void as against creditors, yet it operated to transfer to the assignees the property not included in the assignment to the plaintiff, and so defeated his title, which would otherwise have been valid by the seizure. Carr v. Acraman, 11 Ex. 566; 25 L. J., Ex. 90.

— Assignment of Bulk of Property.—An assignment of the principal part of the assignor's property may be an act of bankruptcy, although not executed by the assignor spontaneously, if it appears that the provisions of the deed must necessarily have the effect of delaying and defeating his creditors. Wensley, Ex parte, 1 De G., J. & S. 273; 32 L. J., Bk. 23; 9 Jur., N. S. 315; 7 L. T. 548; 11 W. R. 241.

Where such an assignment was made to trustees, one of whom was an accountant employed with a view to and under the assignment, upon trust out of the proceeds of the property in the first place to pay all costs, charges and expenses due or to become due to the assignor's solicitor, and the professional charges of the accountant trustee, and other expenses, and subject thereto to divide the proceeds rateably among the creditors who should execute the deed, and the deed recited that the assignor was not prepared to pay his debts in full:—Held, that the necessary effect of the deed was to defeat and delay the creditors, and that it was an act of bankruptcy. Id.

— Execution of Assignment to be used in Case of Necessity.—A trader, being pressed by a particular creditor, who had issued a fi. fa. against his goods, under which the sheriff had seized, executed an assignment of all his estate and effects for the benefit of his creditors, and, in the presence of the party to whom the assignment was made, gave it to his attorney, in order that it might be used, if circumstances should render it necessary, as an act of bankruptcy:—Held, that the deed operated as a valid act of bankruptcy. Turner v. Hardcastle, 11 C. B., N. S. 683; 31 L. J., C. P. 193.

Under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134.—The registration of trust-deeds under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, ss. 192, 194, although in practice performed by the same officer, is distinct and has different operations; and where, for the want of the papers required by the orders, registration under the former section had been refused by the officer, and the applicant had registered the deed under s. 194:—

Held, that the registration did not prevent the deed, which was an assignment of all the debtor's property, from being an act of bankruptcy. Morgan, Ex parte, 1 De G., J. & S. 288.

Assignment of Part of Property.—A conveyance by a trader of part of his property for the benefit of his creditors, is not an act of bankruptcy, unless executed under circumstances of fraud; and mere conjecture of fraud, arising from extrinsic circumstances, will not be sufficient to affect the title under such conveyance. Cattell v. Corral, 4 Y. & C. 228.

A conveyance by a trader, for the benefit of his creditors, of his effects at a certain place is not an act of bankruptcy, unless it is shown that he had no other effects. Chase v. Goble, 3 Scott, N. R. 245; 2 M. & G. 930.

Evidence—Unstamped Deed.—A deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors, not registered through want of the necessary assents, may be used, though unstamped, as evidence of an act of bankruptcy. Gouldwell, In re, Squire, Ex parte, 4 L. R., Ch. 47; 38 L. J., Bk. 13; 19 L. T. 272; 17 W. R. 40; overruling Potter, Ex parte, 3 De G., J. & S. 240; 34 L. J., Bk. 46; 11 Jur., N. S. 49; 11 L. T. 435; 13 W. R. 189.

Partners—Separate Creditors.—Where partners by deed, assigned all their partnership effects to trustees for the benefit of their creditors, and some of the separate creditors of one partner did not assent to it, the assignment was fraudulent and void, and an act of bankruptcy. Eckhardt v. Wilson, 8 T. R. 140.

A. and N. being in partnership, executed assignments of all their joint estate to mortgagees, and afterwards A. assigned all his separate estate and effects whatsoever, specifying them in detail, and "all other the estate and effects of him," A., unto a trustee to divide the proceeds arising from the sale amongst such of his separate creditors as should within one month become parties to and execute the deed. The deed was not registered under the Bills of Sale Act, 1854. Upon the day following the date of the last-mentioned deed a petition for adjudication was filed against A. and N., under which they were subsequently declared bankrupts, the acts of bankruptcy relied upon having been committed two or three days before the date of the last deed:—Held, that the last-mentioned deed was an act of bankruptcy, and a preference of separate creditors over the general body of creditors, and that the trustee under the deed was not entitled to the property as against the claims of the trustee under the bankruptcy. McLean, Ex parte, 24 L. T. 144.

— Separate Estate.—One of two traders, in partnership, conveyed by deed his separate estate to trustees for the joint creditors of both; the joint creditors agreeing that the traders should continue in possession of their stock, and carry on business with a view to retrieve themselves; and that upon their paying 4s. 6d. in the pound by instalments, they should receive a general release:—Held, not an act of bankruptcy:—Held, also, that it was properly left to the jury to say, whether the deed was executed bona fide to enable the traders to retrieve themselves, or was executed with intent to defraud his separate creditors. Abbott v. Burbage, 2 Bing. N. C. 444; 2 Scott, 656; 1 Hodges, 448.

A partnership which existed between A. and B. was dissolved by mutual consent. A., being separately possessed of freehold and leasehold estates, after the dissolution conveyed them to trustees for sale or mortgage, and empowered them to execute such conveyances as they should think fit, for the purpose of converting his estates into money, in order to enable him to carry on his trade, and to pay his creditors their debts; and it was agreed, that such conveyances might be made and executed by the trustees with or without the concurrence of A., and that they should be seised or interested in the money arising from such sale or mortgage. At the time this deed was executed, A. had stock in trade, and other personal effects to a considerable amount, independently of the partnership assets, which were not sufficient to pay the partnership debts. The trustees were not creditors of either A. or his partner. A. and his partner afterwards gave C. & Co., who were not creditors of either, a power of attorney to make demands of every description, to examine and settle all the accounts, together with other powers to act for them, they agreeing to ratify whatever should be done under it. A deed was afterwards prepared by A. and his trustees, for the purpose of conveying all his freehold and leasehold estates previously conveyed to D. & Co. to sell or mortgage, with a view to raise 180,000*l.*, and 40,000*l.* in negotiable bills of exchange, and to indemnify the drawers and acceptors; but these sums were not advanced, nor were the bills drawn, or any other act done under the latter deed:—Held, that neither the execution of the first conveyance to his trustees, nor the power of attorney, under these circumstances, constituted an act of bankruptcy by A. Berney v. Davison, 4 Moore, 126; 1 B. & B. 408.

So, where such partners, being in insolvent circumstances, stopped payment on the 15th of February, 1819, and dissolved their partnership on that day: and A. being separately possessed of freehold and leasehold estates, conveyed the whole of them on the same day, by indentures of lease and release, to trustees in trust for sale or mortgage, for the purpose of converting such estates into money, it being convenient to A. to raise money at an early period: and subsequently to this conveyance, A. and B. gave a power of attorney to C. & Co. to recover all debts which should be due to them, together with full powers to act for them:—Held, that these circumstances did not constitute an act of bankruptcy by A. Berney v. Vyner, 4 Moore, 322; 1 B. & B. 482.

The separate assignments by partners of their separate estates to trustees for the benefit of their creditors, one of which assignments is registered under the Bankruptcy Act of 1861, and the other not, do not operate as a bankruptcy of the firm so as to bring into operation the provision of the Bankruptcy Act of 1849, s. 171, as to set-off for mutual credits. London, Bombay and Mediterranean Bank v. Narraway, 15 L. R., Eq. 93; 42 L. J., Ch. 329; 27 L. T. 572; 21 W. R. 318.

2. Assignment of Debtor's whole Property.

i. To Secure an Existing Debt.

Generally.—An assignment by a trader of all his estate, stock, and effects to one creditor is in itself an act of bankruptcy, without any fraud on the part of the trader. Siebert v. Spooner, 1 M. & W. 714; 2 Gale, 135.

An assignment by a trader in insolvent circumstances of all his stock in trade to one creditor, is an act of bankruptcy. Oriental Bank Corporation v. Coleman, 3 Giff. 11; 30 L. J., Ch. 635; 4 L. T. 9; 9 W. R. 432.

The law that a conveyance of a man's whole property to secure a past debt, whether he is a trader or a non-trader, is an act of bankruptcy, has not been altered by the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. Wood, In re, Luckes, Ex parte, 7 L. R., Ch. 302; 41 L. J., Bk. 21; 26 L. T. 113; 20 W. R. 403.

What is whole Property.—Where a debtor, in consideration of a pre-existing debt, executes a bill of sale which is so extensive as to prevent him from carrying on his trade, and is calculated, to his knowledge, to defeat and delay his creditors, he thereby commits an act of bankruptcy, and the conveyance is void as against his assignees. Young v. Fletcher, 4 F. & F. 1081.

A tradesman mortgaged the freehold house in which he carried on his trade, being his only real estate, to secure an existing debt of 1,100*l.*, for which he was liable as surety, which exceeded the value of the mortgaged property. His other property was of very trifling amount. He was at the time liable as surety on a promissory note for 2,000*l.*, and afterwards the other makers having become insolvent, he was called upon for payment, and became bankrupt:—Held, that the mortgage was void as against the assignees in bankruptcy, as being an assignment made to defeat or delay creditors. Goodricke v. Taylor, 2 De G., J. & S. 135; 10 Jur., N. S. 414; 10 L. T. 113; 12 W. R. 632. Affirming, 2 H. & M. 380; 9 L. T. 604; 12 W. R. 301.

A trader conveyed all his property, except his furniture and book debts, to a creditor for securing a previously-existing debt:—Held, that, notwithstanding the reservation, the deed was fraudulent and void, inasmuch as it placed the bulk of his property out of the reach of his other creditors. Fozley, Ex parte, Nurse, In re, 3 L. R., Ch. 515; 18 L. T. 362; 16 W. R. 831.

Pension not Assigned.—A debtor executed as security for an antecedent debt of 1,500*l.*, an assignment which included all his property of any appreciable value, except a pension of 10*s.* 6*d.* a day to which he was entitled as a retired servant of the East India Company:—Held, that as this pension would not pass to a trustee in bankruptcy, and could not be taken in execution by a creditor, it constituted no substantial exception from the assignment, which, being an assignment of substantially the whole of the debtor's property, was an act of bankruptcy. Hawker, Ex parte, Krelly, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 214; 41 L. J., Bk. 34; 26 L. T. 54; 20 W. R. 322.

Lease and Book Debts not Assigned.—A trader assigned all her stock-in-trade, fixtures, goods, chattels and effects, in or about her place of business, to secure an antecedent debt of 200*l.* The bill of sale included goods subsequently acquired for the purposes of the business, and was expressed to be in consideration of further future advances, but contained no agreement for making such advances. The lease of the shop and the book debts were not included in the bill of sale. Upon the trader's bankruptcy shortly afterwards, the excepted property realized about the same amount as that included in the bill of sale:—Held, that the lease and book debts formed a substantial exception, and that the bill of sale was not void as an assignment of the debtor's whole property on the eve of bankruptcy. Bolland, Ex parte, Price, In re, 41 L. J., Bk. 60; 20 W. R. 862.

Motive for Assignment Immaterial.—Where a debtor assigns his whole property as a security for a past debt only, it is an act of bankruptcy, whatever the motives of the parties may have been. If there is a further advance, it is not a question whether the further advance is great or small, but whether there was a bona fide intention of carrying on the business. Ellis, Ex parte, Ellis, In re, 2 Ch. D. 797; 45 L. J., Bk. 159; 34 L. T. 705—C. A.

Bill of Sale—Renewal.—An advance of 55l. was made to a trader, on the security of bills of sale of all the goods and effects of the trader, which were valued at 600l. There was an agreement between the lender and the trader that the bills of sale should be from time to time renewed, so as to render it not necessary to register them. The bills were accordingly renewed every nineteen days, and this was done three times. The trader then became bankrupt:—Held, that the last bills of sale were invalid, as constituting an act of bankruptcy. Cohen, Ex parte, Sparke, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 20; 41 L. J., Bk. 17; 25 L. T. 473; 20 W. R. 69.

A bill of sale of the whole of the mortgagor's property, given by way of renewal of a former one not registered, is, if no fresh advance is made by the mortgagee, an act of bankruptcy, and void, as against the trustee in bankruptcy of the mortgagor, notwithstanding its registration in due time. Stevens, Ex parte, Stevens, In re, 20 L. R., Eq. 786; 44 L. J., Bk. 136; 33 L. T. 135; 23 W. R. 908.

The forbearance of the grantee under an unregistered bill of sale of the whole of the grantor's property, given for value, to seize the property comprised in it is not, as against the trustee in bankruptcy of the grantor, good consideration for the giving of a new bill of sale in lieu of the first, but the new bill of sale given under such circumstances without any fresh advance to the grantor is an act of bankruptcy, and void as against the trustee in bankruptcy of the grantor. Payne, Ex parte, Cross, In re, 11 Ch. D. 539; 40 L. T. 296; 27 W. R. 368.

Consideration wrongly stated.—A. being indebted to several creditors, assigned to one of them, B., all his property by a bill of sale, nominally for further advances of goods, but really for the debt already due. Three days later, C., another creditor, applied to A. for payment of his debt, and was told that all the property on the premises was already assigned to B. for 90l. which he owed him. C. then accepted goods for which he gave no receipt. On the fourth day, B., who had made no further advance of goods, took possession under the bill of sale, and sold off soon afterwards. W., also a creditor, filed a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy against A., but which was not proceeded with, A. having agreed to execute a deed of assignment to trusttees of all his estates and effects (being the proceeds of the bill of sale and the furniture). In an action by the trustees against C. for the goods received by him:—Held, first, that the bill of sale to B. was an act of bankruptcy. Topping v. Keynell, 16 C. B., N. S. 258; 33 L. J., C. P. 225; 10 Jur., N. S. 774; 10 L. T. 526; 12 W. R. 756.

Held, secondly, that the statement by A. to C. was notice to C. of an act of bankruptcy. Id.

Held, thirdly, that the trustees under the deed were entitled to recover the goods assigned to C. Id.

From Sheriff.—A trader being in difficulties, and having five executions against him, all his goods were conveyed to the defendant by a bill of sale from the sheriff, with an understanding that they should remain in A.'s premises to enable him to repurchase them; the jury having found that the object of the transaction was not merely to relieve A. from a forced sale of his goods, but also to protect them from the demands of other creditors:—Held, that the transaction was an act of bankruptcy. Graham v. Furber, 14 C. B. 410; 2 C. & P. 452; 23 L. J., C. P. 51; 18 Jur. 226.

Security for Judgment Debt.—Execution was levied upon goods on the premises of a trader, who was in insolvent circumstances and had ceased to carry on his trade, for a debt exceeding 50l. The trader executed a bill of sale, by which he mortgaged all his stock in trade and effects to secure the judgment debt, and the sheriff withdrew:—Held, that whatever might have been the case before the passing of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, s. 73, the bill of sale was an act of bankruptcy, for it prevented the creditors from treating the seizure and sale as an act of bankruptcy and obtaining a distribution of the property seized by means of an adjudication in bankruptcy; and that any benefit which might be expected to arise from postponing a forced sale was a benefit only to the execution creditor, and not to the rest of the creditors, who took no benefit under the security. Woodhouse v. Murray, 2 L. R., Q. B. 634; 36 L. J., Q. B. 289; 16 L. T. 559; 15 W. R. 1109; 8 B. & S. 464. Affirmed, 4 L. R., Q. B. 27; 38 L. J., Q. B. 28; 19 L. T. 570; 17 W. R. 206; 9 B. & S. 720—Ex. Ch.

Partners—Assignment of all Personal Property of One Partner.—One of two partners in trade assigned the whole of his separate assets, and gave a power of attorney to assign all his personal property as security for a previously-existing separate debt. The partnership was at this time insolvent:—Held, that the execution of the deed was an act of bankruptcy, notwithstanding the fact that none of the partnership assets were in terms included in the deed. Trevor, Ex parte, Burghardt, In re, 1 Ch. D. 297; 45 L. J., Bk. 27; 33 L. T. 756; 24 W. R. 301.

Assignment of Partnership Assets—Separate Debt.—It is a fraud upon the creditors of a firm for one of the partners, who knows that the firm is insolvent, to assign the partnership assets as security for his own private debt, or for future advances to be made to himself. Such an assignment necessarily tends to defeat the creditors of the partnership and is void as an act of bankruptcy. Snowball, Ex parte, Douglas, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 534; 41 L. J., Bk. 49; 26 L. T. 894; 20 W. R. 786.

Such an assignment will be void altogether as an act of bankruptcy, notwithstanding the fact that it is made a security as well for partnership as for private debts. Ib.

ii. To Secure an Existing Debt and Present Advances.

Seventeen months before his bankruptcy a trader assigned by deed all his estate and effects by way of security for the repayment of a sum due, and a further advance of a moderate amount:—Held, that, under the circumstances, the deed was not void under 13 Eliz. c. 5, or as an act of bankruptcy. Allen v. Bonnett, 5 L. R., Ch. 577; 23 L. T. 437.

Semble, also, that even if there had not been a further advance, the lapse of twelve months before the bankruptcy prevented the deed from being invalidated as an act of bankruptcy. Ib.

Advance to pay Costs of Assignment.]—An assignment by a trader of all his property, book debts and stock in trade, in consideration of an old debt of 530*l.*, the only present advance being 20*l.* to pay the trader's attorney the costs of the assignment, amounts to a fraud in the eye of the law, and is an act of bankruptcy, notwithstanding that it was in fact, as between the parties to it, a perfectly fair and bona fide transaction. Person v. Moon, 15 L. T. 444.

Book debts due to the bankrupt paid to a third party under such an assignment belong to the assignee of the bankruptcy, and may be recovered by him in an action for money had and received. Ib.

Right to Seize all after-acquired Property.]—A trader, in consideration of a past debt of 240*l.* and a present advance of 200*l.*, conveyed by deed substantially the whole of his property, giving the transferee a right to seize and take all future acquired property, even though it should be purchased with the money which was alleged to be the consideration for the transfer:—Held, that inasmuch as the trader got no equivalent for any part of the stock transferred, and such transfer necessarily defeated and delayed his creditors, though without fraud in fact, it constituted an act of bankruptcy. Graham v. Chapman, 12 C. B. 85; 21 L. J., C. P. 173.

A bill of sale to secure an existing debt and a present advance, which assigns the whole of the grantor's property, including that which he may purchase by means of the advance, is not necessarily void as an act of bankruptcy. Graham v. Chapman (12 C. B. 85) on this point overruled. Hawwell, Ex parte, Hemingway, In re, 23 Ch. D. 626; 52 L. J., Ch. 737; 48 L. T. 742; 31 W. R. 711—C. A.

— With an exception.]—A bill of sale including all the existing property of a trader and containing a power to seize all after-acquired property with an exception, was made by him in favour of a creditor, in consideration partly of an existing debt and partly of a sum advanced by such creditor. This advance consisted of a sum paid to another creditor in satisfaction of a debt secured by a previous bill of sale over the same property, for the purpose of redeeming the property which he had already seized under such bill. More than twelve months after the date of the previous bill of sale proceedings were taken for a liquidation of the debtor's affairs by arrangement, and a trustee was appointed:—Held, that the later bill of sale was not an act of bankruptcy. Lomas v. Burton, 6 L. R., C. P. 107; 40 L. J., C. P., 150; 24 L. T. 137; 19 W. R. 441.

Promise to give Bill of Sale.]—When a sum of money is advanced upon the faith of a promise by the debtor to give a bill of sale of his property, the sum so advanced is to be considered as advanced upon the security of the bill of sale; but in such a case the promise must be an absolute one. Fisher, Ex parte, Ash, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 636; 41 L. J., Bk. 62; 26 L. T. 931; 20 W. R. 849.

When a doctor on the eve of bankruptcy assigns all his property to a creditor to secure a past debt as well as a fresh advance, the smallness of the fresh advance, although not necessarily making the assignment an act of bankruptcy, is strong evidence that the advance was made, not to enable the debtor to continue his trade, but to secure the past debt. Ib.

A trader applied to a creditor, who had previously advanced him 600*l.*, for a further advance of 100*l.*, which was accordingly made on the debtor giving a conditional promise that if he did not repay the 100*l.* within ten days he would make an assignment of all his property to the creditor to secure both the past and fresh advance. Default was made in payment, and the assignment was executed. Shortly afterwards the debtor became bankrupt, and the property was sold for about 700*l.*:—Held, that, having regard to the conditional nature of the promise and the smallness of the fresh advance, the assignment was an act of bankruptcy and void against the creditors. Ib.

Bill of Exchange—Payment by Drawer.]—Payment of bills by the drawer at the request of the acceptor, who, in consideration, assigns to the drawer all his property to secure the amount and also certain past debts, is a substantial advance, and prevents the assignment from being an act of bankruptcy. Reed, Ex parte, Tweedell, In re, 14 L. R., Eq. 586; 26 L. T. 558; 20 W. R. 622.

Therefore, when, at the request of T., I., M. & Co. paid the amount due on certain bills drawn by them and accepted by T., and T. assigned to them his interest in certain marine engines and machinery (which constituted his whole property), as security for the moneys due on the bills, and also for other moneys due from him to them:—Held, that the assignment was not an act of bankruptcy. Ib.

Further Supply of Goods.]—A publican being indebted to his spirit merchants in 668*l.*, ordered from them goods to the value of 92*l.* 11*s.*, part of which was for immediate delivery and the rest in bond; and at the same time paid them on account 50*l.* in cash, and a cheque for 100*l.* The merchants despatched the goods ordered for delivery, which were of the value of 52*l.*, but before they reached their destination the cheque was dishonoured. The merchants stopped the goods in transitu. Thereupon the customer paid the amount of the cheque, but was informed by the merchants that they would not release the goods in transitu, or supply him with more goods, unless he gave security for his account. He then, in consideration of their releasing the goods, executed a bill of sale in favour of the merchants of the bulk but not the whole of his property, defeasible on payment of their debt immediately upon demand, with power of seizure and sale in default of payment. The goods were delivered, and the debtor continued his business, but in the following week the merchants discovered that he was absenting himself from home at a busy time, and they took possession under the bill of sale. One week after this the debtor filed his petition for liquidation:—Held, upon these facts, that there was a present consideration for the bill of sale, amounting to a substantial advance for the purpose of carrying on the business, and that the assignment was not an act of bankruptcy. Thri-fall, Ex parte, Williamson, In re, 46 L. J., Bk. 8; 35 L. T. 675; 25 W. R. 127.

Advance to enable Trader to continue Business.—The question whether a further advance to a trader will sustain an assignment to secure it and a previous debt is not simply a question of amount, but a question whether the advance was made to enable the trader to continue business, or merely to enable the creditor to obtain a security. Greener, Ex parte, Vane, In re, 46 L. J., Bk. 76; 36 L. T. 781—C. A.

A firm of traders, one of the partners in which was an infant, in consideration of one of their creditors paying out an execution for about 100*l.*, executed an assignment to him of their whole joint and separate property to secure the repayment of the 100*l.* and an existing debt of about 200*l.* on demand. The business was carried on for about three weeks by the firm, when the bill of sale holder took possession, and the firm then went into liquidation:—Held, that the payment of the execution creditor was not a present advance such as to sustain the assignment. Ib.

A shoemaker in a very small way of business executed to a creditor a bill of sale upon all his property except his book debts, afterwards valued at 70*l.*, to secure a past debt of 227*l.* 5*s.*, and a fresh advance of 15*l.*:—Held, that, under the circumstances, the sum of 15*l.* was a substantial further advance sufficient to enable him to continue his trade. Etans, Ex parte, Edwards, In re, 39 L. T. 364.

An assignment of a debtor's whole property, in consideration of an existing debt and of a further advance, is not an act of bankruptcy in a case where the further advance may be the means of enabling the debtor to continue business. Heath v. Cochrane, 46 L. J., Q. B. 727; 37 L. T. 280.

A farmer, knowing that he was hopelessly insolvent, but for the purpose of going on as long as he could, obtained an advance from a money-lender, to whom he was already indebted, upon the security of a bill of sale of all his effects, stock, crops, &c., both present and future. Nine months afterwards he failed to pay an instalment due, and the grantee of the bill of sale took possession of and sold the effects. Upon action brought by the trustee in bankruptcy of the grantor's estate, claiming the proceeds of the sale:—Held, that the granting of the bill of sale did not amount to an act of bankruptcy so as to defeat the title of the grantee under it. Ib.

A judgment creditor, who had issued execution upon the property of his insolvent debtor, agreed to make him a substantial advance for the alleged purpose of enabling him to carry on his business, upon the understanding come to at a meeting at which all the parties to the transaction were present, that the advance should be applied in paying the bankers of the debtor, who had pressed for payment of a debt of 2,000*l.*, and threatened to make the debtor a bankrupt if they were not paid, and also in paying off two other debts due to solicitors employed in the transaction. A bill of sale over substantially the whole of the debtor's property was given by the debtor to the execution creditor, on the 9th September, 1882, to secure the execution debt and the fresh advance. The fresh advance was applied in payment of the debts to the bankers and the solicitors. On the 11th of September, possession under the bill of sale was taken by the grantee. On the 13th of September, the debtor filed a liquidation petition, and the trustees impeached the bill of sale and the above-mentioned payments:—Held, that the effect of the granting of the bill of sale being to prevent the debtor from carrying on his business, the bill of sale and also the payments to the solicitors were fraudulent and void; but that the payment to the bankers, who had acted bona fide, was protected by the saving clause of s. 92 of the act. Clater, Ex parte, Denison, Ex parte, Wilkinson, In re, 48 L. T. 648.

Small further Advance.—A trader, in a state of indebtedness, in 1872, assigned all his property, except a small portion worth 5*l.*, to one of his creditors, partly in consideration of the antecedent debt, and partly in consideration of a small further advance of money:—Held, that the transaction was necessarily and by force of law, without reference to any extrinsic circumstances shewing fraud, an act of bankruptcy. James v. Moriarty, 8 Ir. R., C. L. 454.

Fair Equivalent.—An assignment by a trader of his whole property for a fair equivalent is not an act of bankruptcy, although a past debt is included in the sum secured by the assignment. Bew v. Bill, 16 W. R. 760.

Consideration wrongly stated—Absence of Fraud.—An assignment by a bill of sale of the whole of a trader's property to a creditor in consideration partly of existing debts, and partly of a sum advanced by the creditor at the date of the assignment, and containing a power to seize after-acquired property, is not an act of bankruptcy, although the consideration for the assignment is falsely stated therein, there being no fraud in fact shewn. Keen v. Mawson, 24 L. T. 395; 19 W. R. 1145.

Bill of Sale in Substitution for Unregistered Bill—Fraud.—A trader gave a bill of sale of his stock in trade to A. in consideration of his indorsing a bill of exchange which the trader discounted, but the bill of sale was not registered. Nine months afterwards he executed an assignment of the bulk of his property to A. to secure the same debt and further advances:—Held, that the assignment, being otherwise fraudulent, could not be supported on the ground that it was a substitution for the first bill of sale. Fozley, Ex parte, Nurse, In re, 3 L. R., Ch. 515; 18 L. T. 862; 16 W. R. 831.

iii. To Secure an Existing Debt and Future Advances.

Generally.]—A bill of sale by which all a trader's property is assigned, as a security for an antecedent debt, and also for future advances, is an act of bankruptcy. Lacon v. Liffen, 4 Giff. 75; 32 L. J., Ch. 25; 9 Jur., N. S. 13; 7 L. T. 411; 11 W. R. 135. Affirmed, 32 L. J., Ch. 315; 9 Jur., N. S. 477; 7 L. T. 774; 11 W. R. 474.

A trader, by a bill of sale, dated the 24th of April, 1860, reciting that he was indebted to M. in 98l. for goods already delivered, and that he was desirous of obtaining a further supply to the extent of 82l., which M. had declined to furnish without security, assigned to M. all his household furniture, stock in trade, and effects for securing the 180l. and any further advances which M. might make to him, with a proviso for redemption on payment, and a power to M. to seize and sell if the money should not be paid on demand. No further advance beyond the 82l., either in money or in goods, was made by M. At the time of the execution of this deed the trader was indebted to several other creditors in sums sufficient to constitute good petitioning creditors' debtors:—Held, that the execution of the deed was an act of bankruptcy. Topping v. Keywell, 16 C. B., N. S. 258; 33 L. J., C. P. 225; 10 Jur., N. S. 774; 10 L. T. 526; 12 W. R. 756.

Parol Agreement for Future Advances—Advances Made.]—An assignment of substantially the whole of a mortgagor's property to secure a previously-existing debt and further advances is not an act of bankruptcy, if there is a contemporaneous parol agreement on the part of the mortgagee to make further advances to a sufficient amount, and such advances are afterwards in fact made, even though the deed contains no covenant or obligation on the part of the mortgagee to make any further advances. Winder, Ex parte, Winstanley, In re, 1 Ch. D. 290; 45 L. J., Bk. 14; 33 L. T. 615. Affirmed, nom. Sheen, Ex parte, 1 Ch. D. 560; 45 L. J., Bk. 89; 34 L. T. 48; 24 W. R. 685—C. A. See next case.

—Exception of Tenant Right.]—In order that the execution of a bill of sale of substantially the whole of the grantor's property as security for a pre-existing debt and further advances may not be an act of bankruptcy, it is necessary that there should be an agreement binding the grantee to make further advances. It is not sufficient that further advances should have been in the contemplation of the parties, the deed being stamped so as to cover them, and further advances having been actually made after the execution of the deed. A farmer assigned by a bill of sale, as a security for a pre-existing debt and further advances, the whole of his property, except a part of his tenant right under his agreement of tenancy. That agreement provided that the tenant should be paid on quitting the farm for all fallows made in the last year of the tenancy (not exceeding a certain proportion), for all seeds duly sown by him, for all dung made during the last year, for all hay, fodder, and straw, the produce of the last year, &c., at a valuation. But it was also provided that, in case of any breach or non-performance of any of the stipulations on the part of the tenant, it should be lawful for the landlord to re-enter, and that, in case no entry should be made, the landlord should on the expiration of the tenancy be entitled to an allowance from the tenant in respect of any such breach or non-performance, to be deducted from the tenant's valuation. There was no covenant or agreement binding the grantee to make further advances, though the deed was stamped so as to cover a further advance:—Held, that the tenant right did not form a substantial exception from the deed; that the execution of the deed was an act of bankruptcy by the grantor; and that it was void as against the trustee in his bankruptcy, which commenced within three months afterwards. Winder, Ex parte (1 Ch. D. 290) considered. Dann or Thorpe, Ex parte, Parker, In re, 17 Ch. D. 26; 51 L. J., Ch. 290; 44 L. T. 760; 29 W. R. 771—C. A. Affirming, 43 L. T. 704.

Some small further advances were, in fact, made by the grantee to the grantor, soon after the execution of the deed, to enable him to pay the wages of his labourers:—Held, that, inasmuch as the grantee had made those advances with notice of the act of bankruptcy committed by the execution of the deed, he could not retain them out of the proceeds of sale of the grantor's stock which he had seized under the deed. Ib.

Assignment of whole of Property to Secure existing Debt—Agreement to make Further Advances.]—In order that a deed, assigning the whole of a debtor's property as security for an existing debt, may not be fraudulent and an act of bankruptcy within sub-s. 2 of s. 6 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, on the ground that the assignee agreed to make further advances to the assignor, it is not necessary that the agreement should be technically binding at law or in equity; a bonâ fide promise is sufficient. Wilkinson, Ex parte, Berry, In re, 22 Ch. D. 788; 52 L. J., Ch. 657; 48 L. T. 495; 31 W. R. 649—C. A.

The question in all such cases is whether the arrangement was made bonâ fide with the view of enabling the debtor to continue his business, or whether it was a mere scheme to obtain payment of the existing debt. Dann, Ex parte, supra, commented on. Ib.

iv. For a New Consideration.

Consideration—Present Advance.]—An assignment, by a trader, of all his property and effects for a present advance of part of their value is not necessarily an act of bankruptcy. Pennell v. Reynolds, 11 C. B., N. S. 709; 5 L. T. 286.

It is for the jury to say whether, under the circumstances, the effect of the assignment is to defeat and delay creditors. Ib.

An assignment by a trader of all his property to secure a present advance is not necessarily fraudulent, and an act of bankruptcy, unless the lender knew that the object of the loan was to defeat and delay creditors; and the law does not impose on the lender the obligation of shewing the bona fides of the loan. Colemere, In re, 1 L. R., Ch. 128; 35 L. J., Bk. 8; 12 Jur., N. S. 38; 13 L. T. 621.

If such an assignment is an act of bankruptcy as being fraudulent against the creditors, it is also void as between the parties thereto. Ib.

C. executed a bill of sale of goods to the amount of 60l. to secure advances, and three days after its execution made an assignment of all his property for the benefit of his creditors :—Held, that the giving of the bill of sale was not a fraudulent preference on the part of C., and that the bill of sale was valid, although C. knew, at the time he gave it, that he was in difficulties. Curties v. Jacobs, 16 L. T. 574.

An assignment of a person's whole property for a bonâ fide present advance is not an act of bankruptcy, although exorbitant interest is charged and stringent conditions imposed. Harrison v. Cohen, 32 L. T. 717.

E. by deed assigned all his farming stock to the defendant to secure payment of 175*l.* by instalments at two and three months. Only 135*l.* was advanced. Afterwards 85*l.* more was advanced, and a receipt for 100*l.* payable in one month indorsed on the deed. The deed contained, among other stringent conditions, a power to seize and sell after-acquired property, and a clause prohibiting E. from selling any of the stock. The defendant sold under the deed, and the property realized 608*l.* :—Held, that the assignment was not an act of bankruptcy, and that E.'s trustee could not recover in trover, but could recover the overcharges on the sale as money received. Id.

— Advance to Pay Debts.—A trader, Y., being indebted to L., agreed with the defendant, upon his paying 200*l.* to L. in liquidation of the debt, to assign all her goods to him as security for the repayment of the 200*l.* The assignment contained a power for the defendant to take all the goods which then were, or at any time during the continuance of the security might be, upon the premises, and to sell the same, and repay himself the 200*l.* and interest. There were covenants to pay the 200*l.* by instalments, and that the traders should remain in possession until default in payment. Y., who had remained in possession, sold the goods, and paid 207*l.* to the defendant for principal and interest. Afterwards Y. became bankrupt. In an action by her assignees against the defendant to recover the 207*l.*, the jury having found that the deed was not fraudulent, nor executed in contemplation of bankruptcy :—Held, that the deed was not an act of bankruptcy, inasmuch as the payment of the 200*l.* by the defendant to L. was an advance to Y., to enable her to carry on her business, and she derived the full benefit of the whole sum advanced. Hutton v. Critwell, 1 El. & Bl. 15; 22 L. J., Q. B. 98; 17 Jur. 392.

A trader, being pressed by two creditors, one of whom had a bill of sale on part of his property, and the other creditor an execution on the residue of his goods, applied to C. to assist him, and in consideration of his agreeing to pay off the two creditors, assigned to C., by a bill of sale, all his estate and effects. C. paid off the creditors :—Held, that the assignment was not an act of bankruptcy, as it was not an assignment in consideration of a past debt only, but an assignment in consideration of the assignee releasing the trader's property from a charge already laid upon it. Whitmore v. Claridge, 33 L. J., Q. B. 87; 9 L. T. 451; 12 W. R. 214—Ex. Ch.

The Court of Bankruptcy will not infer fraud from the mere suspicion that it may exist. Where, therefore, C., being in difficulties, in consideration of a sum of 900*l.*, gave a bill of sale over all his property to his brother W. to enable him to pay off two pressing creditors, for the payment of whose debts W. was surety, and W. immediately afterwards borrowed from the two creditors the exact sum so paid to them, whereby W. was relieved from his liability as surety :—Held, that the bill of sale, being for value for the purpose of paying debts, could not be impeached as an act of bankruptcy. Jay, Ex parte, Morris, In re, 45 L. T. 797.

— Surety to Composition Deed.—A transaction whereby the property of a trader is conveyed to secure a surety to a composition deed against liabilities which he has incurred to the particular creditors who may come in, and which surety can stop the trade at any moment, is not a case where the trader receives an equivalent. Leake v. Young, 5 El. & Bl. 955; 25 L. J., Q. B. 265; 2 Jur., N. S. 516.

— Present Advance—Bill of Sale—Consideration wrongly stated.—B., a trader, by bill of sale, conveyed all his stock, and all the stock that should during the continuance of the security become his, with a power of sale, to C., as a security for money to be advanced by C. The bill of sale was drawn up as a security for an existing debt, as well as for fresh advances; but this was a mistake, the whole consideration being fresh advances not to exceed a certain sum. C. made the advances; the property, in fact, was of about three times the value of the advances. B. was at this time in reality insolvent; but the court, which had power to draw inferences of fact, drew the inference that the advances were bonâ fide asked for and made with a view to keep the business going, and in the belief that they would enable B. to get over his difficulties. Afterwards C. took possession of the goods. B. being declared a bankrupt, his assignees brought trover against C., contending that the transaction in question was itself an act of bankruptcy :—Held, that the transaction must be viewed as if the bill of sale had been drawn as it was intended to be, entirely as a security for fresh advances. Bittlestone v. Cook, 6 El. & Bl. 296; 25 L. J., Q. B. 281; 2 Jur., N. S. 758.

Held, also, that the effect of pledging the whole of the trader's property for such advances was not necessarily to delay his creditors, as the advances, even if bearing a small proportion to the value of the property pledged, might be of more advantage to the trader and his creditors than the property itself; and, consequently, that the bill of sale, being in fact bonâ fide, was not, in point of law, fraudulent, nor an act of bankruptcy. Id.

— Promissory Notes to Creditors.—An assignment of all the property of traders, in consideration of the assignees giving promissory notes to the traders' creditors, is an act of bankruptcy. Zwischenbart, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 671. Affirmed, De Gex, 273; 13 L. J., Bk. 19; 8 Jur. 10, 81.

v. In Performance of a Previous Contract.

A deed was made between L., a trader, B., his surety, and his creditors, reciting that the creditors had agreed to accept a composition in the pound on the amount of their debts, to be paid by instalments, and secured by bills drawn by L. on B. and accepted by him and by L.'s promissory note. Before executing the deed, B. stipulated with L. for security to himself over all L.'s property. On non-payment of the first of the instalments one of the creditors commenced an action against L. for his whole debt, in which he ultimately obtained judgment. L., under pressure from B., after the commencement of the action, and before judgment was obtained on it, assigned all his property to B. This was bonâ fide in fulfilment of his promise to give B. security. L. was afterwards declared a bankrupt:—Held, that the assignment to B. was an act of bankruptcy, it being an assignment of all the trader's property, and not being for such an equivalent as to make it not necessarily delay his creditors. Leake v. Young, 5 El. & Bl. 955; 25 L. J., Q. B. 265; 2 Jur., N. S. 516.

But where a trader, being indebted to various persons, procured from A. an advance of 200*l.*, for which he verbally agreed to give a bill of sale of all his property if called upon to do so; and on receiving the money he gave to A. a promissory note for 200*l.*, a memorandum of agreement to assign some property expectant on the death of his wife's father, together with a policy of insurance, and also another memorandum of agreement to pay 10*l.* yearly as bonus; and at a later period, on being requested, he executed a bill of sale of all his property to A.:—Held, that such bill of sale, having been executed in pursuance of the original agreement, was not an act of bankruptcy. Harris v. Rickett, 4 H. & N. 1; 28 L. J., Ex. 47.

A trader who owed his brother 800*l.* applied to him for a further advance, which he declined to make without security; and ultimately, by letters of the 30th of June and the 1st of July, it was agreed that the brother should advance 150*l.*, and that on his doing so the debtor should give him a bill of sale of his plant, furniture and book debts, which comprised substantially his whole property. The brother advanced 50*l.* in August, 50*l.* in September, and 50*l.* on the 6th of October. On the last-named day, being the expiration of the time allowed by another large creditor, who was known by the brother to be pressing for payment of his debt, the debtor gave the brother the bill of sale, which was expressed to be to secure 900*l.* then due, 50*l.* then advanced, and any future advances. In the course of October the brother advanced 100*l.* more. In November the above-mentioned creditor took proceedings in bankruptcy, relying on the bill of sale as an act of bankruptcy:—Held, that the giving the bill of sale was not an act of bankruptcy, as it was given in pursuance of an agreement by which a substantial further advance was obtained; and that the circumstances negatived the conclusion that the giving it was purposely postponed till the debtor's circumstances were desperate. King, Ex parte, 2 Ch. D. 250; 45 L. J., Bk. 109; 34 L. T. 466; 24 W. R. 559—C. A.

In August, 1874, a shipbuilder having overdrawn his account with his bankers, offered to give them a security over a ship, which he was then building. This offer was declined in the first instance, with the intimation, however, that circumstances might arise which might render it desirable for the bank to have the security offered, whereupon he promised that whenever he was required to give it he would do so. Two months later, his account being still largely overdrawn, the bankers requested him to give them the promised security. Accordingly he deposited with them the builder's certificate of the ship, which was still unfinished, and the following day they put a man in possession. At the same time he, in consideration of 770*l.* then advanced to him, assigned to the bankers a trade debt of 2,384*l.* 2*s.* 8*d.*, as a further security for the general balance of his account. Two days afterwards he filed a petition for liquidation:—Held, that the transaction between him and his bankers was neither a fraudulent preference nor an act of bankruptcy. Winter, Ex parte, Softley, In re, 20 L. R., Eq. 746; 44 L. J., Bk. 107; 33 L. T. 62; 24 W. R. 68.

On the 9th of December, 1865, in consideration of the defendant having agreed to lend to J. 107*l.* to pay an acceptance then about to fall due, J. agreed to give him a mortgage of all his goods and chattels as security for that sum, and also for any further money the defendant might lend him. On the 6th of January, 1866, the defendant made a further advance of 64*l.* to J., who on the 27th of January executed a bill of sale in pursuance of the agreement, reciting the total amount then due, and assigning all his personal property to the defendant as security for it. On the 31st of December, 1866, J. was adjudicated a bankrupt:—Held, that the bill of sale, being given partly in respect of the original agreement and partly in respect of the subsequent advance, which was actually made to such an amount as to constitute a substantial equivalent for the assignment, was a valid bill of sale as against the assignee in bankruptcy. Mercer v. Peterson, 3 L. R., Ex. 104; 37 L. J., Ex. 54; 18 L. T., 30; 16 W. R. 486—Ex. Ch.

M., a foreigner, who carried on business in Paris as a circus proprietor, was under a contract to bring over his animals and plant to England for exhibition, and being prevented from removing them by an attachment levied in Paris, he procured D. to become surety for the return of the animals and plant to Paris, and thereupon he removed them to England for the purpose of fulfilling his engagement, and gave D. a bill of sale of the animals and plant, which were of the value of 80,000*l.*, to secure 5,000*l.*, in which sum the bill of sale recited that M. was indebted to D. for moneys lent and advanced, no moneys having in reality been advanced, but the bill of sale being intended to be a counter security to D. M. had no other property in England, but had other property in Paris and other foreign places:—Held, that the execution of the bill of sale was not an act of bankruptcy. Defries, Ex parte, Myers, In re, 35 L. T. 392—C. A.

g. Assignment of part of Debtor's Property to Secure Existing Debt.

A., a soap and alkali manufacturer, being indebted to a banking company, assigned to them, to secure past and future advances, his leasehold property, with all the stock in trade, utensils, and effects thereon, and also a policy of insurance, as a security for moneys advanced or to be advanced. The deed contained a power of sale, and a proviso that the trader should remain in possession until default. The assignment did not include another part of A.'s property, equal in amount to the debt covered by the security. In an action by A.'s assignees, to recover part of the property assigned, the jury found that the deed was not executed in contemplation of bankruptcy:—Held, that it was a valid deed, and did not amount to an act of bankruptcy. Carr v. Burdiss, 1 C., M. & R. 443; 5 Tyr. 136.

his goods and chattels to A., his landlord, but no attempt was made by any creditor to obtain an adjudication upon it, nor was there any creditor who could have done so. On the 11th of October, the day from and after which the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134 came into operation, A. made a distress on the goods of P., who was not a trader. P. was adjudicated bankrupt on his own petition, and assignees appointed:—Held, that the title of the assignees could not relate back to the act of bankruptcy in the preceding March, and consequently the 129th section of the first-mentioned statute did not apply. Paul v. Best, 3 B. & S. 537; 32 L. J., Q. B. 96; 9 Jur., N. S. 519; 7 L. T. 738; 11 W. R. 280.

Under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 96, s. 41, the title of the assignees related back only to the act of bankruptcy on which the fiat proceeded. Stenson v. Newham, 13 C. B. 285; 22 L. J., C. P. 110; 17 Jur. 600—Ex. Ch.

A trader had under pressure assigned all his property to one of his creditors, there being no such fraud as would have made the assignment void against creditors if bankruptcy had not ensued, nor any intention to prefer that creditor to other creditors under a bankruptcy then in contemplation, so as to amount to a fraudulent preference; but the assignment was such as must necessarily have prevented the trader from paying any others of his creditors, as the creditor must have known. The trader soon after became bankrupt on his own petition:—Held, that the assignment was an act of bankruptcy; and if the bankruptcy had been on the petition of a creditor, so that the title of the assignees could have related back to the act of bankruptcy, the property assigned would have belonged to them; but the bankruptcy being on the trader's own petition, there was no relation back, and therefore the property assigned belonged to the creditor. Jones v. Harber, 6 L. R., Q. B. 77; 40 L. J., Q. B. 59; 23 L. T. 606; 19 W. R. 248.

On the 22nd October, 1862, by deed between S. and the defendant, S., in consideration of 50*l.* advanced by the defendant, assigned all his household furniture and effects to the defendant, with a proviso for making the deed void, if S. should, on demand in writing given to him, or left at his last place of abode, pay the 50*l.* with interest; and in default of payment contrary to the proviso, then at any time thereafter the defendant was empowered to take possession of, and sell the goods; and until default, S. was to retain possession of them. At the same time S. gave the defendant his acceptance at four months for 50*l.* as collateral security, which the defendant indorsed over for value. On the 12th of February, S. was taken in execution, and committed to the county gaol. On the 16th the defendant, knowing S. to be in gaol, left a demand in writing at his house, and took possession of the goods the same evening, and, continuing in possession, sold them on the 13th of March. On the 18th of February, S. having made the affidavit required by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 98, petitioned in form pauperis, and on the 23rd was brought up to the county court and adjudicated a bankrupt. In trover by the official assignee against the defendant:—Held, first, that if the taking the possession on the 16th of February, the day of the demand, was premature, that did not prevent the defendant from taking possession afterwards in due time. Bramwell v. Eglinton, 5 B. & S. 39; 33 L. J., Q. B. 130; 10 Jur., N. S. 583; 10 L. T. 295; 13 W. R. 551.

Held, secondly, that the taking of the acceptance and indorsing it over for value, did not suspend the right of the defendant to take possession under the bill of sale. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 103, the adjudication related back to the date of the commitment of S. to prison, and therefore the goods, which were then in his order and disposition by the consent of the defendant, passed to the official assignee, and the transaction was not protected by sect. 133. Ib.

Where a trader was adjudicated bankrupt under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 223, without the filing of a petition by a creditor, the bankruptcy had no relation back to any act done by the bankrupt prior to the adjudication. Monk v. Sharp, 2 H. & N. 540; 27 L. J., Ex. 29; 3 Jur., N. S. 1327; S. P., Harrison, Ex parte, 26 L. J., Bk. 30; 3 Jur., N. S. 228; Southern v. Sidney, 3 Jur., N. S. 1239.

Debtor Summons—Act annulled by Satisfaction of Debt.—When an execution creditor was paid out, the debtor had already committed an act of bankruptcy by non-compliance with a debtor summons in respect of the execution creditor's debt:—Held, that the trustee in the liquidation could not avail himself of that act of bankruptcy, it having been annulled when the debt in respect of which it arose was satisfied. Greener, Ex parte, Vane, In re, 46 L. J., Bk. 76; 36 L. T. 781.

6. PROOF OF ACT OF BANKRUPTCY.

Trover by Assignees—Act of Bankruptcy subsequent to Conversion.—If in trover by assignees of a bankrupt the defendant plead that the plaintiffs are not assignees, they may, on that issue, give evidence of any act of bankruptcy committed before the date of the fiat, although such act of bankruptcy is later in date than the transaction which is relied on as the conversion by the defendant. Gibson v. King, Car. & M. 468.

Declaration by Bankrupt.—In order to make the declaration of a bankrupt admissible evidence of an act of bankruptcy, it is not essential that the declaration and act should be contemporaneous. Crouch v. Great Western Railway Company, 4 P. & D. 686; 1 Q. B. 51; 2 Railw. Cas. 505; 5 Jur. 826.

Unstamped Deed.—A deed of assignment under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, Schedule D., may be given in evidence as proof of an act of bankruptcy, though neither stamped nor registered; and notice of the execution of the deed is notice of an act of bankruptcy. Ponsford v. Walton, 3 L. R., C. P. 167; 37 L. J., C. P. 113; 17 L. T. 511; 16 W. R. 363.

A deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors not registered through want of the necessary assents, may be used, though unstamped, as evidence of an act of bankruptcy. Gouldwell, Ex parte, 4 L. R., Ch. 47; 38 L. J., Bk. 13; 19 L. T. 272; 17 W. R. 40; overruling Potter, Ex parte, 3 De G., J. & S. 240; 34 L. J., Bk. 46; 11 Jur., N. S. 49; 11 L. T. 435; 13 W. R. 189.

Onus of Proof.—If a petitioning creditor alleges that the debtor has committed an act of bankruptcy which can be committed only by a trader, the onus is on him to prove that the debtor was, within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, a trader at the time when the act was committed. Salaman, Ex parte, Taylor, In re, 21 Ch. D. 394; 47 L. T. 495; 31 W. R. 282—C. A.

A petitioning creditor, who alleges that his debtor has committed an act of bankruptcy, by departing from his dwelling-house with intent to defeat and delay his creditors, is bound to shew that the debtor is alive and in some other place. Geisel, Ex parte, Stanger, In re, 22 Ch. D. 436; 48 L. T. 405; 31 W. R. 264—C. A.

7. NOTICE TO DISPUTE.

Amendment of Notice and Costs.—In an action by assignees of a bankrupt, the defendant gave notice to dispute the trading and act of bankruptcy. At the trial, the judge nonsuited them on the ground that the petitioning creditor's debt upon the proceedings was contracted at a period when the bankrupt had ceased to be a trader. The court set aside the nonsuit, holding that the objection was not open to the defendant under the notice to dispute the trading and act of bankruptcy. A judge at chambers having allowed the defendant to amend his notice, by adding thereto that he intended at the trial to dispute the petitioning creditor's debt, the court refused to allow the assignees to discontinue without payment of costs. Hernemann v. Barber, 15 C. B. 774; 3 C. L. R. 239, 241.

Feigned Issue.—Feigned issue, on an allegation, that at the time of the seizing of goods in execution, the plaintiffs in the issue were entitled to the same, as against and free from the execution, and that the goods were not liable to be so seized as against such plaintiffs:—Held, that the plaintiffs who claimed as assignees under the bankruptcy (of the judgment debtor) were bound to prove the trading, petitioning creditor's debt and act of bankruptcy, though no notice had been given to dispute those matters. Lott v. Melville, 3 M. & G. 40; 3 Scott, N. R. 346; 9 D. P. C. 882; 5 Jur. 436.

V. DEBTOR SUMMONS.

1. TRADER DEBTOR SUMMONS UNDER 12 & 13 VICT. C. 106 AND PREVIOUS STATUTES.

a. Proceedings by Creditor.

Nature of Debt.—Where two firms had one partner common to both, a debt from one firm to the other cannot be made the subject of a notice for the purpose of creating an act of bankruptcy, the statute requiring such debt to be recoverable at law. Johnson, Ex parte, 2 Mont. D. & D. 678.

By Assignor of Debt.—An assignor of a debt cannot, without the assignee, proceed against the debtor by trader debtor summons. Taylor, Ex parte, 3 De G. & J. 480; 28 L. J., Bk. 9; 5 Jur., N. S., 527; 7 W. R. 273.

By Public Company.—Where a public company proceeds, it must be proved that some person was duly authorized to demand payment of the debt. Gratton, Ex parte, 2 Mont. D. & D. 401. See 24 & 25 Vict., c. 134, s. 92.

By Creditor with Notice of Petition.—A creditor after notice of a petition for arrangement may proceed by trader debtor summons, but does so at his peril, and may have to pay the costs of annulling an adjudication obtained by him. Arnold, Ex parte, 8 De G. & J. 473; 28 L. J., Bk. 11; 5 Jur., N. S. 398; 32 L. T., O. S. 268; 7 W. R. 174.

Affidavit—Set-off.—In making the affidavit of debt, the creditor ought to deduct any sum due to his debtor arising out of the transaction on which his demand is founded; and where there are mutual accounts, any clear set-off which he knows must be deducted from the amount of his demand. Marshall v. Sharland, 15 Q. B. 1051; 20 L. J., Q. B. 3; 15 Jur. 168.

Particulars.—In particulars served by a fruit merchant on a grocer, together with a summons under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 78, the word "goods" describes the wares supplied sufficiently to prevent an adjudication from being annulled on the ground of uncertainty in the particulars. Bower, Ex parte, 1 De G., Mac. & G. 468; 21 L. J., Bk. 61; 16 Jur. 734.

A partner of a firm in liquidation who signed for himself and late partners was entitled to sue out a trader debtor summons, and the court was not required to ascertain his individual interest in the sum claimed. Atwood, Ex parte, 19 L. T. 42.

Particulars of demand and affidavits of debt are to be read together, and any information with respect to the debt which is omitted from the one, but disclosed in the other, is sufficient. Id.

Dates of bills of exchange comprised in the claim are not material. Id.

A creditor's usual signature to particulars of demand was sufficient. Roche, Ex parte, 37 L. J., Bk. 16.

Affidavit and Particulars inconsistent.—An affidavit filed as the foundation of an act of bankruptcy stated the demand to be for goods sold and delivered, but, by the particulars, the greater portion of the debt was stated merely as due on bills of exchange, which, however, it afterwards turned out were given in respect of goods sold and delivered:—Held, that the proceeding was irregular, and an insufficient foundation for an act of bankruptcy. Greenstock, Ex parte, 1 De Gex, 230; 15 L. J., Bk. 5; 10 Jur. 122.

Waiver of Irregularity.—A debtor, on being served with the summons, called on the creditor's solicitor, and saw his clerk, at whose instance the debtor signed a memorandum, promising to pay at a certain time, or that, if he did not, the creditor might proceed on the summons. The debtor was attended by no solicitor on his behalf, and was not aware of the irregularity in the proceedings:—Held, that neither the signature of the memorandum nor his failure to attend the summons prevented his impeaching the regularity of the proceedings, but that the fiat ought to be annulled with costs. Id.

In Amount of Debt.—A plaintiff filed an affidavit under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 122, s. 11, and in the form specified, that the defendant was indebted to him in 99l. 19s. 7d., and that an account of particulars of demand, amounting to that sum, was thereunto annexed. The particulars purported to be for 99*l.* 19*s.* 7*d.*, and, after setting out the items, exhibited the following figures:—

"Total. . . . .	£100 14 7
"Cr. Balance for coals supplied . . . . .	10 15 0
	£89 19 7"

The defendant appeared to the summons issued thereupon, and deposed that he had a good defence to the amount of 54*l.* 15*s.* 10*d.* The plaintiff subsequently brought an action for 100*l.* 14*s.* 7*d.*, to which the defendant pleaded a set-off, and the plaintiff recovered 86*l.*:—Held, that the defendant was not entitled to costs, inasmuch as by reference to the account of the particulars, the affidavit was in substance for 89*l.* 19*s.* 7*d.*, and not for 99*l.* 19*s.* 7*d.* Wilding v. Temperley, 11 Q. B. 987; 17 L. J., Q. B. 184; 12 Jur. 417.

Summons—Service of Imperfect Copy.—Where the signature of the commissioner to an original summons shewn to a trader on serving him with the summons was omitted in the copy of such summons left with him:—Held, that this was not a personal service of the summons upon the trader, and that his not appearing before the commissioner after such service did not constitute an act of bankruptcy upon which an adjudication against him could be founded. Tindall, Ex parte, 24 L. J., Bk. 18; 1 Jur., N. S. 857.

Proceeding under Statute and by Action.—A. filed an affidavit of debt in the Bankruptcy Court against B., under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 122, s. 11, and filed a notice requiring immediate payment of the same. On the same day he also served a copy of the writ of summons upon B., indorsed with the amount of the debt, and 2*l.* 2*s.* costs. B., having afterwards signed an admission of the debt, paid the same. The court refused to stay the proceedings in the action, holding that A. might proceed by action and under the statute at the same time, and that the proceedings in the former could only be stayed upon payment of costs. Covington v. Hogarth, 2 D. & L. 619; 8 Scott, N. R. 725; 7 M. & G. 1013; 9 Jur. 88.

Filing Affidavit for Amount greater than Debt without probable Cause—Omitting to give Credit for Counterclaim.—A plaintiff who has made an affidavit of debt against a trader, and recovered less than the amount sworn to, will be ordered to pay the costs to the defendant as having made the affidavit without reasonable or probable cause, if he has sworn to his own claim, without allowing for a counterclaim of the defendant, arising on the same transaction. Marshall v. Sharland, 15 Q. B. 1051; 20 L. J., Q. B. 3; 15 Jur. 168.

Including Debt barred by Statute of Limitations.—A plaintiff filed an affidavit of debt, in which he swore that the defendant was indebted to him in 4,263*l.* 16*s.* 3*d.* This sum included an item of 1,291*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* for salary, at the rate of 500*l.* a year. Of this sum, 1,000*l.* was barred by the Statute of Limitations. No acknowledgment or promise to bar the statute, or payment on account, had been made, and in fact the plaintiff had never claimed any part of this sum of 1,291*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* before commencing the proceedings in bankruptcy. An action having been brought, the defendant denied his liability to pay the sum, but did not plead the Statute of Limitations. The cause having come on for trial, a verdict was taken, subject to a reference. The arbitrator awarded to the plaintiff 3,176*l.* 2*s.* 2*d.*, which included 203*l.* 19*s.* 3*d.*, which, when before the arbitrator, the parties agreed should be paid in respect of the claim for 1,291*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* The plaintiff alleged that this was a compromise; the defendant, that he agreed to pay it as the price of peace, having always denied his liability to pay any part of that sum:—Held, that the case must be judged of by the state of things existing when the affidavit was made, and that, as there had been no payment on account, or acknowledgment, written or verbal, to bar the statute or lead to the inference that the defendant would waive it, there was no reasonable or probable cause for making an affidavit that the sum of 1,000*l.*, barred by the statute, was due, and that the defendant was therefore entitled to his costs of the action. Hill v. Merritt, 1 H. & N. 758; 26 L. J., Ex. 126.

Mistake of Law.—In order to determine whether or not a creditor is liable to costs for having, without reasonable or probable cause, made an affidavit of debt, regard must be had to the surrounding circumstances and to the law, and not merely to the belief operating on his mind at the time. Hope v. Fenner, 2 C. B., N. S. 887; 26 L. J., C. P. 207; 3 Jur., N. S. 565.

Therefore, where a plaintiff had contracted to do works for the defendant at a fixed price, and did execute part, but the defendant, being dissatisfied, lawfully discharged him from continuing the works and finished them himself, and the plaintiff bona fide believed that under the circumstances he was entitled to charge measure and value prices for what had been done, and made such affidavit in bankruptcy of a debt greater than the contract price for the whole works, the court held the defendant entitled to his costs. Id.

Unliquidated Damages.—The plaintiff, a builder's piecemaster, was employed to do the carpenter's and joiner's work to certain houses for the defendant, for a given sum. Before the whole work was completed, the defendant discharged the plaintiff, who thereupon sued him for an alleged balance of 178*l.* 7*s.* 7*d.* for work and labour and money paid; and he also filed an affidavit in bankruptcy, in which he alleged that the defendant was indebted to him in that sum for work and labour and money paid. The jury found a verdict for the plaintiff for 100*l.* only:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to costs, there being no reasonable or probable cause for swearing to that as a debt, which, as to a part at least, was only a claim for unliquidated damages. Pratt v. Goswell, 9 C. B., N. S. 710.

Verdict not Conclusive Evidence.—Where a creditor who has made an affidavit of debt obtains a verdict for a less amount than that sworn to, the verdict (especially if the debt claimed is on a quantum meruit) is not conclusive evidence of the absence of reasonable or probable cause for making the affidavit in the larger amount, so as to entitle the defendant to his costs. Gilbert v. Crozier, 1 C. B., N. S. 632; 26 L. J., C. P. 110; 3 Jur., N. S. 295.

Action removed by Defendant.—The section does not apply where the action has been removed by a defendant from an inferior court. Woodall v. Voight, 6 H. & N. 153; 30 L. J., Ex. 31; 6 Jur., N. S. 1162; 9 W. R. 67.

— Action referred before Trial.—A plaintiff who has filed an affidavit of debt against a defendant without reasonable or any probable cause, cannot be deprived of his costs when, before trial, the action is referred to an arbitrator. Stercens v. Russell, 1 H. & N. 752.

— Verdict subject to Award of Arbitrator—Agreement as to Costs.—A creditor having filed an affidavit of debt, and the amount having been disputed, an order was made that the defendant should enter into a bond with two sureties. An action was brought to recover the amount claimed. An agreement was then entered into between the plaintiff, the defendant, and K., in pursuance of which the order for the bond was discharged, and the bankruptcy proceedings were terminated; K., depositing cheques for the debt and costs, if any, recovered in the action; in case of a verdict for the defendant the cheques to be returned to K., upon his paying 6l. for the costs of the trader debtor summons, and also the costs of any issue found for the plaintiff. At the trial of the cause it was agreed that a verdict should be entered for the plaintiff, subject to the award of an arbitrator; the costs of the cause to abide the event of the award, and the costs of the reference to be in the discretion of the arbitrator. The arbitrator awarded that the verdict should be reduced, so that the creditor recovered a sum less than that sworn to:—Held, first, that the defendant's right to costs was not affected by the agreement, or the termination of the bankruptcy proceedings in pursuance of it. Foster v. Hanson, 1 H. & N. 755.

Held, secondly, that as the verdict was to be operative the statute applied, notwithstanding that the cause had been referred to the award of an arbitrator. Ib.

— Defendant's Costs to be Deducted from Amount Recovered.—A defendant's costs are to be deducted from the debt or damages recovered by the plaintiff, and not from the debt or damages and the plaintiff's costs added together. Deere v. Kirkhouse, 1 L. M. & P. 783; 20 L. J., Q. B. 195.

— Proof of Commencement of Action.—Upon an application by a defendant for his costs the commencement of the action is sufficiently shewn by the statement of the writ of summons in the issue delivered by the plaintiff, without any express averment to that effect upon the affidavits. Ib.

— Execution levied by Creditor for Verdict and Costs—Application for Defendant's Costs too late.—In an action, the defendant pleaded the general issue to the whole, and a set-off as to part. After action the plaintiff obtained a summons in bankruptcy, on an affidavit made by him, under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 122, s. 11, that the defendant was indebted to him in the full amount for which the action was brought, and allowing no credit for the sum sought to be set off. The defendant having deposed on oath that he had a good defence to the whole of the demand, the summons in bankruptcy was dismissed with costs. The cause was afterwards tried in Trinity Vacation, when, the plaintiff having admitted the set-off, a verdict was entered for him for the difference between it and his whole demand. The judge certified for immediate execution, which was issued on the 7th of August, and the amount levied paid under protest. The defendant, on the 20th of November, obtained a rule, calling on the plaintiff to shew cause on the last day of the term, why he should not refund the difference between the sum paid and the amount of the verdict, and to pay the defendant his costs in the action:—Held, that the application was made too late. Smith v. Temperley, 16 M. & W. 273; 4 D. & L. 510; 16 L. J., Ex. 105; 11 Jur. 244.

— Action Stayed—Judgment for Debt and Costs—Costs of Bankruptcy Summons.—A writ of summons having been issued out of the Exchequer against a defendant, a summons in bankruptcy was afterwards taken out against him returnable on the 17th, on which day an order was made by a commissioner under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 85, that the costs of the summons should abide the event of the action. On the 15th of October a summons was taken out before a judge, returnable on the 17th, for staying proceedings on payment of the debt and costs, and an order for that purpose was made on the 18th. One bill having been taxed in bankruptcy and the other in the Exchequer, the master added them together, and judgment was signed for the amount:—Held, that the judgment was regular. Webb v. Hewlett, 2 L. M. & P. 4; 6 Ex. 107; 20 L. J., Ex. 144.

— When Proceedings Actionable—Adjudication on defective Affidavit—Mistake of Commissioners.—A declaration alleged that the defendant falsely and maliciously caused and procured the plaintiff to be adjudged a bankrupt. The defendant presented a petition to the Court of Bankruptcy, and made an affidavit that the plaintiff had upon summons admitted part of the debt, but swore that he had a good defence as to the residue, and the plaintiff had not within seven days after filing the admission paid or tendered to him the sum admitted to be due; and thereupon the plaintiff was adjudged a bankrupt:—Held, that the declaration was proved, and that the defendant was liable to an action, although the affidavit did not shew that an act of bankruptcy had been committed under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 82, and the commissioners made a mistake in point of law in adjudging the plaintiff bankrupt. Farley or Farlie v. Danks, 4 El. & Bl. 493; 24 L. J., Q. B. 244; 1 Jur., N. S. 331.

— Costs.—Where a creditor had taken out a summons against his debtor, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 78, and filed an affidavit stating the debt to be of an amount which was greater than the amount he subsequently recovered by action, and the debtor made it appear to the court that the creditor had no reasonable or probable cause for stating the amount at that mentioned in the affidavit, the debtor was entitled to the costs of the action, and the court had no discretion in the matter. Falconar v. Mackenzie, 2 L. R., Ex. 248; 36 L. J., Ex. 222; 16 L. T. 630.

A promise not to apply for costs under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 85, was a sufficient consideration to support a contract to pay the amount of such

b. Debtor failing to Pay, Secure, or Compound for, Debt.

Lunatic Debtor.]—Semble, that a lunatic cannot commit an act of bankruptcy, by omitting to pay or give security. Stamp, Ex parte, 1 De Gex, 345.

Tender of Debt.]—A trader, who had signed an admission of a debt, went to his creditor with the amount of it in his pocket in money, and told the creditor that he had come for the purpose of paying that amount. The creditor said it was of no use, as it was too late, and that the debtor must see the creditor's attorney:—Held, that the production of the money was dispensed with, and that there was a good tender. Danks, Ex parte, 2 De G., Mac. & G. 936; 22 L. J., Bk. 73.

Execution of Inspectorship Deed.]—After a valid inspectorship deed had been executed and registered, the court ought not, at the instance of a non-assenting creditor taking out a trader debtor summons, to require the debtor to enter into a bond for payment of the amount of the debt. Watson, Ex parte, 35 L. J., Bk. 41; 14 L. T. 243.

Effect of Protection Order under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 211.]—A trader debtor, after hearing on a summons under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 78, admitted the demand of a creditor, petitioned under the 211th section for an arrangement, and obtained, ex parte, an order for protection to his person and property from all process:—Held, that the order did not protect him from a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, or from adjudication thereon. Walker, Ex parte, 6 De G., Mac. & G. 752; 24 L. J., Bk. 26.

Admission of Debt—Presumption of Error.]—Under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 122, if a trader, summoned by his creditor, and being indebted to him in 149l. 4s. signed an admission that he was indebted to such creditor in 149l., and therefore had nothing to shew that the 4s. was intentionally omitted, such trader did not commit an act of bankruptcy if he omitted to perform anything required by s. 13, or s. 15, from parties refusing to admit debts on summons, or admitting them in part. Pennell v. Rhodes, 9 Q. B. 114; 15 L. J., Q. B. 352; 10 Jur. 825.

Admission of Part—Failure to Pay—Act of Bankruptcy.]—Where a trader, who, upon summons to the Court of Bankruptcy, appears and signs an admission for part only of the demand of the creditor, and also makes a deposition that he believes he has a good defence upon the merits to the residue of the demand, and does not pay the sum so admitted, a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy being filed against him within two months, &c., he does not commit an act of bankruptcy within the meaning of the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 82. The act of bankruptcy is committed by failing to pay the part admitted and making no deposition as to the residue. Oldfield v. Dodd, 8 Ex. 578; 22 L. J., Ex. 144; 17 Jur. 261—Ex. Ch.

Discretion of Commissioner to require a Bond.]

—It is not imperative upon the commissioner to require a bond, but is a matter within his discretion, having regard not only to the solvency of the alleged debtor, but to all circumstances of the case, including the probability of success in an action for the demand. Wood, Ex parte, 4 De G., Mac. & G. 876; 23 L. J., Bk. 3; 18 Jur. 229.

Where, therefore, a demand was made in respect of differences in purchases and sales of a commodity arising from the mere turn of the market, neither party having or intending to buy or sell the commodity itself:—Held, not a case requiring a bond. Id.

An action was brought, under the Bills of Exchange Act, by indorsee against an acceptor. The defendant obtained leave to defend the action, on the ground that he had accepted the bill as agent, and not as principal. The debtor was then served with a trader debtor summons, and desiring to contest the claim, was ordered by the commissioner to give security by bond, with two sureties:—Held, that the commissioner had exercised a proper discretion, with which the court would not interfere. Ruck, Ex parte, 9 Jur., N. S. 683; 8 L. T. 102.

Approval of Security—Power to Revoke.]—A commissioner who has approved of the security offered by a debtor under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 8, is functus officio, and cannot revoke his approval. Neal, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 620; 6 Jur. 876.

Right of Sureties to have Bond cancelled.]—Where a party, under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 8, had made an affidavit of debt against A. in the Bankruptcy Court, and A. had entered into a bond, with sureties, conditioned to pay such sum as should be recovered against him in an action, or to render himself:—Held, that the court had no power, on application by the sureties, suggesting that A. had rendered, to order the bond to be delivered up to be cancelled. Hayward v. Heffer, 5 Q. B. 398.

Second Fiat on same Act of Bankruptcy.]—A fiat was sued out, founded on an omission to pay or secure a debt according to 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 8. The fiat was not sued out by the creditor who made the affidavit of debt, and was afterwards annulled for want of prosecution. A second fiat issued after the expiration of the two months:—Held, that the failure to pay or secure the debt constituted a sufficient act of bankruptcy to support the second fiat. Parker, Ex parte, 3 De G. & S. 575.

2. JUDGMENT DEBTOR SUMMONS UNDER 12 & 13 VICT. c. 106, s. 76.

Members of Parliament.]—A judgment debtor summons under s. 76 cannot properly be issued against a member of the House of Commons. Nesbitt, Ex parte, 8 L. T. 212; 11 W. R. 552. S. P., Wright, Ex parte, 9 L. T. 349; 12 W. R. 59; Gibbon, Ex parte, 8 L. T. 552; The European, &c., Corporation v. —, M. P., 13 L. T. 447; 14 W. R. 185.

3. DEBTOR SUMMONS UNDER 32 & 33 VICT. c. 71.

a. Who may obtain.

Infant.]—An infant creditor may issue a debtor summons in his own name. Brocklebank, Ex parte, 6 Ch. D. 358; 45 L. J., Bk. 113; 37 L. T. 282; 25 W. R. 859.

Semble, that in such case the debtor would be entitled, if he asked for it, to have some adult person named as security for the costs of the summons. Ib.

But if he makes no such application, but allows the summons to proceed in the ordinary way, an adjudication, founded upon non-compliance with it, is valid. Ib.

Receiver.—A receiver in chancery can issue a debtor summons in respect of a sum due to him in that character. Harris, Ex parte, Lewis, In re, 2 Ch. D. 423; 45 L. J., Bk. 71; 34 L. T. 261; 24 W. R. 851.

Undischarged Bankrupt cannot.—A bankrupt whose creditors had agreed to a resolution suspending his bankruptcy, but who had never obtained his discharge, recovered judgment in an action against C. for 500*l.* The assignee gave notice to C. of the bankruptcy, and claimed the money recovered. Afterwards, an arrangement having been come to between the assignee and the bankrupt, the bankrupt, without any interference by the assignee, sued out a debtor summons against C. for the judgment debt:—Held, that the summons could not be supported. Carter, Ex parte, 2 Ch. D. 806; 45 L. J., Bk. 145; 35 L. T. 388—C. A.

Creditor holding Garnishee Order.—A creditor who holds garnishee orders covering sums due to the debtor to an amount exceeding the debt due to the creditor, can nevertheless obtain a debtor summons against the debtor, and proceed thereon to have him adjudged a bankrupt. Tepper, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 312; 30 L. T. 102; 22 W. R. 381.

Creditor holding Security for Debt.—A creditor for a sum not less than 50*l.* is entitled to take out a debtor summons, notwithstanding that he has sued out a writ of attachment in the Lord Mayor's Court, and served it on persons holding property of the debtor of a larger amount than the debt. Giles, In re, Mauritz, Ex parte, 5 L. R., Ch. 779; 39 L. J., Bk. 56; 23 L. T. 293; 18 W. R. 1097.

Foreign Creditor against Foreign Debtor residing in England.—A debtor summons may be taken out by a foreign creditor against a foreign debtor who is at the time in England, in respect of a debt contracted abroad. Pascal, Ex parte, Myer, In re, 1 Ch. D. 509; 45 L. J., Bk. 81; 34 L. T. 10; 24 W. R. 263—C. A.

Several Creditors.—If several creditors issue one debtor summons, they must continue the subsequent proceedings together. There can be but one act of bankruptcy upon the summons, and the summoning creditors cannot present separate petitions founded upon the failure of the debtor to comply with the summons as to each creditor separately. Kibble, Ex parte, Onslow, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 373; 44 L. J., Bk. 63; 32 L. T. 138; 23 W. R. 433.

Two creditors whose debts together amount to more than 50*l.*, though each debt is less, can issue a debtor summons on which the debtor may be adjudicated bankrupt. Andrew, In re, 1 Ch.

D. 358; 45 L. J., Bk. 57; 33 L. T. 556; 24 W. R. 197—C. A.

A tender of the amount of his debt to one of the creditors in such a case does not prevent the adjudication. Ib.

Secretary of Company.—A debtor summons taken out in the name of the secretary of a company for a debt due to the company is irregular. Leathley, Ex parte, Hodges, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 204; 42 L. J., Bk. 56; 28 L. T. 323; 21 W. R. 301.

b. Against whom.

Trader.—In order to constitute a debtor a trader within the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 6, sub-s. 6, he must be a trader at the time when the debtor summons is served. Schomberg, Ex parte, 10 L. R., Ch. 172; 31 L. T. 665; 23 W. R. 204.

Semble, that the words "being a trader," in the 6th sub-section of the 6th section of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, apply to a man who had ceased to be a trader at the date of the issuing of the summons, if he was a trader when he contracted the debt. Lowenthal, Ex parte, 9 L. R., Ch. 591; 43 L. J., Bk. 83; 30 L. T. 668.

Husband for Debt of Wife trading separately.—A married woman carried on in her maiden name a millinery business separately from her husband. A debtor summons was issued against the husband and wife, claiming the payment of a sum due upon some bills of exchange drawn by the summoning creditor upon and accepted by the wife in her maiden name, and dishonoured. The husband applied to the court to dismiss the summons. He deposed that he never authorized his wife to pledge his credit, and that five years previously he had given notice to the summoning creditor that he had nothing to do with his wife's business:—Held, on this evidence, which was uncontradicted, that the husband was not liable for the debt; that the issuing of the summons was an abuse of the procedure; and that the summons must be dismissed with costs. Shepherd, Ex parte, Shepherd, In re, 10 Ch. D. 573; 48 L. J., Bk. 35; 39 L. T. 652; 27 W. R. 310—C. A.

Felon.—Notwithstanding the provision contained in s. 8 of the act 33 & 34 Vict. c. 23, that every convicted felon shall, during the time while he shall be subject to the operation of the act, be incapable of alienating or charging any property, such a convict can pay a debt which is claimed by a debtor's summons issued and served on him after his conviction, and if he fails to pay the debt within the time limited by the summons, he will commit an act of bankruptcy, upon which an adjudication can be made against him. Graves, Ex parte, Harris, In re, 19 Ch. D. 1; 51 L. J., Ch. 1; 45 L. T. 397; 30 W. R. 51; 46 J. P. 70; 14 Cox, C. C. 629—C. A.

Foreigner.—A debtor summons may be served in this country in respect of a debt contracted abroad by a foreigner with a foreigner. Pascal, Ex parte, Myer, In re, 1 Ch. D. 509; 45 L. J., Bk. 81; 34 L. T. 10; 24 W. R. 263—C. A.

There was a question whether the debtor was "residing" in England:—Held, that this was immaterial, the provisions of r. 17 for the issue of the summons by the court of the district where the debtor resides or carries on business being merely directory, and not intended to determine any question of jurisdiction. Ib.

Partner retired before Writ issued.]—Previously to December 8th, 1880, W. did work for a firm in which Y. was a partner. On that date Y. retired, the other partners continuing the business in the firm's name. The dissolution was duly advertised on December 15th, and on the 18th W. issued a writ against the firm in the firm's name. On the 21st the writ was personally served on one of the continuing partners at the firm's place of business. Y. was not served. No appearance was entered for any of the partners, and on December 29th W. signed judgment for default. In June, 1881, W. took out a debtor summons, founded on the judgment against Y. Y. applied to the court to dismiss the summons and his application was refused:—Held (dissentiente Brett, L. J.), that the summons should have been dismissed. Per Selborne, L. C., on the ground that Ord. XLII. r. 8 shews that even if a partner retired at the date of the writ he could be sued under the firm's name; judgment in the firm's name could not be held conclusive of his liability, and is therefore, without more, not a good foundation for a debtor summons. Per Cotton, L. J., that Ord. XVI. r. 10 applies only to persons who are partners at the date of the issue of the writ. Per Brett, L. J., that Ord. XVI. r. 10 applies to all persons liable for the debt for which the action is brought, and judgment obtained against the firm can be enforced against them in any valid way except by issuing execution which is restrained by Ord. XLII. r. 8. Young, Ex parte, Young, In re, 19 Ch. D. 124; 51 L. J., Ch. 141; 45 L. T. 493; 30 W. R. 330—C. A.

Non-Trader Debt, when contracted.]—A partner not a trader was indebted to the partnership and also to some of the partners separately. By deeds, executed by the debtor after the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, had received the royal assent, but supposed to have been executed before it came into operation, he covenanted to pay to trustees for the other partners a sum fixed upon as principal, and to pay interest thereon, and he gave a mortgage as security. A debtor summons was issued for the money covenanted to be paid:—Held, that the debt was not contracted within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 118, until the execution of the deed of covenant. Rashleigh, Ex parte, Dalzell, In re, 2 Ch. D. 9; 45 L. J., Bk. 29; 34 L. T. 193; 24 W. R. 495—C. A. Affirming, 20 L. R., Eq. 782; 32 L. T. 133; 23 W. R. 951.

Held, that the time defined by the words "passing of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861," in the same section is the time when the act of 1861 received the royal assent, and not the time when it came into operation; and that, therefore, the non-trader might be adjudicated bankrupt on a debtor summons issued for payment of the debt so contracted. Ib.

c. In what Cases.

Not to be used when bonâ fide Dispute as to Debt.]—The process of debtor summons was not intended to be used where there is a solvent debtor and a bonâ fide dispute as to the debt. Sewell, Ex parte, Sewell, In re, 13 Ch. D. 266; 49 L. J., Bk. 15; 42 L. T. 3; 28 W. R. 286—C. A.

If there is really no defence to the claim, the creditor ought to proceed by a specially-indorsed writ under the Judicature Act. Ib.

Proceedings by way of debtor summons ought to be taken only under such circumstances as must necessarily lead to bankruptcy proceedings. Ib.

Amount of Debt.]—In an action upon a bill of exchange for 40*l.* an order was made staying the proceedings on the defendant's undertaking to pay to the plaintiffs (in addition to 20*l.* which had been paid into court) 20*l.* 10*s.* and the costs of the action. In default of payment the plaintiffs were to be at liberty to sign judgment and issue execution. The costs having been taxed at 9*l.* 2*s.*, the defendant tendered 29*l.* 14*s.* 6*d.* to the plaintiffs, but they refused to accept it unless the defendant would also pay another overdue acceptance of his for 30*l.* which the plaintiffs held. He refused to pay the 30*l.*, alleging that that acceptance had been obtained from him by fraud, with notice of which the plaintiffs had taken it. The plaintiffs then issued a debtor summons against the defendant for 59*l.* 14*s.* 6*d.* The defendant applied to dismiss it, and he was ordered to give security for the amount claimed. The security not having been given, the plaintiffs presented a bankruptcy petition against him:—Held, that, until judgment had been signed in the action, the 29*l.* 14*s.* 6*d.* could not be used to support a debtor summons, and consequently that there was not a debt sufficient to support a bankruptcy petition. Astrup, Ex parte, Le Ferre, In re, 11 Ch. D. 303—C. A.

Nature of Debt—Legal or equitable Defence.]

—In order to justify the issuing of a debtor summons under s. 7 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, the alleged debt must be an exigible debt: if the debtor would have any defence, legal or equitable, to an action for the debt, the summons ought to be dismissed. Foster, Ex parte, or Hilbert, Ex parte, Foster, In re, 23 Ch. D. 797; 52 L. J., Ch. 577; 48 L. T. 497; 31 W. R. 774—C. A. Affirming, 47 L. T. 738.

Inchoate Agreement between Debtor and Creditor.]

—Two partners in trade whose affairs were embarrassed, without filing a liquidation petition, summoned a meeting of their creditors. Nineteen out of twenty-seven creditors attended the meeting, their debts amounting to 2,400*l.* out of a total of 2,628*l.*, and a resolution was passed that a deed of assignment of the debtors' estate and effects should be made to three persons named, as trustees for the benefit of the creditors, with power for them to carry on the business for such time as they should think fit, and to sell the concern as a going concern, or otherwise. One of the debtors was to have his discharge on payment of 200*l.*, or otherwise, as the creditors might direct. The resolution was signed by the chairman of the meeting, but by no one else. The day after the meeting the debtors gave up possession of their assets to the persons named in the resolution as trustees, and those persons carried on the business for a few weeks, and proceeded to collect the book debts. A draft deed of assignment was prepared in accordance with the resolution, but it was never executed, the other creditors not having assented to the arrangement embodied in the resolution:—Held, that, inasmuch as all the creditors did not come in and assent to the arrangement, there was no binding agreement between the debtors and their creditors, and that, consequently, a creditor who was present at the meeting, even if he had assented to the resolution, which appeared to be doubtful, was entitled to issue a debtor summons for his debt. Ib.

d. Form of Summons and Affidavit in Support.

Form—Consideration.]—When a debtor summons is founded on a judgment debt it is not necessary to state the consideration for the judgment in the summons, and a misstatement of the consideration will not vitiate the summons. Ritso, Ex parte, Ritso, In re, 22 Ch. D. 529; 52 L. J., Ch. 535; 48 L. T. 376; 31 W. R. 373—C. A.

— Formal Defect not invalidating Proceedings—Services.]—A debtor summons and the proceedings upon it are proceedings in bankruptcy within s. 82 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and therefore will not be invalidated by any mere formal defect or irregularity where no injustice is done thereby. A debtor was served with a debtor summons, on the face of which the amount of the debt was stated as 24*l.*, but the cause of debt was stated, and the annexed particulars were referred to which showed the debt to be 74*l.* The creditor took out the summons in person and not by a solicitor, but it was served not by himself but by his clerk:—Held, that as the debtor in the circumstances must have known the amount of the debt and could not have been deceived or misled, the defect in the summons and also that in the mode of service was cured by the 82nd section of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. Johnson, Ex parte, Johnson, In re, 32 W. R. 175—C. A.

By Public Officer of Company.]—In an affidavit by the public officer of a company in support of a debtor summons he was described as the registered public officer of the company, but the affidavit did not contain an express statement that he was such public officer, or that he was authorized to sue out the summons:—Held, that the affidavit did not sufficiently comply with r. 15 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1870, and the summons was dismissed for irregularity. Torkington, Ex parte, Torkington, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 298; 22 W. R. 602.

In an affidavit by the public officer of a company in support of a debtor summons he was described as the registered public officer of the company, but the affidavit did not contain an express statement that he was such public officer, and it contained a statement that he was authorized to make the affidavit, but no statement that he was authorized to sue out the debtor summons:—Held, that the affidavit sufficiently complied with r. 15 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1870. Lowenthal, Ex parte, Lowenthal, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 324; 43 L. J., Bk. 132; 30 L. T. 282; 22 W. R. 459—C. A., affirming, 43 L. J., Bk. 81; 22 W. R. 350.

Where a debtor summons is sued out upon a dishonoured bill of exchange it is not necessary to state or to prove the debt with the same strictness as in an action; it is sufficient to state it so that the debtor shall not be misled. Ib.

By Agent.]—It is not imperative that the affidavit prescribed should be made by a creditor suing out a debtor summons, where the creditor carries on business through an authorized agent.

The agent, if properly authorized, can make a sufficient affidavit in support. Anon., 21 L. T. 802.

It is necessary that the demand mentioned in the affidavit should be made, and the particulars of demand also there mentioned should be served. Ib.

e. Service of Summons.

By whom.]—When a debtor summons is served by the creditor's solicitor, the solicitor need not effect the service with his own hand. It may be effected by his clerk, or by the clerk of the country agent of a London solicitor. Lancaster, Ex parte, 3 Ch. D. 498; 35 L. T. 649; 24 W. R. 1010—C. A., affirming, 45 L. J., Bk. 147; 34 L. T. 951.

A debtor summons may be served by any person authorized by the creditor. Service by an accountant who had been in the habit of serving summonses for the creditor's solicitor, held to be good service. Denman, Ex parte, Denman, In re, 29 W. R. 616.

Service out of England.]—The personal service of a debtor summons on a debtor out of England is a nullity, and where such a service has been effected and the debtor has been adjudicated a bankrupt in England, because not being a trader he has for three weeks succeeding the service of the summons neglected to pay or secure or compound for the debt, the adjudication will be annulled. O'Loughlen, Ex parte, 6 L. R., Ch. 406; 40 L. J., Bk. 28; 23 L. T. 878; 19 W. R. 459.

After the expiration of the three weeks from the service of the summons, the debtor applied to the registrar to rescind the order for service; the application was refused; no appeal was brought against that order. Subsequently the debtor was adjudicated bankrupt, and appealed against the adjudication:—Held, that the question of the validity of the service was not res judicata, for that as the question before the court was whether an act of bankruptcy had been committed, and that depended on the validity of the service of the summons, that point was then properly brought before the court and could be decided. Ib.

The order for personal service out of the jurisdiction was made on an affidavit stating that the debtor was keeping out of the way to avoid personal service. The court was of opinion that the facts did not justify any such affidavit, and that therefore the creditor must pay all costs, including the costs of the appeal. Ib.

Service of Summons issued by wrong Court.]

—A debtor summons was issued out of the county court of Newcastle, within which the debtor was supposed to reside. It was served on the debtor in London, who then stated that he resided in the latter place. Default having been made, a petition in bankruptcy was presented in the London Bankruptcy Court:—Held, that no act of bankruptcy had been committed. Boyle v. Plummer, 22 W. R. 241; S. C., nom. Boyle, Ex parte, Plummer, In re, 30 L. T. 2—C. A.

Substituted Service—Jurisdiction of County Court.]—When a debtor absconds from his usual place of abode, and a creditor cannot effect personal service of a debtor summons upon him, and cannot discover that he has any residence other than the old one from which he has absconded, the county court of the district within which he last resided has jurisdiction to order substituted service of the summons. North Kent Bank, Ex parte, Holdsworth, In re, 9 Ch. D. 333; 39 L. T. 379; 27 W. R. 158—C. A., reversing 47 L. J., Bk. 119; 38 L. T. 536; 26 W. R. 637.

A debtor, who had resided in the district of the Greenwich county court, absconded, and a creditor was unable to effect personal service of a debtor summons upon him, or to discover that he had any residence other than his old one, at which he was not to be found:—Held, that the Greenwich court had jurisdiction to order substituted service of the summons. Ib.

A debtor left the county court district in which he had carried on business; he afterwards returned, and was then served with a notice requiring him to pay a debt. He again left the district, and could not be found, remaining away in order to avoid service. An order was made for service on him of a debtors summons by delivery at a house in the district, and he was afterwards adjudicated bankrupt by the county court of that district:—Held, that the debtor, by leaving the district for the purpose of avoiding service, did not deprive the county court of jurisdiction; and that, though the evidence on which the order for service by delivery was obtained was not satisfactory, yet, as the debtor was staying away in order to avoid service, the bankruptcy would not, on that ground, be annulled. Williams, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 690; 42 L. J., Bk. 28; 28 L. T. 488; 21 W. R. 451.

— At Address registered in Books of Company.—The liquidators of a company which was being wound up issued a debtor summons against a shareholder for unpaid calls, and obtained an order for substituted service at his registered address in the books of the company. The affidavit on which this order was obtained shewed no grounds for choosing that place except that it was his registered address, and that the articles contained a provision that notices required to be served by the company on shareholders might be served by leaving them at their registered addresses. For some years this had not been the shareholder's place of residence or business, and he had a few weeks previously, on an application in the winding-up, made an affidavit in which he gave a different address. Service having been made pursuant to the order, and the debtor having failed to comply with it, the liquidators applied for an adjudication in bankruptcy:—Held, that the rule in the articles as to service of notices at the registered address did not give validity to the service of legal proceedings there, and that the question as to the validity of the order for substituted service and of the service under it was open on a petition for adjudication in bankruptcy, and that adjudication had rightly been refused. Chatteris, Ex parte, Studer, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 227; 44 L. J., Bk. 90; 32 L. T. 290; 23 W. R. 760.

Service of Particulars of Demand.—A debtor summons was duly served with particulars of demand. This summons was dismissed on the ground that the debtor was a non-trader, and as such entitled to three weeks' notice instead of seven days. A second debtor summons was afterwards issued and served without the particulars of demand. The sum claimed on the second summons was different from that claimed on the first, as one item demanded in the particulars served with the first summons had been paid in the interval:—Held, that as the debtor had been served with the particulars with the first summons, and thus knew the particulars of the claim against him, the omission to serve particulars with the second summons did not render it invalid. Javal, Ex parte, 34 L. T. 47—C. A.

Affidavit of Service Proof of Act of Bankruptcy.—A non-trader was adjudicated bankrupt, the act of bankruptcy being his failure to comply with the requisitions of a debtor summons. When the copies of the petition for adjudication were sealed by the registrar, an affidavit of service of the debtor summons was shewn to him, but it had not been filed as required by the r. 63 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1870. The affidavit was filed a few days afterwards, and the adjudication was then made:—Held, that although the registrar ought to have refused to seal the copies of the petition till the affidavit had been filed, yet, the rules being merely directory, the adjudication was not invalidated by his omission to do so. Hunt, Ex parte, 8 L. R., Ch. 234; 28 L. T. 3; 21 W. R. 164.

An affidavit stating that the service was made on the "19th August instant," but not sworn till September, is sufficient. Ib.

A debtor summons and a bankruptcy petition founded upon the non-compliance with it, are entirely distinct litigations, and the evidence taken upon the one cannot be used upon the other unless previous notice has been given of the intention to use it. Rogers, Ex parte, Rogers, In re, 15 Ch. D. 207; 43 L. T. 163; 29 W. R. 29—C. A.

Therefore, upon the hearing of a bankruptcy petition founded upon the debtor's non-compliance with a debtor summons, the service of the summons must be strictly proved, even though the debtor has, in an affidavit previously made by him upon an application to dismiss the summons, admitted that the summons had been served upon him. Ib.

Such an affidavit cannot be used upon the hearing of the petition, unless previous notice has been given of the intention to use it. Ib.

f. Proceedings when Debt disputed.

Dismissal — Irregularity.—A debtor may sustain an application to have a debtor summons dismissed for irregularity, although he has not distinctly denied the debt in his affidavit. Torkington, Ex parte, Torkington, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 298; 22 W. R. 602.

— Secured Creditor.—A debtor summons by a secured creditor cannot be dismissed on the ground that he does not offer to give up his security or have it valued, though he must do so in order to obtain an adjudication against the debtor. Mauritz, Ex parte, Giles, In re, 5 L. R., Ch. 779; 39 L. J., Bk. 56; 23 L. T. 293; 18 W. R. 1097.

— On Ground of Counterclaim.—Under a building contract, K. had possession of E.'s land, and E. made advances to him upon the security of the buildings. In January, 1870, K. brought an action against E. for breach of the contract. In July E. brought ejectment against K., and in January, 1871, recovered judgment with costs, which were taxed at 59%. In February he took out a debtor summons against K., in respect of these costs. K. applied to dismiss the summons and stay proceedings pending his action, upon the ground that his claim in the action greatly exceeded the 59l. :—Held, that no order to stay proceedings ought to be made, there being no case for such stay of proceedings within the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 7. Ellis, Ex parte, Kain, In re, 6 L. R., Ch. 602; 40 L. J., Bk. 77; 24 L. T. 819; 19 W. R. 913.

— Notice of Application for.—Three clear days' notice of an application by the debtor for the dismissal of the summons, upon the ground that the debt is not due, is sufficient. Anon., 21 L. T. 625.

It is of importance that no unnecessary delay should be placed in the way of the hearing of a debtor summons. Id.

— Attendance of Summoning Creditor.—When a debtor summons has been issued and the debtor denies the debt, he has no absolute right to require the attendance of the summoning creditor for the purpose of examination. Barron, Ex parte, Irving, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 269; 44 L. J., Bk. 66; 32 L. T. 139; 23 W. R. 432.

Staying Proceedings—Security required.—The court will not direct a trial of the question of indebtedness by a jury unless the debtor is prepared on the hearing of the summons to give security. Roubotham, Ex parte, 25 L. T. 921.

When a debtor summons is ordered to stand over for an action to be brought, and the court is of opinion that the probability is as much in favour of the success of the alleged debtor as of the creditor, the court will not order security to be given. Turner, Ex parte, Turner, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 175; 44 L. J., Bk. 112; 31 L. T. 532; 23 W. R. 124.

A debtor summons was taken out against a debtor for an amount which purported to be a true debt, and sufficient to support an adjudication. The debtor subsequently moving to dismiss the summons, the allegations of the debtor and of the creditor being in the judge's opinion equally unsatisfactory, it lies within the discretion of the judge to direct that the matter shall be determined in an action, and that the alleged debtor shall give security in the meanwhile. Shorey, Ex parte, 21 W. R. 105.

The discretion which the court has, upon staying proceedings on a debtor summons, to order security to be given by the debtor must not be exercised adversely to a solvent debtor where there is a bonâ fide question in course of litigation between him and the creditor, upon the result of which will depend the validity or amount of the debt in question. Brown, Ex parte, Brown, In re, 37 L. T. 834; 26 W. R. 284. Affirmed, 26 W. R. 573—C. A.

The vendor to a company by the articles of agreement guaranteed a dividend of 10l. per cent. for five years upon the paid-up capital of the company for the time being. The business resulted in a loss for the first two years, whereupon he paid the dividends for that period so guaranteed by him, but refused to pay the guaranteed dividends for the third year, which also resulted in a loss. The company having gone into liquidation, the liquidator issued a debtor summons against him for the unpaid dividend, which he opposed upon the ground that the accounts between him and the company had not been fully taken, and that it would appear upon taking such accounts that by reason of a set-off and other bonâ fide defences, the company was indebted to him, not he to the company. There was no suggestion of the debtor's insolvency :—Held, that, under the circumstances, the proceedings should be stayed without security. Id.

Where the proceedings under a debtor summons are stayed pending an action to try the validity of an alleged debt, and in the opinion of the court there is more than a reasonable probability that the alleged debtor has a good defence to the action, the court will not require the debtor to give security. Smith, Ex parte, Smith, In re, 48 L. T. 320.

Proceedings on a debtor summons, pending the trial of an action for the debt, will not necessarily be stayed without security, though the alleged debtor is solvent and there is a bonâ fide dispute as to the debt. The probability of success in the action is one element to be considered. Jacobson, Ex parte, Pincoffs, In re, 22 Ch. D. 312; 52 L. J., Ch. 561; 48 L. T. 197; 31 W. R. 554—C. A.

A debtor summons was founded upon a bill of exchange. The creditor had, before the hearing of the summons, commenced an action against the debtor upon the bill, which he had obtained leave to defend without giving any security. He had then pleaded want of consideration. He also alleged that the holder had notice of the want of consideration :—Held, that, having regard to these facts, the proceedings upon the summons ought to be stayed pending the trial of the action, without security being required from the debtor. Latham, Ex parte, 4 Ch. D. 105; 35 L. T. 674; 25 W. R. 231.

— Solvency of Debtor.—In determining whether security ought to be given upon an application to dismiss a debtor summons, regard must be had to the question of the debtor's solvency, as well as to the possibility of his establishing his defence. Marshall, Ex parte, 5 Ch. D. 873; 37 L. T. 42; 25 W. R. 762—C. A.

The requiring of security being, however, a matter of judicial discretion, the Court of Appeal will not interfere with the exercise of the primary judge's discretion unless it can see clearly that the discretion has been improperly exercised. Id.

When a person served with a debtor summons disputes the debt, the court, in determining whether the alleged debtor must give security, will have regard not only to the state of the debtor's pecuniary circumstances, but to the probability of the claimant being able to establish the debt. Wier, Ex parte, Wier, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 319; 26 L. T. 335; 20 W. R. 457.

Where it appeared extremely doubtful whether the claim could be substantiated at law, the Court of Appeal discharged an order directing the debtor to give security, though it was admitted that he was in very poor circumstances. Id.

— No reasonable Defence.—When the proceedings on a debtor summons are stayed, pending an action to try the validity of the alleged debt, in determining whether the alleged debtor should be required to give security, regard ought to be had not only to his solvency or insolvency, but to the probability of his success in the action.

A debtor, who had resided in the district of the Greenwich county court, absconded, and a creditor was unable to effect personal service of a debtor summons upon him, or to discover that he had any residence other than his old one, at which he was not to be found:—Held, that the Greenwich court had jurisdiction to order substituted service of the summons. Ib.

Where a creditor, being ignorant that an act of bankruptcy had been committed by his debtor, executed a composition deed for the amount of his debt, and received a dividend under it:—Held, that he might still become a petitioning creditor in respect of the original debt. Doe d. Pitcher v. Anderson, 5 M. & S. 161; 1 Stark. 262.

A person who has agreed to come in under a trust-deed may, nevertheless, issue a fiat on discovering that the deed gave an unfair preference to a particular creditor. Hallowell, Ex parte, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 538.

It is not because the name of a creditor is inserted as one of the trustees in a trust-deed that the firm of which he is a partner cannot sue out a fiat as petitioning creditors, if the deed was not executed by himself or any member of the firm. Wood, In re, 3 Deac. 514.

If, by a composition deed, an insolvent assigns to four trustees all his goods, for the benefit of his creditors, provided the trustees and the creditors on or before a given day prove their debts, if required, and execute the deed, and there is a covenant by the trustees and creditors that they will not arrest, plead, or prosecute the debtor, or any of his goods, chattels, lands, or tenements, on account of their debts, and on such suing or prosecution the deed shall be a discharge; and the deed is executed by two only of the trustees; the debt of a trustee who has executed it is extinguished, and he cannot sue out a commission on it. Small v. Marwood, 9 B. & C. 300; 4 M. & R. 181.

L., being in embarrassed circumstances, it was agreed, at a meeting of his creditors, to accept a composition of 12s. in the pound, 10s. to be secured by bills of exchange accepted by B., and the remaining 2s. to be secured by L.'s promissory note. L. agreed to give B. a counter-security, by assignment of his property and effects. On the 10th October, 1854, a composition deed accordingly was made between L. of the first part, B. of the second part, and the creditors of L. who should sign within a certain time of the third part, subject to a condition for rendering it void, unless it should be executed by six-sevenths of the creditors, with a covenant not to sue L. until default should have been made in payment of the bills of exchange and note, or any of them. The bill for payment of the first instalment having been dishonoured, W., one of the creditors, sued L. for the original debt, and B. on the dishonoured bill. L. withdrew his pleas, and let W. have judgment for the amount of his claim, less the first instalment, which B. paid. By deed of the 3rd of March, 1855, L. assigned the whole of his stock and property to B. as security for the sums which he had paid, or might pay, to the creditors of L. in respect of the composition bills. In trover by L. against his assignees:—Held, that there was a good petitioning creditor's debt; for, first, though the composition deed was not void by reason of any concealment from the creditors of the fact that the whole of L.'s property was to be assigned to B., and therefore the debt was suspended, it remained, and, upon default in payment of the instalment, the right of suing for it revived; and secondly, the judgment obtained by W. was conclusive, and was an acknowledgment by L. that he still owed the debt. Leake v. Young, 5 El. & Bl. 955; 25 L. J., Q. B. 266; 2 Jur., N. S. 516.

Equitable Assignee.—The equitable assignee of a debt can present a petition against the debtor without joining the assignor as a co-petitioner. Cooper, Ex parte, Baillie, In re, 20 L. R., Eq. 762; 44 L. J., Bk. 125; 32 L. T. 780; 23 W. R. 950.

Executors.—One of three executors may by himself be a good petitioning creditor on a debt due to the testator. Treasure v. Jones, 1 Selw. N. P. 265.

A commission may be taken out by an executor before probate. Paddy, Ex parte, 3 Madd. 241; Buck, 235.

So, a commission may be supported on a debt due to a petitioning creditor in the character of executor, although he had not obtained a probate on a sufficient stamp at the time when the commission issued, if he afterwards, before adjudication, obtain a valid probate, for that has relation back to the testator's death. Rogers v. James, 7 Taunt. 147; 2 March, 425.

Husband and Wife.—A husband alone cannot be a petitioning creditor to support a commission in respect of a debt composed partly of a sum of money due to him in his own right, and partly of a sum due to his wife dum sola. Ramsay v. George, 1 M. & S. 176; 1 Rose, 108.

But a husband alone may sue out a commission upon a note given to the wife dum sola. Barber, Ex parte, 1 Glyn. & J. 1.

Infants.—An infant could not be, before 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 89, and 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 87, a petitioning creditor, because he could not enter into the necessary bond. Barrow, Ex parte, 3 Ves. jun. 554.

Nor could a commission be supported upon a petitioning creditor's debt, made up of debts due to several persons, if one of them was an infant and a separate creditor of the trader. Morton, Ex parte, Buck, 42.

Partners.—One partner cannot be a petitioning creditor against another, unless the debt is such as he might maintain an action upon. Windham v. Patterson, 1 Stark. 144; 2 Rose, 466. And see Marson v. Barber, Gow, 17.

But it is no objection that the petitioning creditor was in partnership with the bankrupt in a particular transaction, provided the debt does not arise out of that particular transaction. Ib.

The petitioning creditors were, in pleading, stated to be A. & B., C. & D., and E. & F., without distinctly alleging them to constitute firms:—Held, no ground for holding the fiat void. Byers v. Southwell, 8 Scott, 258.

If one of three partners undertakes to provide for two bills drawn by the three, and accepted by a fourth person, such three partners cannot be petitioning creditors on a commission against the acceptor, although the conduct of the partner may, as against his co-partners, have been fraudulent. Richmond v. Heapy, 1 Stark. 202.

A commission cannot be supported on the petition of one only of two partners, to whom a joint debt is due. Buckland v. Newsome, 1 Taunt. 477; 1 Camp. 474.

A shareholder in a banking co-partnership established under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, cannot be proceeded against in bankruptcy upon a debt due from the co-partnership where no judgment has been obtained against the public officer, although the business has been relinquished and an order to wind up the affairs of the company has been obtained prior to the proceedings in bankruptcy. The rule is the same although there is not any public officer of the company. Davison v. Furmer, 6 Ex. 242; 20 L. J., Ex. 177.

The 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, which authorizes the establishment of joint-stock banking companies, by s. 9 enables one of the public officers of any such company, nominated pursuant to the provisions of the act, to sue and be sued, and to prosecute commissions of bankrupt on behalf of the company against any person, whether member of the co-partnership or otherwise. The 1 & 2 Vict. c. 96, which professes to amend this enactment, declares that any such public officer may, in his own name, commence and prosecute any action, suit, or other proceeding at law or in equity against any member of the co-partnership, and that such member shall be liable to be proceeded against by such public officer, by such proceedings and with the same legal consequences as if such person had not been a member of the co-partnership; but the last act omits to specify commissions or fiats of bankruptcy eo nomine:—Held, that the two acts were to be taken together, and that the public officer was authorized to sue out a fiat in bankruptcy against one of the members of the company. Hall, Ex parte, 3 Deac. 405; 1 Mont. & Chit. 467.

Limited Company.]—A limited company could maintain a petition for adjudication under s. 87 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, and the secretary could make the necessary oath. In such a case the practice is for the petition to be sealed with the corporate seal, and signed by two directors and the secretary. Calthorp, In re, 3 L. R., Ch. 252; 37 L. J., Bk. 17; 18 L. T. 166; 16 W. R. 416.

Company with Private Act.]—By a private act of parliament, intituled "An Act to enable the Norwich Union Society to sue in the name of their secretary, and to be sued in the names of their directors, treasurer, and secretary," that society was empowered to commence and prosecute all actions and suits in the name of their secretary, as the nominal plaintiff:—Held, that it did not empower the secretary to sue out a commission of bankruptcy on behalf of the society against a person indebted to them as a society. Guthrie v. Fisk, 5 D. & R. 24; 3 B. & C. 178; 3 Stark. 153.

Party to Act of Bankruptcy.]—A party to a deed creating the act of bankruptcy cannot be petitioning creditor. Cook, In re, 1 Mont. & Chit. 349.

Trustee.]—Notwithstanding the provisions of s. 6 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, that "the debt of the petitioning creditor must be a liquidated sum due at law or in equity," the old rule in bankruptcy remains in force, that where a debt is vested in a mere trustee for an absolute beneficial owner who is capable of dealing with the debt as he pleases, the trustee cannot alone sustain a petition for adjudication against the debtor, but the beneficial owner must join in the petition. Culley, Ex parte, Adams, In re, 9 Ch. D. 307; 47 L. J., Bk. 97; 38 L. T. 858; 27 W. R. 28—C. A.

The rule, however, does not apply to a trustee for persons under disability. Ib.

2. LIABILITIES OF PETITIONING CREDITOR.

A petitioning creditor is personally liable, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 114, for the fees of the messenger down to the choice of assignees. Stubbs v. Horn, 1 L. R., C. P. 56; 12 Jur., N. S. 310.

A solicitor was the petitioning creditor for a fiat, and acted on his own behalf as solicitor. The commissioner having only allowed him costs so far as he had disbursed; the court, on appeal, varied the order, and allowed his full costs out of the estate. Chamberlayne, Ex parte, 4 De G. & S. 17; 19 L. J., Bk. 10; 14 Jur. 997.

In taxing the costs of a petitioning creditor who acts as his own solicitor, the analogy of an attorney suing in his own right is to be followed rather than that of a trustee. Ib.

3. AMOUNT OF THE DEBT.

A debt of 150*l.* or upwards, of which a part was due to several persons as partners, was sufficient, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 15, to support a fiat in bankruptcy. Doe d. Lloyd v. Ingleby, 14 M. & W. 19; 14 L. J., Ex. 246.

Interest.]—Interest cannot be added to the principal due on a bill, so as to constitute a good petitioning creditor's debt, unless specially made payable on the face of the bill. Cameron v. Smith, 2 B. & A. 305; S. P., Burgess, In re, 2 Moore, 745; 8 Taunt. 660.

Even though the bill is noted and protested according to 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 17. Greenway, Ex parte, Buck, 412.

Costs.]—At the date of the act of bankruptcy the debtor had appeared to a writ of summons issued by a creditor to recover 49*l.* 11*s.* 7*d.* and 3*l.* costs. The costs were, after the act of bankruptcy and judgment signed, taxed at 8*l.* 9*s.* 6*d.*:—Held, that the amount of the costs could not be added to the 49*l.* 11*s.* 7*d.* in order to constitute a good petitioning creditor's debt of 50l. and over. Sadler, Ex parte, Whelan, In re, 48 L. J., Bk. 43; 39 L. T. 361; 27 W. R. 156.

4. NATURE OF THE DEBT.

Generally.—The debt must be due from the bankrupt in his own right, and not in autre droit, as executor or otherwise. Pattison v. Banks, Cowp. 540.

Illegal Consideration.—A debt founded on an illegal consideration is not a good petitioning creditor's debt. Wells v. Girling, 1 B. & B. 447; 4 Moore, 78.

Debt proved under former Adjudication.—A debt which has been proved under a former adjudication may be used as a petitioning creditor's debt in support of a petition for a second adjudication, under which it is sought to impeach the first. Wieland, Ex parte, 5 L. R., Ch. 486; 39 L. J., Bk. 46; 22 L. T. 324.

Covenant not to Sue.—A debt which the creditor has covenanted with the debtor not to sue him for, is not a good petitioning creditor's debt. Small v. Marwood, 4 M. & R. 181; 9 B. & C. 300.

Accord and Satisfaction after Act of Bankruptcy.—If a bill of sale of goods is given in satisfaction of a bond debt, and it is afterwards discovered that the obligor had previously committed an act of bankruptcy, the obligee may abandon the bill of sale, and sue out a commission against the obligor, and co-obligor cannot plead this bill as an accord and satisfaction. Hall v. Smallwood, Peake's Add. Cas. 13.

Secured Debt—Bills of Lading—Stoppage in transitu.—Where a consignee transfers bills of lading to a creditor, as a security for his debt, and the consignor stops the goods in transitu, the consignor may issue a fiat against the consignee on his original debt. Ashton, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & Chit. 5.

Release of Debt—Secret Security.—A creditor, in consideration of bills for 10s. in the pound on his debt, executed a composition deed, whereby it was expressed that the creditors who executed it released the debtor from all demands. At the same time he secretly obtained security for the balance:—Held, that he ceased to be a creditor, and could not sue out a fiat against the debtor, the original debt being released, and the claim under the composition bills being invalidated by the fraud. Cross, In re, 4 De G. & S. 364.

Part Payment after Notice of Act of Bankruptcy.—A creditor to the amount of 112l., previously to the bankruptcy receiving 50l. after notice of an act of bankruptcy, is not thereby precluded from suing out a commission, for by that act he waives his claim to the payment; and he may still retain the money in his hands for the credit of the estate. Mann v. Shepherd, 6 T. R. 79.

Statute of Limitations.—A judgment creditor is not entitled, after the expiration of twelve years, without payment of interest, or acknowledgment of his right, to obtain an adjudication in bankruptcy against the debtor, though within the twelve years a suggestion has been entered on the roll under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, s. 129. Tynte, Ex parte, Tynte, In re, 15 Ch. D. 125; 42 L. T. 598; 28 W. R. 767.

— Cannot be pleaded by a third Party.—A debtor to a bankrupt, when sued by his assignee, cannot set up the Statute of Limitations as an objection to the petitioning creditor's debt. Gregory v. Hurfill, 8 Moore, 189; 1 Bing. 324.

An objection, that the petitioning creditor's debt was of more than ten years' standing, cannot be taken advantage of by a third person, where the bankrupt has submitted to the commission. Quantock v. England, 5 Burr. 2628; 2 W. Bl. 702.

Debts arising out of equitable Rights.—A commission cannot be taken out upon an equitable debt. Sutton, Ex parte, 11 Ves. 163; S. P., Hawthorn, Ex parte, 1 Mont. 133.

Nor is a claim arising out of an equitable mortgage a good debt. Yonge, Ex parte, 3 Ves. & B. 31; 2 Rose, 40.

Debt due to former Partner.—A bankrupt, who was in partnership with P., borrowed money of him by way of personal loan, and upon the dissolution of the partnership purchased the stock in trade for a stipulated sum. P. made out an account, entitled "Mr. H. P. (the bankrupt) in account with H. & P.:"—Held, that P. had a good petitioning creditor's debt, notwithstanding this mode of entitling the account. Richardson, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & Chit. 244.

In Case of Non-Traders.—No debt incurred by a non-trader is sufficient to found an adjudication against him, unless it was contracted by him after the period at which the contracting of debts by a non-trader made him liable to the bankrupt laws—namely, after the passing of the act. Williams v. Harding, 1 L. R., H. L. 9; 12 Jur., N. S. 457.

B., a non-trader, executed a deed of settlement in 1849, whereby he became a shareholder in a company. In 1861 an order was made for winding up the company, and a call was made on B. in June, 1863, to be paid in July. The official manager presented a petition for adjudication against him:—Held, that the call was not a debt contracted within the meaning of the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, and that B. was therefore not liable to be adjudicated a bankrupt. Id.

A party must have been a trader at the time of the petitioning creditor's debt; but if that was contracted while he was a trader, and he has left off trade, he may still become a bankrupt. Doe d. Barnard v. Lawrence, 2 C. & P. 134; S. P., Dawe v. Holdsworth, Peake, 64.

But if the debt is contracted whilst he is in trade, and a bond is given for it afterwards, it is sufficient. Id.

And a debt contracted before a man entered into trade is sufficient. Butcher v. Easto, 1 Dougl. 293.

A commission may be supported on a debt accruing before the bankrupt became a trader, and an act of bankruptcy committed after he has ceased to be a trader. Baillie v. Grant, 9 Bing. 121; 2 M. & Scott, 193.

Part of a petitioning creditor's debt contracted during trading, and part since, is not sufficient to support fiat. Secus, if part before trading and remainder during its continuance. Dolby, In re, 1 Mont. & Chit. 636.

An obligee in a bond by a trader recovered judgment upon it after the obligor had ceased trading:—Held, that the bond debt was not so merged in the judgment as to preclude the obligee from petitioning for adjudication against the obligor. Griffiths, Ex parte, 3 De G., Mac. & G. 174; 22 L. J., Bk. 50; 17 Jur. 655.

The 90th section of the Bankruptcy Act of 1861, which enacted that the debt of the petitioning creditor of a non-trader must be a debt contracted after the passing of the act, is to be construed as a remedial enactment; and no debt will support an adjudication against a non-trader, unless contracted at a time when he might have known that he thereby subjected himself to the bankruptcy laws; i.e., after the passing of the act. Williams v. Harding, 1 L. R., H. L. 9; 35 L. J., Bk. 25; 12 Jur., N. S. 657; 14 L. T. 139; 14 W. R. 503.

Debt contracted before the Bankruptcy Act, 1861.—The words of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 118, enacting that no person not being a trader shall be adjudged a bankrupt in respect of a debt contracted before the date of the passing of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, are to be construed as meaning what they say, and they do not apply to a debt contracted after the passing of the act but before the date fixed for its commencement. Rashleigh, Ex parte, Dazell, In re, 2 Ch. D. 9; 45 L. J., Bk. 29; 34 L. T. 193; 24 W. R. 495; C. A., reversing, 20 L. R., Eq. 782; 32 L. T. 133; 23 W. R. 951.

The debt of a partner who covenants with his co-partners for payment of a sum of money found due in respect of the partnership transactions is a debt incurred at the time of executing the covenant and not at the date of those transactions. Id.

By a deed dated the 10th of September, 1861, but not executed till the 14th of October, 1861, a non-trader covenanted to pay certain persons a sum of money which had become due from him to them during his management of a colliery in which he and they were interested, together with any further sums that might be advanced by them to him. In 1874 the representative of the covenantees recovered judgment against him in respect of what was then due under his covenant, and shortly afterwards issued a debtor summons in respect of such judgment debt:—Held, that, for the purpose of making the judgment debtor a bankrupt, the judgment debt must be deemed to have been contracted on the day on which the deed was executed. Id.

Where Credit not expired.—Goods sold, payable for, by the custom of the trade, two months after the sale, did not create a debt to support a commission, until the time of credit had elapsed. Roberts, Ex parte, 1 Madd. 72; 2 Rose, 378.

Nor was a debt for goods sold upon an agreement to be paid for by a present bill, payable at a future day. Hoskins v. Duperoy, 9 East, 498; 6 Esp. 58. But see Henbest v. Brown, Peake, 54.

Where goods were sold, to be paid for by a bill at four months, and no bill was given, there was not a good petitioning creditor's debt arising from this sale for the seller to support a commission against the purchaser, till the four months had expired. Cothay v. Murray, 1 Camp. 235.

Upon a sale of goods at six or nine months' credit, the purchaser, by not paying at the end of six months, made his election to take credit for the nine months, and there was no debt to support a commission till the nine months were expired. Price v. Nixon, 5 Taunt. 338; 2 Rose, 438.

If a party agrees to take a work which is to be published in eighteen months, at intervals of two months, the debt due for the numbers delivered is sufficient. Mavor v. Pyne, 3 Bing. 285; 11 Moore, 2; 2 C. & P. 91.

A plaintiff, in an action for a breach of promise of marriage, having recovered above 100*l.* damages against a trader, who, between verdict and judgment, committed an act of bankruptcy:—Held, that the debt due upon the judgment after it was entered up, was not a good petitioning creditor's debt. Charles, Ex parte, 14 East, 197; 1 Rose, 372; 16 Ves. 256. And see Buss v. Gilbert, 2 M. & S. 70.

A debt for money lent on mortgage, payable after six months' notice, such notice not to expire before a certain day, is a good petitioning creditor's debt, without any notice given, and more than six months before that day. Hill v. Harris, M. & M. 448.

Must be due at Time of Act of Bankruptcy.]

—The rule that the debt in which an adjudication of bankruptcy is founded must be a debt which existed at the time of the act of bankruptcy, is not altered by the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. Hayward, Ex parte, 6 L. R., Ch. 546; 40 L. J., Bk. 49; 24 L. T. 782; 19 W. R. 833. S. P., Sadler, Ex parte, Whelan, In re, 48 L. J., Bk. 43; 39 L. T. 361; 27 W. R. 156.

An acceptance was written on an incomplete bill of exchange, to which no drawer's name was affixed. The acceptor soon afterwards assigned all his property for the benefit of his creditors. Some weeks after this the bill, which had remained in the hands of the acceptor's agent, was completed and indorsed to a bona fide holder for value, who, on its being dishonoured, obtained an adjudication against the acceptor, grounded on the assignment as an act of bankruptcy:—Held, that the adjudication must be annulled, as no debt existed on the bill till it was issued, which was after the act of bankruptcy. Id.

The debt necessary to sustain a petition for an adjudication under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 71, s. 6, sub-s. 6, is a debt presently recoverable. Sturt, Ex parte, Pearcey, In re, 13 L. R., Eq. 309; 41 L. J., Bk. 12; 20 W. R. 200.

When, therefore, the debt of a petitioning creditor was for goods sold to the debtor on credit, and the credit had not expired at the date of the petition being filed:—Held, that there was no debt upon which to found a petition for adjudication. Id.

Unliquidated Damages.—The father of a continuing partner covenanted with an incoming partner that the debts of the old firm did not exceed a certain sum, and that if they did, he would on demand pay the new firm or the creditors of the old firm the amount of the excess. The debts exceeded the stipulated amount:—

Held, that the excess did not constitute a good petitioning creditor's debt against the father, or more than a claim for unliquidated damages. Broadhurst, Ex parte, 2 De G., Mac. & G. 953; 22 L. J., Bk. 21; 17 Jur. 964.

5. PARTICULAR CASES.

Solicitor's Bills.—A solicitor may sue out a commission upon his debt for costs, without, as in the case of an action, having delivered his bill one month previous thereto. Sutton, Ex parte, 11 Ves. 163.

But it is quite of course after the commission to refer such bill to the master to be taxed. Howell, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 312; S. P., Steele, Ex parte 16 Ves. 166.

Liability to Taxation.—Where a commission is taken out upon a debt due to a solicitor for costs, any creditor may have the bill taxed, if the bankrupt at the time of his bankruptcy was not concluded. Prideaux, Ex parte, 1 Glyn. & J. 28.

Where solicitors had delivered their bill of costs in September, 1850, and, after a reduction had been agreed upon, the client accepted a bill of exchange for the amount so reduced:—Held, on the bill being dishonoured, and the client becoming bankrupt in May, 1851, that the bill of exchange constituted a provable debt without the bill of costs being taxed. Webb, Ex parte, 4 De G. & S. 366.

Cross Claim for Negligence.—Upon a petition by a bankrupt to annul a fiat issued by an attorney for the amount of his bill of costs, on the ground that the chief part of the bill consisted of charges for the prosecution of an action on the part of the bankrupt, in which he was nonsuited by reason of the gross negligence of the attorney, the court referred it to the registrar to inquire and report as to the quantum of negligence. Southall, Ex parte, 4 Deac. 91; 1 Mont. & Chit. 346.

Awards.—A sum awarded by arbitrators may constitute a good petitioning creditor's debt. Dauce v. Holdsworth, Peake, 64.

If the award is not bad on the face of it. Lowndes, Ex parte, 1 Mont. 24.

Or the submission void. Antram v. Chace, 15 East, 209; 1 Rose, 344.

The court, upon the hearing of a petition for adjudication based on an award, whereby the arbitrator found that a certain sum was due from the bankrupt to the petitioning creditor, will not entertain a question as to the validity of the award, for it is incumbent on the bankrupt, if he questions its validity, to take steps to set it aside. Kirkland, Ex parte, 18 W. R. 804.

The non-production of the agreement of reference does not, in the absence of proof of notice to produce, constitute an objection to the petition. Id.

Bill of Exchange.—Where a party accepted a bill in a bankrupt's name without his authority, an acknowledgment by the bankrupt to the holder of the bill after it became due, that he was responsible for the payment of the bill, does not constitute a good petitioning creditor's debt, so as to enable the holder to sustain a fiat against the bankrupt. Edwards, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 241; 5 Jur. 706.

Partners.—One of two partners giving an acceptance in the name of the firm, for a pre-existing debt of his own, without the authority of the other partner, is not a good petitioning creditor's debt, to support a joint fiat against the two partners. Austen, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 247.

Accommodation Bills.—If two persons exchange acceptances, and, before the bills are mature, one of the acceptors commits an act of bankruptcy, there is not such a debt due from him to the other as will sustain a commission before the other has paid his own acceptance. Sarratt v. Austin, 4 Taunt. 200; 2 Rose, 112.

Drawer against Acceptor.—The drawer of a bill of exchange who has taken it up after an act of bankruptcy committed by the acceptor, but before an adjudication, has a debt making him a good petitioning creditor for adjudication against the acceptor on the footing of that act of bankruptcy. Cyrus, Ex parte, Broadridge, In re, 5 L. R., Ch. 176; 21 L. T. 664; S. P., Bingley v. Malleon, 3 Dougl. 333.

Not yet Due.—Where A., having drawn a bill for 148l. in favour of B., to whom he was previously indebted to that amount, committed an act of bankruptcy before the bill became due, or had been presented for acceptance:—Held, that such bill was a good petitioning creditor's debt, although it appeared that it had been duly presented and paid by the acceptors subsequently to the commission. Douthat, Ex parte, 4 B. & A. 67.

Holder against Drawer—Notice of Dishonour excused.—A., a creditor of B. to the amount of 115l. 3s. 8d., took his bill for 20l. on C., who had not then, nor afterwards, any effects of B. in his hands: the bill, when due, was dishonoured, and no notice thereof was given by A. to B.:—Held, that A.'s demand was not discharged; but that his debt would support a commission against B. Bickerdiike v. Boltman, 1 T. R. 405.

Dishonour of Bill given under Composition Deed.—Revival of old Debt.—A composition deed was made between L., a trader, B. his surety, and his creditors, reciting that the creditors had agreed to accept a composition of 12s. in the pound, to be paid by four instalments at the end of four, six, nine, and twelve months, in full satisfaction and payment of their several debts; the first three instalments to be secured by bills drawn by L. on B., and accepted by him, the last by L.'s promissory note. The deed contained a covenant by the creditors not to sue L. until default should be made in payment of the bills and note, or some of them, and upon payment of the bills and note at maturity, to grant a release. Before executing the deed, B. stipulated with L. for a security to himself over all L.'s property. W., one of L.'s creditors, executed the deed and received the bills and note. On its maturity the first was dishonoured. W. immediately commenced an action against L. for his old debt, in which he ultimately obtained judgment. L., under pressure from B., after the commencement of W.'s action, and before W. obtained judgment, assigned all his property to B. This was bona fide in fulfilment of his promise to give B. security. L. was declared a bankrupt on W.'s petition: Held, that the bills were only conditional payment, and therefore that W. had, on the dishonour of the bill a right to elect to recover his old debt, and had, therefore, a sufficient petitioning creditor's debt. Leake v. Young, 5 El. & Bl. 955; 25 L. J., Q. B. 266; 2 Jur., N. S. 516.

— Notes of Country Bank.—It has been doubted whether a debt founded upon notes of a country banker, payable on demand, where no demand had been made, is sufficient to support a commission. Simpson v. Sykes, 6 M. & S. 295.

Costs.—Taxed costs upon a judgment, as in case of a nonsuit under a rule of court, do not constitute a good petitioning creditor's debt, such costs being recoverable only by attachment, in the nature of execution. Stevenson, Ex parte, 1 M. & M. 262.

An order of the Divorce Court, for the payment of costs, does not constitute a petitioning creditor's debt sufficient for the purpose of sustaining a bankruptcy of the person against whom such order is made. Miller, In re, 11 W. R. 374.

The taxed costs of the Queen's proctor intervening in a suit in the Divorce Court, which was dismissed with costs to be paid to that officer, form a good petitioning creditor's debt to support a petition in bankruptcy against the person ordered to pay them; and the Queen's proctor for the time being can sue for them, although he was not the Queen's proctor during the time that such costs were incurred. Rayner, Ex parte, 37 L. T. 38; 25 W. R. 851.

Judgment Debts.—It is no objection to a commission when the petitioning creditor's debt is on a judgment, that, prior to presenting a petition for a commission, the petitioning creditor had not relinquished his judgment. Bryant v. Withers, 2 Rose, 8; 2 M. & S. 123.

A debt for money lent, due to a creditor at the time when an act of bankruptcy is committed by the debtor, is sufficient to support a commission against him, though afterwards, and before petitioning for such commission, the creditor obtains judgment against him for a sum of money including such debt. Id.

A judgment creditor, who has taken his debtor in execution, cannot afterwards sue out a commission against him upon the same debt. Cohen v. Cunningham, 8 T. R. 123.

A judgment debt is a good debt on which to found a petition in bankruptcy, although the debtor has been taken in execution under a ca. sa., and subsequently and before the date of the petition discharged from custody under the Insolvent Debtors' Act, 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, and the debt duly inserted in the schedule. Watson v. Humphrey, 10 Ex. 784; 3 C. L. R. 1048; 24 L. J., Ex. 190; S. P. & S. C., Watson, In re, 2 Bk. & Ins. R. 51.

— Decree of Court of Equity.—A claim founded on a decree of a court of equity, for interest in a suit for a specific performance of an agreement, is not sufficient. Carpenter v. Thornton, 3 B. & A. 52.

Before 32 & 33 Vict. c. 71, s. 6, a decree of a court of equity for the payment of a sum of money, was not a debt upon which an adjudication could be supported. Blencowe, Ex parte, 1 L. R., Ch. 393; 35 L. J., Bk. 18; 12 Jur., N. S. 366; 14 L. T. 889; 14 W. R. 623.

— Damages against Co-respondent.—In a divorce suit a decree for a divorce was made, and the co-respondent was ordered to pay into the registry 5,000*l.*, the amount of damages assessed by the jury. This decree was made absolute. The co-respondent being resident abroad, the order for payment could not be enforced against him, and an order was obtained rescinding so much of the decree as ordered payment into the registry, and ordering the 5,000*l.* to be paid to the husband, he undertaking to pay it into the registry to abide the further order of the court. The husband then commenced proceedings in bankruptcy against the co-respondent:—Held, that the 5,000*l.* did not constitute a good petitioning creditor's debt. Muirhead, Ex parte, 2 Ch. D. 22; 45 L. J., Bk. 65; 33 L. T. 303; 24 W. R. 351—C. A.

Debt Due on Failure of Condition.—A petitioning creditor was the president of a money club, and the preceding president had, in accordance with the rules of the club, in June, 1851, indorsed to him two notes for 50*l.* each, payable on demand, which were part of the property and securities of the club. The shares of the club were 50*l.* shares, and the bankrupt, who had been a subscriber for two shares previously to May, became the purchaser of two shares, and had with two sureties executed the notes on his becoming such purchaser. According to the rules of the club, he was to pay 10*s.* per month on each share, and interest at 5*l.* per month upon the amount; and in case either of the sureties should die before the subscriber's share be paid up, such subscriber should have immediate notice in writing, to provide a fresh surety, to the satisfaction of the committee, within a reasonable time, as the necessity of the case might require; and in case of neglect, the committee should have power to recover the whole amount of such subscriber's share or shares then unpaid by an action. The bankrupt had paid all the monthly payments, and the interest due up to the time of his bankruptcy; but in May, 1851, one of the sureties died, and a notice was sent to the bankrupt to provide a fresh surety, which he had neglected to do; and at the time of committing the act of bankruptcy, in November, 1851, more than 50*l.* remained unpaid to the clerk. The sum due upon the two notes was relied on as the petitioning creditor's debt:—Held, that the debt was valid. Hope v. Meek, 10 Ex. 829; 25 L. J., Ex. 11.

Partners—Agreement to Share Profits.—Where A. deposits with B. goods to be sold, and on a sale being effected, the profits, after deducting the cost price, are to be equally divided between them; but the loss, if any, is to be borne exclusively by A.; if B. effects a sale and receives the money, the debt due from him to A. is sufficient to support a commission against B. Marson v. Barber, Gow, 17.

If money is advanced to a trader, to enable him to commence a trade, of which the lender is to share the profits, it is a good petitioning creditor's debt. Notley, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 46.

Landlord & Tenant.—Scoble, that pending a replevin on a distress for rent, the landlord cannot sue out a commission of bankruptcy against the tenant, founded on his demand for rent. Emery v. Mucklow, 4 M. & Scott, 263.

Landlords who had distrained, and to whom, in addition to arrears of rent, a sum was due from the tenant exceeding 50*l.*, for goods sold and delivered, petitioned for an adjudication against him:—Held, that they were not bound to forego their distress. Bell, Ex parte, 4 De G. & S. 597.

Stock Exchange Differences.—The amount of the differences due by a defaulter on the London Stock Exchange (as fixed by the official assignee of that body under its rules) to a Stock Exchange creditor, is a "liquidated sum" within the meaning of s. 6 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and will support a bankruptcy petition by the creditor against the defaulter. Ward, Ex parte, Ward, In re, 22 Ch. D. 132; 52 L. J., Ch. 73; 48 L. T. 332; 31 W. R. 112—C. A.

6. SUBSTITUTION.

Creditor negotiating Bill of Exchange—A petitioning creditor had sold a bankrupt's goods, in payment for which he took three bills of exchange, accepted by the bankrupt, which the creditor negotiated, and which were not in his hands, nor due, at the time he issued the fiat. The commissioner expunged the proof of his debt, on the ground that the bills were not in his possession at the time of the bankruptcy:—Held, that an order might be made, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 18, for the substitution of the debt of another creditor. Smith, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 341; 7 Jur. 864.

Creditor failing to Prove his Debt.—The Court of Bankruptcy might, under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 122, s. 4, admit another creditor to prosecute the fiat, after an unsuccessful attempt to prove his debt by the original petitioning creditor. Kynaston v. Davis, 15 M. & W. 705; 15 L. J., Ex. 336; 10 Jur. 620.

Creditor not Proceeding.—Where, after admitting a debt under a trader debtor summons, the debtor obtained protection under the arrangement clauses of the Bankruptcy Act of 1849, and the creditor petitioned for adjudication in bankruptcy, but did not proceed to obtain adjudication, and adjudication was obtained on the petition by another creditor:—Held, that the adjudication was valid. Dales, Ex parte, 2 De G. & J. 206; 27 L. J., Bk. 13.

— In case of Non-Trader.—Before 32 & 33 Vict. c. 71, when a petitioning creditor failed to proceed and to obtain an adjudication on a petition against a non-trader, it was not competent to another creditor to apply for an adjudication upon that petition. Bristow, In re, 3 L. R., Ch. 247; 37 L. J., Bk. 9; 18 L. T. 222; 16 W. R. 385.

Debt insufficient—Addition of Debt due to another Creditor.—Where a petitioning creditor's debt is insufficient, and the court orders the commission to be proceeded with on proof of a sufficient debt by any other creditor, the debt of the second may be added to that of the first to make up the requisite amount. Byers v. Southwell, 6 Bing. N. C. 39; 8 Scott, 238.

Adjudication refused.—The 101st section of the Bankruptcy Act of 1848 was not repealed by s. 96 of the Act of 1861; and where an adjudication had been refused upon the petition of a creditor, another creditor might obtain an adjudication upon the same petition. Harris, Ex parte, 1 L. R., Ch. 469; 35 L. J., Bk. 21; 12 Jur., N. S. 618; 14 L. T. 611; 14 W. R. 750.

Death of Petitioning Creditor.—Where a petitioning creditor died after issuing the commission and before adjudication, it was ordered that the commissioner should be at liberty to adjudicate upon the deposition of his executors. Tanner, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Mac. 292; S. P., Winwood, Ex parte, 1 Glyn & J. 252.

Order for Substitution—Evidence.—The petition on which the order is made cannot be used to explain any ambiguity in the order. Christie v. Unwin, 3 P. & D. 204; 11 A. & E. 373; 4 Jur. 363.

Costs on.—On a petition for substitution of a debt, in lieu of the petitioning creditor's debt, the costs of the proceeding must be paid by the petitioning creditor, and not out of the bankrupt's estate. Hayne, Ex parte, 4 Deac. & Chit. 403; S. P., Lloyd, Ex parte, Ib. 306.

Where the petitioning creditor's debt was on a bill of exchange, which was not in his hands when the fiat issued, the debt of another creditor was substituted at the costs of the petitioning creditor. Cattley, Ex parte, 4 Deac. 138; 1 Mont. & Chit. 360.

7. FORFEITURE OF PETITIONING CREDITOR'S DEBT.

For whose Benefit.—The forfeiture takes effect for the benefit of the creditors under the commission, and cannot be in force if there is no longer any commission subsisting. Davis v. Holding, 11 A. & E. 710; 3 P. & D. 413.

Bills of exchange given to a petitioning creditor, by way of illegal composition, cannot be enforced by him; but if, since the agreement was made, no further proceedings have been taken in the bankruptcy, he may sue the bankrupt on the original consideration. Ib.

Who can Claim.—A defendant being a creditor of C. struck a docket against him and issued a fiat, but did not file it under 2 & 3 Will. 3, c. 114, s. 5, nor otherwise proceed in the bankruptcy. Afterwards, he was requested by C. to sign a composition deed, together with C.'s other creditors, accepting 10*s.* in the pound. He refused to do this, except on receiving security for his whole debt, which C. gave him by promissory notes, and the defendant thereupon signed the deed. C. afterwards committed an act of bankruptcy, and a fiat was prosecuted, under which assignees were appointed. Before this act of bankruptcy the defendant received money on one of the notes which had fallen due. The assignees brought an action for the amount:—Held, that they could not recover, for that, although the case was within 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 8, and defendant's debt was forfeited, the money was to be paid only to persons appointed by commissioners under some commission founded on the defendant's docket, or under some later commission, and no appointment for this purpose had been made; and that, as C. himself could not recover the money, being a party to the transaction, the assignees who succeeded only to C.'s right, could not. Belcher v. Sambourne, 6 Q. B. 414; 8 Jur. 853.

Composition with other Creditors—Petitioning Creditor's Debt not compounded.—[A., being indebted to B. in 500*l.*, and to other creditors in a large amount, a docket was struck against him by B., but no commission of bankruptcy was opened upon it. It was then arranged between A. and B., that A. should pay a composition of 10*s.* in the pound to his creditors, if they would take the same, but that B.'s debt should stand over. The creditors agreed to take the composition, and, on their receiving that amount on their respective debt, signed a release to A. of the remainder. B. did not receive any money under the composition, nor did he sign the release, but shortly after the same had been executed, he sued A. for the 500*l.*, who thereupon gave him a cognovit for that amount. Judgment was signed by B. on this cognovit within twenty-one days of its execution, but it was not left with the master to be filed. Six years afterwards, B. issued a fi. fa. on this judgment, and levied the amount on the goods of A., who within two months of that time became bankrupt, and a fiat was issued against him:—Held, on an application by his assignees, to set aside this judgment and execution, that the debt of B. was not forfeited under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 8. Bushell v. Boord, 1 B. C. Rep. 260; 4 D. & L. 359; 16 L. J., Q. B. 57; 11 Jur. 268.

Partners.—[R., G., & H. carried on business as partners. They subsequently dissolved partnership, and the business was carried on by R. and G. R. was also engaged in other partnership transactions, with which neither G. nor H. was connected; on the 3rd August, 1842, R. committed an act of bankruptcy. On the 4th, a docket was struck against him by the bank of M., and on the 5th a separate fiat was issued against him on such docket; on the 15th August, G. committed an act of bankruptcy, and on the 18th, a separate fiat was issued against him; on the 17th of August a joint fiat was issued against R. and G., and on the 18th a joint fiat was issued against R., G. and H.; on the 1st and 3rd October, the separate fiats and joint fiat against R. and G. were annulled. The bank of M. had not struck or joined in striking either of the dockets, except that against R. On the 5th August and the 1st September, and in the intervening time between those days, certain bills and moneys, forming part of the joint estate of R. and G., were delivered and paid by them to the bank of M., in payment pro tanto of a debt due to the bank from them jointly. The bank was a joint creditor of R. and G. to a large amount over and above the bills and money so paid. There were also other joint creditors of R. and G.:—Held, that such payment did not raise a case of forfeiture under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 8, against the bank of M. Smith, Ex parte, 3 Mont. D. & D. 144; 12 L. J., Bk. 34; 7 Jur. 183.

8. PROOF IN ACTIONS OF PETITIONING CREDITOR'S DEBT.

In the absence of a notice to dispute the petitioning creditor's debt, the debt upon the proceedings must be taken to be admitted for all the purposes of the action. Hernemann v. Barber, 14 C. B. 583; 2 C. L. R. 825; 23 L. J., C. P. 145; 18 Jur. 790.

In an action for conversion of goods which the defendants had seized upon the issuing of a fiat, as part of the bankrupt's estate, the counsel for the plaintiff opened the bankruptcy, and that some of the defendants were assignees of the bankrupt:—Held, that proof of the petitioning creditor's debt was not necessary. Fauccett v. Fearn, 6 Q. B. 25, n.; 8 Jur. 646.

An I O U bearing date before the bankruptcy of a trader, constitutes no evidence of a petitioning creditor's debt, without some proof that it was in existence before the bankruptcy. Wright v. Lainson, 2 M. & W. 739; M. & H. 202.

An affidavit to procure a commission of bankruptcy, in which the deponent swears that the party is indebted to the deponent in 100*l.* and upwards, and is become bankrupt, is, as against the deponent, conclusive evidence of the bankruptcy in any ulterior proceedings. Ledbetter v. Sutt, 4 Bing. 623; 1 M. & P. 597; S. P., Harmer v. Davis, 1 Moore, 300; 7 Taunt. 577; Gervis v. Wootton Canal Company, 5 M. & S. 76; Gibbons v. Phillips, 7 B. & C. 529; 2 M. & R. 238.

VII. PROCEEDINGS AFTER ACT OF BANKRUPTCY AND BEFORE ADJUDICATION.

1. PETITION, FIAT AND COMMISSION.

Fiat, when issued.—[The time of delivering out a fiat as an operative instrument was, "the date and issuing," within 2 & 3 Vict. c. 29, and, prima facie, the time of delivering it out of the Bankrupt Office was that time. Pewtress v. Annan, 9 D. P. C. 828.

A fiat granted by the Lord Chancellor was delivered by him to his secretary of bankrupts, to be transmitted by post to the commissioners of bankruptcy in the country. The secretary, accordingly, put the fiat into the post-office, in pursuance of the order given:—Held, that the delivery of the fiat by the Lord Chancellor to the secretary was not the true "date and issuing of the fiat," within the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 29, so as to protect an execution levied after such delivery. Freeman v. Whitaker, 4 Ex. 834; 19 L. J., Ex. 351.

By 5 & 6 Vict. c. 122, s. 4, fiats in bankruptcy shall be issued and transmitted by the Lord Chancellor's secretary of bankrupts, in such manner as the Lord Chancellor shall by any order direct. The Lord Chancellor by an order directed that every fiat directed to any district court of bankruptcy should forthwith be sent through the General Post-Office to the deputy registrar or registrar of such district court. A fiat having been signed by the Lord Chancellor, and sent to the office of the secretary of bankrupts, was by him duly put into the post, and arrived at the district court on the following day:—Held, that the fiat issued at the moment it was put into the post. Hernaman v. Coryton, 5 Ex. 453; 19 L. J., Ex. 353.

Form of Petition.—The court refused to annul an adjudication, on the ground of the objection that the bankrupt, having gone abroad, had not, within six months before the petition for adjudication was presented, either resided or traded within the district of the court in which it was filed, so that the petition could not be in the form prescribed by 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 89. Bunny, Ex parte, 1 De G. & J. 119; 26 L. J., Bk. 83; 3 Jur., N. S. 1141.

— Need not state Consideration for Debt.—A petition must shew clearly the case which the debtor is called upon to answer, but it need not state the consideration for the debt on which the petition is founded. Barnett, Ex parte, Barnett, In re, 31 L. T. 664; 23 W. R. 101—L. J.

— Description of Debtor.—The court refused, on the petition of a bankrupt, to annul a fiat, on the ground that he was described in it as "John G.," instead of "John Christian G.," his right name, when he had been examined before the commissioner, and never mentioned that he was wrongly named in the fiat. Galligan, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 144.

"Westcott" for "Wescott" is not a material variance of a bankrupt's name. Austin, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 247.

In a petition for adjudication the party against whom the adjudication is sought must be described at length, as of, &c., adding his occupation. Bennock, Ex parte, 21 L. T. 625.

— When Objection to be taken.—A. was the son of a small manufacturer, who had a residence at Golcar, near Huddersfield, and a mill situate about four miles from Golcar. He was in the employ of his father, and worked at the mill, where he also carried on a small business upon his own account. During the week he generally slept at the mill, but was accustomed to go to his father's house every Saturday, and remain until Monday. On an application by himself for an adjudication, he described himself as of Golcar only:—Held, that the objection to the description, if insufficient, could not be taken upon an application for an order of discharge. Crabtree, Ex parte, 83 L. J., Bk. 33; 10 Jur., N. S. 529; 10 L. T. 361; 12 W. R. 768.

— Description of Trader—Error in Sealed Copy.—On the 26th April, 1880, a bankruptcy petition was presented against P., in which it was alleged that "he carried on business as a licensed victualler," and "that the act of bankruptcy committed by him was that he has, with intent to defeat or delay his creditors, departed from his dwelling-house and place of business, or otherwise absented himself." On the presentation of the petition an order was made under rule 65 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1870, that the petition should be heard on the 27th April. A sealed copy of the petition was the same day left at the last known place of business of the debtor. At the foot of the sealed copy there was a note stating that the petition had been ordered to be heard on the 27th April, and that if P. intended to dispute the truth of the statements of the petition, he must file a notice of the grounds on which he intended to dispute the same, and send by post a copy of the affidavit to the petitioner three days before the day fixed for the hearing. On the 27th April the debtor did not appear, and was adjudicated bankrupt. The bankrupt appealed from the adjudication on the grounds that the words "being a trader" were omitted from the description of the act of bankruptcy in the petition, and that the notice to the bankrupt was insufficient, inasmuch as the note to the sealed copy shewed that it was not intended to hear the petition for three days from the 26th April:—Held, that the allegations in the petition that the debtor was a licensed victualler, and that he had departed from his dwelling-house with intent to defeat or delay his creditors, were sufficient to describe the act of bankruptcy, and that the other objection must fail, as it did not appear that the debtor had been misled by the note to the sealed copy. Palmer, Ex parte, Palmer, In re, 45 L. T. 93—C. A.

— By Secured Creditor—Statement of readiness to give up Security—Amendment of formal Defect.—If a petitioning creditor who holds security for his debt is willing to give an estimate of the value of his security, s. 6 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, does not require this fact to be stated in the petition, but it is sufficient for the petitioner to give notice of it to the respondent, before the hearing of the petition. It is, however, proper as a matter of convenience, that the petitioner's willingness to estimate the value of his security should, in accordance with Form No. 10, be stated in the petition. A petitioning creditor stated in his petition that he held no security for his debt. He, in fact, held a charge on some property of the debtor, and before the hearing of the petition his solicitors, in a letter to the debtor's solicitors, said that the security was not valued at anything, and at the hearing it was stated that the petitioner was ready to give up his security for the benefit of the creditors. The registrar dismissed the petition, on the ground that the petitioner's readiness to give up his security ought, in conformity with s. 6, to have been stated in the petition:—Held, that the defect was a merely formal one, and that the registrar ought to have amended the petition by adding a statement of the security and that the petitioner was ready to give it up, and then to have made an adjudication. And the Court of Appeal made the amendment and the adjudication, but gave no costs of the appeal. Vanderlinde, Ex parte, Pogose, In re, 20 Ch. D. 289; 51 L. J., Ch. 760; 47 L. T. 138; 30 W. R. 930—C. A.

Fiat, Joint or Separate.—Where a joint fiat issues against A. & B., and the debt is separate, it is void, and the subsequent superseding it as to A. cannot make it good as a separate fiat against B. Clarke, Ex parte, 1 Deac. & Chit. 544.

A separate fiat was annulled in favour of a subsequent joint one, notwithstanding the separate estate was more important than the joint estate, and one of the bankrupts intended to dispute his bankruptcy. Burdikin, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 187.

A separate fiat was issued against one of a firm of four, trading abroad. Subsequently a fiat was issued against two of the four, who were resident in this country. A petition was presented to annul the separate, in favour of the joint fiat; but an affidavit being filed, that there were no joint assets in this country, except such as were subject to liens for more than they were worth, the court declined to interfere. Rennick, Ex parte, 12 Jur. 996.

The order to annul a separate fiat, in favour of a joint one, is quite of course. Pemberton, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 190.

Where separate fiats are annulled to give effect to a joint one, the petitioning creditor will not be made to pay the costs of issuing them, merely because he ought to have given a fuller description of the bankrupt, if it was one not likely to mislead, and no improper motives are attributed to him. Burdikin, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 156.

Formerly, if a joint commission was invalid as to one partner, it was bad as to all. Martin, Ex parte, 15 Ves. 114.

Even where one partner is an infant or a lunatic, there cannot be a joint commission against the others; separate commissions must be taken out. Layton, Ex parte, 6 Ves. 440; S. P., Henderson, Ex parte, 4 Ves. 163.

Quære, whether a fiat issued against an infant and another could be annulled as to the infant, and stand good as to the other under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 16. Watson, Ex parte, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 682; 3 Deac. 277.

Where there was a separate commission against one of three partners, and afterwards a commission against two of the firm, the first commission was ordered to be superseded, and the costs paid out of the joint estate. Smith, Ex parte, 1 Glyn & J. 256.

Quære, as to the validity of a joint fiat where one of the bankrupts is attained. Addison, Ex parte, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 434; 3 Deac. 54.

Fiat Conclusive until set Aside.—The fiat is, until set aside, proof of the bankruptcy against all parties. Colombine v. Penhall, 1 Sm. & G. 228.

Affidavit in Support.—J. W., in support of a petition, deposed that the alleged bankrupt was indebted to him, J. M., his co-partner (omitting the word "and"), for goods sold and delivered by the deponent and his co-partner.—Held, that the omission rendered the affidavit unavailable for the purpose of striking a docket. Hill, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 51.

The fact of affidavits in support of a petitioning creditor's debt having been sworn before the solicitor to the fiat, is not necessarily a fatal objection to the fiat, but one on which the court will act on its own discretion. Wright, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 307; 7 Jur. 522.

It is no objection to the validity of a petition that the affidavit filed with the petition is not made by a person who can depose to the facts as within his own knowledge, but it is sufficient if it is made by the petitioning creditor. Bennoch, Ex parte, 21 L. T. 625.

Petition with Improper Motive.—When the court sees that a bankruptcy petition has been made use of for an inequitable purpose, as, for instance, to extort money from the debtor, it will refuse to make an adjudication, even though there is a good petitioning creditor's debt, and an act of bankruptcy has been committed. Davies, In re, King, Ex parte, 3 Ch. D. 461; 45 L. J., Bk. 169; 25 W. R. 239—C. A.

When the court sees that a bankruptcy petition is presented, not with the bona fide view of obtaining an adjudication, but for a collateral purpose and with the view of putting pressure on the debtor, it will refuse to make an adjudication, even though there be a good petitioning creditor's debt, and an act of bankruptcy has been committed. Griffin, Ex parte, Adams, In re, 12 Ch. D. 480; 48 L. J., Bk. 107; 41 L. T. 515; 28 W. R. 208—C. A.

Second Petition founded on same Act.—

Under Rule 39, a petitioning creditor who has been induced by the fraud of his debtor to permit his petition to be dismissed for want of prosecution can, if he obtain special leave of the court, present a second petition alleging the same act of bankruptcy as that on which the first petition was founded. Love, Ex parte, Jagger, In re, 17 L. R., Eq. 454; 43 L. J., Bk. 37; 30 L. T. 71; 22 W. R. 366.

Petition by Debtor.—Quære, whether an outlaw can petition for an adjudication against himself. Adams, Ex parte, 27 L. J., Bk. 37; 4 Jur., N. S. 1089—L. J.

Where a bankrupt presented a petition for adjudication against himself, and he thereby sought his own benefit alone, and to be relieved against one particular debt and interest, the petition was not dismissed, but his future property was declared liable for the debts proved and to be proved under the bankruptcy. Hewitt, Ex parte, 31 L. J., Bk. 83; 8 Jur., N. S. 757; 6 L. T. 730.

By 17 & 18 Vict. c. 119, s. 20, a trader petitioning for an adjudication of bankruptcy shall forthwith, after filing his petition, and before adjudication, make it appear to the satisfaction of the court that his available estate was sufficient to produce 150l. at the least: the decision of the Court of Bankruptcy as to value was conclusive. Pennell v. Butler, 18 C. B. 209.

Before the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, A. became indebted to B. upon a judgment in 59l.; he owed no other debts, except some of very trifling amount, and one to his own attorney, for defending him in an action brought by B. The only assets which he had possessed he had sold, in order to raise money to defend the action.—Held, that he might petition against himself. Enshy, In re, 35 L. J., Bk. 23; 12 Jur., N. S. 579; 14 L. T., 692.

In Custody for Debt.—A person in custody upon a capias to hold to bail is in custody for a debt, claim or demand within the meaning of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 19, and may, as such, be adjudicated bankrupt by the registrar, and is entitled to his release upon obtaining his order of discharge. Gaskell, Ex parte, 11 L. T. 685.

Hearing—Non-attendance of Petitioning Creditor.—When, upon the day appointed for the hearing of a petition for adjudication, neither the petitioning creditor, nor his solicitor, nor anyone on his behalf, attends to support it, the court will, upon the application of the alleged debtor, dismiss the petition with costs. Anon., 22 L. T. 179.

The chief judge will not upon appeal interfere with the discretion of the court below in dispensing with the attendance of the petitioning creditor upon the hearing of a bankruptcy petition, without good cause. Rayner, Ex parte, 37 L. T. 38; 25 W. R. 851.

— Non-attendance of Debtor.—A debtor having given notice to dispute the petitioning creditor's debt under a petition filed against him, did not attend at the time appointed for the hearing, but a few minutes afterwards the registrar received a telegram stating that counsel was on the way to the court, and would shortly arrive to appear for the debtor. The registrar waited ten minutes, and then, no one being present on behalf of the debtor, adjudicated him a bankrupt. Ten minutes afterwards, the debtor, attended by his solicitor and counsel, arrived, but the registrar refused to re-open the matter:—Held, that there had been undue haste in the proceedings, and that the petition must be re-mitted to be heard on its merits. Phillips, Ex parte, Phillips, In re, 44 L. J., Bk. 11; 31 L. T. 416; 23 W. R. 24.

— Two Petitions against same Debtor—Second Petition first heard—Adjudication—Collusion between Debtor and second Petitioner.—When two bankruptcy petitions are presented against the same debtor, and he consents under r. 42 to an immediate adjudication being made against him on the second petition, the first petition not having been served, the court has power to hear the second petition first, and make an immediate adjudication on it without requiring any notice to be given to the first petitioner. But, if in such a case the adjudication on the second petition has been obtained by collusion between the debtor and the second petitioner, the court has power to give the conduct of the proceedings under the adjudication, up to the appointment of a trustee, to the first petitioner. Mason, Ex parte, White, In re, 14 Ch. D. 71; 49 L. J., Bk. 56; 42 L. T. 884; 28 W. R. 749—C. A. Reversing 42 L. T. 192; sub nom. Nicholson, Ex parte.

— Omission to give Notice to dispute Debt.—A debtor against whom a bankruptcy petition had been presented instructed his solicitor to oppose it. The solicitor inadvertently omitted to give the notice required by R. 36 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1870, but he appeared at the hearing of the petition, and asked to be allowed to dispute the validity of the petitioning creditor's debt. The registrar refused to permit this, and made an adjudication:—Held, that the debtor ought to have been allowed to adduce his evidence, and that the adjudication must be annulled, but that the debtor must pay the costs occasioned by the omission to give the notice. Dale, Ex parte, 3 Ch. D. 322; 45 L. J., Bk. 129; 34 L. T. 745; 24 W. R. 852.

— Withdrawal of Notice to dispute Debt.—A debtor against whom a bankruptcy petition has been presented, gave notice, under Rule 36 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1870, of his intention to dispute the petitioning creditor's debt. He afterwards withdrew the notice, but on the hearing of the petition, without having given a fresh notice, he claimed the right to dispute the amount of the debt, on the ground that, since the withdrawal of the notice, he had made a payment to the creditor which reduced the debt below 50l. The creditor was not present, and the registrar dismissed the petition:—Held, that the debtor was not precluded from disputing the amount of the debt, but that the creditor ought to have an opportunity of giving evidence to contradict the debtor; and the petition was referred back to the registrar for this purpose. Leary, Ex parte, Lattman, In re, 13 Ch. D. 321—C. A.

— Verifying Allegations in Petition.—At the hearing of a petition, even though the respondent has given no notice of his intention to shew cause against the petition, and does not appear, the allegations contained in the petition must be supported by further evidence than the common affidavit (No. 11). Lindsay, Ex parte, Lindsay, In re, 19 L. R., Eq. 52; 44 L. J., Bk. 5; 31 L. T. 415; 23 W. R. 44.

That affidavit is made only for the purpose of justifying the sealing of the petition. Ib.

A creditor filed a petition for adjudication, with the usual affidavit verifying the statements of the petition. The debtor gave notice of his intention to dispute the statements in the petition, and attended at the hearing, but did not tender any evidence. The registrar accordingly made an order of adjudication without further evidence on behalf of the creditor than the affidavit filed with the petition:—Held, that the statements in the petition ought to have been proved afresh; and that the adjudication must be annulled. Dodd, Ex parte, Ormston, In re, 3 Ch. D. 452; 25 W. R. 185—C. A.

— Proof of Act of Bankruptcy.—The court cannot make an order of adjudication without definite proof of an act of bankruptcy. Lindsay, Ex parte, Lindsay, In re, supra.

A creditor presented a petition for adjudication. The debtor raised no objection and did not appear on the hearing. The petition did not allege any specific act of bankruptcy, but only that the debtor had made a fraudulent conveyance of his property or some part thereof. The only evidence was an affidavit that the statements in the petition were true. The deputy registrar adjudicated the debtor bankrupt:—Held, that the terms registrar and deputy registrar are convertible terms, and that there would have been no reason to annul the adjudication because it was made by the deputy registrar; but that the evidence of the act of bankruptcy was insufficient to justify an adjudication. Ib.

— Proof of Act of Bankruptcy—Service of Debtor Summons.—A debtor summons and a bankruptcy petition founded upon the non-compliance with it, are entirely distinct litigations, and the evidence taken upon the one cannot be used upon the other unless previous notice has been given of the intention to use it. Rogers, Ex parte, Rogers, In re, 15 Ch. D. 207; 43 L. T. 163; 29 W. R. 29—C. A.

Therefore, upon the hearing of a bankruptcy petition founded upon the debtor's non-compliance with a debtor summons, the service of the summons must be strictly proved, even though the debtor has, in an affidavit previously made by him upon an application to dismiss the summons, admitted that the summons has been served upon him. Ib.

Such an affidavit cannot be used upon the hearing of the petition, unless previous notice has been given of the intention to use it. Ib.

— Proof of Debt.—A petition for adjudication was filed, based on non-compliance with a debtor summons, and supported by an affidavit in the common form verifying the statements in the petition. The debtor gave notice to dispute the petitioning creditor's claim, and filed an affidavit admitting the debt, but claiming a set-off. At the hearing the debtor and his witnesses were present, but, owing to the absence of his solicitors, he did not tender any evidence, and the registrar thereupon made an order for adjudication:—Held, that the petitioning creditor's debt had not been sufficiently proved, and that a new sitting for adjudication must be held. Ormsdon, In re, Dodd, Ex parte, 2 Ch. D. 452; 25 W. R. 185—C. A.

Staying Petition.—A creditor, having presented a petition for an adjudication against his debtor, ought not to have his proceedings stayed by injunction merely because before the adjudication is actually made the debtor himself presents a petition for liquidation by arrangement or composition. Diamond, Ex parte, Williams, In re, 5 L. R., Ch. 743; 39 L. J., Bk. 47; 23 L. T. 292; 18 W. R. 1123.

— Pending Trial of Validity of Debt—Discretion of Registrar.—When the proceedings on a bankruptcy petition have been stayed for the trial of the question of the validity of the petitioning creditor's debt, and the validity of the debt has been established by the judgment of a court of first instance, the registrar has a judicial discretion to proceed with the hearing of the petition and to make an adjudication of bankruptcy upon it, and is not bound to wait for a final decision of a court of appeal on the validity of the debt. Yeatman, Ex parte, Yeatman, In re, 16 Ch. D. 283; 44 L. T. 260; 29 W. R. 457—C. A.

If, however, he is satisfied that a bonâ fide appeal is pending from the judgment of the court of first instance, he ought to adjourn the further hearing of the petition until after the appeal is disposed of. Id.

— Continuing Proceedings.—Before fixing a day for continuing the proceedings on the petition, the registrar is bound to require the production of the judgment establishing the debt, or an office copy of it. Id.

— Waiver of Irregularity.—But if the day is fixed irregularly, without the production of the judgment, the irregularity will be waived by the appearance of the debtor or his solicitor on the day fixed without taking the objection, which cannot then be raised at any subsequent stage of the proceedings. Id.

Tender of Amount of Debt.—A debtor made default in complying with a debtor summons, but at the hearing of the petition for an adjudication the petition was adjourned for an arrangement to be made by the debtor with the creditor's solicitor, who was also acting for other creditors. On the petition again coming on, the debtor tendered the amount of the petitioning creditor's debt (alone), but the tender was refused, and an order of adjudication was made:—Held, that without saying that there might not be cases in which the court might compel a tender to be accepted at the hearing of the petition, yet that in the present case an adjudication was properly made. Brigstocke, Ex parte, Brig-

stocke, In re, 4 Ch. D. 348; 46 L. J., Bk. 50; 35 L. T. 831; 20 W. R. 262—C. A.

When an act of bankruptcy has been proved, and a petition for adjudication presented, the creditor is not bound to accept an offer of payment of the debt, but is entitled to an order for adjudication. Boss, Ex parte, Whalley, In re, 18 L. R., Eq. 375; 43 L. J., Bk. 110; 30 L. T. 474; 22 W. R. 702.

Under such circumstances an adjournment of the petition, in order to give the debtor time for payment, was held not to be warranted by the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 8. Id.

Costs of Petition.—If two present separate petitions the costs of the creditor upon whose petition the adjudication is founded will be paid in priority to the costs of the other creditors. Page, Ex parte, Springall, In re, 25 L. T. 716.

2. CONSOLIDATION OF PROCEEDINGS.

Two separate fiats against two partners were allowed to be consolidated and prosecuted as one joint fiat, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 17. Gowar, In re, 1 Mont., D. & D. 1.

The 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 98, providing that after a petition for adjudication is filed against one or more member or members of a firm, any petition for adjudication filed against any other member or members shall be prosecuted in the same court as the first, and that the estate of the bankrupt or bankrupts shall vest in the assignees under the first, applies to a case where the second petition is against all the members of the firm. Green, Ex parte, 3 De G. & J. 50; 27 L. J., Bk. 32.

Where under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 98, an order of annexation had been made of a joint to a prior separate petition for adjudication, and assignees had been chosen under the separate adjudication, joint creditors as well as separate creditors voting in the choice, the court refused to discharge the annexing order, or to annul the separate in favour of the joint adjudication. Id.

After two separate adjudications had been made against two partners on their own petitions, a joint adjudication was obtained against both on the petition of a joint creditor. An order of a district court, consolidating the separate petitions with the joint petition, was irregular, and was discharged, and the choice of assignees under it vacated. Haines, Ex parte, 3 De G. & J. 58; 27 L. J., Bk. 33; 4 Jur., N. S. 1256.

Where an order directed that all the proceedings had and taken under a separate fiat should be transferred to and incorporated with the proceedings under a joint one, the commissioners were bound to admit the proofs as they stood under the separate fiat, and could not insist on a creditor deducting the amount of a dividend received by him under the separate fiat, and proving only for the balance of his debt under the joint fiat. Bateson, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 500.

3. EFFECT OF DEATH OF DEBTOR.

Joint Fiat—Amendment.—Where one of the bankrupts died before the adjudication under a joint fiat, the fiat was ordered to be amended by omitting his name. Hall, Ex parte, De Gex, 332.

Commission Null and Void.—But where bankrupt died before adjudication, the commission was held null and void, without any writ of supersedeas. Green, Ex parte, 1 Deac. & Chit. 230.

Though a bankrupt dies, not having surrendered, the commission may proceed. Dewdney, Ex parte, 15 Ves. 494.

An assignment of the commissioners after the death of a bankrupt was good. Troughton v. Gitley, Amb. 630.

A separate commission established, though the other partner died before the assignment. Smith, Ex parte, 5 Ves. 295.

A petition to supersede, presented in the lifetime of the bankrupt, ordered to stand over, on his death, until his personal representatives, or those entitled to take out administration, were served. Lenworthy, Ex parte, 1 Mont. 54.

Debtor petitioning against Himself.—Where a petitioner for an adjudication against himself had the petition granted and afterwards dismissed, and having given notice of appeal against such dismissal, dies, the property meanwhile remaining in the custody of the official assignee, the court has no jurisdiction to make an order for the disposition of the property, or a declaration as to the rights of the parties. Bianconi, Ex parte, 10 L. T. 283.

4. SUSPENDING PROCEEDINGS IN BANKRUPTCY.

Under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 110.—It is not necessary to the validity of a resolution to suspend proceedings in bankruptcy, passed by a meeting of creditors under the above section, that previous notice of the holding of the meeting should be advertised in the London Gazette. Boldero, Ex parte, 34 L. J., Bk. 34; 12 L. T. 750; 13 W. R. 1088.

It is competent to the creditors to pass such a resolution, notwithstanding the bankrupt has already obtained his order of discharge. Id.

Where proceedings have been suspended by a resolution of the creditors, upon an application by a bankrupt for his order of discharge under the above section, the commissioner is bound to entertain an application by a creditor for leave to examine the bankrupt upon the accounts filed by him, although these accounts may, at a previous meeting, have been unquestioned. Jones, Ex parte, 33 L. J., Bk. 11; 9 L. T. 498; 12 W. R. 221.

It is the duty of the commissioner, before granting an order of discharge under the above section, to satisfy himself judicially that the bankrupt has made a full discovery of his estate. Id.

—Effect on Property.—A bankrupt proposed at a meeting of his creditors that the bankruptcy should be suspended under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 110, and that he should receive back his estate and pay a composition of 2s. 6d. in the pound. The creditors, by a resolution duly confirmed, accepted the proposal. The resolution did not purport to re-vest the estate in the bankrupt until after the payment of the composition. The messenger of the Court of Bankruptcy then went out of possession, but the creditor's assignee who had guaranteed the messenger his fees, retained the keys of the premises. Subsequently and before payment of the composition, a judgment creditor, who was not present at the meeting and had not assented to the resolution, issued execution and seized goods belonging to the bankrupt's estate:—Held, that the fact of the bankruptcy being suspended under s. 110 did not re-vest the estate in the bankrupt, and that the assignee was therefore entitled to the goods. Macdonald v. Thompson, 4 L. R., C. P. 747; 38 L. J., C. P. 364; 20 L. T. 666; 17 W. R. 919.

—Effect on Jurisdiction of Court.—Where the creditors of a bankrupt have passed a resolution, under the Bankruptcy Act of 1861, s. 110, that the proceedings in bankruptcy shall be suspended, the jurisdiction of the Court of Bankruptcy to order a sale of the bankrupt's property on the petition of his equitable mortgagee is at an end, unless preserved by the resolutions themselves. Wood, Ex parte, 1 L. R., Ch. 170; 35 L. J., Bk. 34; 12 Jur., N. S. 304; 14 L. T. 38; 14 W. R. 320.

VIII. ADJUDICATION.

1. WHEN AND HOW MADE.

County Court.—When a petition in bankruptcy is preferred under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 71, in a county court, against a person as residing within its district, and he is adjudicated bankrupt thereon, such adjudication not being rescinded or appealed against is final and conclusive, though it turns out that he traded within the London district; and the trustee in bankruptcy is entitled to the proceeds of an execution on such trader's goods which are retained in the sheriff's hands under s. 87, due notice of the petition having been given under that section, as it is not necessary that the adjudication should be against such person as a trader, and it is sufficient if there is an adjudication against him and he is in fact a trader. Revell v. Blake, 8 L. R., C. P. 533; 42 L. J., C. P. 165; 29 L. T. 67; 22 W. R. 96—Ex. Ch., affirming, 7 L. R., C. P. 300; 41 L. J., C. P. 129; 26 L. T. 578; 20 W. R. 675.

On Failure of Resolution for Liquidation or Composition.—Proceedings under r. 267 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1870, for adjudication of bankruptcy based upon the neglect of the first meeting of creditors to pass a resolution for liquidation or composition, must be commenced by petition. James, Ex parte, Condon, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 609; 43 L. J., Bk. 107; 30 L. T. 773; 22 W. R. 937.

An adjudication made under the provisions of r. 266 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1870, must, like any other adjudication, be made upon a petition presented by a creditor, and after service of the petition upon the debtor in the ordinary way. Stebbing, Ex parte, Stebbing, In re, 19 L. R., Eq. 441; 44 L. J., Bk. 76; 32 L. T. 208; 23 W. R. 680.

Under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 125, sub-s. 12, the court has power to adjudge a liquidating debtor a bankrupt mero motu, acting on the knowledge it has acquired in the course of the liquidation proceedings. Marland, Ex parte, Ashton, In re, 20 L. R., Eq. 777; 44 L. J., Bk. 116; 32 L. T. 875; 23 W. R. 951.

It is not necessary that a bankruptcy petition should be presented. Id.

— Failure to pay Composition.—The creditors of a debtor passed resolutions accepting a composition of 5s. in the pound, payable in two instalments of 4s. and 1s., the first instalment to be paid in five months, and to be secured by the promissory notes of the debtor and three sureties; the second instalment to be paid in two years, and to be secured by the promissory notes of the debtor alone. The first instalment was paid by the sureties, and exceeded in amount the assets of the debtor as appearing by his statement of affairs. The debtor, having failed to pay the second instalment, was adjudicated a bankrupt on the application of a creditor under s. 126.—Held, that the adjudication could not be sustained, for that the creditor failed to shew that there were legal difficulties, or that the creditors were prejudiced; and that the remedy of the creditor was to sue for the remaining instalment of the composition. Shiers, In re, Shiers, Ex parte, 7 Ch. D. 416; 47 L. J., Bk. 81; 37 L. T. 724; 26 W. R. 216.

Act of Bankruptcy committed within Six Months from Presentation of Petition but more than Twelve Months from Order of Adjudication.—Sects. 6 and 11 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, are perfectly distinct, and an adjudication may be good if the act of bankruptcy on which it is founded was committed within six months from the presentation of the petition, though the same act of bankruptcy is the only one to which the title of the trustee can relate back, and was committed more than twelve months before the order of adjudication. Grepe, In re, Grepe, Ex parte, 50 L. J., Ch. 723; 44 L. T. 829; 29 W. R. 824.

When Matter of Right.—C. was plaintiff and next friend of her infant co-plaintiffs in a chancery suit. She was ordered to pay costs, and upon her failing to pay, the defendant took proceedings in bankruptcy. She defended these upon the ground that her bankruptcy would embarrass the suit and that the proceedings in bankruptcy were taken with this object.—Held, that the adjudication was ex debito justitiæ and could not be refused. Claxton, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 532; 41 L. J., Bk. 56; 27 L. T. 257; 20 W. R. 876.

— Offer of Payment.—When an act of bankruptcy has been proved, and a petition for adjudication presented, the creditor is not bound to accept an offer of payment of the debt, but is entitled to an order for adjudication. Boss, Ex parte, Whalley, In re, 18 L. R., Eq. 875; 43 L. J., Bk. 110; 30 L. T. 474; 22 W. R. 702.

Under such circumstances an adjournment of the petition, in order to give the debtor time for payment, was held not to be warranted by the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 8. Id.

On hearing of a petition for adjudication, founded on default in appearance to a debtor's summons, after the debt and act of bankruptcy had been proved, the hearing was adjourned till the next day with the consent of the solicitor of the petitioning creditor, in order that the debtor might make arrangements to pay not only the petitioning creditor's debt, but also the debts of other creditors who were represented by the same solicitor. At the adjourned hearing the debtor tendered the amount of the petitioner's debt only and costs, which were refused by the petitioning creditor. The registrar accordingly made the order for adjudication.—Held, that the registrar was right in making the order. Brigstocke, Ex parte, Brigstocke, In re, 4 Ch. D. 348; 46 L. J., Bk. 50; 35 L. T. 831; 25 W. R. 262.—C. A.

Liquidated Debt—Contract for Shares—Failure of Contractor before Completion—Price fixed by Official Assignee.—A member of the Stock Exchange contracted with another member to purchase certain shares. Before completion the purchaser failed to meet his engagements, and was declared a defaulter on the Stock Exchange. By the rules of the Stock Exchange the price of shares, contracted to be bought or sold by such a defaulter, are to be fixed by the official assignee of the Stock Exchange, and the differences paid to or claimed from the assignee.—Held, that the price fixed by the assignee is substituted for the original contract, and is a liquidated sum due under the contract, and, therefore, that a bankruptcy petition may be founded upon a claim for such price. Ward, Ex parte, Ward, In re, 22 Ch. D. 132; 52 L. J., Ch. 73; 48 L. T. 332; 31 W. R. 112.—C. A.

— Defaulting Trustee.—The debt of a petitioning creditor, amounting to 2,350l., was based upon an order directing the alleged debtor, as one of the trustees of a post-nuptial settlement, to deliver up certain property comprised therein to the petitioning creditor, or to pay the value thereof; and an inquiry was directed, if necessary, for the purpose of ascertaining such value, and also for the purpose of ascertaining what portion of a sum of 10,000l., which the settlor had covenanted to pay to the trustees of the settlement, had come into the hands of the debtor. In his examination the debtor admitted having received a sum of 450l., as the value of certain furniture comprised in the settlement, and also different sums, to the amount of 1,900l., under the covenant in the settlement. The county court judge having adjudicated the debtor a bankrupt upon the alleged debt of 2,350l.—Held, on appeal, that until the inquiry had been made and an ascertained sum ordered to be paid upon a fixed day, there was no liquidated sum due at law or in equity upon which an adjudication could be founded. Reynolds, Ex parte, Reynolds, In re (No. 2), 52 L. J., Ch. 431; 47 L. T. 413; 31 W. R. 323.

Against Irish Traders.—A trader residing and carrying on business exclusively in Ireland was, while within a district of an English court of bankruptcy, adjudicated bankrupt by that court.—Held, that such adjudication was void, as against a subsequent adjudication by the Irish Court of Bankruptcy. Rogers, In re, 9 Ir. Ch. Rep. 150.

An adjudication in Ireland, by the operation of 20 & 21 Vict. c. 60, s. 267, vests the property of a bankrupt, situate in a foreign state, in the assignees, so far as the law of this country is concerned. Robinson, In re, 11 Ir. Ch. Rep. 385.

The law of New York recognizes, to a certain extent, the rights of the assignees under the adjudication. Id.

— Prior Adjudication by Irish Court—Discretion of Court.—A bankruptcy petition having been presented in an English county court against a trader, who carried on business in England and Ireland, and had creditors and assets in both countries, he obtained an adjudication against himself on his own petition in the Irish Bankruptcy Court before the English petition could be heard. It was alleged that if an adjudication was made on the English petition the title of the trustee would relate back so as to avoid certain transactions of the bankrupt which could not be avoided under the Irish adjudication. No one but the debtor opposed the English petition:—Held, that an adjudication ought to be made on the English petition for what it was worth, leaving for future determination the question in which court the assets ought ultimately to be administered. McCulloch, Ex parte, McCulloch, In re, 14 Ch. D. 716; 43 L. T. 161; 28 W. R. 935—C. A., affirming, 42 L. T. 664; 28 W. R. 768.

Prior Scotch Sequestration—Jurisdiction to make Adjudication.—Though the court has jurisdiction to adjudge bankrupt a debtor against whom there is existing a prior unclosed Scotch sequestration in which he has not obtained a discharge, the court has a discretion in the matter, and it will decline to make an adjudication if it does not appear that the debtor has any assets in England, or any debts contracted since the commencement of the sequestration. Robinson, Ex parte, Robinson, In re, 22 Ch. D. 816; 48 L. T. 501; 31 W. R. 553—C. A.

Per Jessel, M.R.:—Prima facie the existence of a Scotch sequestration is a reason for declining to make an injunction. Id.

Contingent.—When a debtor summons was obtained for 517*l.*, but on the petition for adjudication only 110*l.* was shewn to be due, it was ordered that the adjudication should not be published for a fortnight, and that if during that time the 110*l.* was paid, all proceedings should be stayed, leaving each party to bear his own costs. Harris, Ex parte, Harris, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 458; 44 L. J., Bk. 77; 32 L. T. 417; 23 W. R. 531.

2. JOINT AND SEPARATE.

Against Joint Debtors.—The trustee appointed under a liquidation by arrangement is bound to realize and distribute pari passu among the joint creditors the bankrupt's property in his joint estate, and therefore a joint adjudication against two debtors, one of whom has, since the debt was contracted, obtained an order of discharge under his separate liquidation, cannot, as against the latter, be supported. Hammond, Ex parte, Hammond, In re, 16 L. R., Eq. 614; 42 L. J., Bk. 97; 29 L. T. 72; 21 W. R. 865.

Leave to Appeal when Time expired.—An adjudication having been made against three partners, two of them appealed. The cases of all three were identical. The third, who had not appeared within the time fixed by the General Rules in Bankruptcy, 1870, was allowed to appeal, and the adjudication was annulled against all three. Hayward, Ex parte, Hayward, In re, 6 L. R., Ch. 546; 40 L. J., Bk. 49; 24 L. T. 782; 19 W. R. 833.

Joint Adjudication in Ireland—Separate in England—English Assets.—One of two partners was adjudicated bankrupt in England and the other in Ireland; they were then jointly adjudicated bankrupts in Ireland. Most of the joint creditors were in England, and a considerable part of the assets was in England:—Held, that the assets in England would not be handed over to the assignees in the joint bankruptcy. James, Ex parte, O'Reardon, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 74; 43 L. J., Bk. 13; 29 L. T. 761; 22 W. R. 196.

R., carrying on business in London, in partnership with M. in Dublin, committed an act of bankruptcy by executing an assignment of all his estate and effects to trustees for the benefit of his creditors. He was afterwards adjudicated bankrupt, and property belonging to the firm having been sold by order of the trustees of the deed of assignment, the purchase-money was by the London Court of Bankruptcy ordered to be placed to a deposit account in the bank in certain names. In the meantime a separate adjudication was made against M. in Ireland, and was followed by a joint adjudication in Ireland against R. and M., the assignees under M.'s separate adjudication being also assignees under the joint adjudication. Upon the application of the assignees under the Irish bankruptcies for an order directing payment to them of the money produced by the sale:—Held, that the separate adjudication in England not having been either superseded or impounded, the joint assets were vested in the English trustee under R.'s separate bankruptcy, and the Irish assignees under M.'s separate bankruptcy as tenants in common; that the Irish assignees had no better title to the joint assets by reason of the joint adjudication, and it being more convenient that the assets should be distributed in England, the order was refused. Id.

Consolidating Joint and Separate Adjudications.—An adjudication was made upon a petition presented against two partners in trade. A petition had been previously presented by the same creditor against one of the partners separately, and some proceedings had been taken under it, but no adjudication had been made:—Held, that there was power to order the proceedings under the separate petition to be consolidated with those under the joint petition. Mackenzie, Ex parte, Helliwell, In re, 20 L. R., Eq. 758; 44 L. J., Bk. 117.

Held, also, that the bankrupt had no locus standi to oppose the consolidation. Id.

Separate adjudications against partners in a firm were followed by an adjudication on a joint petition against the firm. On the application, under the Bankruptcy Act of 1861, s. 88, of the petitioning creditor under the joint adjudication, the commissioner impounded the proceedings under the separate adjudications:—Held, that this was within the discretion of the commissioner. Evans, In re, Warren, Ex parte, 36 L. J., Bk. 15; 15 W. R. 662.

Second Adjudication without Certificate.—An adjudication against a person who is an uncertificated bankrupt under a former bankruptcy is not void. Morgan v. Knight, 15 C. B., N. S. 669; 33 L. J., C. P. 168; 9 L. T. 803; 12 W. R. 428.

A second adjudication against an undischarged bankrupt, who has been allowed by the trustee to carry on business again, is not void. Watson, Ex parte, Roberts, In re, 12 Ch. D. 380; 41 L. T. 516; 28 W. R. 205—C. A.

3. APPEAL AGAINST ADJUDICATION.

Who may dispute Adjudication—Non-Trader.]

—Before the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, a non-trader was, equally with a trader, entitled to time within which to shew cause against an adjudication which had been made against him. Hepburn, Ex parte, Hepburn, In re, 36 L. J., Bk. 48; 17 L. T. 275; 15 W. R. 1068.

—Bill of Sale Holder.]—An adjudication was made, founded upon the execution by the debtor of a bill of sale, which was held to be an act of bankruptcy:—Held, that the bill of sale holder was entitled to appeal from the adjudication, and on his appeal the adjudication was annulled. Thoday, Ex parte, Ellis, In re, 2 Ch. D. 229; 45 L. J., Bk. 64; 34 L. T. 261. Affirmed, 2 Ch. D. 797; 45 L. J., Bk. 159; 34 L. T. 705—C. A.

—Mortgagee of Chattels.]—A party was adjudicated bankrupt, and the assignees sold chattels (alleged to have been mortgaged to A.), as being in the order and disposition of the bankrupt. The time had expired within which the bankrupt could have petitioned to annul, but A. presented such petition, and the commissioner, on the ground of want of trading, annulled the adjudication:—Held, upon appeal of the petitioning creditor, that as it appeared that the application to annul was made at the instigation of the bankrupt, the adjudication must be restored, the court declining to decide the question of trading. Emery, Ex parte, 1 Bk. & Ins. R. 265; 23 L. J., Bk. 33.

—Debtor by General Agent.]—Where A. was adjudicated bankrupt while he was abroad, the court ordered that A.'s general agent should be at liberty, on A.'s behalf, by such solicitor as he might think fit, to shew cause against the validity of the adjudication. Frampton, Ex parte, Frampton, In re, 28 L. J., Bk. 21; 5 Jur., N. S. 970; 7 W. R. 690—L. J.

"Such person" mentioned in s. 104 of 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, does not apply only to the bankrupt himself. Id.

Disputing in British Colony.]—An action brought by a bankrupt in a British colony, in which action he disputes the validity of the adjudication, is a proceeding which, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 233, will keep alive his right to dispute the adjudication. Bunny, Ex parte, 1 De G. & J. 119; 11 Moore, P. C. C. 189; 26 L. J., Bk. 83; 3 Jur., N. S. 1141.

How.]—A person adjudicated a bankrupt under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, must, if he desires to annul the adjudication, proceed under s. 104. If he omits to do so, he can then only proceed by petition of appeal. Carter v. Dimmock, 4 H. L. Ca. 337; 1 Bk. & Ins. R. 12; 22 L. J., Bk. 55; 17 Jur. 515; affirming, 1 De G., Mac. & G. 212; 21 L. J., Bk. 23; 15 Jur. 1142.

Debtor estopped by his Conduct.]—A trader, who so far acquiesces in a fiat which has issued against him as to canvass in the choice of assignees, and also to act as agent in the purchase of a portion of the estate from the assignees, cannot afterwards successfully petition to annul the fiat, although the assignees do not satisfactorily establish the commission of an act of bankruptcy by him. Grundy, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 589; 6 Jur. 696.

Within what Time.]—In the phrase "such extended time not exceeding fourteen days in the whole," in sect. 104 of 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, the words "such extended time" mean "such further time;" and the time is to be reckoned exclusively of the original seven days. Castelli, Ex parte, 1 De G., Mac. & G. 437; 21 L. J., Bk. 5.

The provisions of the section do not preclude the commissioner from adjourning the hearing on shewing cause, when it has commenced within the proper time. Id.

The time for appeal against an adjudication does not expire until two calendar months after the advertisement of the bankruptcy, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 233, varied by sect. 24 of 17 & 18 Vict. c. 119, notwithstanding that the former uses the word "commenced" proceedings. Miller, Ex parte, 32 L. J., Bk. 45; 7 L. T. 657—L. J.

—Infant Debtor.]—A petition to annul an adjudication on the ground of the infancy of the bankrupt, but which was not presented until after the expiration of the time limited for that purpose by the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 233, dismissed as out of time, the case of an infant being no exception from the provisions of that section. West In re, 3 De G., Mac. & G. 198; 22 L. J., Bk. 71; 1 Bk. & Ins. R. 58.

—Extension of Time.]—If a bankrupt had failed to commence any action, suit, or other proceeding to annul the fiat, within the time limited for that purpose by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 122, s. 24, the Court of Review had no discretionary jurisdiction to entertain a petition presented after that time has expired, to annul the fiat, however satisfactorily the delay might be accounted for. Thorold, In re, 1 Ph. 239; 3 Mont., D. & D. 285; 13 L. J., Bk. 1; 17 Jur. 1003.

The commencement of the proceeding by petition is the presentation of the petition, and not the mere preparation of it by the solicitor, or a notice by the bankrupt to the commissioner disputing the validity of the fiat. Id.

But where a bankrupt admitted the legal requisites of the fiat, a proceeding by him to annul the fiat on the ground of fraud need not have commenced within twenty-one days after the advertisement of the bankruptcy in the London Gazette. Phipps, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 488; 13 L. J., Bk. 5; 8 Jur. 48.

—Lodged after Office Hours.]—Where, by an accident, a petition in bankruptcy did not reach the registrar's office in office hours on the last day for entering it, but was on that day tendered to one of the clerks in the office at his residence, who declined to receive it, doubting his authority to do so, the court ordered the petition to be received as of that day, without prejudice to any objection. Harrison, Ex parte, 2 De G. & J. 229; S. P., Hull Bank, In re, 27 L. J., Bk. 16—L. J.

—Debtor residing in the Isle of Man.]—The Isle of Man is not within the United Kingdom, and therefore a person residing there at the time of an adjudication against him has three months within which he may contest the validity of the fiat or petition for adjudication. Davidson v. Farmer, 6 Ex. 242; 20 L. J., Ex. 177.

— Adjudication on Debtor's Petition.—A debtor was adjudged bankrupt on his own petition, and on the 22nd of January filed his statement. On the 6th February assignees were chosen, who proceeded to get in the estate. On the 21st February, a creditor who had proved her debt at the meeting of the 6th, gave notice of motion for the 5th March, to annul the adjudication, and dismiss the petition, on the ground that the statement was inaccurate, inasmuch as the bankrupt had omitted from it the names of some fully secured creditors. On the 5th March the commissioner adjourned the application, giving the bankrupt leave in the meantime to file an amended statement, which he filed on the 17th March. On the 11th April the application was finally heard, when the commissioner made an order annulling the adjudication, and dismissing the petition, from which order the assignees appealed:—Held, that whatever right the creditor might have had to set aside the adjudication if she had proceeded with more diligence, she had, by her course of conduct, debarred herself from any such right. Sampson, Ex parte, 1 L. R., Ch. 476.

A creditor's assignee applied for an order to annul an adjudication made on the bankrupt's own application, in order that an adjudication by a creditor might be obtained for the purpose of impeaching certain mortgages, comprising the whole of the assets, as being fraudulent preferences or acts of bankruptcy. The assignee had been aware of the existence of the mortgages and that they exceeded the value of the property comprised in them, for nearly three months before he expressed any intention of impeaching them, and for more than four months before he made his application:—Held, that the delay was fatal to the application, inasmuch as there had been enough to put the assignee on inquiry whether the mortgages did not comprise the whole assets, and he might at any time have had the bankrupt examined as to the state of his property. Davis, Ex parte, 2 L. R., Ch. 363; 15 W. R. 599.

In June, 1857, a trader was adjudicated bankrupt on his own petition, and in the following October he obtained his certificate. In April, 1858, a creditor, who had been all along aware of the proceedings under the adjudication, applied to annul the fiat, on the ground of its legal invalidity:—Held, that such application was too late, there being no proof of any misconduct on the part of the bankrupt. Adams, Ex parte, 3 De G. & J. 70; 27 L. J., Bk. 37; 4 Jur., N. S. 1089.

— Under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 71.—A trader having committed an act of bankruptcy, a petition was presented against him by two creditors on the 19th of May, 1880, upon which adjudication followed on the 5th of July, all the requirements of the act having been complied with. On the 4th of August the debtor moved to annul the adjudication, upon the ground of the insufficiency of the petitioning creditor's debt. At the hearing the county court judge directed an issue to be tried before a jury as to the amount of the debt. The jury, on the 16th of October, having found that there was due to the petitioning creditors an amount below the statutory limit of 50*l.*, the judge thereupon annulled the adjudication:—Held, on appeal (reversing that decision), that the debtor ought to have appealed against the order of adjudication within the twenty-one days limited for that purpose, and that, not having done so, the publication in the Gazette was, by the 10th section of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, conclusive evidence of the validity of the adjudication as against all the world. French, Ex parte, Trim, In re, 52 L. J., Ch. 48; 47 L. T. 339.

Parties to be Served.—Notice of an appeal from the refusal to annul an adjudication of bankruptcy must be served on the trustee in bankruptcy as well as on the petitioning creditor. And if notice of the appeal is served on the petitioning creditor in time, but is not served in time on the trustee, the appeal must be dismissed. The time for appealing will not be extended in such a case. Ward, Ex parte, Ward, In re, 15 Ch. D. 292; 43 L. T. 183; 29 W. R. 206—C. A.

Appeal standing over pending Trial of Action.]

—An appeal from an adjudication of bankruptcy ought to stand over pending the trial of an action, the result of which, it was alleged by the appellant, would be to render a fund available to satisfy the debt claimed by the petitioning creditor. Yeatman, Ex parte, Yeatman, In re, 16 Ch. D. 283; 44 L. T. 260; 29 W. R. 457—C. A.

4. ANNULING ADJUDICATION.

Jurisdiction of Court.—The Court of Bankruptcy has a general jurisdiction to annul an adjudication of bankruptcy in a proper case. Ashworth, Ex parte, Hoare, In re, 18 L. R. Eq. 705; 43 L. J., Bk. 142; 30 L. T. 906; 22 W. R. 925.

A debtor filed a liquidation petition, and his creditors resolved on a liquidation by arrangement, but before they did so an adjudication of bankruptcy had been made against the debtor on a petition presented before the filing of the liquidation petition:—Held, that the court could annul the adjudication, either under r. 266 of 1870 or under its general jurisdiction. Id.

Practice—Appeal to House of Lords.—Where the House of Lords held that a bankruptcy ought to be annulled, and remitted the matter to the bankruptcy court, the court, upon motion, ordered that the order of the House of Lords be made an order of the court in bankruptcy, that the bankruptcy be annulled, and that the proper advertisements be inserted in the London Gazette. Harding, Ex parte, 14 W. R. 825.

At what Stage.—The Court of Bankruptcy has no power to annul an adjudication before advertisement. Indbrooke, Ex parte, 9 Jur., N. S. 950; 8 L. T. 781; 11 W. R. 1006.

A bankrupt cannot supersede his commission before a surrender. Bean, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 211; 17 Ves. 47; S. P., Jones, Ex parte, 11 Ves. 409; Roberts, Ex parte, 1 Madd. 72; 2 Rose, 378.

Limit of Time.—In a proper case an adjudication of bankruptcy may be annulled upon an application made after the expiration of the time limited for appealing from it. Sect. 10 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, has no application to an appeal from an adjudication, or to an application to annul it. Grissel, Ex parte, Stanger, In re, 22 Ch. D. 436; 48 L. T. 405; 31 W. R. 264—C. A.

Costs.—An order was made by the Court of Appeal to annul an adjudication of bankruptcy, on the ground that the debtor must be presumed to have been dead when it was made. Probate had been granted of a will executed by the debtor:—Held, that the costs and charges of the trustee properly incurred, and the costs of all parties of the application to annul and of the appeal, must be paid out of the estate, and that the executors must confirm all acts properly done by the trustee in the bankruptcy. Id.

On what Grounds—Defective Proceedings.—A fiat issued against the plaintiff on the 20th July, 1849, upon a debt due from a banking company, in which he was a member, to G., the petitioning creditor, without any judgment having been obtained against the public officer, and a warrant of seizure in the ordinary form was issued to the messenger, dated the 30th of July. The creditors' assignee was appointed August 21st. The 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, came into operation on October 11th, and on the 18th of October a seizure of the plaintiff's goods was made by the messenger, under the warrant:—Held, that the fiat was invalid, and that either the petitioning creditor or the messenger was liable for the wrongful seizure, but the court declined to determine which of the two was liable, as it was not required by the case submitted for their opinion. Davison v. Farmer, 6 Ex. 242; 20 L. J., Ex. 177.

The fact that the examination of a bankrupt was imperfect and inaccurate affords no reason why an order duly made to annul the adjudication, to which order the assignees and creditors assented in ignorance of such imperfection and inaccuracy, should be discharged, and the proceedings revived. Adams, In re, 10 L. T. 212.

Such an order will not be discharged, even when such imperfection has arisen from the bankrupt's own fraudulent misrepresentation and concealment (of which the assignees and creditors were ignorant) of certain debts due to him at the time of the adjudication, if at the date of the order the assignees had knowledge of other fraudulent misrepresentations and concealment by the bankrupt in his examination, and yet, in assenting to the annulment, relied upon its fulness and accuracy. Id.

When the creditors fail to appoint a trustee by reason of a quorum not being present, the court ought not to annul the adjudication if one creditor wishes the bankruptcy to proceed, and his debt is so much greater than all the others that he is substantially the only creditor. English Joint Stock Bank, Ex parte, Finney, In re, 6 L. R., Ch. 79; 40 L. J., Bk. 43; 23 L. T. 652; 19 W. R. 140.

Therefore, where the petitioning creditor's debt amounted to 3,232*l.*, and there were only two other unsecured creditors, whose debts amounted to 67*l.* and 42*l.* respectively, and the petitioning creditor appeared but the two others did not:—Held, that the bankruptcy ought to proceed under the registrar as trustee. Id.

Infancy.—A petition to annul an adjudication on the ground of the infancy of the bankrupt, but which was not presented until after the expiration of the time limited for that purpose by 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 233, dismissed as out of time, the case of an infant being no exception. West, In re, 3 De G., Mac. & G. 198; 22 L. J., Bk. 71.

More Doubts as to Validity.—It is not sufficient ground for annulling an adjudication that its legal validity may be subject to doubt. Bower, Ex parte, 1 De G., Mac. & G. 468; 21 L. J., Bk. 61; 16 Jur. 734.

Equitable Grounds.—A commissioner has jurisdiction to annul an adjudication for equitable invalidity. Johnstone, Ex parte, 4 De G. & S. 204; 15 Jur. 739.

Discussion of the circumstances requisite to justify the annulling of an adjudication on equitable grounds. Upfill, Ex parte, 1 L. R., Ch. 439.

No Act of Bankruptcy—Costs.—A debtor was absent from his place of business for several days without making any provision for the payment of a bill or of other debts, and creditors to whom these debts were due called during his absence and were delayed. On an adjudication being obtained, founded on this as an act of bankruptcy, he shewed cause and deposed to his absence being occasioned by the necessity of his taking steps in a litigation between himself and some of his workmen:—Held, that as this explanation was uncontradicted, the commissioner had properly annulled the adjudication; but as the debtor was wholly insolvent, and had pending the disputed adjudication filed a declaration of insolvency, and was, immediately after the first adjudication was annulled, again adjudicated bankrupt on the application of a friendly creditor, the court reversed so much of the decision as directed the petitioning creditor to pay the costs of annulling the first adjudication. Barney, Ex parte, Horton, In re, 4 De G., F. & J. 503; 9 Jur., N. S. 286.

Petitioning Creditor failing to appear in Action by Bankrupt.—When a bankrupt brought an action against the petitioning creditor, who resided in Scotland and did not appear to it, the court, after giving him time to appear, of which he did not avail himself, annulled the adjudication. Wolheim, Ex parte, 32 L. J., Bk. 26; 7 L. T. 581; 11 W. R. 125—L. J.

When a bankruptcy was annulled, and the official assignee retained his costs out of the estate, the petitioning creditor was ordered to pay those costs and the costs of the bankrupt himself. Id.

Debt not fully substantiated.—Held, that even if the petitioning creditors' debt was not fully substantiated, that would not be a sufficient reason for the court annulling the adjudication in the general exercise of its jurisdiction. French, Ex parte, Trim, In re, 52 L. J., Ch. 48; 47 L. T. 339.

Fraud—Knowledge of Petitioners.—An order by a commissioner, reversing an order annulling an adjudication on the ground of fraud and wilful concealment, was discharged, the petition not alleging that the petitioners were deceived thereby, and it being shewn that they were aware of the fraud at the time the bankrupt passed his last examination. Adams, Ex parte, 8 L. T. 815.

— When made on Debtor's Petition.—Semble, a creditor's petition to annul an adjudication made on the debtor's petition, may be supported if it goes on to pray adjudication against the debtor on an act of bankruptcy clearly proved, and to show that assets may be made available on the proposed adjudication, which could not be reached under the existing adjudication. Potter, Ex parte, 13 W. R. 189; 11 L. T. 35.

Where a bankrupt who had executed a trust-deed for the benefit of his creditors had obtained an adjudication against himself, the validity of which was open to doubt, the court suspended proceedings under it, at the instance of a creditor undertaking to apply for an adjudication on his own petition, although creditors' assignees had been appointed and opposed the application. Taylor, Ex parte, 6 De G., Mac. & G. 737.

The mere want of assets was not sufficient ground for annulling an adjudication made upon the petition of the bankrupt. Enaby, Ex parte, 35 L. J., Bk. 23; 12 Jur., N. S. 579; 14 L. T. 692; 14 W. R. 849.

— Effect of Annuling not considered.—The circumstance that an order to annul will leave unimpeached an assignment of all the bankrupt's effects to the creditor applying for the annulling order is not sufficient ground for refusing to annul an adjudication unsupported by legal requisites. Bean, Ex parte, 1 De G., Mac. & G. 486; 21 L. J., Bk. 26.

— After Composition with Creditors under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 230.—At a meeting to consider an offer of composition with a view to annul an adjudication under the above section, creditors might vote by letter of attorney, although not residing out of England. Clegg, Ex parte, 4 De G. & S. 606; 20 L. J., Bk. 22; 15 Jur. 984.

In order to render a composition under the above section binding on all the creditors of a bankrupt, the offer of composition must be made to all the creditors, and not confined to nine-tenths in number and value of the creditors who have signed the composition agreement. Taylor v. Pearce, 2 H. & N. 36; 26 L. J., Ex. 371; 3 Jur., N. S. 917.

In order to give the Court of Bankruptcy jurisdiction to grant a certificate to a trader, pursuant to 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 221, it was not necessary that there should be an acceptance by each creditor of the composition agreed to by three-fifths in number and value; it was sufficient for such purpose that there had been a tender of such composition to the creditors; and a creditor refusing to accept the money tendered could not, by a demand of it after the certificate had been granted, prevent the certificate from operating to bar the original debt. Tindall v. Hibberd, 2 C. B., N. S. 199; 26 L. J., C. P. 173; 3 Jur., N. S. 667.

— Liquidation Proceedings.—After the presentation of a petition for adjudication, the debtor summoned a meeting of his creditors under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 125, with a view to liquidation by arrangement, but before the meeting an adjudication was made, with a stay of proceedings till after the meeting, the petitioning creditors consenting. At the meeting the creditors resolved to accept a composition; and the resolution having been confirmed at a subsequent meeting and duly registered, the adjudication was thereupon annulled by the registrar on the application of the debtor:—Held, that the adjudication was properly annulled. Foster, Ex parte, Pooley, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 59; 44 L. J., Bk. 22; 31 L. T. 397; 23 W. R. 145.

Objection, when to be taken.—When it is intended to rely on the insufficiency of the evidence of trading or other effects to impeach the validity of the adjudication, the objection ought to be taken in the first instance, when the insufficiency may be cured by additional evidence. Lowenthal, Ex parte, Lowenthal, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 591; 43 L. J., Bk. 83; 30 L. T. 668.

Under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, a trader, on the 11th of October, assigned all his estate to trustees for the benefit of his creditors, but the deed contained a proviso that if he should within two calendar months petition for arrangement under the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 136, s. 211, or sign a declaration of insolvency, the deed was to be void and the property was to be administered under the Court of Bankruptcy. Four days afterwards he presented such a petition, and obtained protection. On the 31st of October a creditor petitioned for an adjudication on the act of bankruptcy committed on the 11th, and an adjudication was made on the 2nd of November. Notice to dispute the adjudication was given on the 6th, and on the 13th the same was annulled; but on appeal:—Held, that the adjudication must stand, the arrangement clauses not superseding or controlling the powers conferred by ss. 101 and 104. Trherne, Ex parte, 30 L. J., Bk. 6—L. J.

Application for, after abortive Liquidation Petition—Payment of Applicant's Debt.—A debtor filed a liquidation petition in August, 1879. A receiver of his property was at once appointed, and injunctions were granted to restrain some of the creditors from proceeding against him for their debts. The first meeting of the creditors was held on the 20th of October, 1879, when it was resolved to adjourn to the 15th of December, 1879. Similar resolutions for adjournment were passed again and again, the meeting being ultimately, on the 15th of November, 1882, adjourned to the 28th of March, 1883. No resolutions for liquidation by arrangement or composition were passed. In January, 1883, two of the creditors applied to the Court of Bankruptcy by motion, under sub-s. 12 of s. 125 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, for an adjudication of bankruptcy against the debtor. At the adjourned meeting on the 28th of March, 1883, the creditors resolved that it was inexpedient in the interests of the creditors that any further proceedings should be taken under the petition, and that application should be made to the court to discharge the receiver, and dismiss the petition, or stay all further proceedings under it. The registrar, on the 3rd of May, made an adjudication. The debtor appealed, and on the hearing of the appeal an offer was made by a friend of his to pay the debts of the two creditors in full, and to provide for their costs of the application, the payment to be made by the friend out of his own moneys, and an undertaking being given by him that neither directly nor indirectly should the payment be made out of the debtor's assets:—Held, that, notwithstanding the resolution of the 28th of March, and having regard to the fact that the receiver had not been discharged, the liquidation proceedings were still pending, and that if the adjudication order was discharged, no other creditor would be injured, for that the court would have jurisdiction to adjudicate the debtor a bankrupt on the application of any other creditor. The adjudication was accordingly discharged on the terms of payment proposed, and on the undertaking of the debtor to apply to the Court of Bankruptcy for leave to summon a fresh first meeting of the creditors. McHenry, Ex parte, McHenry, In re, 24 Ch. D. 35; 48 L. T. 921; 31 W. R. 873—C. A.

Held, by Baggallay and Cotton, L. JJ., and semble per Bowen, L. J., that the court had jurisdiction to order a fresh first meeting of the creditors under the petition. Id.

Objection too Late.]—A debtor was, without opposition on his part, adjudicated bankrupt. At the first meeting of creditors no quorum was present, and this fact was represented to the judge, who directed the adjudication to go on with the registrar as trustee. There were only three creditors besides the petitioning creditor. The bankrupt and the three creditors applied to have the bankruptcy annulled, and raised a question as to the sufficiency of the petitioning creditor's debt:—Held, that as the bankrupt had not disputed the debt at the time of the adjudication he could not do so afterwards, and that neither he nor the creditors had any right to ask to have the adjudication annulled on this ground. Hooper, Ex parte, 45 L. J., Bk. 83; 34 L. T. 262; 24 W. R. 930.

Promises in Consideration of Assent.]—A. having accepted a bill of exchange drawn upon him by B., in order to induce B. to consent to the annulling of the bankruptcy of a friend of A., and having been compelled to pay the bill to a bona fide holder:—Held, that A. could not recover back the amount so paid from B. Watson v. Bennett, 12 W. R. 1008.

Where a bankrupt trader compounded with his general creditors for 4s. in the pound, but gave, as security to one creditor, his I O U for the whole debt, in order to induce him to concur in annulling the bankruptcy, and afterwards, in consideration of a loan, exchanged the I O U for bills of exchange, which he accepted, a court of equity, at the instance of the trader, declared the bills invalid. Mare v. Warner, 3 Giff. 100; 7 Jur., N. S. 1228; 4 L. T. 351; S. P., Mare v. Earle, 3 Giff. 108; 7 Jur., N. S. 1230; 4 L. T. 352.

5. EFFECT OF ANNULING.

No retrospective Effect.]—A supersedeas of a commission under the old bankrupt law, and the annulling a fiat under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, had no retrospective effect, so as to invalidate acts done under the commission or fiat. Smallcombe v. Olivier, 2 D. & L. 217; 13 M. & W. 77; 13 L. J., Ex. 305; 8 Jur. 606.

A fi. fa. was lodged in the sheriff's hands, to be executed on the goods of a debtor, against whom a judgment had been obtained. Previously to the issuing of a writ, a fiat in bankruptcy had issued against the debtor, under which he was declared a bankrupt, and assignees were appointed. The sheriff returned nulla bona; but, before he had made the return, the Court of Review made an order that the fiat should be annulled if the Lord Chancellor should think fit; and, after the return was made, the Lord Chancellor made an order accordingly. In an action against the sheriff for a false return:—Held, that the order of the Court of Review had no operation until the Chancellor's order. Id.

Held, secondly, that the return was not false, inasmuch as neither a supersedeas of a commission in bankruptcy, under the old law, nor the order of the Chancellor, annulling the fiat in bankruptcy, under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, had any retrospective effect. Id.

Held, thirdly, that even if it had, the sheriff, being a public officer, and having made the only return he could make at the time, ought to be protected. Id.

New Adjudication—Same Assignees.]—Where a commission is superseded, and another issued, though the same assignees are chosen, they have no title whatever under the first commission. Bartlett v. Tuchin, 1 Marsh. 583; 6 Taunt. 259; 2 Rose, 435.

Apprenticeship Indentures.]—Where a fiat issued against the master of an apprentice, but was afterwards annulled, by means of a composition between the bankrupt and his creditors, the indentures of apprenticeship were not restored. Allen v. Coster, 3 Beav. 274.

Right of Bankrupt to impeach Transactions.]—A purchase was made from the assignees of a bankrupt in which their solicitor was interested, so as to invalidate the transaction. Afterwards the bankruptcy was by arrangement annulled, without prejudice to any sale or other act done by the assignees; and the bankrupt by deed, to which he and the assignees alone were parties, ratified their acts, relieved them from all claims in respect of them, and agreed to execute all further deeds necessary for confirming them. After this, the bankrupt filed a bill against the purchasers to impeach the sale to them. The purchasers alleged that the bankrupt had obtained the annulling order by fraudulent suppression:—Held, that by virtue of the annulling order the bankrupt had the right to impeach all sales on any grounds on which they might have been impeached if the bankruptcy had not been annulled, and that the deed executed by him did not affect this right. Adams v. Swoorder, 2 De G., J. & S. 44.

Held, also, that the annulling order being in force, the court must treat it as valid, and could not enter into the question whether it was obtained by fraud. Id.

Vesting of Property.]—A person in whom the estate of a bankrupt was, on the annulling of the bankruptcy, vested under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 81, having sued for a debt due to the bankrupt, the defendant pleaded a set-off by way of mutual credit at the time of the bankruptcy, between the defendant and the bankrupt, for unliquidated damages provable in bankruptcy, and which would have been provable against the bankrupt had the proceedings in bankruptcy continued against him:—Held, that the plea was good, as the vesting order vested the property of the bankrupt in the plaintiff, subject to the right to set off debts which would have been provable in the bankruptcy. West v. Baker, 1 Ex. D. 44; 45 L. J., Ex. 113; 34 L. T. 102; 24 W. R. 277.

Revesting of Property.—A bankrupt was refused his certificate on the ground of fraudulent concealment of property. Subsequently a consent order for annulling the bankruptcy was obtained, in consideration of a friend of the bankrupt paying a sum to the creditors. After this the assignees discovered that other property to a large extent had been concealed by him, and they presented a petition to discharge the annulling order, as having been obtained by fraud, and before this petition had been heard, filed a bill to restrain him from getting in the concealed property. The petition was ultimately dismissed, on the ground that the assignees having, when they consented to the annulling order, been aware of previous fraudulent concealment, could not be held to have consented to the order on the faith of the bankrupt having made a full disclosure of his property:—Held, that the proceedings in the cause ought to be stayed without costs. Elsey v. Adams, 2 De G., J. & S. 147; 10 Jur., N. S. 469; 10 L. T. 492.

A trader having been adjudicated bankrupt on a debtor summons issued by a banking firm, a trustee was appointed, who realized the estate, and paid the proceeds into the bank, in pursuance of a resolution of creditors. The banking firm were afterwards adjudicated bankrupt, the sum paid in by the trustee then standing to his credit in their books. Afterwards the order adjudicating the trader bankrupt was reversed on appeal, and no order was made under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 81, as to his property. In an action by the trustee in the bankruptcy of the banking firm against the trader to recover the amount of his debt to them:—Held, that he was entitled to set off the amount so paid into the bank by the trustee in his bankruptcy. Bailey v. Johnson, 7 L. R., Ex. 263; 41 L. J., Ex. 211; 20 W. R. 1013—Ex. Ch. Affirming, 6 L. R., Ex. 279; 40 L. J., Ex. 189; 24 L. T. 711; 19 W. R. 1069.

Special Arrangement.—A judgment creditor levied execution for a debt of over 50*l*. on the goods of a trader a few days before the commission of an act of bankruptcy on which the debtor was adjudicated bankrupt. After the appointment of a trustee in the bankruptcy, the creditors passed resolutions under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 28, that the adjudication should be annulled, and that they would accept a composition payable by instalments, to be secured by the covenant of the bankrupt, and by an assignment of all his personal property to the trustee. This arrangement was approved by the court; the bankruptcy was annulled, and the debtor executed the assignment to the trustee:—Held, that the effect of the composition arrangement having been approved by the court, was to continue vested in the trustee all the property which had previously been vested in him as trustee in the bankruptcy, and that the execution creditor could not proceed with the execution on the annulment of the adjudication.

Held, also, that even if the property revested in the debtor on the annulment of the bankruptcy, it revested in him subject to an equitable interest in all the creditors, and to an obligation on his part to execute an assignment to the trustee. Id.

Second fi. fa. on a Judgment obtained before Bankruptcy.—The defendant having recovered judgment against the plaintiff, issued a writ of execution, under which the sheriff seized the plaintiff's goods. The plaintiff thereupon filed a petition for liquidation, and an injunction was granted restraining the defendant from proceeding further under the execution until after the date named for hearing. On that date the plaintiff was adjudicated bankrupt; the sheriff then withdrew voluntarily, and a trustee was appointed, who took possession of the plaintiff's estate. The creditors subsequently agreed to accept a composition "upon the debts proved and admitted in the bankruptcy," to annul the adjudication, and to hand back his property to the plaintiff. The court affirmed the resolution, and an order was made accordingly. The defendant, who was no party to the composition, directed the sheriff to retake the goods, and the sheriff again seized the plaintiff's effects under the same writ of execution:—Held, that by virtue of s. 81 of the Bankruptcy Act, the property of the bankrupt reverted to him unconditionally; that the resolutions being not binding on the defendant, his unexhausted right to retake the goods under the original writ was preserved by the words "shall revert to the bankrupt for all his estate and interest therein;" and that the second seizure was therefore lawful. Crew v. Terry, 2 C. P. D. 403; 46 L. J., C. P. 787.

6. ACTION FOR MALICIOUS ADJUDICATION.

S., an attorney, having been instructed by H. to make J. bankrupt obtained a debtor summons, and served it on him, who thereupon applied to the registrar of the county court to dismiss the summons. Having heard both parties, the registrar made an order on the 12th of April that he should, within seven days, enter into a bond, with two such sufficient sureties as the court should approve, to pay such sum as should be recovered by H. in any proceeding taken for the recovery of the debt due to him from the debtor, together with costs; and that all proceedings on the summons should be stayed until the court in which such proceedings for the recovery of the debt should be taken had come to a decision thereon. S. drew up the order, which was the first of the kind made by the county court in pursuance of the statute. During the seven days a correspondence took place as to the proposed sureties, who were objected to by S. on behalf of H., and no bond having been executed in consequence, a petition in bankruptcy was, by the express order of H., presented by S. on the 21st of April, and on the same day a receiver was appointed, the act of bankruptcy alleged being that the petitioning creditor had served on J. a debtor summons, and that he being a trader had for seven days neglected to pay the debt alleged to be due, or to secure or compound for the same. J. objected to the petition; and after several hearings the county court judge on the 8th of May adjudged him to be bankrupt. This decision was affirmed by the chief judge in bankruptcy, but was afterwards reversed by the lord justice of appeal, who annulled the proceedings on the ground that the order of the 12th of April was a stay of proceedings at the time of the petition and adjudication:—Held, per Kelly, C. B., and Cleasby, B., that upon these facts an action was maintainable by J. against S. for maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause presenting the petition and causing him to be adjudicated a bankrupt. Held, contra, per Martin, B., and Bramwell, B., that such an action was not maintainable by J. against S. Johnson v. Emerson, 6 L. R., Ex. 329; 40 L. J., Ex. 201; 25 L. T. 337.

IX. ASSIGNEES AND TRUSTEES.

1. OFFICIAL ASSIGNEES.

Under 5 & 6 Viet. c. 122, s. 49.—The official assignee, under 5 & 6 Viet. c. 122, s. 48, was a provisional assignee of the estate and effects of the bankrupt, and was to all intents and purposes sole assignee until others were appointed by the creditors to act with him. Dunn v. Hill, 2 Dowl. N. S. 1062; 11 M. & W. 470; 12 L. J., Ex. 316; 7 Jur. 426.

Accounts.—Where a retired official assignee omitted to close his accounts, or to deliver up his books, the commissioner having omitted to make a periodical audit of the accounts, the court, in ordering that the balances due from and to the official assignee be paid into court, directed the retiring salary of the official assignee to be suspended until the result of the inquiries was known. Johnson, In re, 9 L. T. 672.

2. CREDITORS' ASSIGNEES.

a. Choice and Appointment.

Right to Vote—Public Officer of Company.—The public officer of a company may vote by attorney, on behalf of the company, at the choice of assignees. Ackroyd, Ex parte, 1 Mont. D. & D. 555.

— Creditor who has assigned Debt.—A creditor who has assigned his debt may vote in the choice of assignees. Hart, In re, 1 Fonb. N. R. 57.

A power of attorney to vote on the choice of assignees is extinct when once executed. Ib.

— Bankruptcy of Executor.—Tenant for Life.—An executor of a will was declared bankrupt. Under the will he took both real and personal estate, in trust for the testator's widow, for her life, with remainder to her infant children. He fraudulently misapplied the trust property, and under his bankruptcy the widow was admitted to prove against his estate. On the choice of assignees, she applied for leave to vote:—Held, that she was sufficiently interested to be entitled to vote. Cudvallader, Ex parte, James, In re, 4 De G., F. & J. 499; 31 L. J., Bk. 66; 6 L. T. 485—L. J.

— Co-Trustees.—Where one of several trustees of a charitable society became bankrupt, and his co-trustees tendered a proof for the amount due from him to the charity, and on the commissioner refusing to admit the proof without an order of the court, an order was obtained, and the debt proved by the co-trustees in pursuance thereof:—Held, that the co-trustees were not creditors entitled to vote at the choice of a creditors' assignee; and they having been the only persons voting, the choice was set aside, and a new one directed. Rowe, Ex parte, 1 De Gex, 111; 14 L. J., Bk. 17.

Petition to set aside—Creditor whose Proof adjourned.—A creditor whose proof has been neither admitted nor rejected, but only adjourned, cannot be heard on his petition to set aside the choice of assignees. Morse, Ex parte, 1 De Gex, 478; 16 L. J., Bk. 9; 11 Jur. 482.

Grounds for Setting aside.—Where the amount of a creditor's debt, which would have turned the choice of assignees, was not disputed on his application to prove it, but the proof was opposed by the solicitor who issued the fiat on an invalid objection, which induced the commissioners to reject the proof, and they refused to adjourn the choice for a reasonable time to enable the creditor to produce an unnecessary document, the production of which was insisted upon by the commissioners, and the whole proceeding appeared to be a stratagem of the solicitor to hurry on the choice of assignees, and prevent the creditor from voting in such choice, a new choice was directed. Spiller, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 43; 5 Jur. 659.

Where the solicitor of a trader, declared bankrupt on his own petition, held powers of attorney from friendly creditors to vote at the choice of assignees, and opposed, on insufficient grounds, a proof which would have turned the choice, and carried it by his powers of attorney, another proof having been also omitted to be placed on the proceedings:—Held, a proper case for setting aside the choice, although the proceedings had advanced nearly as far as a declaration of dividend. Carter, Ex parte, 3 De G. & J. 116.

Where the commissioners, at the election of assignees, rejected votes which would have turned the choice, on the ground that the creditors tendering them had an adverse interest to the general body of creditors, the court set aside the choice which had been ratified by the commissioners, and without directing a new one, declared the assignees elected by the majority duly chosen. Stallard, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 469; 6 Jur. 112.

A. B. and C. were chosen assignees. B. had been represented at the meeting by a gentleman to whom he had given a power of attorney to vote, but words in the printed form empowering the attorney to accept the office of assignee on behalf of B. were struck out:—Held, that this rendered the choice of all three invalid, and the appointment and confirmation were vacated. Boddington, In re, 6 L. T. 207—L. J.

Purchasing Debt to obtain Appointment.—It is an abuse of the bankruptcy law to purchase a debt due by a bankrupt in order to procure the appointment of a trustee favourable to the bankrupt, or to a creditor, or a particular class of creditors. Harper, Ex parte, Pooley, In re, 20 Ch. D. 685; 51 L. J., Ch. 810; 47 L. T. 177; 30 W. R. 650—C. A.

Proof of Appointment.]—In order to prove his title as creditors' assignee, the plaintiff put in evidence a certificate dated before action, certifying his proper appointment before action, signed by the registrar and commissioner, and sealed with the seal of the Court of Bankruptcy:—Held, that the certificate so sealed was conclusive, and that the defendant could not go into evidence to shew that there was no signature by the commissioner or his deputy till after action brought. Kelly v. Morray, 1 L. R., C. P. 667; 35 L. J., C. P. 287; 12 Jur., N. S. 769; 14 L. T. 624; 1 H. & R. 684.

Ratification by Commissioners.]—It is a good practice not to ratify the choice of assignees, unless the persons chosen are present, and accept the trust. Heath, Ex parte, 4 Deac. 294; Mont. & Chit. 667.

Where the creditors choose three assignees, and the commissioners reject one, there must be a new choice. Wilson, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 234.

Appointment of new Trustees.]—When the proceedings in a bankruptcy have been suspended by a resolution of the creditors, passed under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, s. 110, and the trustee appointed by the creditors to wind up the estate and effects of the bankrupt has died, the Court of Chancery has jurisdiction, under the Trustee Acts, to appoint new trustees. Raphael, In re, 9 L. R., Eq. 233; 39 L. J., Ch. 200; 18 W. R. 247.

On Lunacy.]—When one of the trustees of a creditors' deed registered under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, has become of unsound mind, the lords justices sitting in lunacy have jurisdiction under the Trustee Acts to appoint a new trustee. Donisthorpe, In re, Thomson, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 55; 44 L. J., Bk. 536; 31 L. T. 369; 23 W. R. 100.

b. Removal.

Discretion of Commissioner—Interference by Court.]—The removal of assignees is a matter within the discretion of the commissioner, with which the appellate court will not interfere merely because it doubts whether it would have acted as the commissioner has done. Bates, Ex parte, 1 De G., Mac. & G. 452; 21 L. J., Bk. 20; 16 Jur. 459.

Where the commissioner gave the assignees time to consider whether they would remove solicitors whom they had appointed, and who were related to the bankrupt, or would themselves retire, and the assignees declined to do either, and the commissioner removed the assignees, the court dismissed, with costs, an appeal from the commissioner's decision. Ib.

A trustee in bankruptcy can be removed by the court from his office under sect. 83, sub-s. 4, of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, only upon good cause shewn, not at the mere discretion of the registrar. But, in making an order for the removal of a trustee for good cause, the registrar is exercising a judicial discretion, and if he has exercised his discretion according to law, the Court of Appeal will not disturb his order. Sheard, Ex parte, Pooley, In re (No. 1), 16 Ch. D. 107; 44 L. T. 259—C. A.

Grounds for Removal—Non-compliance with

Statute.]—Where an order appointing a creditors' assignee had been made by the creditor on an ex parte application, such assignee being the clerk to the solicitor who was one of the principal creditors, the court, on the ground that 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 53, had not been complied with, ordered his removal. Smale, Ex parte, 7 L. T. 376; 11 W. R. 47—L. J.

Declining to Act.]—When a creditor's assignee appointed at a first meeting declines to act, the court will forthwith remove him, reserving the question of the payment of the costs occasioned by such removal. Saph, In re, 13 W. R. 352.

Omission to render Accounts.]—The omission of a creditor's assignee to render accounts within the time prescribed by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 129, and to attend two meetings appointed for the examination of the bankrupt, are sufficient grounds for his removal from the assigneeship. Raulings, Ex parte, 9 Jur., N. S. 1183; 9 L. T. 275; 12 W. R. 5.

A creditor's assignee was ordered to pay the costs of one of the adjournments occasioned by his absence. Ib.

Fraud.]—Where an assignee connived at the insertion of a fictitious debt in a bankrupt's balance-sheet, attended with other circumstances of fraud, he was ordered to be removed and to pay the costs of the petition, and of his removal, together with the costs of a new choice. Perryer, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 276.

Selling his Debt.]—Where an assignee has sold his debt to a creditor who was adverse to the fiat, he was removed, and a new one chosen in his room, and he was restrained from voting in the choice of the new assignee. Stagg, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 186.

Becoming Bankrupt.]—If an assignee becomes bankrupt, the commissioners may direct his removal, and a new choice. Bonsor, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 194.

Where a trustee having, either solely or jointly with others, control over the trust property has recently become bankrupt, and it is not shewn that he has since become possessed of means, the court will, as a general rule, order his removal on the petition of the cestui que trust, under s. 117 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. Adams' Trust, In re, 12 Ch. D. 634; 48 L. J., Ch. 613; 41 L. T. 607; 28 W. R. 163.

Proof improperly rejected.]—It is the settled practice of the Court of Bankruptcy not to vacate the appointment of a trustee merely because a proof has been improperly rejected. In order to induce the court to vacate the appointment, special circumstances—such as that the rejection of the proof has been procured by fraud—must be shewn. At any rate an application for such an order must be made very promptly after the rejection of the proof. Kimber, Ex parte, Thrift, In re, 11 Ch. D. 869—C. A.

Managing Clerk of Purchaser of Estate.]—Where the sole assignee was the managing clerk of a solicitor, who had bought an estate of the bankrupt, and had neglected to complete the purchase, the court ordered him to be removed, and that there should be a new choice. Ashmore, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 461.

— Request of Assignee.—An assignee may be removed at his own request, in order that he may bid at a sale of part of the bankrupt's estate. Perkes, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 385.

— Petition by Bankrupt—Collusion.—On a petition by a bankrupt for the removal of one of two assignees, where it appeared that he was a mere instrument in the hands of the other assignee, and that the petition was got up between them in collusion, and out of a spirit of hostile opposition to the assignee against whom it was presented, the petition was dismissed. Oakes, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 60; 5 Jur. 612.

c. Powers and Liabilities.

i. Generally.

— Cannot delegate Authority.—Assignees cannot delegate their general authority. Douglas v. Brown, 1 Mont. 93.

— But One can give good Discharge.—Where there are more assignees than one, one of them may receive money belonging to the estate, and give a good discharge for it. Smith v. Jamesons, 1 Esp. 114.

— Unless others Dissent.—But it is otherwise where the express dissent of the other assignee appears. Bristow v. Eastman, 1 Esp. 174; Peake, 223.

— Where one Absconded—Money in Joint Names.—Money deposited in the bank in the name of three assignees, ordered to be paid to the cheques of two, the third having absconded. Hunter, Ex parte, 2 Rose, 363; 1 Mer. 408.

— Death of One.—Where part of a bankrupt's estate was paid into the bank in the names of five assignees; and one of them having died, and another gone abroad, the remaining assignees applied to the bank for the money, for the purpose of a dividend, but the bank refused to pay it without proof of the other two assignees being dead: the court made an order on the bank to pay the money to the three remaining assignees. Collins, Ex parte, 2 Cox, 427.

— Acting Assignee—Liability of Others.—If four persons are chosen assignees, and, at the choice, it is verbally agreed that one shall act, and notice is given to the banker to pay the drafts of the one, and a dividend is declared, and notice is given to the creditors "that they may receive the dividend upon application to the assignees," and the acting assignee pays the dividends by cheques, which are dishonoured, he having overdrawn the account and absconded, the other three assignees are liable. Booth, Ex parte, 1 Mont. 248.

— Power to purchase Property of Debtor to the Bankrupt.—The trustee of an estate in bankruptcy had a large claim against an insolvent estate. Before the claim was admitted he joined in the purchase of assets of the latter estate:—Held, that the sale could not be set aside. Boswell v. Coaks, 23 Ch. D. 302; 52 L. J., Ch. 465; 48 L. T. 929; 31 W. R. 540.

Of Joint and Separate Estates of Partners.]

—On the appointment of a trustee of the joint estate of two debtors, the separate estate of each also vests by law in such trustee, and resolutions of the separate creditors appointing a trustee and assigning the separate estate to him are invalid. Philps, Ex parte, Moore, In re, 19 L. R., Eq. 256; 44 L. J., Bk. 40; 31 L. T. 734; 23 W. R. 230.

The trustee of the joint estate has a right to be heard on all matters connected with the separate estate. Id.

The proceedings having been transferred to the London court, no further proceedings, either as to the joint or separate estate, ought to have been taken in the local court. Id.

Upon a liquidation petition by two partners, two persons were by three several resolutions appointed trustees of the joint estate and of the two separate estates respectively. One of the trustees resigned, whereupon the continuing trustee was, by a resolution of the joint creditors, appointed "sole trustee of the property of the debtors;" but no resolution was passed appointing any one to be trustee of either of the separate estates:—Held, that the continuing trustee was able to convey real property, part of one of the separate estates, to a purchaser, for all the interest of the debtor at the commencement of the liquidation. Waddell, In re, 2 Ch. D. 172; 45 L. J., Ch. 647; 34 L. T. 237.

— Use of Name.—A trustee in bankruptcy cannot be compelled to allow, and ought not to allow, the use of his name to impeach a dealing with property as a fraudulent preference, for the benefit not of the creditors generally but of a particular creditor holding a security on the property dealt with. Cooper, Ex parte, Zucco, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 510; 44 L. J., Bk. 121; 33 L. T. 3; 23 W. R. 782.

— Contempt, Committal for—Terms upon which Release from Custody granted.—A trustee in a liquidation who has been committed to prison for non-compliance with an order directing him to pay a sum of money, part of the debtor's property, received by him in his character of trustee, into court, was ordered to be released upon his undertaking to pay the amount due by quarterly instalments. Hedger, Ex parte, Frank, In re, 42 L. T. 192.

ii. Power to Lease Bankrupt's Property.

The court cannot sanction the renewal of a lease by assignees, for the purpose of carrying on the bankrupt's business, if any creditors object to that arrangement, notwithstanding it may have been determined upon by a majority of creditors present at a meeting duly convened for that purpose. Miller, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 39.

iii. Power to Sell Bankrupt's Property.

An order for sale of such part of a bankrupt's property as is likely to depreciate in value may properly be made before the choice of a trade assignee; but where no reason exists for an immediate sale, the creditors' assignee is the proper person to have the management; all the estate of the bankrupt vests in him upon his appointment. Stowers, In re, 12 W. R. 534.

Official Assignee need not Concur.]—A bona fide sale of a bankrupt's property by the creditors' assignee alone, without the concurrence of the official assignee, is valid. Ward, In re, 26 Beav. 207; 28 L. J., Ch. 175; 5 Jur., N. S. 164; 32 L. T. 189.

Charges of Agent employed to Sell.]—A scale of charges of an agent, employed by assignees to sell a bankrupt's stock by tender, is properly settled by the rule adopted by the Court of Bankruptcy at an intermediate rate between that applicable to a sale by auction and that applicable to a sale by valuation. Hunt, Ex parte, 5 De G., Mac. & G. 387.

It is not incumbent on the appellate court to decide such a question, although both parties submit to its jurisdiction. Id.

Sale to Debtor.]—To an action for goods sold, the defendant pleaded that since the cause of action arose, and before action, the estate of the plaintiff went into liquidation under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, 32 & 33 Vict. c. 71, and B. was duly appointed trustee. The plaintiff replied that the trustee for good and valuable consideration sold, assigned, and transferred to him all the estate vested in him as trustee under the liquidation:—Held, that the sale was warranted by s. 25, sub-s. 3, and the plaintiff entitled to sue in his own name; and that the replication was no departure from the declaration. Kitsen v. Hardwicke, 7 L. R., C. P. 473; 26 L. T. 846.

The creditors of a liquidating debtor passed a resolution agreeing to the liquidation, appointing a trustee, and directing the trustee to resell to the debtor all the estate, other than a certain debt, in consideration of the debtor's promissory notes for 7s. 6d. in the pound, payable by three equal instalments, and such a sum as would pay the costs of the liquidation. The resolution was subsequently confirmed and registered:—Held, that the clause authorizing the trustee to resell the estate to the debtor was ultra vires and void, and must be rejected, but that the rest of the resolutions was not thereby rendered invalid, and that the liquidation must proceed in the ordinary course. Dugdale, Ex parte, 36 L. T. 324; 25 W. R. 468.

Sale by Trustee to his Partner invalid.]—A trustee in bankruptcy cannot sell to his partner, even by auction, the bankrupt's property. Moore, Ex parte, Moore, In re, 45 L. T. 558; 30 W. R. 123.

Trustee has a Discretion as to Time of Sale.]—Subject to resolutions of the creditors, a trustee in bankruptcy has a discretion as to when and how he will sell a contingent reversionary interest of the bankrupt, and the court will not interfere with the discretion, at the instance of a creditor, unless it is shewn that the trustee is acting so very absurdly that no reasonable man would thus act. Lloyd, Ex parte, Peters, In re, 47 L. T. 64—C. A.

Assignment of Onerous Property to Pauper.]—Although a trustee in bankruptcy, who has taken actual possession of leasehold property of the bankrupt, receives notice from the landlord to disclaim the lease under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 71), but does not disclaim, he may nevertheless relieve himself of liability to the landlord by assigning the lease, even without having previously offered to surrender it, and the mere fact that the trustee knows the assignee to be a pauper will not invalidate such assignment. Hopkinson v. Lovering, 11 Q. B. D. 92; 52 L. J., Q. B. 391; 47 J. P. 519.

Right of Action—Action commenced by Trustee in Bankruptcy—Right of Assignee of Trustee's Interest to proceed with the Action—Champerty.]—The trustee in bankruptcy of a man who had conveyed away some real property absolutely, commenced an action against the grantee to have it declared that the conveyance was a mortgage, and that the deed ought to stand as a security only for the money advanced. The action had proceeded no further than the issue of the writ, when the trustee sold and assigned the subject-matter of the action to a purchaser for value:—Held, that the assignee from the trustee in bankruptcy was entitled to continue the action. Whether such a right could not have been assigned by the grantor himself, quære. Sear v. Lawson, 15 Ch. D. 426; 49 L. J., Bk. 69; 42 L. T. 893; 28 W. R. 929—C. A. Affirming, 42 L. T. 805; 28 W. R. 763.

iv. Power to Sell Book Debts and Goodwill of Business.

Under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 137.]—Book debts, within the meaning of this section, are such debts accruing in the ordinary course of a man's trade as are usually entered in the trade books. Shipley v. Marshall, 14 C. B., N. S. 566; 32 L. J., C. P. 258; 9 Jur., N. S. 1060; 8 L. T. 430.

A., a saddler, and proprietor of newspapers, sold the copyright in one newspaper to B., who was to pay for it by instalments. A. became bankrupt; the assignees sold to A. himself the balance of the debt due to him from B., as a book debt:—Held, that the transaction created a book debt, being such a debt as would, in the ordinary course of trade, be entered in a trader's books, though such an entry is not necessary to constitute a book debt. Id.

Bill of Exchange not a Book Debt.]—Book debts are debts entered in books during the course of business, and where a bankrupt carried on the business of a grocer, a bill of exchange is not a book debt, and so does not pass under a sale by the court of his book debts. McEvoy v. Bent, 11 W. R. 314.

Books of Solicitor.]—The above section does not authorize the sale of the books of a solicitor who has become bankrupt. Roberts, Ex parte, 33 L. J., Bk. 8; 10 Jur., N. S. 28; 9 L. T. 469; 12 W. R. 183.

One Partner Bankrupt—Book Debts of Partnership.]—The Bankruptcy Act, 1861, s. 137, which makes it necessary that an assignee should have the sanction of the Court of Bankruptcy to justify him in selling by private contract all or any of the book debts due or growing due to the bankrupt, and the books relating thereto and the goodwill of his trade or business, relates to the sale of book debts, &c., belonging to the bankrupt only, and not to the book debts, &c., of a dissolved partnership, of which only one partner is bankrupt, such book debts, &c., not being assets distributable or saleable in the bankruptcy. Motion, In re, Maule v. Davis, 9 L. R., Ch. 192; 43 L. J., Bk. 59; 29 L. T. 757; 22 W. R. 225.

v. Power to Appeal against Directions of Creditors.

The creditors of a bankrupt trader have no power to authorize the trustee to carry on the business of the bankrupt, except so far as may be necessary for the beneficial winding-up of the business. So that if the majority of the creditors pass a resolution authorizing the trustee to carry on the business for any other purpose, such as the hope of making a profit thereby, the resolution is not binding upon the non-assenting minority, and the court ought to interfere and to declare it invalid. Emmanuel, Ex parte, Batey, In re, 17 Ch. D. 35; 50 L. J., Ch. 305; 44 L. T. 832; 29 W. R. 526—C. A.

Under s. 20 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, a trustee in bankruptcy is entitled to apply to the court for directions in relation to any particular matter arising under the bankruptcy, as to which the creditors have already, by resolution at a general meeting, given him directions, and the court has power for just cause shewn to direct the trustee to disregard the directions of the creditors and to act contrary to them. In such a case the court ought not to order the resolution to be vacated or to declare it void, but simply to direct the trustee to disregard it. Even though there be no fraud in the passing of a resolution giving the trustee directions as to the administration of the estate, yet, if the majority of the creditors have voted, not simply with the view of administering the estate in the best way for the benefit of all the creditors, but with the view of favouring the debtor or persons whom he is alleged to have fraudulently preferred, the court ought to direct the trustee to disregard the resolution. Sect. 20 is to be construed with reference to s. 14. Cooks, Ex parte, Poole, In re, 21 Ch. D. 397; 52 L. J., Ch. 63; 47 L. T. 496; 31 W. R. 105—C. A.

vi. Power to Continue or Compromise Actions.

Continuing Actions.—Where the trustee of a liquidating debtor elects, under the C. L. P. Act, 1852, s. 142, not to continue a pending action commenced by the debtor, such election is not a bar to a subsequent action by the trustee in his representative capacity founded on the same cause of action. Bennett v. Gamgee, 2 Ex. D. 11; 46 L. J., Ex. 33; 35 L. T. 764; 25 W. R. 81. Affirmed on appeal, 46 L. J., Ex. 204; 36 L. T. 48; 25 W. R. 293—C. A.

When a sole plaintiff becomes bankrupt the action does not abate, and the trustee in the bankruptcy can obtain an order of course to carry on the same. Jackson v. North Eastern Railway Company, 5 Ch. D. 844; 46 L. J., Ch. 723; 36 L. T. 779; 25 W. R. 518—C. A.

Interpleader—Joinder of Trustee in Bankruptcy.—If, after an interpleader issue has been settled, the execution debtor files a petition for liquidation, and the trustee under the liquidation claims the goods in respect of which the issue has been directed, the trustee will, upon his application, be added as a claimant in the trial of the issue. Bird v. Mathews, 46 L. T. 512—C. A.

Compromising Actions.—A trustee in bankruptcy having in respect of his title to the bankrupt's property a right to sue in his own name, and also in his official name under s. 83, sub-a. 7 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, has all the rights of an ordinary litigant, including the right to compromise any action instituted by him, and he may consent to take less than was originally claimed. The 27th section of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, which gives a trustee general power to make compromises with the sanction of the committee of inspection, does not affect his right to compromise actions instituted by him as trustee. Leeming v. Murray (Lady), 13 Ch. D. 123; 48 L. J., Ch. 737; 28 W. R. 338.

See further, post, XXVI., ACTIONS BY AND AGAINST ASSIGNEES AND TRUSTEES.

vii. Power to Appoint a Solicitor.

Consent of Committee of Inspection.—The consent of the committee of inspection, required by the 29th section of the Bankruptcy Act to be given to the appointment of a solicitor by the trustee, may be given by the inspectors separately, and a meeting is not required for that purpose. White, Ex parte, Gearing, In re, 29 W. R. 632.

viii. Power to Continue or Disclaim Contracts.

Continuing Contracts.—Trustees being required to decide whether they would disclaim contracts to repair railway waggons for a term, did not disclaim, but continued to perform the contracts for two years, and then discontinued to do so:—Held, that the contractees had no personal remedy against the trustees, and no right to payment in full of damages for the breach out of the estate, but merely a right to prove for the amount of such damages. Davis, Ex parte, Smezzum, In re, 3 Ch. D. 463; 45 L. J., Bk. 137; 35 L. T. 389; 25 W. R. 49—C. A.

Enforcing Contracts against.—Specific performance of a liquidating debtor's contract will not be decreed against his trustee without the latter's consent. Holloway v. York, 25 W. R. 627.

Disclaiming Leases and Contracts.—See post, X., PROPERTY OF BANKRUPT OR LIQUIDATING DEBTOR.

ix. Power to Purchase Creditor's Debt.

A purchase by an assignee, for the benefit of the bankrupt's estate, of the interest of a creditor therein, was set aside at the instance of the creditor, where the assignee did not shew that he had given the creditor full information as to the state of the assets, and the periods at which the dividends would be likely to be paid. Poolley v. Quilter, 2 De G. & J. 327; 27 L. J., Ch. 874; 4 Jur., N. S. 345.

x. Liability on Keeping Property in Hand.

Under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 175.]—The assignee of a bankrupt, having taken possession of his estate, worked up some of the raw material, and then purchased it, by debiting himself with the market value:—Held, that as the assignee he had no power to contract with himself, and was, therefore, chargeable with the payment of 20l. per cent., provided by this section, from the time the sale was made. Ridgway, Ex parte, 11 Jur., N. S. 97; 11 L. T. 467.

Under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 71.]—The Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 30, charging a trustee with interest at 20l. per cent. per annum upon the excess above 50l. of any moneys retained in his hands for more than ten days, does not apply to a trustee under a liquidation. Brooker, Ex parte, Fastledge, In re, 2 Ch. D. 57; 45 L. J., Bk. 51; 34 L. T. 604; 24 W. R. 655—C. A.

xi. Liability to account.

Accounts rendered by Assignees' Solicitor.]—Assignees received no money, nor made any payments, for or on account of the estate personally; all the receipts and payments were had and made by their solicitor. The solicitor stated on oath the accuracy of the accounts, namely, that all the receipts and payments were such as were disclosed in certain documents which he laid before the commissioners; but it did not appear that the assignees verified the accuracy of the accounts:—The court held that the accounts were open. Rees, Ex parte, 9 Jur. 996.

After Lapse of Time.]—Where there had been no audit of the assignees' accounts, and large sums had been received by them, held, that the official assignee acted properly in calling for an audit, although twenty-five years had elapsed since any step had been taken, and no creditor made any complaint; but the court being of opinion that the official assignee might, with little difficulty, and at a small expense, have satisfied himself that the circumstances did not render it incumbent upon him to continue to prosecute a claim against the creditors' assignee, he was not entitled to his full costs as against the latter, there being no estate. Shaw, Ex parte, 1 De Gex, 242.

When a bankrupt petitioned for an inquiry against his assignees, under a commission which had been issued seventeen years ago, and there had been no transactions relating to the personal estate for fifteen years, the inquiry was refused as to the personal estate; but it being sworn that one of the assignees had been in the receipt of the rents and profits of the real estate up to the period of his death, which happened a few months before presenting the petition, an inquiry was directed as to the real estate against the surviving assignee. Newhouse, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 508; 5 Jur. 250.

In Case of Composition.]—When a trustee has been appointed under the 279th of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1870, for receipt and distribution of a composition, and after all the creditors have been paid, a balance remains in the trustee's hands, the Court of Bankruptcy has jurisdiction to take an account as between the trustee and the debtor in order to ascertain the amount of the surplus, and to order the surplus so ascertained to be paid over by the trustee to the debtor. Carew, Ex parte, Carew, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 308; 44 L. J., Bk. 67; 32 L. T. 318; 23 W. R. 459.

Default in rendering Accounts—Committal for Contempt.]—The mere fact that a trustee in bankruptcy has within four days after his resignation or removal from office neglected to render the accounts prescribed by General Rule 126 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, is not sufficient ground for his committal to prison by the Court of Bankruptcy, as for a contempt. To warrant such committal there must be some evidence that he has after notice from the court wilfully failed to perform the duties imposed upon him by the rule. Pookes Royal, In re, or Royle, In re, 7 Q. B. D. 9; 50 L. J., Q. B. 656; 44 L. T. 314.

xii. Liability of New Trustee for Non-payment of Moneys received by his Predecessor.

One of two partners was appointed trustee under a liquidation, and, before the affairs were wound up, died. At the time of his death he was indebted to the estate in 201l. The surviving partner was then appointed trustee on his giving an undertaking in writing to make good any deficiency. The latter never received anything on behalf of the estate. An order of court was made for payment of the 201l., and on its being disobeyed an application was made to commit the surviving partner:—Held, that no order to commit could be made because it was not shewn that the debtor had ever had the money in his possession. Cuddeford, Ex parte, Hincks, In re, 45 L. J., Bk. 127; 34 L. T. 666; 24 W. R. 931.

xiii. Liability to Pay Costs.

If a trustee makes an unsuccessful application to the court, he will, in the absence of special circumstances, be ordered to pay the costs; and if the estate is insufficient for payment of the costs, the trustee must bear them personally. Angerstein, Ex parte, Angerstein, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 479; 43 L. J., Bk. 131; 30 L. T. 446; 23 W. R. 581.

A trustee in bankruptcy can be made personally liable for the costs of a suit to which he is a party, subject to the Court of Bankruptcy allowing him to recoup himself out of the bankrupt estate, if his conduct has been bona fide. Pitts v. La Fontaine, 6 App. Cas. 482; 50 L. J., P. C. 8; 43 L. T. 519—P. C.

The sole defendant becoming bankrupt, his trustees were added as defendants, and an order made that the action proceed against the trustees. The trustees did not move to discharge the order, and on the hearing appeared and cross-examined the plaintiff's witnesses:—Held, that they were liable to the costs of the action, but the account of profits was limited to an account of the profits received by the bankrupt. Watson v. Holliday, 52 L. J. Ch. 543; 48 L. T. 545; 31 W. R. 536—C. A. Affirming, 20 Ch. D. 70; 51 L. J., Ch. 906; 46 L. T. 878; 30 W. R. 747.

Appeals.]—Where the county court had refused to approve of resolutions for a scheme of settlement under s. 28 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and the trustee appealed to the chief judge who reversed the order, and the Court of Appeal finally restored the order of the county court judge, the trustee was allowed the costs of his application to the county court judge out of the assets, if any, but was ordered to pay the costs of the appeals to the chief judge and to the Court of Appeal. Strawbridge, Ex parte, Hickman, In re, 32 W. R. 173—C. A.

Committal on Non-payment.—A trustee in liquidation was ordered to pay the taxed costs of the solicitor and the costs of the motion upon which the order was made. On default, he was committed to prison for his contempt of court in disobeying the order:—Held, that the order of committal was wrong, for that the costs of the motion could not be said to be moneys in his hands as a trustee within s. 4, sub-s. 3 of the Debtors Act, 1869. Sharp, Ex parte, Hind, In re, 37 L. T. 168.

xiv. Liability to Indemnify Bankrupt.

It seems to be quite contrary to the principle of the laws relating to bankrupts and insolvents that the assignees taking the property for division among the creditors should be liable, either personally or out of the assets of the estate, to indemnify the bankrupt or insolvent in respect of any claims to which he may have rendered himself liable in respect of a particular portion of the estate and from which claims he has not been discharged by his bankruptcy or insolvency. Leri v Ayers, 3 App. Cas. 842; 47 L. J., P. C. 83; 38 L. T. 725; 27 W. R. 79—P. C.

Acceptance of shares, in the absence of any special conduct in relation to them, will not be inferred from the execution or acceptance of the trusts of a deed transferring them as part of a bankrupt's estate to trustees for the creditors. Id.

d. Remuneration and Allowances.

Trustees under an assignment for benefit of creditors employed an agent to proceed to America to recover part of the assigned property. Afterwards, the debtors became bankrupt, and three of the trustees were appointed assignees:—Held, that the assignees ought to be allowed in their accounts the expense of employing the agent. Shaw, Ex parte, 1 De Gex, 242.

For the purpose of bringing expenses within the description of just allowances, it is not necessary to shew that they have actually benefited the estate, if there was a fair probability of their so doing. Id.

An assignee, who had acted as solicitor to the fiat, was allowed to charge for his clerk's time employed in the business of the bankruptcy, as costs out of pocket, but not any profit thereupon. Newton, Ex parte, 5 De G. & S. 584.

Where an adjudication has been annulled, the official assignee will be allowed to deduct from any assets in his hands the expenses properly incurred by him in the custody and realization of the estate; but the court may order such expenses and the costs of all parties to be paid by the petitioning creditor. Wollheim, In re, 32 L. J., Bk. 26; 7 L. T. 531; 11 W. R. 128—L. J.

Costs of Actions.—The Court of Bankruptcy had authority, independently of the 153rd section of the Act of 1849, to allow the assignees in their accounts the costs of an unsuccessful action brought by them, although not one which the bankrupt, but for his bankruptcy, could have brought; and creditors who did not object to an order sanctioning an action until after the result was ascertained, could not be heard to object that the action should not have been sanctioned. Edmondson, Ex parte, Thompson, In re, 4 De G., F. & J. 486.

Charges of Trustee—Power to Tax in Composition under s. 28 of Bankruptcy Act, 1869.]

—The creditors of a liquidating debtor resolved on a liquidation by arrangement, and appointed a trustee and a committee of inspection, and they resolved that the remuneration of the trustee should be such as the committee of inspection should from time to time determine. Afterwards the creditors authorized the trustee to accept an offer made by the debtor, under s. 28 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, to pay a composition, he also paying the costs, charges, and expenses of the solicitors, receiver, and trustee in relation to the settlement of his affairs and of the scheme of arrangement. The arrangement was approved by the court:—Held, that after the confirmation of this scheme the court had jurisdiction to tax the trustee's charges, notwithstanding that his account had been audited and approved by the committee of inspection subsequently to the confirmation of the composition arrangement. Ranby, Ex parte, Ranby, In re, 14 Ch. D. 467; 43 L. T. 11; 28 W. R. 804—C. A.

Disallowance of Remuneration voted by Creditors.]

—When the comptroller has reported to the court that a trustee has failed to perform the duties imposed on him by the act and the rules, the court has power to disallow the trustee the remuneration which has been voted to him by the creditors. Lister, In re, Simmons, Ex parte, 2 Ch. D. 749; 45 L. J., Bk. 113; 34 L. T. 744.

e. Release.

Jurisdiction of Court over Trustee after Release.]

—The trustee of a liquidating debtor sold the whole estate for a sum equal to 7s. 6d. in the pound upon the amount of the proveable debts, to be paid in three instalments, on the 23rd of April, the 23rd of June, and the 23rd of August. On the 23rd of April the creditors resolved that the debtor should have his discharge as from the 30th of April, subject to a certificate by the trustee that the first instalment of the purchase-money had been paid, and that promissory notes for the other instalments had been delivered to him, and that the close of the liquidation should take place, and the trustee be released on and from the 23rd of October:—Held, that, notwithstanding the release of the trustee, the court had jurisdiction to order him to pay a dividend to a creditor. Prager, In re, Société Cockrill, Ex parte, 3 Ch. D. 115; 45 L. J., Bk. 124; 34 L. T. 665.

After the release of a trustee in liquidation, the Court of Bankruptcy has no jurisdiction to order the trustee to pay rent due to the landlord of leasehold property occupied by the trustee during the liquidation. Cartier, Ex parte,

Sect. 53 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, applies to a release given by the creditors to the trustee under a liquidation by arrangement. Ib.

f. Enforcing Bond for Discharge of Duties.

A bond with sureties given by a trustee to the chief judge, as surety for the faithful discharge of the duties of his office, may be enforced by the order of a county court. Parry, In re, 4 Ch. D. 250; 35 L. T. 768; 25 W. R. 128.

g. Bankruptcy of Assignee.

Under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 156.]—A., being indebted to B., absconded to America, upon which B. sent out a power of attorney to an agent there to recover from A. what money he could; B., hearing of a similar proceeding by another creditor, sued out a fiat against A., and was chosen one of his assignees; and afterwards, B.'s agent in America obtained a sum of money from A. and remitted it to B. in England:—Held, that this money was received by B. in his character of assignee; and that B., having himself become bankrupt, might, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 105, be charged with the amount, together with interest at 5l. per cent., notwithstanding he had obtained his certificate. Ralph, Ex parte, 3 Mont. D. & D. 331; 7 Jur. 683.

See further, ante, col. 824.

X. PROPERTY OF THE BANKRUPT OR LIQUIDATING DEBTOR AND THE TRUSTEE'S TITLE THERETO.

1. GENERAL PRINCIPLES.

a. Assignees take subject to all Equities.

An assignment in bankruptcy, like any other assignment by operation of law, passes the rights of the bankrupt precisely in the same plight and condition as he possessed them, subject to all equities. Mitford v. Mitford, 9 Ves. 100.

Assignees take subject to all equities under which the bankrupt stood. Herbert, Ex parte, 13 Ves. 188. See also Harris v. Truman, 9 Q. B. D. 264; 51 L. J., Q. B. 338; 46 L. T. 844; 30 W. R. 533—C. A.

A prisoner was made bankrupt and a trustee appointed immediately before his conviction for felony:—Held, that the trustee took his property subject to the possibility of an order for costs of the prosecution being made on it. Reg. v. Roberts, 9 L. R., Q. B. 77; 43 L. J., M. C. 17; 29 L. T. 674; 22 W. R. 60; 12 Cox, C. C. 574.

Right as against Wrongdoer.]—A., a trader, purchased a plant and stock, under an agreement to pay the purchase-money by instalments, a proper assignment to be executed when the whole of the instalments should have been paid, and the vendor having power, in case of default for fourteen days, after notice in writing, to pay the several instalments, to re-enter and expel the purchaser. Default having been made in payment of the instalments, but the vendor not having availed himself of his power to resume possession in the manner provided by the agreement, and A. having become bankrupt:—Held, that his assignees were entitled to recover the whole value of the goods, in an action against the wrongdoer. Turner v. Hardeastle, 11 C. B., N. S. 683; 31 L. J., C. P. 193.

b. Property out of Jurisdiction.

Assignees of a bankrupt can receive property of the bankrupt out of the jurisdiction. Scott v. Bentley, 1 Kay & J. 281; 24 L. J., Ch. 244; 1 Jur., N. S. 394.

The assignment under an English commission vests in the assignees, and without the necessity of intimation, the whole of the bankrupt's personal property in Scotland; and all subsequent diligence by any Scotch or other creditor is thereby precluded. Selkrig v. Davies, 2 Rose, 97; 2 Dow, 230.

Money Recovered Out of Jurisdiction by Creditors.]—A., B., & C. being partners in England, A. & B. resided in England, and C. went to a foreign country for the purpose of managing the affairs of the house in that country. D. was also resident in England, where a debt was contracted by him to A., B. & C. D. became insolvent, and C., knowing that D. had stopped payment, and after a commission of bankruptcy had in fact issued against him, attached, in the names of himself and his partners, a debt due to D. in the foreign country, by legal process, and obtained payment of it under the judgment of a court of justice in that country; the assignees of D. had a right to recover the money so received by C., in an action against A., B., & C. for money received to the use of the assignees. Phillips v. Hunter, 2 H. Bl. 402—Ex. Ch.

A British creditor of a bankrupt, who has, by means of the laws of any foreign state, succeeded in obtaining possession of the goods of a bankrupt situate in that state, is, in bankruptcy, answerable for them to the assignees. Robinson, In re, 11 Ir. Ch. Rep. 385.

Australian Bankruptcy—Property in England.]—A. was adjudged insolvent under an act of the Australian Legislature, which enacts that the personal property of insolvents shall vest in their assignees by virtue of their appointment. No assignment was executed by A. He was entitled to a share of a residue consisting of stock in the Court of Chancery in England. The fund was claimed by the assignees, and by the executrix of A. in England:—Held, that the right to receive it depended on the domicile of A.; that if he was domiciled in Australia, his assignees were entitled to receive it; but if in England, his executrix was entitled. Blithman, In re, 2 L. R., Eq. 23; 35 L. J., Ch. 255; 12 Jur., N. S. 84; 14 L. T. 6; 35 Beav. 219.

Real estate in England does not vest in the assignee under a bankruptcy in Victoria where no deed has been executed under the colonial statute. Waite v. Bingley, 21 Ch. D. 674; 51 L. J., Ch. 651; 30 W. R. 698.

c. Relation of Title of Assignees.

Bankrupt Adjudicated on his own Petition.]—Where a fiat and adjudication proceeded on the bankrupt's own petition, under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 96, s. 41, the title of the assignees related back only to the act of bankruptcy on which the fiat proceeded. Steeenson v. Newnham, 13 C. B. 285; 22 J. L., C. P. 110; 17 Jur. 600—Ex. Ch.

Semble, it was the same under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, ss. 93, 101. Ib.

An adjudication on a petition in form a pauperis of a debtor in custody has relation back to the time of the bankrupt's commitment or detainer, and therefore the title of his assignees will prevail against that of a creditor who under a bill of sale has seized the bankrupt's goods subsequently to the commitment or detainer. Bramwell v. Eglinton, 5 R. & S. 39; 33 L. J., Q. B. 130; 10 Jur., N. S. 583; 10 L. T. 295; 12 W. R. 551.

Execution by Sheriff of Goods under Unregistered Bill of Sale—Relation back.—The taking in execution of goods comprised in an unregistered bill of sale does not, under s. 8 of the Act of 1878, avoid the bill of sale altogether, but only to the extent necessary to let in the claim of the execution creditor: consequently, where, by the doctrine of relation back of the title of the trustee in bankruptcy, an execution is avoided, the execution being swept away as if it never existed, the title of the holder of the unregistered bill of sale, which but for the execution would have been good as against the trustee, continues good as against him. Blai-berg, Ex parte, Toomer, In re, 23 Ch. D. 254; 52 L. J., Ch. 461; 49 L. T. 16; 31 W. R. 906—C. A.

Equitable Assignment of future Receipts of Business.—An assignment by a trader of the future receipts of his business, even if made for value, is, as regards receipts accruing after the commencement of his subsequent bankruptcy, inoperative as against the title of the trustee in the bankruptcy. Brice v. Bannister (3 Q. B. D. 569) distinguished. Nichols, Ex parte, Jones, In re, 22 Ch. D. 782; 52 L. J., Ch. 635; 48 L. T. 492; 31 W. R. 661—C. A.

Fraudulent Transfer of Property—Payment by Agent—Liability of Agent to Trustee in Bankruptcy of Principal.—An agent, who, in obedience to the previous direction of his principal, pays away money of the principal which is in his hands, knowing before he makes the payment (though he did not know when he received the money) that the payment will when completed constitute an act of bankruptcy on the part of the principal, is not liable to the trustee in the subsequent bankruptcy of the principal for the money so paid away. The trustee could recover the money from the agent only on the ground that he had paid away the money of the trustee, and in such a case the money would become the trustee's money only on the completion of the act of bankruptcy to which his title would relate back, i.e., not until after the money had left the agent's hands. Helder, Ex parte, Lewis, In re, 24 Ch. D. 339—C. A.

See further, ante, ACT OF BANKRUPTCY.

d. Delay of Trustee in taking Possession.

Debtor continuing Trading—Sale to bona fide Purchaser.—The mere fact that the trustee has not taken possession of a debtor's property for two months after the date of his appointment, but has allowed the debtor to continue trading as before, will not be sufficient to destroy his right to the property notwithstanding that it has been sold by the debtor to a bona fide purchaser in the meantime. Cooper, Ex parte, Green, In re, 39 L. T. 260.

Shares in Public Company—No Notice to Company.—The holder of shares in a limited company became bankrupt, and his share certificates came into the hands of his assignee. The bankruptcy was duly advertised, but the assignee gave no express notice of it to the company, and took no steps to have the shares registered in his name. The bankrupt died without having obtained his discharge, and his executrix having made a declaration of the loss of the share certificates, obtained the issue of fresh certificates and the registration of the shares in her name. She afterwards sold the shares to purchasers for value without notice. Subsequently the assignee, five years after the bankruptcy, claimed to be entitled to the shares, and to have the company's share register altered accordingly. On motion by the assignee to have the register rectified in this respect:—Held, that, under the circumstances, the assignee had lost any right he might have had to the shares. London and Provincial Telegraph Company, In re, 9 L. R., Eq. 653; 39 L. J., Ch. 419; 23 L. T. 237; 18 W. R. 597.

Furniture—Execution Creditor.—When assignees allow a bankrupt to remain in undisturbed possession, for a period of four years, of furniture which they might at the time of adjudication have properly claimed, they cannot afterwards claim it against execution creditors. Hannington, Ex parte, Stafford, In re, 18 W. R. 959.

Benefit of Contract.—A contract for the sale by the defendant to the bankrupt of railway shares was to be performed on the 1st of July, 1835. To a declaration by the assignees for a breach of contract in not delivering the shares, the defendant pleaded that the assignees did not adopt the contract within a reasonable time after the bankruptcy, and averred that the contract was abandoned by mutual consent:—Held, that the circumstance of the assignees having suffered a considerable period to elapse without requiring the contract to be performed, was evidence whence the jury might infer an abandonment. Lawrence v. Knowles, 7 Scott, 381; 5 Bing. N. C. 399.

In such a case the assignees ought to make their election within a reasonable time. Ib.

e. Prerogative of Crown.

Though the crown is named in some of the sections of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, it is not bound by the other provisions of the Act. In particular, the relation back of the title of the trustee in a liquidation to the filing of the petition does not affect the rights of the crown under an extent issued against the property of the debtor between the filing of the petition and the appointment of a trustee. Notwithstanding the filing of a liquidation petition and the appointment of a receiver by the court on the application of the debtor, his property remains vested in him as before, until the creditors have determined what they will do, and the property is bound by an extent issued by the crown between the filing of the petition and the appointment of a trustee. Postmaster-General, Ex parte, Bonham, In re, 10 Ch. D. 595; 48 L. J., Bk. 84; 40 L. T. 16; 27 W. R. 325—C. A.

2. Compelling Bankrupt to Convey prior to Bankruptcy Act, 1869.

The order for a bankrupt to join in the conveyance of his estate is quite a matter of course, unless he disputes the validity of the fiat. Bradstock, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 118; S. P., Brown, Ex parte, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 262; 2 Deac. 479.

A petition that a bankrupt be compelled to convey was refused until he could have an opportunity of trying the validity of the commission. Thomas, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Mac. 64; 2 Glyn & J. 278.

A bankrupt, who is disputing the commission at law cannot, although nonsuited, be compelled to convey. Id.

Property out of Jurisdiction.—The court cannot compel a bankrupt to execute to his assignees an assignment of debts due to him in America, though the American government will not take notice of the rights of the assignees under the bankrupt laws of this country. Blakes, Ex parte, 1 Cox, 398.

2. REAL PROPERTY.

a. Freeholds.

When Assignees' Title Vests.—Before the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 142, the bargain and sale to the assignees of the bankrupt's freehold lands did not relate to the act of bankruptcy, so as to vest the title in the assignees from that time. Doe d. Eddale v. Mitchell, 2 M. & S. 446; 2 Rose, 265.

B. having become bankrupt in 1823, while the 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, was in force, an assignee was appointed, who died in 1840. In 1844, and after the 1 Will. 4, c. 36, lands came to B. by descent, which he conveyed to the defendant in 1845. B. died in 1855, without ever having obtained a certificate. In 1858, assignees under the bankruptcy were appointed, and recovered the lands by ejectment. In detinus for the title deeds:—Held, first, that by 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, ss. 4, 142, on the appointment of the assignees, the property in the land, and deeds relating to it, vested in them. Plant v. Cotterill, 5 H. & N. 430; 29 L. J., Ex. 198; 2 L. T. 20; 8 W. R. 281.

Held, secondly, that inasmuch as until their appointment there was no detention of the deeds adversely to them, the Statute of Limitations was no answer to their claim. Id.

Estate descended after Bargain and Sale to Assignees.—An estate descended after the bargain and sale of the commissioners, and before certificate, was the property of the bankrupt, and did not vest in the assignees, except by a subsequent assignment. Carleton v. Leighton, 3 Mer. 667.

Bankrupt's Interest as Tenant by Curtesy to Wife's Fee in Remainder.—A bankrupt, after obtaining his certificate of discharge, became entitled to an estate by the curtesy, but at the date of his discharge his wife was only tenant in fee in remainder expectant upon a life interest. The assignees claimed the benefit of the husband's estate:—Held, that until the estate subject to the curtesy became vested in the wife in possession, the husband had no inchoate or transmissible interest which could pass to the assignees. Gibbins v. Eyden, 38 L. J., Ch. 377; 20 L. T. 516; 17 W. R. 481.

Estates Tail.—A common bargain and sale to assignees passed an estate tail of which the bankrupt was possessed. Jackson, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & Chit. 458.

A tenant in tail mortgaged for years, became bankrupt, and died without suffering a common recovery; his assignee had the estate clear of the mortgage, by 21 Jac. 1, c. 15, s. 12; but if the bankrupt had suffered a recovery, it would have let in the mortgage and other incumbrances. Beek d. Hawkins v. Welsh, 1 Wils. 276.

A joint commission issued against A., tenant for life, and B., tenant in tail male, remainder in fee to S. and his heirs, who were partners in trade:—Held, that the assignees only took an estate in the premises for the life of A. and a base fee, determinable on the death of B. and failure of issue male of his body. Jervis v. Tugleur, 3 B. & A. 557. And see Doe d. Spencer v. Clark, 5 B. & A. 458; 1 D. & R. 44.

Life Estate in Remainder subject to Assumption of Donor's Name.—If at the time of the bankruptcy a bankrupt has a life interest in premises expectant upon the death of the tenant for life, and there is a provision that the person who is entitled to the use and occupancy of the premises should reside and dwell therein, and assume the name of the donor, and upon his neglect or refusal to comply with these conditions should be considered as dead, and the grant as to him be void, and be for the person next entitled thereto; and if after the bankrupt obtains his certificate the tenant for life dies, the estate passes to the assignees. Gouldney, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Chit. 75, 89; 3 Deac. 570.

Benefice.—On the 30th of October, 1862, a sequestrari facias, at the instance of a judgment creditor of G., issued to the bishop of the diocese, and on the 31st, at 9.38 a.m., was lodged at the office of the bishop's registrar. On the 1st of November a sequestration issued, which was published on the 2nd. On the 31st October, G. petitioned for adjudication of bankruptcy against himself, and his petition was filed on the same day at 12.25 p.m.; on the 17th of November a creditors' assignee was appointed, and on the 9th of January, 1863, he applied for a sequestration, which issued on the 10th, and was published on the 18th:—Held, first, that profits of the benefice did not pass to him under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 135, until he had obtained a sequestration. Hopkins v. Clarke, 4 B. & S. 836. Affirmed, 5 B. & S. 753; 33 L. J., Q. B. 334; 10 Jur., N. S. 1071; 11 L. T. 204; 12 W. R. 1029—Ex. Ch.

Held, secondly, that the judgment creditor was not a creditor having security for his debt within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 184, which disentitles such a creditor from receiving more than a rateable part of his debt. Id.

Held, thirdly, that therefore he was entitled to the profits of the benefice as against the creditor's assignee. Id.

— No Priority between Trustees in different Bankruptcies.—Held by James and Cotton, L. J.J. (dissentiente Brett, L. J.), that the effect of s. 88 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, is only to give priority to a sequestration issued by the trustee in the bankruptcy of a beneficed clergyman over a sequestration issued by an individual creditor in respect of a debt provable in the bankruptcy, but that the section has no application as between sequestrations issued by the trustees in two different bankruptcies. Chick, Ex parte, Meredith, In re, 11 Ch. D. 731—C. A.

Sequestration after Discharge.—Held, by the court unanimously, that the fact that a bankrupt beneficed clergyman has obtained an order of discharge does not prevent the trustee in the bankruptcy from issuing a sequestration of the profits of the benefice which the bankrupt held at the time of the bankruptcy. Id.

Disclaimer of Freeholds.—See post, DISCLAIMER OF ONEEROUS PROPERTY.

b. Copyholds.

Formerly the commissioners might except the copyhold estates of a bankrupt out of the bargain and sale, and convey them directly to the purchasers. Harvey, Ex parte, Buck, 493.

Where a copyhold was sold under a commission, a good title was made by a bargain and sale from the commissioners to the purchaser. Holland, Ex parte, 4 Madd. 483.

A. became entitled to a copyhold estate on the death of his mother, to which she had been admitted by copy of court-roll. Before he could be admitted, he became bankrupt, and shortly afterwards died without admittance. The commissioners and assignees under the commission executed a bargain and sale to B. of the copyhold estate, to which he was duly admitted:—Held, that he took a fee-simple conditional at common law; and that the commissioners had power to execute a valid conveyance of his estate by bargain and sale, pursuant to 13 Eliz. c. 11, s. 7, 1 Jac. 1, c. 15, s. 17, and 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 12, although the bankrupt died before the bargain and sale, and although he never had been admitted tenant of the manor. Doe d. Spencer v. Clark, 1 D. & R. 44; 5 B. & A. 458.

The course, under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 114, read together with sect. 212 of 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, is for the assignees to apply to the court, upon affidavits of a bona fide offer of sale and adequacy of price, for an order to direct a sale of the property, and to sanction the conditions. It should also appear that the purchase-money has been paid into the bank. Haines, In re, 6 L. T. 109.

Under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 114, assignees of a bankrupt have such an interest in his copyholds as to make them necessary parties to a bill for specific performance of an agreement to execute a mortgage of such copyholds. Poole v. Bursell, 8 Jur., N. S. 1224; 6 L. T. 777; 10 W. R. 861.

c. Powers of Appointment.

A trader, being seised of an estate for life, with a general power of appointment, with remainder, in default of appointment, to himself in fee, after having committed an act of bankruptcy, upon which he was afterwards declared a bankrupt, executed an appointment in favour of an appointee:—Held, that all his interest having passed to the assignee by the assignment, such appointment was void; and, therefore, that his assignee under the commission had a sufficient legal estate to maintain an ejectment. Doe d. Coleman v. Britain, 2 B. & A. 93.

By a marriage settlement, a husband took an estate for life, with power of appointment to children, remainder to trustees to preserve, &c., remainder to children in tail in default of appointment, remainder to husband in fee in default of issue. The husband became bankrupt, conveyed in the usual way all his property by bargain and sale to his assignees, and afterwards executed an appointment to his son in fee, after his own life estate. The assignees sold the life estate to the bankrupt's mother:—Held, that the son took nothing under the appointment, but was entitled to an estate tail under the original settlement. Badham v. Lee, 7 Bing. 695; 1 M. & Scott, 14.

i. Leaseholds.

a. Prior to the Bankruptcy Act, 1869.

Under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 145.—This enactment is similar to 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 75, and 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 19, which did not extend to a parol agreement for a lease. Sutton, Ex parte, 2 Rose, 86.

And is confined to cases between lessor and lessee, and does not extend to cases between a lessee and his assignee of a lease. Young v. Taylor, 3 B. & A. 521.

It did not apply to a contract, in its nature not a lease, but for a purchase of property. Hope v. Booth, 1 B. & A. 505.

Agreement for Lease.—An agreement for a lease is not annulled by the bankruptcy of the intended lessee. Morgan v. Rhodes, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 214.

The owner of a long term in land agreed to let it for three years, and also, when called upon by the tenant, to grant him a lease for three years, seven years, or the whole term. The tenant continued in the occupation beyond the three years and became bankrupt:—Held, that the option of taking a lease for seven years or the whole term passed to the assignee. Buckland v. Papillon, 2 L. R., Ch. 67; 36 L. J., Ch. 81; 12 Jur., N. S. 992; 15 L. T. 378; 15 W. R. 92.

B. covenanted with the bankrupt that he would procure a lease to be granted to him of certain premises by a third person:—Held, that this was an agreement for a lease, within 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 75, and that B. was entitled to call on the assignees to elect whether they would accept or decline such agreement. Benecke, Ex parte, 1 Deac. 186.

In whom the Term is Vested.—If a lessee becomes bankrupt, the term remains vested in him, until either the assignees elect to take it, or until he himself delivers it up, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 96, s. 75. Tuck v. Tyson, 6 Bing. 321; 3 M. & F. 715.

The interest of a bankrupt in leaseholds is not finally divested until the creditors' assignees are chosen. Turner v. Nicholls, 16 Sim. 565; 18 L. J., Ch. 278; 13 Jur. 293.

The general assignment of a bankrupt's personal estate does not vest a term of years in the assignees, unless they do some act to manifest their assent to the assignment as it regards the term, and their acceptance of the estate; and, therefore, till some act of this sort is done by them, the term still remains in the bankrupt, and he is liable to the payment of rent accruing due subsequently to the bankruptcy. Copeland v. Stephens, 1 B. & A. 593.

Assignees of a bankrupt are not liable as assignees of a term, unless they have done some act which unequivocally indicates to the lessor that they have elected to take the benefit of the lease. Goodwin v. Noble, 8 El. & Bl. 587; 27 L. J., Q. B. 204; 4 Jur., N. S. 208.

The remedy of the lessor is by application to the Court of Bankruptcy under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 145. Id.

—Under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 145.]—Under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 145, a bankrupt's interest in leasehold property remains in the assignees until they elect not to take the demise. Cartwright v. Glover, 2 Giff. 620; 30 L. J., Ch. 324; 7 Jur., N. S. 857; 3 L. T. 880; 9 W. R. 408.

Therefore, where assignees allowed a bankrupt to remain in possession of leasehold premises, and pay rent to the lessor, but afterwards sold without his knowledge:—Held, that the sale was valid. Id.

—Pleading.]—In an answer to an action by a landlord against assignees of a bankrupt for rent, the latter may plead that the term did not vest in them; and to avoid the effect of 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 25 (similar to 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 141), also, that it did vest, but that they abandoned it, and were not therefore liable. Thompson v. Bradbury, 3 D. P. C. 147; 1 Scott, 279; 1 Bing. N. C. 327.

Proceedings to compel Election—What a reasonable Time.]—In one case the assignees were allowed ten days to make their election. Scott, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 446, n.

From the 10th to the 23rd of March is a reasonable time for assignees to elect whether they will accept or reject the bankrupt's lease. Fletcher, Ex parte, 1 Deac. & Chit. 356.

—Order where Suspicion that Lease is Void.]—Upon a petition that assignees may elect whether they will accept or reject a lease, and the assignees elect to reject it, if there is some reason to suspect that the lease is void, and that the landlord had no title to grant it, the court will not order the assignees to deliver up possession of the premises, but merely to deliver up the lease. Williams, Ex parte, 2 Deac. 330.

—Where Lease equitably Mortgaged.]—A lessor was entitled, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 75, to an order on the assignees to elect whether they would accept or decline a lease, notwithstanding the lease was in the hands of a third person, with whom it was deposited by the bankrupt by way of equitable mortgage. Vardy, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 340; S. P., Clunes, Ex parte, 1 Madd. 76; 2 Rose, 452.

Assignees of a bankrupt lessee, who had made an equitable mortgage of his lease previously to his bankruptcy, upon the petition of the lessor, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 75, were ordered to elect to accept or decline the lease. Hanbury or Banbury, Ex parte, 12 L. J., Bk. 43; 7 Jur. 660.

—Lessor Partner with Bankrupt Lessee.]

—Mortgagor and mortgagee joined in demising trade premises to a lessee, and at the same time the mortgagee and lessee entered into partnership by articles, according to which the demised premises were to be considered as partnership property. The lessee became bankrupt:—Held, that the court had jurisdiction to order the assignees to elect whether they would take or abandon the premises. Norton, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 312.

—Costs.]—On petition by a lessor, to compel assignees to elect whether they will accept or decline the lease, the court has no power to make the assignees pay the costs, or to give the lessor the costs out of the bankrupt's estate. Bright, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 79.

A copy of a petition by a landlord, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 75, was served upon an equitable mortgagee of the lease:—Held, that he was entitled to have his costs of appearing on the petition paid him by the petitioner. Hanbury or Banbury, Ex parte, 12 L. J., Bk. 43; 7 Jur. 660. S. P., Hopton, Ex parte, 2 Mont. D. & D. 347; 5 Jur. 804.

What amounts to an Election—Using Premises.]

—If the assignees intermeddle with and assume the management of a farm, this is a sufficient election to take the term, and make them liable to the landlord, in consideration of their tenancy, for all mismanagement. Thomas v. Pemberton, 7 Taunt. 206.

A., while he held of the plaintiff from year to year two farms, X. and Y., upon the terms of certain written agreements, at certain rents, payable quarterly (X. being a holding from Michaelmas, and Y. a holding from Lady-day), became bankrupt in August, 1866. His assignees took possession of both the farms, and continued in occupation of X. till Lady-day, 1867, and of Y. till Christmas, 1866. Disputes arose between the assignees and the plaintiff, and the former committed divers breaches of the terms on which A. held the farms, and in October and November they refused to allow the landlord or his incoming tenant to come upon the farms to sow, plough and crop the lands, as the outgoing tenant was required by the terms of the tenancy. They also sub-let the pasturage till Christmas, 1866:—Held, that these acts shewed unequivocally that the assignees had elected to become tenants to the plaintiff of the farms, therefore they were liable for breaches of the terms on which A. held. Bradshaw v. James, 20 L. T. 781; 17 W. R. 1010.

Where assignees of a bankrupt, who was lessee of pasture land, being chosen on the 8th of the month, allowed his cows to remain upon the demised premises till the 10th, and ordered them to be milked there:—Held, that they thereby became tenants to the lessor; and, the cows being removed on the 10th to avoid a distress for arrears of rent, that he had a right to follow and distrain them under 11 Geo. 2, c. 19. Welch v. Myers, 4 Camp. 368.

A coachmaker, who was tenant from year to year of premises, and had several coaches on hire, became bankrupt, and his assignees entered upon the premises to keep the coaches in repair, in pursuance of the bankrupt's contract; in August the bankrupt's effects were sold, and the key of the premises delivered to the bankrupt, but the assignees paid the rent up to the Michaelmas following. In an action by the landlord for a quarter's rent due the Christmas following:—Held, that the assignees were liable. Ansell v. Robson, 2 C. & J. 610.

Where assignees enter upon and take possession of leasehold property, they become chargeable with the covenants in the lease, although the bankrupt's effects were upon those premises, and the assignees delivered up the keys immediately after the effects were sold. Hanson v. Stevenson, 1 B. & A. 303.

Assignees of a bankrupt, lessee of an hotel, upon the bankruptcy closed the hotel, with the exception of the tap, which was occupied by a third party, tenant to the bankrupt before the bankruptcy. He was supplied, by order of the assignees, with beer and spirits, at a slight advance over cost price, he keeping the proceeds of the business for himself, and the profit on the sale to him being credited to the bankrupt's estate. The licence of the tavern was renewed in the bankrupt's name by the assignees. A distress was put in upon the premises on two occasions by the lessor; and the assignees, after asking for time, paid rent and costs of distress, for the purpose, as they stated, of saving the furniture, which was afterwards removed from the premises by their order. On their being threatened with ejectment for breaches of covenant, their attorneys said they would resist the ejectment. The tap was afterwards closed by their order:—Held, that these facts did not show an election to take the lease. Goodwin v. Noble, 8 El. & Bl. 587; 27 L. J., Q. B. 204; 4 Jur., N. S., 208.

The assignee of a bankrupt lessee, chosen on the 15th of November, kept the bankrupt in the premises, carrying on the business for the benefit of the creditors, until April following, and himself occasionally superintended; but on the 23rd December disclaimed the lease by letter to the landlord:—Held, that notwithstanding such disclaimer he had elected to accept the lease by using the premises for the benefit of the creditors. Clarke v. Hume, R. & M. 207.

— Payment of Rent.—Where the assignee of a bankrupt, on being applied to, replied, that if he could not let it by the next quarter-day, he would give up the property, and continued in and paid rent until that time:—Held, that it was an assent. Broome v. Robinson, 7 East, 339.

— Payment of Rent to avoid Distress.—Assignees of a bankrupt, having allowed his effects to remain on the premises occupied by him nearly a twelvemonth after the bankruptcy, for the purpose of preventing a distress, paid the arrears of the rent due, at the same time intimating to the landlord that they did not mean to take the lease unless it could be advantageously disposed of; the effects were soon after sold, and removed from the premises; the lease was at the same time put up to sale by order of the assignees, but there were no bidders for it; they omitted to return the key to the landlord for nearly four months after; however, they were not asked for it, and they in no other way made use of the premises:—Held, that they were not, under these circumstances, liable to the landlord as assignees of the lease. Wheeler v. Bramah, 3 Camp. 340; 1 Rose, 363.

— Exercising Acts of Ownership.—A bankrupt, at the time of his bankruptcy, in 1847, had deposited the lease of a house with the plaintiff as a security for advances. In 1859, a year and a half after the bankrupt's death, the plaintiff obtained an order from the Court of Bankruptcy for a sale of the house, and that if the amount of his debt was not realized at the sale, the assignees should assign the lease to the plaintiff. That amount was not realized, and in 1860 the assignees, in pursuance of the order, assigned the lease to the plaintiff. In ejectment by him against the widow of the bankrupt:—Held, that, assigning the lease to the plaintiff was an acceptance of the lease by the assignees; but that it was a question for a jury whether they had accepted it within a reasonable time. Mackley v. Pattenden, 30 L. J., Q. B. 225; 7 Jur., N. S. 1056; 4 L. T. 285; 9 W. R. 601.

Where assignees of a bankrupt who was possessed of a term, part of which he had underlet to another, released such under-tenant, and on being afterwards asked by the lessor to elect, refused to take the original lease:—Held, that this did not amount to an acceptance by them, and that they were not liable as assignees of the term. Hill v. Dobie, 2 Moore, 342; 8 Taunt. 325.

Endeavouring to Effect a Sale.—Assignees have a right to do reasonable acts to ascertain the value of property. Hope v. Booth, 1 B. & Ad. 505.

Assignees are not concluded by putting up premises to sell; they may make an experiment to see if the lease is beneficial; but where they put up the premises to auction, and found a purchaser, and received a deposit, but the contract of sale afterwards went off, without the assignees shewing any reason why they did not enforce the sale:—Held, that they were liable to the payment of rent, as assignees of all the estate and interest of the bankrupt in the premises. Hastings v. Wilson, Holt, 290.

But the mere fact that the assignees advertised and put the estate up to sale (without stating themselves to be the owners or possessed thereof), they never having in fact taken possession of the premises, and there being no bidder, and the premises were not sold, is no more than an experiment to ascertain the value of the lease, and not an assent on the part of the assignees. Turner v. Richardson, 7 East, 335; 3 Smith, 330.

If a bankrupt has a lease of premises, and also a reversionary interest in them, and his assignees sell his estate and reversionary interest in the premises, it amounts to an acceptance of the lease by the assignees. Page v. Godden, 2 Stark. 309.

If the assignee holds the lease from December to May, and puts a person into possession, with instructions to let the premises, and several applications are made by parties desirous to take them, but they remain unlet, and on the landlord calling upon the assignee for payment of rent, he says he will pay it if he can make anything by the house; and the jury find that this is only a conditional acceptance of the lease, and that he has not retained it an unreasonable time, the court will not disturb the verdict. Lindsay v. Limbert, 12 Moore, 209; 2 C. & P. 526.

If the assignees so act as to make the property of less value to the landlord, and as if the property were vested in them, it is said to be an election. Carter v. Warne, 4 C. & P. 191.

If a sale takes place on the premises of the stock-in-trade, and the house and shop fixtures, and the catalogue states that on the same day will be sold the valuable lease of the premises, with commanding shop, held for an unexpired term of sixteen years from Lady-day preceding, at the low rent of 20*l.* per annum, and the catalogue describes the sale to be made without reserve, and contains a list of fixtures, some of them belonging to the landlord, and some put up by the bankrupt, and the lease is bought in, but all the fixtures are sold, and the premises much injured by their being taken down and carried away, it is a taking possession.

Election—What Covenants Assignees bound to enter into.]—A., before his bankruptcy, agreed to take a lease of a cotton mill, and entered into possession. After his bankruptcy, one of his assignees took possession, and agreed to accept the lease, a draft of which was sent to the assignees, containing covenants personally binding on them during the whole of the term, and one in particular, to prevent them from assigning without the licence of the lessor:—Held, that the assignees were not bound to accept of such a lease, and even if they were, that the Court of Review had no jurisdiction to compel specific performance of the agreement. Lucas, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & Chit. 144; 1 Mont. & Ayr. 93.

B. Under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869.

Leaseholds vest in Trustee on Appointment.]

—Under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, ss. 17, 23, 24, the leaseholds of a liquidating debtor vest in the trustee on his appointment, subject to his power of disclaimer; and if there is no valid disclaimer the trustee is personally liable for the rent accruing due after his appointment and on the covenants of the lease. Wilson v. Wallant, 5 Ex. D. 155; 49 L. J., Ex. 437; 42 L. T. 375; 28 W. R. 597; 44 J. P. 475.

Landlord's Right to Distrain for Rent.]

—When the trustee continues in possession of premises of which the liquidating debtor was tenant, not having disclaimed the lease, the landlord has a right, as against the trustee, to distrain, without obtaining leave from the Court of Bankruptcy, for rent accruing due after the commencement of the liquidation, even though it is rent which, under the terms of the lease, is payable in advance. Hale, Ex parte, Binns, In re, 1 Ch. D. 285; 45 L. J., Bk. 21; 33 L. T. 706; 24 W. R. 300.

Liability of Trustee for Rent.]—A trustee who takes actual possession of leasehold property of the bankrupt, and does not, when called upon by the landlord so to do, disclaim the lease in the way provided by s. 23 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, is personally liable for the rent which accrues due after he takes possession. Dressler, Ex parte, Solomon, In re, 9 Ch. D. 252; 48 L. J., Bk. 20; 39 L. T. 377; 27 W. R. 144—C. A.

Sect. 35 only gives the landlord a right of proof for the proportionate part of the rent up to the date of the adjudication, but does not relieve the trustee from his personal liability. Ib.

The leasehold estate of a bankrupt or debtor liquidating his affairs by arrangement vests absolutely in the trustee upon his appointment, and he has no right of election to accept or decline the leases, his only remedy being by disclaimer; and if he neglects or is unable to disclaim, he becomes personally liable in respect of the covenants contained in the leases as from the date of his appointment: but he is not liable for any breach of covenant happening before his appointment. The plaintiff demised to M. a wharf for twenty-one years: the lease contained covenants for rent and repairs by the lessee. M. deposited the lease with S. as security for a debt. M. filed a petition for liquidation on the 8th of December, 1880, and the defendant was appointed trustee on the 3rd of January, 1881. The defendant never took possession of the wharf; but he negotiated with S. for the assignment of the lease to him: the negotiations proved abortive. The plaintiff served the defendant with a notice requiring him to disclaim; but the defendant failed to do this. The plaintiff then brought the present action to recover two quarters' rent, due respectively on the 25th of December, 1880, and on the 25th of March, 1881, and damages for breach of the covenant to repair:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover from the defendant the quarter's rent falling due on the 25th of December, 1880, because the defendant was not appointed trustee until the 3rd of January, 1881; but that the defendant was personally liable for the quarter's rent due on the 25th of March, 1881, and for breach of the covenant to repair, on the grounds, first, that by virtue of his appointment as trustee all the property of the liquidating debtor vested in him without any election on his part; and, secondly, if an election on his part was necessary, he had, by his conduct, elected to accept the lease. Titterton v. Cooper, 9 Q. B. D. 473; 51 L. J., Q. B. 472; 46 L. T. 870; 30 W. R. 866—C. A.

—Landlord's Remedy.]—A debtor filed a liquidation petition on the 14th of September, and on the 3rd of October a trustee was appointed. On the 26th of November the creditors resolved that the trustee should sell the debtor's estate for a sum sufficient to pay the creditors 4*s.* in the pound; that the debtor's discharge should be granted on the filing of the trustee's certificate that the provisions of this scheme of settlement had been complied with; and that the close of the liquidation and the release of the trustee should take place on and from the 28th of January. On the 4th of January these resolutions were approved by the court. The debtor was tenant of some business premises and some chattels for a term which expired on the 25th of December. The trustee took possession of the premises and the chattels, and remained in possession of them until the expiration of the term, but he did not pay the landlord the quarter's rent which fell due on the 25th of December. On the 26th of February the landlord applied to the Court of Bankruptcy for an order directing the trustee to pay him that quarter's rent. There was evidence that several applications had been made to the trustee for the rent in the course of January, and that he had said that he had left money with the debtor to pay it:—Held, that either the landlord's remedy was a personal one against the trustee, in which case the Court of Bankruptcy had no jurisdiction in the matter, or that, if there was a remedy in the Court of Bankruptcy, the trustee had done nothing more than commit a default in the administration of the assets, from liability for which he was protected by the release, there being nothing to shew that there had been any fraud in obtaining it. Carter, Ex parte, Ware, In re, 8 Ch. D. 731; 39 L. T. 185; 27 W. R. 106—C. A.

γ. When Bankruptcy works a Forfeiture.

Proviso to be Void in case of Bankruptcy.]—Property may be limited or leased to a man to go over or to revert back in the event of his bankruptcy. Brandon v. Robinson, 1 Rose, 197; S. C., nom. Brandon, Ex parte, 18 Ves. 429.

If a lease to a trader contains a proviso that it shall be void if he becomes bankrupt, the term does not pass to his assignees, but determines altogether upon that event taking place. Roe d. Hunter v. Galliers, 2 T. R. 133.

But, to prevent it passing, there must be an express proviso to that effect. Doe d. Goodbehers v. Betan, 3 M. & S. 353; 2 Rose, 456.

An estate was devised to A. for life, determinable in case he should be declared a bankrupt, or do or suffer anything whereby the estate would, if belonging to him absolutely, pass to any other person. At the time of the testator's death there was an adjudication of bankruptcy subsisting against A., but before any rent accrued due in respect of the devised estate, it was annulled with the consent of creditors:—Held, that the clause of forfeiture did not take effect. White v. Chitty, 1 L. R., Eq. 372; 35 L. J., Ch. 343.

Covenant not to Assign or Underlet without Licence.]—The usual covenant, not to let, &c., will not prevent a lease from passing to the assignees. Doe d. Cheere v. Smith, 1 Marsh. 359; 5 Taunt. 795; 2 Rose, 280.

A. granted a lease to B., which contained a covenant that B., his executors or administrators, without mentioning assigns, should not underlet without the consent of the lessor: B. became bankrupt, and his assignees assigned the premises to C.; B. obtained his certificate, and C. re-assigned the premises to him, after which he underlet them to another person:—Held, that B. having been discharged at the time of his bankruptcy from all covenants in the lease, by 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 19, the underletting by him, which was in the character of assignee, was no forfeiture of the lease. Id.

A proviso in a lease, that the lessee, his executors or administrators, shall not assign without the lessor's consent in writing, did not prevent the commissioners from assigning the lease to the assignees without such consent. Doe d. Goodbehers v. Betan, 3 M. & S. 353; 2 Rose, 456.

When a lease contained covenants not to assign or underlet, with a proviso that in case the tenant should voluntarily or otherwise lose possession of the farm, the lessor might re-enter:—Held, that the assignees in bankruptcy of the tenant (the lessor having accepted the assignees) were in by contract with the lessor, and not by operation of law, and were, therefore, bound by the covenants in the lease. Dyke v. Taylor, 2 Giff. 566; 6 Jur., N. S. 1329; 3 L. T. 530. Affirmed, 30 L. J., Ch. 281; 7 Jur., N. S. 583; 3 L. T. 717; 9 W. R. 408.

The assignees, after an injunction restraining them from parting with possession without the lessor's consent, put into possession an agent, who cultivated the farm with his own moneys, receiving no wages from the assignees:—Held, an invasion of the injunction. Id.

In cases of bankruptcy, the assent of the lessor was presumed in law to have been given to the assignment of the premises by the commissioners. Wadham v. Marloice, 2 Chit. 600; 4 Dougl. 54; 8 East, 314, n.; 1 H. Bl. 438, n.

—Composition Deed—Effect of Execution.]

—A lessee, who covenanted not to assign the demised premises without the consent in writing of the lessor, executed a deed, under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 42, whereby he assigned all his property to trustees for the benefit of his creditors:—Held, that the assignment was a forfeiture of the lease. Holland v. Cole, 1 H. & C. 67; 31 L. J., Ex. 481; 8 Jur., N. S. 1066; 6 L. T. 503; 10 W. R. 563.

Disclaimer of Leaseholds.]—See post, DISCLAIMER OF ONEROUS PROPERTY.

ii. Growing Crops, Fixtures and Goodwill.

Growing Crops out by Mortgagor's Trustee after Notice.]—A mortgagor presented a petition for liquidation of his estate, and the trustee appointed went into possession of the mortgaged lands and commenced cutting the growing crops. The mortgagee then put a man in possession and required the trustee to give up possession, which he declined to do. In an action against the trustee an injunction was granted restraining him from cutting crops and from removing the crops cut after the demand made by the mortgagee. Ragnall v. Villar, 12 Ch. D. 812; 48 L. J., Ch. 695; 28 W. R. 242.

Crops when severed from Land.]—Though a bill of sale under the Bills of Sale Act, 1854, does not require registration in respect of growing crops, yet when the crops are subsequently severed by the grantor they become personal chattels, and, if possession has not been taken of them by the grantee before the commencement of the bankruptcy of the grantor, they will pass to the trustee in the bankruptcy. Brantom v. Griffiths (1 C. P. D. 349; 2 C. P. D. 212) distinguished; National Mercantile Bank, Ex parte, Phillips, In re, 16 Ch. D. 104; 50 L. J., Ch. 231; 44 L. T. 265; 29 W. R. 227—C. A.

Fixtures—Forfeiture of Lease—Assignee's Right to Enter and Remove Fixtures.]

—A lessee covenanted to erect a steam-engine, machinery, and buildings proper for carrying on the business of a shipwright, on the land demised, and to leave the same for the lessors at the expiration or other sooner determination of the term, "it being by the indenture declared, that all steam and other engines, machinery, &c., set up upon the premises at any time during the term for the purpose of carrying on the trade of a shipwright, together with all fixtures, should not be removed therefrom, but should, upon the expiration or other sooner determination of the term, belong to the landlords, and not to the tenant, without any payment being made to him for the same." The lease then went on to provide "that the last-mentioned stipulation should not be construed to apply to any machinery or other articles which might be erected or set up on the demised premises by the lessee during the term, for any other purpose than that of carrying on the business of a shipwright; but that it should be lawful for the lessee at any time during the term, or at the expiration thereof, to remove and take away all such last-mentioned machinery from the premises. The lease contained a further proviso, that in the event of the lessee becoming bankrupt it should be lawful for the lessors to re-enter, and upon such entry to take possession of, have, and use as their own property, without paying anything for the same, all steam and other engines which should be found on the premises, and which should be used or employed in or about the business of a shipbuilder thereon." The lessee having become bankrupt, the lessors re-entered for the forfeiture:—Held, that the assignees of the lessee were entitled to enter for the purpose of removing the fixtures other than those set up for the shipbuilding business, and to a reasonable time for that purpose. Stansfeld v. Portsmouth (Mayor, &c.), 4 C. B., N. S. 120; 27 L. J., C. P. 124; 4 Jur., N. S. 440.

Goodwill of Mortgaged Public-house.—The goodwill of a mortgaged public-house is not a personal goodwill, but belongs to the mortgagor's trustee in liquidation as against the mortgagee. Punnett, Ex parte, Kitchen, In re, 16 Ch. D. 226; 50 L. J., Ch. 212; 44 L. T. 226; 29 W. R. 129—C. A.

Tenant's Fixtures.—A mortgage (by way of underlease) executed in 1877 of a leasehold public-house contained no express assignment of the fixtures. There was a clause by which, "for the purpose of better securing the punctual payment of the interest" on the mortgage debt, the mortgagor attorned tenant to the mortgagee of the mortgaged property at a yearly rent equal to the amount of a year's interest. And there was a proviso that the mortgagee might, at any time after the day when the first instalment of rent should become due, enter upon the property and determine the tenancy, without giving the mortgagor any notice to quit. Two years afterwards the mortgagor became bankrupt. The mortgagee had taken no step to determine the tenancy:—Held, that, as the tenancy was created only for the purpose of giving an additional security for the payment of the interest, the mortgagee did not cease to be a mortgagee because he was made a landlord, and that he was entitled as against the trustee in the bankruptcy of the mortgagor to trade fixtures which had been annexed to the public-house after the execution of the mortgage. Id.

Fixtures put up by previous Tenant—Sign-board of Inn.—At the Royal Oak Inn, Bettws-y-Coed, there was, in 1847, a signboard affixed to the wall of the house by staples. The inn was then held by E. R. as tenant from year to year. In the same year David Cox, who was a friend of E. R., went up a ladder and painted on the old signboard a picture of an oak tree, with horsemen riding underneath. The picture so painted remained as the sign of the house. In 1849 Cox retouched and varnished the picture. In 1866 owing to alterations in the house, the picture was taken down and placed, first in a sitting-room and afterwards (being framed and glazed) in the hall of the inn, where it was affixed to the wall. In 1861 E. R. died, and was succeeded in the tenancy of the house, by his son, R. R., who took a lease of the house from Lord W. D. for twenty-one years, containing a covenant to surrender the house and fixtures at the end of the term. In 1863 R. R. died, having devised all his property to his wife, who subsequently married D. X. In August, 1871, D. X. surrendered the lease to Lady W. D., who on the same day granted him a lease for fifty-eight years, containing a like covenant to surrender. D. X. died in 1876, and his widow thereupon conveyed all her interest in the inn (expressly reserving the signboard) to M. A. T., who, by arrangement, retained the signboard at the inn for two years. At the end of the two years Mrs. D. X. sent for the signboard, but Lady W. D.'s agent forbade its removal, and it remained in the hall of the inn till the filing of a petition for liquidation by M. A. T.:—Held, that M. A. T. had no right of property in the signboard; that it was not a chattel of which reputed ownership could be predicated, and that, as against M. A. T. and her trustee in liquidation, Lady W. D. had a clear right of preventing the removal of the fixture. Willoughby D'Eresby (Baroness) or Sheen, Ex parte, Thomas, In re, 44 L. T. 781; 29 W. R. 527. Reversing S. C., 43 L. T. 638; 29 W. R. 248.

iii. Shares in Companies holding Real Estate.

Where a company was formed by act of parliament for the purchase of lands to make a canal, and the act declared that the shares "shall be deemed personal estate, and shall be transmissible as such":—Held, that though the profits arose out of land, the shares were personal property, passing as such to the assignees, on the bankruptcy of the proprietor. Lancaster Canal Company, Ex parte, 1 Deac. & Chit. 411; 1 Mont. 116; 1 Mont. & Bligh, 94; S. P., Lawrence, Ex parte, 1 De Gex, 269.

But shares in the Vauxhall Bridge Company, who are seised of a real estate, were not within the 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11. Vauxhall Bridge Company, Ex parte, 1 Glyn & J. 101.

3. THINGS IN ACTION.

Unliquidated Damages in respect of Contract.]

—Assignees may maintain an action for unliquidated damages, which have accrued before the bankruptcy by non-performance of a contract. Wright v. Fairfield, 2 B. & Ad. 727.

Reversionary Interests.—After the appointment of assignees under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 141, an assignment for value by a bankrupt of a reversionary interest cannot prevail against the right of the assignees. Coombe, In re, 1 Giff. 91; 5 Jur., N. S. 784; 7 W. R. 609.

Chose in Action of Wife before Marriage.]

—Assignees of a bankrupt cannot, in their names alone, maintain an action on a chose in action (e. g., a promissory note) made to the wife of a bankrupt before her marriage. Sherington v. Yates, 1 D. & L. 1032; 12 M. & W. 853; 13 L. J., Ex. 249—Ex. Ch. Overruling 11 M. & W. 42; 2 D., N. S. 803; 12 L. J., Ex. 216.

In right of Wife.—A right of entry vested in husband and wife in right of the wife passes to the assignees of the husband upon his bankruptcy. Mitchell v. Hughes, 6 Bing. 689; 4 M. & P. 577.

Contract for Personal Services.—A. agreed in writing with B. & C. on behalf of themselves and D., as partners in trade, to serve them, B. and C., and the survivor of them, for seven years, as their foreman, and not to engage in trade on his own account during that period without their consent; and B. and C. agreed to pay him wages after the rate of 3*l.* 3*s.* per week, so long as he should serve them faithfully:—Held, that the right of action in respect of the damages or penalty having accrued before the bankruptcy of B., and the damages relating rather to the property than to the person, feelings or character of B., the right of action in respect of the damages passed to the assignees of B. Beckham v. Drake (in error), 2 H. L. Cas. 579; 11 M. & W. 315; 12 L. J., Ex. 486; 13 Jur. 921.

Damages for Misrepresentation.—To a declaration for a fraudulent misrepresentation, whereby the plaintiff was induced to pay 2,000*l.*, and sustained great loss, was adjudicated a bankrupt, suffered personal annoyance, and was injured in his character and credit, the defendant, except as to the claim in respect of the adjudication, and of the remainder of the personal damage, pleaded that before action the plaintiff had been adjudicated bankrupt; that the loss sustained was a pecuniary loss, and that the right to sue for it passed to his assignees:—Held, that the only damage recoverable was a direct pecuniary loss, the right to sue for which passed to the assignees, and therefore that the plea was a good answer to the whole declaration, and might have been so pleaded. Hodgson v. Sidney, 1 L. R., Ex. 313; 35 L. J., Ex. 182; 14 W. R. 923; 4 H. & C. 492.

Interest.—Assignees of a bankrupt banker are entitled to interest accruing after the bankruptcy on the overdrawn accounts of the customers of the bank. Pott v. Bevan, 1 C. & K. 335; 7 M. & G. 604; 8 Scott, N. R., 319; 13 L. J., C. P. 187; 8 Jur. 560.

Money payable in consideration of Partnership.—A sole trader having agreed, in consideration of a sum payable by instalments, to take two persons into partnership with him for a period of eighteen years, and having become bankrupt five months after the commencement of the partnership, when only one instalment was due, his assignees are entitled at the respective periods to receive the remaining instalments. Akhurst v. Jackson, 1 Swans, 85.

Right to Indemnity.—Where there is an implied duty on the part of a lessee to indemnify his under-tenant from the consequences of the non-performance of his covenants with the superior landlord, for breach of which an action would lie, and the under-tenant's goods are seized under a distress for rent by the superior landlord, the injury resulting to the under-tenant from the distress gives a right of action to his assignees. Hancock v. Caffyn, 1 M. & Scott, 521; 8 Bing. 359.

Amount of Damages.—H., before his bankruptcy, hired a carriage of M., and let it to the defendant; the defendant sent it back to H. damaged; M. repaired it with the assent of H., and (H. having become bankrupt) proved the amount due for repairs under his commission:—Held, that his assignee had a right of action against the defendant, although his estate paid no dividend, but for nominal damages only. Porter v. Vorley, 9 Bing. 93; 2 M. & Scott, 141.

For Breach of Agreement to sell Property in Consideration of Payment of Debts.—A. & S., being traders in embarrassed circumstances, sold their business to the defendant upon condition that he should pay certain debts owing by them. This he failed to do, and left a balance of 1,750*l.* unpaid to the creditors of A. & S. A. & S. afterwards liquidated their affairs by arrangement under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and the plaintiff having been appointed trustee, brought an action for breach of contract:—Held, that he was entitled to recover the sum of 1,750*l.*, and not merely nominal damages. Porter v. Vorley (9 Bing. 93) disapproved of. Ashdown v. Ingamells, 5 Ex. D. 280; 43 L. T. 424—C. A.

Claim against Crown.—Y., having taken proceedings in the Court of Costa Rica for the recovery of two cargoes of goods, the British vice-consul interfered, and obtained an order for the suspension of the suit. He thereupon applied for compensation to the crown. Before and after these acts of the vice-consul, Y. was adjudicated a bankrupt:—Held, that he could not maintain his claim, as it was not in respect of a mere personal wrong, but affected the right to property, and therefore became vested in his assignees. Young, In re, 12 W. R. 537—P. C.

Debentures.—A debenture of a joint stock company, by which the company undertakes to pay a sum of money, with interest, and charge its undertaking and property with the payment, is a chose in action within the meaning of s. 15, sub-s. 5, of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. Pryce, In re, Rensburg, Ex parte, 4 Ch. D. 685; 36 L. T. 117; 25 W. R. 432.

An assignment of such a debenture by indorsement in blank confers a good title on the assignee as against the trustee in bankruptcy of the assignor, notwithstanding that the assignee gives no notice to the company until after the commencement of the bankruptcy. Id.

Trespass to Goods.—An action for seizing and taking the plaintiff's goods, under a false and unfounded claim of a debt, per quod he was annoyed and prejudiced in his business, and believed by his customers to be insolvent, and his lodgers left his house, does not pass to his assignees on his bankruptcy. Brewer v. Dew or Drew, 11 M. & W. 625; 1 D. & L. 383; 12 L. J., Ex. 448; 7 Jur. 953.

Trespass to Dwelling-House.—Action for breaking and entering the plaintiff's dwelling-house, and creating a noise and disturbance and damaging the doors, and seizing his goods and exposing them to sale on the premises without his leave, whereby he and his family were disturbed and annoyed in the possession of the same, and he was prevented carrying on his business. Plea, that the plaintiff became bankrupt after action brought:—Held, that the primary personal injury to the bankrupt being the principal and essential cause of action, it still remained in the bankrupt, and did not pass to his assignee; and, therefore, that the plea was bad. Rogers v. Spence (in error), 12 C. & F. 700; S. C. in Ex. Ch. 13 M. & W. 571; 15 L. J., Ex. 49; and in Ex. 2 D., N. S. 999; 11 M. & W. 191; 12 L. J., Ex. 252.

Trespass to Land—Assignees not having made their Election.—A right of action of trespass quare clausum fregit, is maintainable by a tenant from year to year, who has become bankrupt after the committing the trespass, and before the commencement of the suit; and does not pass to the assignees by the assignment, unless they interfere; as the bankrupt may sue as a trustee for, and has a good title against all persons but, them. Clark v. Calvert, 3 Moore, 96; 8 Taunt. 742.

Seduction of Debtor's Daughter.—A right of action for seduction of a man's daughter, per quod servitium amisit, does not pass to his assignees in the event of his bankruptcy. Howard v. Crowther, 8 M. & W. 601; 5 Jur. 91.

Policies of Insurance.—A policy of insurance, effected by a bankrupt upon his own life at an annual premium, passes to his assignees, however small the apparent value of it may be at the time of his bankruptcy, and although there are considerable arrears of premium due upon it; and if, instead of delivering it up as part of his effects, he secretly assigns it to another person, who pays the arrears of the premium, and upon the death of the bankrupt receives the sum insured, this sum, deducting the amount of the arrears so paid, may be recovered by the assignees as money received to their use. Schondler v. Wacc, 1 Camp. 487. But see Grant v. Hill, 4 Taunt. 380; and Wills v. Wells, 2 Moore, 247; 8 Taunt. 264.

A policy of life assurance is a thing in action, and is therefore excepted from the operation of the reputed ownership clause, s. 15, of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. Ibbetson, Ex parte, Moore, In re, 8 Ch. D. 519; 39 L. T. 1; 26 W. R. 843—C. A.

Proviso for Avoidance on Suicide of Assured.—B., a merchant domiciled at Valparaiso, effected an insurance on his life with an insurance company in London. The policy was to be void if the insured committed suicide, but if any third party acquired a bona fide interest therein by assignment, or by legal or equitable lien, for a valuable consideration, or as security for money, the assurance should nevertheless to the extent of such interest be valid and of full effect. While the policy was in force, B. declared himself bankrupt, and by that act itself made, according to the law of Valparaiso, a cession of all his property to the court before whom the declaration was made, and the property thereupon vested by operation of law in the escribano or official notary of the court. After this, B. committed suicide. At a meeting of creditors after his death, creditors were duly appointed assignees to the estate, which thereupon, by operation of law, shifted from the escribano to them as assignees. In an action by them as such assignees to recover the amount insured by the policy:—Held, that they were not third parties, having a bona fide interest by assignment, or by legal or equitable lien for a valuable consideration, or as security for money within the meaning of the exception. Jackson v. Forster, 1 El. & El. 463; 28 L. J., Q. B. 166; 5 Jur., N. S. 547. Affirmed, 1 El. & El. 470; 29 L. J., Q. B. 8; 5 Jur., N. S. 1247—Ex. Ch.

—Against Fire—Partners.—Utensils of trade being property of one partner, and insured in his name, were left in the order and disposition of the partners. A fire happened, by which they were consumed. After the fire, a joint commission issued against the partners. The insurance money was paid to the joint assignees:—Held, that the insurance money did not pass by the assignment under the joint commission. Smith, Ex parte, 3 Madd. 63; Buck, 149.

Chose in Action of Bankrupt—Sale by Trustee—Notice under Judicature Act, 1873, s. 25, sub-s. 6.—An agreement made between A. and D., not under seal, stipulated that until the lease of certain premises thereby agreed to be granted should be executed, D., his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns should be bound by all the covenants set forth in the agreement, amongst which was a covenant that D., his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns should leave the whole of the premises and fixtures then in and intended to be fixed in or about the messuage and premises in a perfect and tenable state of repair at the expiration of the term therein mentioned, or sooner determination thereof. No lease by deed was ever granted in accordance with the agreement, but D. and his representatives entered into possession under the agreement and continued therein until the expiration of the term for which it was intended the lease should be granted. During the currency of the term mentioned in the agreement A. was adjudicated a bankrupt, and his trustee, acting in accordance with the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, sold and assigned to the plaintiff all the property of the bankrupt. In an action for breach of the contract to repair:—Held, that the contract in the agreement was binding upon the defendant, the personal representative of D., and that the right of action in respect of the breach of the contract was a chose in action of the bankrupt, which passed under the assignment to the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff was not bound to have given notice of the assignment under s. 25, sub-s. 6, of the Judicature Act, 1873. Gibbon v. Dudgeon, 45 J. P. 748.

Bond assigned before Bankruptcy—Right to Sue remains in Bankrupt.—A money bond, assigned by the obligee to creditors to secure a debt of larger amount, does not pass to assignees under a fiat against him, although the assignment is expressed to be for further security, and contains a proviso to defeat it on payment of the debt. Dangerfield v. Thomas, 9 A. & E. 292; 1 P. & D. 287.

4. BANKRUPT'S BOOKS.

Assignment of Books of Account—Who entitled to.—The 110th of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1870, does not apply to an assignment of the books of account of a bankrupt before the bankruptcy; consequently the trustee of the bankrupt assignor is not entitled to the possession of the books of account, which, long before the bankruptcy, the bankrupt had assigned to a third party for value. But, semble, he is entitled to inspect the books for the purpose of aiding him in the administration of the bankrupt's property. Good or Wood, Ex parte, West, In re, 21 Ch. D. 868; 51 L. J., Ch. 831; 46 L. T. 823.

5. BILLS OF EXCHANGE.

Accommodation Bills.—A bill payable to the order of the drawer, and accepted for his accommodation, does not pass under a commission against the payee, and he may indorse it after an act of bankruptcy; and his indorsee for a valuable consideration has a right of action. Wallace v. Hardacre, 1 Camp. 46, 179. And see Willis v. Freeman, 12 East, 656.

Bills transferred before Bankruptcy—Incomplete Indorsement.—The payee of a bill, who is a trader, and has delivered it over for a valuable consideration, and forgotten to indorse it, may indorse the bill after he has become a bankrupt. Smith v. Pickering, Peake, 50.

Assignees were ordered to indorse a bill which a bankrupt, before his bankruptcy, had transferred to the petitioner for a valuable consideration, but without indorsement: the indorsement to be special, so as to secure the assignees from personal liability. Mowbray, Ex parte, 1 J. & W. 428.

Bills discounted by Banker.—Where bankers discount a bill for a customer, giving him credit for the amount of the bill, and debiting him with the discount, the bill becomes the property of the bankers, and, upon their bankruptcy, their assignees may maintain an action upon it, although there is no balance due to them from the customer. Carstairs v. Bates, 3 Camp. 301.

Short Bills in Bankers' Hands.—Short bills in the hands of a banker are specifically the property of the remitter, subject to a lien for the balance of the account. Routon, Ex parte, 17 Ves. 431; 1 Rose, 15; S. P., Waring, Ex parte, 19 Ves. 349.

And are to be delivered up, subject to the bankrupt's lien, and indemnifying the estate against the engagements on account of the party claiming them. Ib.; S. P., Buchanan, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 280; 19 Ves. 201.

A short bill in the hands of a bankrupt as agent, and not by consent or the course of dealing, is considered as cash; to be returned, or the proceeds received after the bankruptcy, though the bill was due previously, and retained so as to discharge the indorser. Solleres, Ex parte, 18 Ves. 229; 1 Rose, 155.

A customer paying bills not due into his bankers' in the country, whose custom it was to credit their customers to the amount of such bills, if approved, as cash (charging interest), is entitled to recover back such bills in specie from the bankers upon their becoming bankrupt: the balance of his cash account, independent of such bills, being in his favour at the time of the bankruptcy; and if payment be afterwards received upon such bills by the assignees, they are liable to refund it to the customer, in an action for money had and received. Giles v. Perkins, 9 East, 12.

Where bills are paid in at a bankers' as short bills (i.e., bills which the bankers are to present when due, and carry the proceeds to account), and the bankers afterwards become bankrupts; if before the choice of assignees some of the bills were paid, the customer cannot recover the value of such bills as were so paid, in an action of trover against the assignees. Tennant v. Strachan, 4 C. & P. 31; M. & M. 377.

— Sent to Bankers' London Agents.—Where a country banker has short bills of his customer in his possession, and sends them to his London bankers, and becomes bankrupt, the short bills remaining in that condition continue the property of the holder; but the London bankers acquire a lien on the bills, and they are a security to them for the general balance due to them from the country banker. The assets available to the London bankers must be marshalled, and the residue, after satisfying the London bankers' lien, is payable among the short bill holders equally. Froggatt, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 322; 7 Jur. 910. See Burkworth, Ex parte, 2 De G. & J. 194; 27 L. J., Bk. 5.

If A. deposits bills, indorsed in blank, with B. his banker, to be received when due, and the latter raises money upon them, by pledging them with C. another banker, and afterwards becomes bankrupt, A. cannot maintain trover against C. for the bills. Collins v. Martin, 1 B. & P. 648; 2 Esp. 520.

— What are Short Bills.—Whether bills are to be considered short or not, does not depend on the particular mode of entering them in the banker's books, but upon the habits of dealing between the parties, and all the circumstances together. The mode of entering them is only evidence. Pearce, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 232; S. C., nom. Pease, Ex parte, 19 Ves. 15; S. P., Thompson, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Mac. 102.

A. was in the habit of indorsing and paying into his country banker, B.'s, hands bills not due, which were entered by B. in his pass-book, as bills to his credit to the full amount. By the custom of the bank, the customers were at liberty to draw for the amount of such bills immediately, and the bank was at liberty to pay away such bills as they thought fit. There was no evidence of A.'s knowledge of this custom, and A. swore that he never gave authority to B. to negotiate them, but deposited them only that B. might receive the value when at maturity; that he never drew on account of any bill till after it was due; that the balance of accounts, independently of the bills, was always in his favour; and that he never received more than one such bill (deposited by another customer) in answer to his cheques. B. having negotiated them to C. as a security for a debt, and B. becoming bankrupt before the bills were due:—Held, that they did not pass to B.'s assignees; and, therefore, that A. was entitled to be indemnified from the surplus security in the hands of C. Benson, Ex parte, 1 Deac. & Chit. 435; 1 Mont. & Bligh, 120.

Where a customer of a country banker was in the habit of indorsing and paying into his hands bills of exchange, which were never written short, but entered to the full amount in the pass-book, on the day they were paid in, and also in the books of the bank, to the credit of the customer, as "bills" (not as "cash"), and after such entry the customer was at liberty to draw to the full amount, by cheques, and the bankers became bankrupts, having in their possession several of the customer's bills so paid in: and the assignees having converted the same to their use:—Held, that the customer (who had a cash balance in his favour at the time of the bankruptcy) might maintain trover against the latter for the amount, there being no evidence that he had, in point of fact, agreed that, when the bills were paid in, they were to become the property of the bankers. Thompson v. Giles, 8 D. & R. 733; 2 B. & C. 422.

Undue bills of exchange were from time to time remitted to a banker by a customer, and indorsed to the banker. The course of dealing was that the bills were not entered short; but though they were distinguished in the account as bills, the full amounts were entered in the cash column under the dates on which the bills were paid into the bank, and the customer was at all times at liberty to draw cheques to the extent of the balance in his favour, as appearing on the account thus made out. Interest was allowed by the banker upon the bills only from the time when their amount was received:—Held, that, in the absence of evidence of the customer's acquiescing in or authorising the banker's treating the bills as his own, from the time of their being paid in they remained the property of the customer, subject to the lien of the banker for his cash balance; that the banker had no right to negotiate them unless the balance of the account was in his favour; and that on the bankruptcy of the banker, such of them as remained in his hands in specie did not pass to his assignees, but, subject to such lien as above mentioned, belonged to the customer. Barkworth, Ex parte, 2 De G. & J. 194; 27 L. J., Bk. 5; 4 Jur., N. S. 547.

B. deposited India bills with her bankers, specially indorsed by her, to receive the amount when due; the balance of her banking account (exclusive of the amount of the bills) being then in her favour, and continuing so up to the bankruptcy of the bankers. The bankers charged discount on the bills in their account with B., who might have drawn on them for the amount; it being the custom of the bankers to consider ordinary bills, so deposited, as cash. The bankers paid the bills away to a creditor, with whom the assignees afterwards settled an account, charging him with the amount of the bills, and receiving from him a balance due to the estate:—Held, that B. was entitled to be reimbursed the whole amount of the bills from the assignees. Bond, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 10.

Bankers refused to discount bills for a customer, but agreed that he should draw upon them in the usual way, depositing with them the bills. The bills were deposited accordingly, but the bankers forthwith discounted them with a London correspondent, who remitted them to a fourth party. The bankers having become bankrupt, and the fourth party agreeing to deal with the bills as the court should direct:—Held, that the customer was entitled to the bills, accounting for the amount paid in respect of his cheques upon the bankers, but that he was not entitled to be reimbursed in full a sum which he had paid to their London correspondent in satisfaction of the claims of the latter in respect of the bills. Edwards, Ex parte, 6 Jur. 877.

Bills held by Bankrupt in Right of Others.]—A merchant abroad sent drafts from time to time to his London correspondent for acceptance, under an authority and upon an understanding that the liabilities of the latter, in respect of such acceptances, should be covered by means of bills payable in London, to be remitted to him from time to time. The presumption is, until an agreement to the contrary is shewn, that the London correspondent was not intended to treat the bills so remitted as cash, or to discount them before maturity; and, therefore, two of such bills, which were existing in specie in his hands at the time of his bankruptcy, and were not then due, did not pass to his assignees. Jombart v. Woollett, 2 Mylne & C. 389.

Pledged Bills.]—C. being indebted to the defendants in a sum not yet payable, and pressed by them for security, handed to them a note by which C.'s debtor, S., promised to pay C. a sum exceeding C.'s debt to the defendants. This note was not payable to order, but C. indorsed it when he handed it over. Afterwards the defendants pressed C. to obtain negotiable paper from S. instead of the note, which they re-delivered to C. for that purpose. S. thereupon, after the time for C.'s paying the defendants had elapsed, took back the note, and accepted bills of exchange drawn by C. exceeding C.'s debt to the defendants, which bills C. desired him to give to the defendants. At the time of the acceptance C. intended to commit an act of bankruptcy, which S. knew, but the defendants did not know it. After the act of bankruptcy S. delivered the bills to the defendants. In trover, by C.'s assignees, for the bills, issue being joined on a plea of not possessed:—Held, that though S. was not agent for the defendants, the bills were not, at the time of the act of bankruptcy, in C.'s possession as reputed owner, with the consent of the true owners, within the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 72, merely as being in C.'s hands, inasmuch as they were subject to the same right as the note, which C. held only for a specific purpose as agent for the defendants. Belcher v. Campbell, 8 Q. B. 1; 15 L. J., Q. B. 11; 9 Jur. 1073.

But that, nevertheless, if S. did not know of the assignment by C. to the defendants of the debt due from S. to C., the assignment was not good as against the plaintiffs; and therefore, as against them, the defendants had no title, legal or equitable, to the note even while it remained in their hands, and consequently none to the bills. But that, if S. did know, the defendants were entitled to succeed on the issue. Ib.

A bill drawn on and accepted by C., and made payable to A., was deposited by A. with B., to secure a debt due from A. to B. A. afterwards became bankrupt:—Held, that B. was entitled to the bill, and to an order that the assignees might indorse it to him without recourse. Prior, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 586; 13 L. J., Bk. 15.

Bills indorsed to Bankrupt—Indorsement revoked before Delivery.]—A banker at Lyons posted a letter containing bills of exchange to D. in London, but before the departure of the mail he received a telegram from D., telling him to remit nothing. The banker accordingly sent to the post-office to reclaim his letter, which by the regulation of the French post-office he was entitled to do on complying with certain formalities. By mistake the formalities were not observed and the letter was forwarded to its destination. In the meantime D. had filed a petition for liquidation:—Held, that the property in the bills did not pass to the trustee. Cote, Ex parte, Devez, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 27; 43 L. J., Bk. 19; 29 L. T. 598; 22 W. R. 89.

6. GOODS APPROPRIATED TO MEET BILLS OF EXCHANGE.

A firm in Para, in South America, acted as agents for a firm in Liverpool for the purchase and shipment of goods. The course of dealing was as follows:—The Para firm raised money by the sale of bills of exchange, which they drew on the Liverpool firm, advising them in batches. They then shipped the goods and advised the Liverpool firm of the shipment, forwarding the bills of lading, which made the goods deliverable to the order of the Liverpool firm direct to them, and sent them an account debiting the invoice price of the goods and crediting the amount of some of the bills of exchange and parts of others, so that, interest being charged on both sides to the date of the account, the account exactly balanced. The Liverpool firm became insolvent, and at the time when they stopped payment large quantities of goods were on their way to them from the Para firm. Of the bills credited against the goods some were accepted but not paid, and others had not been accepted. The Para firm having also become insolvent, the trustees in whom their property was vested under the law of Para claimed the goods from the trustee in the Liverpool firm's liquidation, who had taken possession of the goods upon their arrival:—Held, that the relation of the consignors and consignees being that of agent and principal, the property in the goods passed to the Liverpool firm as soon as the goods were shipped and the bills of lading posted to the Liverpool firm, and that it so passed absolutely and not conditionally on the payment or acceptance of the bills of exchange, and that there was no reservation of any lien or charge upon the goods in favour of the consignors, and that, therefore, the trustee in liquidation was entitled to the goods. Banner, Ex parte, Tappenbeck, In re, 2 Ch. D. 278; 45 L. J., Bk. 75; 34 L. T. 199; 24 W. R. 476—C.A.

A firm in Ceylon employed a firm in England as their agents and factors, the course of business being that the Ceylon firm consigned cargoes to the English firm for sale on their account, and drew bills on the English firm against the consignments. Consignments of coffee having been made in this manner, and bills accepted by the English firm against them, the English firm pledged the coffee, together with certain securities of their own, with T., their broker, to secure a large debt due from them to him. The English firm became insolvent and executed a creditors' deed under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, and then T. sold the coffee (which produced more than sufficient to cover the bills drawn against it) and enough of the other securities to satisfy his debt:—Held, that the Ceylon firm was entitled, as against the English firm in liquidation, to have the remaining securities in T.'s hands marshalled, and to have a lien thereon for the balance due to them upon the coffee transaction. Alston, Ex parte, Holland, In re, 4 L. R., Ch. 168; 19 L. T. 542; 17 W. R. 266.

T. carried on business in America as T. & Co.; and also in partnership with M. at Liverpool, as T. & Co. (M. not being a partner in the firm of T. & Co.). On the eve of insolvency T. remitted bills to T. & Co. (represented by M.) in England, with a direction that the proceeds should be specifically appropriated to meet certain bills upon which P. would otherwise (contrary to the course of business arrangements carried on by T. in America) have been liable. Notwithstanding the direction of T., M., upon receiving the bills, handed them over to L., manager of a bank at Liverpool, by whom they were applied (with notice of T.'s direction) in discharge of liabilities of T. & Co. to the bank:—Held, that the bills were received by M. as agent, and not as partner of T., and that T. had not lost his right of directing the appropriation of these bills as assets of the American firm by his partnership in the Liverpool firm. Thayer v. Lyster, 30 L. J., Ch. 427; 9 W. R. 360.

Held also, that, looking at the course of dealing between T. and P., the appropriation directed by T. on the eve of his insolvency, in favour of P., did not amount to a voluntary preference; and that, notwithstanding such contemplated insolvency, P. was entitled to sue L. and M. in respect of the proceeds of the bills diverted by them (with full notice) from the specific purpose to which T. had directed their appropriation. Id.

On double Insolvency.]—The principle of Lord Eldon's decision in Waring, Ex parte (19 Ves. 345), namely, that where A. and B. are acceptor and drawer of bills of exchange, and property of the one comes to the hands of the other, to be held as security against the bills, and then both become bankrupt, the bill holders have a right to have the property applied exclusively, in the first instance, in payment of the bills, is applicable as well to cases of double insolvency as of double bankruptcy; and the principle is applicable although the property held as an indemnity is not sufficient to pay the bills in full. Powles v. Hargreaves, 3 De G., Mac. & G. 430; 23 L. J., Ch. 1; 17 Jur. 1083.

A trader and a firm of traders having agreed to assist by mutual advances, the following dealings took place between them:—The trader delivered to the firm several acceptances and a quantity of wool, and procured bills of exchange drawn by the firm to be accepted by strangers on the trader's indemnity. He also made payments on account of the firm. The firm on their part advanced to him cash to the amount of 5,000*l.*, and delivered to him several acceptances, exceeding the amount of the acceptances delivered and procured by the trader as above mentioned. By a contemporaneous memorandum, signed by the trader, he stated that he had consigned the wool in consideration of the advance of 5,000*l.*, and that the firm was to be at liberty to sell it if he should not, when called upon, reimburse their advances. The acceptances were chiefly those of strangers. It appeared that the wool was deposited in pursuance of an agreement that it was to be a security for all the advances made by the firm, and there was nothing to shew that the cash received by the firm upon the discount of the acceptances received by them from and on the indemnity of the trader did not exceed the cash advance of 5,000*l.* On the affairs of the firm and of the trader being wound up, under arrangements analogous to the bankruptcy law:—Held, that the holders of the bills, delivered by the firm to the trader, were entitled rateably to the proceeds of the wool, according to the principle of Waring, Ex parte, (19 Ves. 345). Ackroyd, Ex parte, 3 De G., F. & J. 726.

L. (of London) drew bills of exchange on K. (of London), having previously arranged with K. that payment of the bills should be secured by mortgages of two estates in the colony of British Guiana. The mortgages were effected in November, 1865, and May, 1866, respectively, and were passed before one of the judges of the colony in the manner in which such securities are there made effective. Later in 1866 L. and K. respectively executed deeds of inspectorship, without assignment of assets. On a bill by certain holders of the bills, claiming the benefit of the security:—Held, that the principle of Waring, Ex parte, (19 Ves. 345) applied to the case, and that the plaintiffs and other holders of the bills were, subject to the rights of a prior mortgagee, entitled pro rata to the benefit of the security. City Bank v. Luckie, 5 L. R., Ch. 773; 23 L. T. 376; 18 W. R. 1181.

Business transactions were carried on between R. & Co., of London, and B. & Co., of Barbadoes, on a general account between the two houses. The course of business was for B. & Co. to draw bills of exchange upon R. & Co., and sell them in Barbadoes; and in order to keep R. & Co. in funds to meet the bills so drawn upon them, and repay them for any moneys expended on behalf of B. & Co., B. & Co. were in the habit of buying bills in Barbadoes and remitting them to R. & Co. The proceeds of such remittances were carried to the general account between the two firms. Between the time of certain remittances being posted in Barbadoes for transmission to R. & Co., and of the same being received by R. & Co., the London firm became bankrupt. Subsequently B. & Co. also failed:—Held, that, under the circumstances, there was no specific appropriation of the remittances, but that so far as the remittances were in specie at the time of R. & Co.'s bankruptcy, the assignees of B. & Co. were entitled to have the same appropriated to the purposes of the general account, subject to the right of appropriation by the London firm to items in such account; and that on R. & Co. submitting to appropriate the proceeds of such remittances to outstanding acceptances, the order in Waring, Ex parte, (19 Ves. 345), must be followed. Trimingham v. Maud, 7 L. R., Eq. 201; 38 L. J., Ch. 207; 19 L. T. 554; 17 W. R. 313.

L. & Co. employed S. & Co. as their correspondents at Havannah, and R. as their correspondent in London. They consigned certain cargoes to S. & Co., at the same time informing them that they would draw bills on R. for the value. This they accordingly did, and the bills were accepted by R. Before the bills came to maturity, S. & Co. sent remittances in short bills to R. to cover the amount of the bills, telling him to take them "against the acceptances." R. became bankrupt, and the acceptances were not paid, and soon after S. & Co. became insolvent:—Held, that the remittances must be applied to meet the acceptances, under the rule of Waring, Ex parte (19 Ves. 345). Smart, Ex parte, Richardson,

It is no objection to the application of the rule in that case that the party sending the remittances was not a party to the bills as drawer or indorser, provided the bills were drawn in respect of a transaction in which he is liable. Id.

Two distinct firms, L. & Co., of Bombay, and G. & Co., of London, were engaged in a joint adventure for buying and selling goods in England and India. The course of business as to the homeward shipments was that L. & Co. drew bills on G. & Co., which they discounted in India, and with the proceeds purchased cotton, which they consigned to G. & Co. specially to meet the acceptances. Both firms stopped payment, and went into liquidation. The holders of unpaid acceptances of G. & Co., which had been drawn in this way, claimed to have the proceeds of certain shipments of cotton specially appropriated to meet the acceptances:—Held, that the bill-holders were entitled to have the cotton specially appropriated upon the principle of Waring, Ex parte (19 Ves. 345), but subject to the rights of the creditors, if any, of the aggregate firms to have the cotton applied as part of the aggregate assets. Dewhurst, Ex parte, Leggatt, In re, Gladstones, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 695; 42 L. J., Bk. 87; 29 L. T. 125; 21 W. R. 874.

—Where Ex parte Waring does not apply.] —M. borrowed money from a company, for which he accepted and gave to them bills of exchange, and deposited shares as a collateral security. When the bills became due M. wished the loan continued, and the managing director of the company sent him for acceptance fresh bills, with a letter stating them to be in place of those falling due. M. accepted the new set of bills on that footing. After this M. died insolvent, and the company was ordered to be wound up, and was admitted to be utterly insolvent. Both sets of bills had been negotiated, and were outstanding. The holders of the first set of bills applied to have such first set paid by means of the deposited shares, on the principle of Waring, Ex parte, (19 Ves. 345):—Held, that Waring, Ex parte, did not apply in favour of the holders of the first set of bills, for that the company, after receiving the new bills in place of the old ones, were bound to indemnify M. against the old ones, and had no right to apply his shares in payment of them. General Rolling Stock Company, In re, Alliance Bank, Ex parte, 4 L. R., Ch. 423; 38 L. J., Ch. 714.

R. & Co., of Brazil, in the course of exchange operations with A., of Manchester, drew bills on him for 2,000*l.* which they sold, and about the same date transmitted to A. acceptances of another house for 1,900*l.* to cover the bills drawn. Before the covering remittances reached England, R. & Co. stopped payment and presented a petition for liquidation. A., being also in difficulties, refused to accept the bills drawn on him, and also became a liquidating debtor. The purchaser and holder of the dishonoured bills filed a bill against the trustees of the estates of R. & Co. and A., praying that the remittances might be applied in payment of the bills:—Held, that he had no equity to support the bill. Vaughan v. Halliday, 9 L. R., Ch. 561; 30 L. T. 741; 22 W. R. 886. Reversing 30 L. T. 249; 22 W. R. 503.

The doctrine of Waring, Ex parte, (19 Ves. 345) does not apply to a case where the bills drawn by one of the insolvent firms on the other have not been accepted, nor in any other case in which the holder of the bills has no right of double proof against the two firms. Id.

A. contracted to build an iron steamship for B. for 7,600*l.* The money was to be paid by instalments at specified periods, as the building of the ship progressed, partly in cash and partly in bills, and from the time of paying the first instalment the ship was to be the property of B., to the extent of his advances, subject to A.'s lien for any unpaid instalments. B. gave his acceptances from time to time to the amount of 2,700*l.* to A., who discounted them with his bankers in the ordinary course. Before the ship was completed, A. and B. both became insolvent, and the bills were consequently dishonoured at maturity. B.'s creditors resolved to accept a composition, and their resolution was duly registered. B. subsequently abandoned the contract, and the trustee under A.'s bankruptcy finished the ship. The bankers, the holders of the bills, which were expressed to be drawn "for value received in iron screw steamer now building," claimed to stand in B.'s place, and to be entitled to a lien upon the ship for the moneys they had advanced on the bills:—Held, that the doctrine of Waring, Ex parte (19 Ves. 345), did not apply, and that the bill-holders were not entitled to the lien claimed by them. Lambton, Ex parte, Lindsay, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 403; 44 L. J., Bk. 81; 32 L. T. 380; 23 W. R. 662. Affirming, S. C., nom. Greener, Ex parte, Lindsay, In re, 32 L. T. 205.

The rule in Waring, Ex parte (19 Ves. 345), only applies to cases of double bankruptcy or insolvency, in which the estates of both parties are subject to an obligatory administration, and are under the control of the court. It has no application, therefore, to a case where one of the parties residing abroad had entered into a composition with his creditors which did not operate to bring him or his estate within the jurisdiction of the court. General South American Company, Ex parte, Yglesias, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 635; 45 L. J., Bk. 54; 33 L. T. 112; 23 W. R. 843.

L. deposited certain securities with a company upon an agreement that the company might sell them and apply the proceeds in reimbursing themselves any money owing by L. to them. Subsequently the company accepted bills for L.'s accommodation. Afterwards, before the bills were paid, the company went into liquidation, and L. made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors. The only liability of L. to the company was in respect of these bills:—Held, that Waring, Ex parte (19 Ves. 345), did not apply, and that neither the bill holders nor L. were entitled to have the proceeds of the sale of the securities applied in payment of the bills. New Zealand Banking Corporation, In re, Levi, Ex parte, 7 L. R., Eq. 449; 20 L. T. 296; 17 W. R. 565.

A merchant in Spain was in the habit of drawing upon a firm of London merchants bills which they accepted for his accommodation, receiving from him a commission for so doing. To provide for the payment of these acceptances at maturity, and to keep the acceptors out of cash advances, the drawer used to remit to them other bills, which were specifically appropriated to meet the acceptances. The acceptors filed a liquidation petition, under which their creditors resolved to accept a composition. At the date of the filing of the petition, specifically appropriated remittances to a large amount were in the possession of the liquidating debtors, and came into the hands of the receiver appointed under their petition. The merchant in Spain had also become insolvent, but no bankruptcy proceedings had been instituted against him:—Held, that the liquidating debtors were only entitled to be indemnified by means of the remittances against all liability on their acceptances; that, as their creditors had resolved to accept a composition, the only liability they had incurred on their acceptances was the amount of the composition, and that, therefore the merchant in Spain was entitled to have his remittances returned to him, subject to the amount of the composition thereon. Gomez, Ex parte, Yglesias, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 639; 32 L. T. 677; 23 W. R. 780.

7. MATERIALS BEING USED BY BANKRUPT IN EXECUTION OF CONTRACTS.

A contract by a trader to do works, contained a clause, that if he should become bankrupt, or delay proceeding with the works, his employer should have power, after a seven days' notice to him to proceed, to employ others to do the work, the advances made to the trader before his default should be taken as full payment, and all tools and materials being upon the works should become the property of the employer. The trader, having delayed to proceed with the works, was served on the 11th of April by his employer with notice to proceed. On the 17th of April the trader committed an act of bankruptcy; on the 19th April, the notice to proceed not having been complied with, his employer took possession of the tools and materials. Afterwards a fiat issued against the trader. In trover by his assignees, against the employer for tools and materials left upon the works by the bankrupt:—Held, that they did not become the property of his employer at the expiration of the seven days' notice, because they had vested in his assignees by relation on the 17th April, before the notice had expired. Rouch or Roach v. Great Western Railway Company, 4 P. & D. 686; 1 Q. B. 51; 2 Railw. Cas. 505; 5 Jur. 821.

H. & Co., being under a contract to deliver a quantity of sleepers to the defendants, applied to them for an advance of 600*l.* on a cargo of timber which had arrived, and was being discharged, but was not sawn up into sleepers, and which they stated would be sawn up in a day or two, and would then be worth 900*l.* The defendants gave a cheque for the 600*l.* after which, and before any of the cargo was delivered, one of the firm of H. & Co. committed an act of bankruptcy. The defendants thereupon seized the timber, a part of which only had been sawn into sleepers. In an action by the assignees of H. & Co., against the defendants, for the conversion of the timber:—Held, that what passed between the parties, at the time the advance was made, constituted an agreement in equity that the cargo should stand charged as security for the 600*l.*; and that the property did not pass to the assignees, so as to enable them to bring an action. Langton v. Waring, 18 C. B., N. S. 315; 11 L. T. 633; 13 W. R. 347.

A. contracted with W. to build a barge by the 5th June, and hired a yard for the purpose of performing the work. In June the work was not completed; but W. having made certain advances, it was agreed, in writing, that the barge should be a security in the hands of W. for such advances. In July A. became bankrupt. The advances made by W. exceeded the value of the work done :—Held, that W. was entitled to a lien upon the barge, subject to the right of the assignees to complete the contract. Watts, Ex parte, 32 L. J., Bk. 35 ; 9 Jur., N. S. 238 ; 7 L. T. 585.

Ships in course of Construction.]—In March, 1854, J., a shipbuilder and manufacturer of steam-engines for ships, contracted to build a screw steamer for the plaintiff, according to specifications, for 16,000*l.*, to be paid by instalments of four sums of 1,000*l.* each, on days named in four successive months ; 3,000*l.* on a day named, "provided the vessel was plated and her decks laid ;" 3,000*l.* on a day named, "provided she was then ready for trial ;" 3,000*l.* on a day named, "provided she was according to contract, and properly completed ;" and the last 3,000*l.* on a given day after. The building of the ship was carried on under the superintendence of the plaintiff's agent, who from time to time rejected materials intended to be used, and caused others to be substituted. Soon after the building of the ship began, the plaintiff named her The Britannia, and she was thenceforth known by that name by J. and his workmen ; and in October, 1854, by the plaintiff's request, his name was punched on the keel. In November, the plaintiff pressed J., whose affairs had become embarrassed, to execute an assignment to him of The Britannia, and the engines and other fittings then in preparation for her : but J. refused, though he admitted that she was the property of the plaintiff. In December, J. became a bankrupt. In trover by the plaintiff against his assignees :—Held, affirming the judgment of the Queen's Bench, that the property in the ship passed to the plaintiff as she advanced in her progress ; but (reversing the judgment of the Queen's Bench), that the property in the materials purchased for, and destined to form part of, the ship, but which had not been inspected by the surveyor and adjusted to the ship, did not pass. Wood v. Bell (in error), 6 El. & Bl. 355 ; 25 L. J., Q. B. 321 ; 2 Jur., N. S. 664—Ex. Ch. S. C., in Q. B., 5 El. & Bl. 772 ; 25 L. J., Q. B. 148 ; 2 Jur., N. S. 349.

By an agreement between Y., who afterwards became a bankrupt, and the defendant, it was agreed that Y. should build a ship for the defendant on certain terms ; and it was also agreed, that in case Y. should fail to complete the ship according to such terms, the defendant might enter upon and take possession of the ship (which was to be then deemed the property of the defendant), and "cause the works thereby agreed to be done to be completed by any person whom he should think fit to employ, using such of the materials of" Y. as should be applicable to the purpose. A ship was laid down by Y. in his building yard, but he afterwards failed to complete the same, and the defendant entered and took possession of it according to the agreement. At that time there was a stock of timber belonging to Y. in his building yard, and provided by him for building the ship, and between the day the defendant so entered and the act of bankruptcy of Y., the defendant assorted into lengths all the timber applicable to the completion of the ship, and he removed a quantity of it within the frame of the ship, but such timber was not at that time actually attached to the ship, though all was eventually, but after the act of bankruptcy, used by the defendant in completing the ship :—Held, that there had been no user of the timber by the defendant before the bankruptcy of Y. according to the meaning of the word "using" in the contract, and that the defendant had therefore acquired no property in the timber, but that the same passed to the assignees of Y. under his bankruptcy. Baker v. Grey, 17 C. B. 462 ; 25 L. J., C. P. 161 ; 2 Jur., N. S. 400.

A. contracted with B. to build a ship, and furnish her with every requisite for sea, the price to be paid by four instalments ; two to be paid in the progress of the work, and the others when the vessel was finished and launched. The two first instalments were paid at the times stipulated : when the hull was ready for launching, the ship was measured and surveyed with the privy of the builder ; and the master, who had been previously appointed, entered into the usual bond for the delivery of the register at the custom-house ; the ship was then registered in the name of the purchaser, and all the requisites of the register acts were complied with. The builder then received the third instalment. Before the ship was launched, the purchaser advertised for freight, chartered her for a voyage, and hired a crew, with the privy of the builder. The ship was not, in fact, launched, as stated in the register, but remained in the builder's yard ; and his men were at work upon her until the 3rd July. From the early part of June to the 30th of that month, an apprentice of the master was employed in the ship ; and on the 1st July his bedding was put on board. On the 30th June the builder committed an act of bankruptcy, and on the 8th July a commission issued against him. On the 2nd of July the purchaser took possession of the vessel whilst she remained on the builder's wharf, and took away a rudder and cordage ; and on the 4th she was launched, and afterwards equipped for sea at the purchaser's expense, the fourth instalment remaining unpaid :—Held, that as between the bankrupt and the purchaser there was such a transfer to, and general ownership in, the latter, as to exclude the operation of 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11, and bar an action of trover at the suit of the assignees ; but that they were entitled to such portion of the fourth instalment as should remain due after satisfying the expenses of completing the vessel for sea, according to the contract, and for which the bankrupt would have had a lien on the vessel. Woods v. Russell, 1 D. & R. 587 ; 5 B. & A. 942.

P. contracted with a shipbuilder to build him a ship for a certain sum, to be paid by instalments as the work proceeded ; the first instalment when the vessel was rammed, the second when she was timbered. An agent for P. was to superintend the building. The vessel was built under such superintendence, all the materials being approved by the agent before they were used. The builder became bankrupt before the ship was completed. Afterwards the assignees completed the ship. All the instalments were paid or tendered. In an action of trover by P. against the assignees for the ship :—Held, that on the first instalment being paid, the property in the portion then finished became, by virtue of the contract, vested in P., subject to the right of the builder to retain such portion for the purpose of completing the work, and earning the rest of the price: and that each material subsequently added became, as it was added, the property of P., as the general owner. Clarke v. Spence, 4 A. & E. 448; 6 N. & M. 399; 1 H. & W. 760.

In 1833, and until his bankruptcy, L. carried on the business of a shipbuilder, and on the 10th June, 1833, the following agreement was entered into:—"Particulars and description of a new ship, now about one-third built in the yard of L.;" then there followed a description of the length, breadth and depth of the ship, the number of tons she was to carry, and the timbers, and particulars of every thing she was to be built of and supplied with, "for 1,750*l.* and payment as follows opposite to each respective name." This agreement was signed by L., and after his signature followed these words:—"We, the undersigned, engage to take shares in the before-mentioned vessel as set opposite to our respective names, and also the mode of payment." The agreement was signed by several persons for different shares and at different times, and, amongst the rest, by the plaintiff for one-fourth in October, 1833. Below these signatures was written the following:—"14th July, 1833, I hereby agree to accept the above price and mode of payment, L." The plaintiff proved payment for his share by bills before the bankruptcy of L. A company signed the agreement for one-fourth, of which company H. was a member, and used to go to look at the vessel when building, and occasionally found fault with the work, which was improved in consequence; and L. told his foreman to act under H.'s direction. At the time of the bankruptcy, the frame of the vessel was on the stocks in L.'s building-yard in an unfinished state; and after the bankruptcy, some of the men continued to work upon her, and receive their money from H. :-Held, that under these circumstances, the property in one-fourth of the vessel did not pass to the plaintiff. Laidler v. Burlinson, 2 M. & W. 602.

Shipbuilders on the 11th of April by a written instrument of that date agreed to build a vessel for a purchaser, at a price payable by instalments. The agreement had been negotiated for the purchaser by a shipbroker, who had, pending the negotiations, and before the agreement was signed, advanced 400*l.* to the shipbuilders, who had already commenced building the vessel, upon the understanding that it was to be secured to him by an assignment of the agreement when perfected, and by a charge or lien on the vessel. Accordingly, by a deed of the 12th of April, the builders, in consideration, as was therein stated, of 500*l.*, on or immediately before the execution of the deed, paid by the broker to the builders, assigned the agreement to the broker; and it was agreed that, subject to a lien given by that agreement to the purchaser, the vessel, and all stores about the builders' yard, should be the property of the broker, to be held in lien to the extent of all moneys due from the builders to the broker, and that the aggregate of moneys secured should not exceed 500*l.* Upon the execution of this agreement the broker advanced to the builders the further sum of 100*l.* On the 19th of May the agreement of the 11th of April was cancelled, owing to differences between the builders and the purchaser; and the former, for the purpose of securing the broker from loss by reason of the cancellation, proposed to him that he should become the absolute owner of the vessel. He assenting thereto, an agreement was signed by the parties on and dated the 20th of May, whereby the builders agreed to sell, and the broker agreed to purchase, the hull of a new vessel then in course of building by the builders at their yard, to be completed according to specification for 1,150*l.*; and the 500*l.* already advanced by the broker to the builders should be taken as part payment of the purchase-money, and that if the builders did not finish the vessel by the 21st of June, or should before its completion cease working at it, the broker might enter the builders' yard and complete with their materials and at their cost. The builders made no further progress with the vessel, and were adjudicated bankrupts on the 2nd of June. Neither the assignment of the 12th of April, nor the agreement of the 20th of May, was registered under the Bills of Sale Act, and the vessel was never registered under the Shipping Acts; but on the 20th of May the builders granted, under the provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, the usual builders' certificate, whereby they certified that they had built the vessel for and on behalf of the broker. The evidence shewed that the moneys advanced by the broker were not applied specifically to the building of the vessel, but were applied generally for the purposes of the builders' business, and that the builders were utterly insolvent on the 20th of May, and probably were so on the 12th of April; that before the 20th of May rumours were current in the town that they had stopped payment and had paid off their workmen, except their foreman and apprentices, and that these rumours were well founded; but, on the other hand, the evidence failed to show either that these rumours were so general as that they ought to be assumed to have reached the broker; or that the broker was in any manner aware of the insolvency of the builders on the 20th of May, or until after that date. Upon a bill filed by the broker against the assignees in bankruptcy of the builders:—Held, first, that he had no title to relief under the agreement of the 12th of April, because it was by the agreement of the 20th of May merged into and taken as part payment of the purchase-money under that agreement. Swinston v. Clay, 3 De G., J. & S. 558; 32 L. J., Ch. 503; 8 L. T. 563; 11 W. R. 811.

Held, secondly, that he was entitled to relief to the extent of 500*l.* and interest (Knight Bruce, L. J., however, expressing a doubt as to the propriety of this limitation), under the agreement of the 20th of May, because the Bills of Sale Act had no application to the case, and the vessel was not in the order and disposition of the bankrupts; and the sole question being, whether there was a fraudulent preference of the broker by the builders, the evidence failed to shew it. Id.

If a shipbuilder makes a rudder, intending it to form part of a ship when completed, and the purchaser of the ship treats it as the ship's rudder, though it is never attached to the ship, and remains unfinished in the builder's possession at his bankruptcy, this is evidence for the jury that the rudder is that of the ship, and the property of the purchaser. Goss v. Quinton, 4 Scott, N. R. 471; 3 M. & G. 825; 12 L. J., C. P. 173.

8. SHIPS, CARGOES AND FREIGHTS.

Ship sold by Bankrupt—Bill of Sale un-

registered.]—A purchaser, by a bill of sale, in due form, from one who afterwards becomes a bankrupt, has a good legal title, though unregistered, against the bankrupt and all who claim under him, by 17 & 18 Vict. c. 104. Scapleton v. Haymen, 2 H. & C. 918; 33 L. J., Ex. 170; 10 Jur., N. S. 497; 12 W. R. 317.

Cargoes.]—The owners of a ship sent her to Charleston, where a cargo of cotton was put on board, with which she returned to this country; on her arrival the mortgagee of the ship took possession of the ship and cargo:—Held, that the assignees of the owners, who had become bankrupt before the arrival of the vessel, were entitled to maintain trover against the mortgagee for the cargo. Brancher or Branker v. Molyneux, 3 Scott, N. R. 332; 3 M. & G. 84; 5 Jur. 778.

Freight.]—Action for freight due on a charter-party; plea, the bankruptcy of the plaintiffs; replication, that the plaintiffs before their bankruptcy were indebted to D. & Co., and by an order indorsed on the charter-party requested the defendants to pay D. & Co. all sums which should become due on the charter-party; that the charter-party, with the order indorsed, was delivered to D. & Co., and that the defendants had notice of the order. The rejoinder traversed the notice. The plaintiffs having offered their ship to the defendants on charter, at 16s. per ton per month, the latter objected, on the ground that the ship was too large. Whereupon the plaintiffs offered to take half the ship, or adventure in partnership with the defendants. It was thereupon arranged that a charter-party should be executed by the plaintiffs and defendants, and that an agreement as to the adventure should be signed by A., the plaintiffs' clerk, as their agent, and a memorandum of guarantee should be signed by the plaintiffs. The agreement stated, that the trading cargo should be upon the joint account and risk of the defendants and A.; and that, after payment or deduction of the freight, the profit or loss should be borne and received or paid by the parties in equal moieties. The plaintiffs guaranteed A. from all losses and expenses happening in the course of such trading. The plaintiffs, being indebted to D. & Co. in a large sum of money, subsequently deposited the charter-party with them as a security, with an indorsement upon it, directed to the defendants, requiring them to pay the amount due to D. & Co. Notice of this was afterwards given to the defendants. The plaintiffs subsequently became bankrupts. The action was brought by D. & Co., in the names of the bankrupts, to recover the freight due under the charter-party:—Held, first, that the defendants were bound, in the first instance, to pay the freight to the plaintiffs, and that, on the final settlement of accounts, the profit or loss was to be borne by the parties in equal proportions. Boyd v. Mangles, 3 Ex. 387. Held, secondly, that the transactions amounted to an absolute assignment to D. & Co. of the plaintiffs' interest in the freight, so as to prevent it vesting in their assignees, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover as trustees for D. & Co. Id.

A., in consideration of money advanced and to be advanced by B. & Co., assigned all the freight to arise from a ship, under any existing or future charter-party or other contract, for or in respect of her intended voyage to India and back to England. After the freight had been earned and ascertained, A. became bankrupt:—Held, that such assignment was good, and that his assignees were not entitled to sue for the freight. Leslie v. Guthrie, 1 Scott, 683; 1 Bing. N. C. 697; 1 Hodges, 83.

Ships in course of Construction.]—See Materials being used by Bankrupt in Execution of Contracts, ante, col. 866.

9. LEGACIES.

A legacy left to a bankrupt at any time before the allowance of the certificate passes under the assignment. Tudway v. Bowen, 2 Burr. 716; 2 Ld. Ken. 423.

So, a legacy falling to a bankrupt before allowance of his certificate, by the testator's death, pending an unfounded petition to stay it, goes to his assignees, unless the petition was presented with that object. Ansell, Ex parte, 19 Ves. 208.

Annuity to Cease on Alienation.]—An annuity given by will to a trader for life, payable to him only upon his own receipt, and no other, and to cease immediately upon alienation, does not pass by the assignment, as by that act it ceased. Dommett v. Bedford, 6 T. R. 684; 3 Ves. jun. 149.

But an annuity given to A. for his personal support, not to be liable to his debts, and to be paid from time to time into his proper hands, and not to any other person, and his receipt only to be a sufficient discharge, passes on A.'s bankruptcy to his assignees. Graves v. Dolphin, 1 Sim. 66.

10. LICENCE OF PUBLIC-HOUSE.

A lease of a public-house, determinable on the bankruptcy of the lessee, contained a covenant by the lessee upon the determination of the term to assign the licences to the lessor. The lessee having become bankrupt before the expiration of the term:—Held, that his trustee took no interest in the licences, and that the covenant was valid, entitling the lessor to have the licences delivered up to him, though they were not assignable. Royle, Ex parte, Britnor, In re, 46 L. J., Bk. 85; 25 W. R. 560.

11. MONEY PAYABLE TO BANKRUPT ON A CONTINGENCY.

A solicitor pending a suit in chancery received from A., his client, in 1846, his bill for costs already incurred, upon an agreement with A. to refund the amount to him in the event of his obtaining a decree for costs in the suit. A. became bankrupt in 1847, and shortly after obtained his certificate, and died. The suit proceeded (the assignees not interfering), and a decree was pronounced under which the costs were awarded to A., and were received by the solicitor. In an action against the solicitor by A.'s assignees:—Held, that the contingent right to have the amount advanced by him for costs repaid under the agreement (which was a valid agreement, and made upon a sufficient consideration), was an interest in A., which, on his bankruptcy, passed to his assignees; and, consequently, that they were entitled to recover the sum so paid to A., as money received to their use. Morgan v. Taylor, 5 C. B., N. S. 653; 28 L. J., C. P. 178; 5 Jur., N. S. 791; 7 W. R. 285.

By a decree, the solicitor, in addition to the sum paid to him by A. in 1846, received a further sum for costs due to a former solicitor in the suit:—Held, that the assignees were not entitled to receive this sum, although it appeared that no claim had been made thereto by such former solicitor. Ib.

Contingent on obtaining Discharge.—Interest in property given to an uncertificated bankrupt, contingently on his obtaining his certificate, passes to his assignees on the happening of that event. Davidson v. Chalmers, 33 Beav. 653; 33 L. J., Ch. 622; 10 Jur., N. S. 910; 11 L. T. 217; 12 W. R. 592.

A testatrix provided, that in case her nephew, who was an uncertificated bankrupt, should obtain his certificate, so as to be enabled to hold and enjoy real and personal estate for his own absolute personal use, enjoyment and benefit, free from the control of any other person, the income of her residue should be paid to him for life. On his subsequent discharge, under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 180:—Held, that his life interest passed to his assignees as a contingent interest then coming into possession. Ib.

12. PATENT RIGHTS.

A patent right, for the exclusive exercise of an invention, obtained from the crown, by an uncertificated bankrupt, is affected by the previous assignment of the commissioners, and vests in the assignees. Heise v. Stevenson, 3 B. & P. 565.

Proviso for Forfeiture if held in Trust for more than Five Persons.—If, by a private act of parliament, the sole making of a newly-invented machine is vested in certain persons, with a proviso that it shall be forfeited in case it shall become "vested in, or in trust for, more than five persons or their representatives otherwise than by devise or succession (reckoning executors and administrators only as the single persons they represent):"—Held, that if one of the persons becomes bankrupt, the right passes to his assignees; and that though there are more than five creditors, yet the assignees do not hold it in trust for "more than five persons, otherwise than by devise or succession," within the meaning of the act. Bloxam v. Elsec, 1 C. & P. 558; R. & M. 187.

13. PENSIONS AND ALLOWANCES.

A pension payable to a military officer on his retirement from the service of the East India Company does not, upon his bankruptcy, pass to his assignees; such pension not being granted by deed, and consequently not recoverable by an action. Gibson v. East India Company, 7 Scott, 74; 5 Bing. N. C. 262.

Pension of Retired Civil Servant of Crown is "Income."—The effect of sects. 15 and 17 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, is to vest in the trustee in a bankruptcy all the "property" of the bankrupt of whatever nature, including the matters dealt with by sect. 23 and sects. 87 to 95, but subject to the exceptions and qualifications introduced by those sections. The pension of a retired judge of a crown colony, granted by the Secretary of State for the colonies, and voted annually by the legislature of the colony, is, in case of the bankruptcy of the judge, "property" which vests in the trustee in the bankruptcy, but it is "income" of the bankrupt within sect. 90 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and is subject to the power thereby given to the court to determine how much of it shall be set aside for the benefit of the bankrupt's creditors. Huggins, Ex parte, Huggins, In re, 21 Ch. D. 85; 51 L. J., Ch. 935; 47 L. T. 559; 30 W. R. 878—C. A.

Voluntary Allowance is not "Salary or Income" of Bankrupt.—A purely voluntary allowance made to a bankrupt is not "income" within the meaning of s. 90 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and no order can be made for the payment of any part of such an allowance when received by the bankrupt, to the trustee in the bankruptcy. In order that s. 90 may apply, the payment must be one to which the bankrupt has a legal or equitable claim. Wicks or Chatterby, Ex parte, Wicks or Wiz, In re, 17 Ch. D. 70; 50 L. J., Ch. 620; 44 L. T. 836; 29 W. R. 525—C. A. Reversing, 44 L. T. 159; 29 W. R. 400.

14. STOCKS AND SHARES.

Stock held by Bankrupt as Trustee.—Stock standing in the name of a bankrupt in trust for other persons did not pass to his assignees under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 72, although it was not entered in the name of the bankrupt as trustee in the bank books. Witham, Ex parte, 1 Mont. D. & D. 624.

Stock Registered in Fictitious Name.—Where a bankrupt had invested money in the purchase of stock in a fictitious name, for the purpose of defrauding his creditors, the court, on a bill filed by the assignees against the Bank of England, ordered the bank to erase from their books the fictitious name, and insert that of the bankrupt. Green v. Bank of England, 3 Y. & C. 722.

Election of Assignees to take.—A shareholder in a railway company having become bankrupt, afterwards, and before he obtained his certificate, calls were made. The assignees possessed themselves of the scrip, and a correspondence took place between the official assignee and the trade assignee, in the course of which the latter sent the former a statement of the bankrupt's property, comprising in it the value of the shares, and resulting in an estimate of the probable amount forthcoming to work the flat and pay dividends. The trade assignee subsequently wrote to the official assignee, suggesting the propriety of selling the shares, which continued in the possession of the assignees:—Held, that there was no sufficient evidence to warrant a jury in concluding that the assignees had accepted the shares. South Staffordshire Railway Company v. Burnside, 6 Railw. Cas. 611; 5 Ex. 129; 20 L. J., Ex. 120.

R., became bankrupt, being possessed of 100 shares in an incorporated company, which were standing in his name in the company's books. Only 25*l.* per share had been paid. The shares were of no value at the time of the bankruptcy. R. handed the certificates of the shares over to his assignees. For five years after the bankruptcy, neither the assignees, nor the bankrupt, nor the company took any step respecting the shares. At last, the shares having risen in value, the assignees claimed them, and demanded to be registered in the company's books as the owners. This the company declined to do. An action was brought by the assignees, and, on an issue joined on the allegation that the assignees were owners of and entitled to the shares, it was contended for the company that, as the possession of these shares was coupled with a liability to pay the remaining 75*l.* per share, the property in them did not vest in the assignees until they accepted them; that it was necessary for the assignees to do some act to denote acceptance, and do that act within a reasonable time after the bankruptcy; that the question of reasonable time was a question of law for the judge; and that five years' delay unexplained was an unreasonable time in law:—Held, that, assuming an acceptance of the shares was necessary to prove the assignees' title, and that the acceptance ought to be within a reasonable time, still that the facts proved were evidence of their title, and that the question of reasonable time was for the jury; but that the judge ought to direct the jury that the reasonable time for accepting did not begin to run until some party interested in the shares had taken some step respecting them. Graham v. Van Diemen's Land Company, 11 Ex. 101; 3 O. L. R. 887; 24 L. J., Ex. 213; 1 Jur., N. S. 806—Ex. Ch.

15. STOCK EXCHANGE DIFFERENCES.

In an action by assignees of a bankrupt, for money received by the defendant for the assignees, it appeared that the defendant was official assignee of the Stock Exchange for the management of the estates of those members who, being unable to fulfil their engagements on the Stock Exchange, become defaulters. Before the receipt of the money by the defendant, the bankrupt, a stockbroker and member of the Stock Exchange, was declared a defaulter, having at the time contracts with members of the Stock Exchange, which had the form of legal contracts for the sale and delivery of stock, but there was no intention that stock should be delivered, and the contracts were to be settled by the payment of differences. Under the rules of the Stock Exchange the defendant collected the differences upon the contracts upon which the bankrupt was a gainer, and, before notice of an act of bankruptcy, distributed among members, to whom the bankrupt was indebted for differences, all except a small amount, which was paid over, after he was adjudicated a bankrupt under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 223, to the treasurer of a fund for decayed members, according to the rules of the Stock Exchange:—Held, that the action could not be maintained, because, as to the money paid over before the adjudication, it was not money had and received by the defendant to the use of the assignees. And as to the money paid over after the adjudication, the contracts, as well as the payment and receipt of the differences, being illegal by 7 Geo. 2, c. 8, neither the bankrupt nor his assignees could maintain an action to enforce the contracts or recover the sums paid. Nicholson v. Gooch, 5 El. & Bl. 999; 25 L. J., Q. B. 137; 2 Jur., N. S. 303.

Held also, that the differences were not paid to the defendant as the agent of the bankrupt, but for the purpose of being distributed among the Stock Exchange creditors of the bankrupt. Id.

By the rules of the London Stock Exchange, when a member is declared a defaulter, the contracts for the sale and purchase of stocks and shares, which have been made by him for the next settling or account day, are closed by a person, called the official assignee, appointed by that body, at the market prices of the stocks and shares, the subjects of the contracts, at the time of the default, and those members who, on that footing, owe differences upon their contracts with the defaulter are bound by the rules, on pain of being themselves declared defaulters, to pay those differences to the official assignee. And the official assignee is bound by the rules to employ the moneys thus received by him in the first place in paying to those members, to whom, upon the same footing, differences are due upon their contracts with the defaulter, the differences so due to them:—Held, that the moneys thus received by the official assignee, being an artificial fund created by the rules of the Stock Exchange, do not form part of the assets of the defaulter, and do not pass to his trustee in bankruptcy. Grant, Ex parte, Plumby, In re, 13 Ch. D. 667; 42 L. T. 387; 28 W. R. 755—C. A.

See further, PROTECTED TRANSACTIONS, post.

16. PROPERTY OF BANKRUPT'S WIFE.

Wife's Chose in Action.—Assignees cannot in their names alone maintain an action to recover the amount of a promissory note made to the wife of the bankrupt before her marriage. Sherington v. Yates, 1 D. & L. 1032; 12 M. & W. 853; 13 L. J., Ex. 249—Ex. Ch.

An action for the conversion of goods of a wife effected before marriage, is vested in the assignees on the bankruptcy of the husband, such right being one which, if vested in the bankrupt before the bankruptcy, must have accrued to the assignees on their appointment. Richardson v. Alexander, 10 C. B., N. S. 324; 30 L. J., C. P. 268; 8 Jur., N. S. 13.

The action for such conversion of the wife's goods before marriage must be brought, on the bankruptcy of the husband, without having previously vested it in himself, in the name of the wife and assignees. Id.

Wife's Executory Interest.—A. bequeathed a house to B. for the residue of a term of years, if B. should so long live, and continue to inhabit therein; and after B.'s decease, or giving up the possession, A. bequeathed the house to C., the wife of B., for the remainder of the term, in case she should so long live therein and remain the widow of B., with further limitations to the issue of B. B. entered with the assent of the executors of A. B., being in insolvent circumstances, went to sea for six months: C. continued to occupy the house and to carry on B.'s trade therein. During the absence of B., a commission of bankruptcy issued against him. After his return, B. continued the occupation and the business until the house was sold by his assignees, when B. and C. were turned out of possession by the vendee. B. died. C. remaining a widow, demanded possession:—Held, that the bequest to C. did not, in equity, enure as a limitation to her separate benefit, and that her executory estate passed to the assignees of B., as being such an interest as B. could "lawfully depart withal." Doe v. Shaw v. Steward, 3 N. & M. 372; 1 A. & E. 300.

Money of Wife paid into Bank to Credit of Debtor.—Money raised by a wife by the mortgage of her separate estate, and paid into a bank to the credit of her husband, who drew cheques upon it for various purposes as occasion required, is equivalent to a gift to him from the wife, and upon a liquidation of his affairs passes to the trustee. Grainger, Ex parte, 24 L. T. 334.

17. PARTNERSHIP PROPERTY.

Where one Partner is Solvent.—The assignees can obtain no share of the partnership effects until they first satisfy all that is due from the bankrupt partner to the partnership. Holderness v. Shackels, 8 B. & C. 612; 3 M. & R. 25.

Under a separate commission, the assignees and the solvent partners are tenants in common. Barker v. Goodwin, 11 Ves. 83.

The assignee of a bankrupt partner is a tenant in common of the partnership goods with the solvent partner, and therefore cannot maintain an action for their conversion against an auctioneer for selling such goods by direction of the solvent partner. Lewis v. White, 8 L. T. 320.

One of two tenants in common of goods committed an act of bankruptcy; after which the defendant, by direction of the other tenant in common, sold the goods:—Held, first, that the assignees of the bankrupt could not recover from the defendant the proceeds of the sale in an action for money had and received, nor maintain detinue. Morgan v. Marquis, 9 Ex. 145; 2 C. L. R. 276; 23 L. J., Ex. 21.

Held, secondly, that the defence that the goods were sold by direction of the solvent partner might be given in evidence under non detinet. Id.

Where partnership goods had been taken in execution upon a bonâ fide judgment against a solvent partner whose co-partner was bankrupt; upon a bill filed by the assignee, an injunction was granted to restrain the judgment creditor, who had purchased all the share, right and interest of the solvent partner in the goods, and had subsequently professed to sell the whole as her own property, from delivering possession of the goods to the purchaser. Fraser v. Kershaw, 2 Kay & J. 496; 25 L. J., Ch. 445; 2 Jur., N. S. 880.

Where Partnership is Insolvent.—On the appointment of a trustee of a joint estate under a liquidation petition filed by partners, the separate estate of each of the partners, as well as their joint estate, vests in him. Philps, Ex parte, Moore, In re, 19 L. R., Eq. 256; 44 L. J., Bk. 40; 31 L. T. 735; 23 W. R. 230.

The separate creditors of one of the partners, therefore, though they may afterwards resolve to accept a composition in satisfaction of their separate debts, cannot vest the separate estate in any other trustee. But it is the duty of the trustee appointed by the joint creditors to administer the separate estate in accordance with the resolutions of the separate creditors, and then to carry over the surplus to the joint estate. Id.

The joint creditors of two partners resolved upon a liquidation by arrangement, and appointed a trustee. Afterwards the separate creditors of one of the partners resolved to accept a composition, and that the debtor should assign his separate estate to a trustee (not the same person as the trustee chosen by the joint creditors) to secure the payment of the composition:—Held, that the latter part of this resolution was ultra vires, and that the trustee of the joint estate had a locus standi to oppose its registration. Id.

See further, ORDER AND DISPOSITION.

18. PROPERTY VESTED IN TRUSTEE UNDER PRIOR BANKRUPTCY.

Where former Assignees do not Intervene.—The assignees under a second fiat may maintain an action against a third person for the conversion of property acquired by the bankrupt after the date of the first fiat, the assignees under the first fiat not intervening. Morgan v. Knight, 15 C. B., N. S. 669; 33 L. J., C. P. 168; 9 L. T. 803; 12 W. R. 428.

Title of former Assignees must have been Divested.—To an action for a debt the defendant pleaded that before the accruing of the debt the plaintiff became bankrupt, and a commission issued against him under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16; that the commissioners certified that he had in all things conformed to the bankruptcy laws, and that there did not appear to them any reason to doubt the fulness of the discovery made by the bankrupt of his estate, which certificate was allowed by the Lord Chancellor; that the plaintiff afterwards became bankrupt a second time, and his estate did not produce 15s. in the pound, whereupon the assignees under the second bankruptcy served the defendant with notice of their claim to the debt:—Held, that this plea was bad, as not shewing that the title of the assignees under the first bankruptcy was divested so as to vest the property of the bankrupt in the assignees under the second. Wagner v. Imbrie, 2 L. M. & P. 510; 6 Ex. 882; 20 L. J., Ex. 416; 15 Jur. 803.

Acquiescence of former Assignees.—A bankrupt, after having obtained his certificate under a second bankruptcy, but not having paid 15s. in the pound, set up in trade as a tailor and draper, and sent circulars soliciting custom to several of the creditors who had proved under the second bankruptcy, and among others to one of the creditors' assignees. He continued to trade for five years without molestation on the part of the creditors, having his name conspicuously written on the trade premises, and having exposed to view there stock in trade of considerable value, and then became bankrupt a third time:—Held, that the assignee under the last bankruptcy could not be called upon to deliver up the assets collected by him to the assignees under the second fiat. Jungmichel, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 471; 6 Jur. 87.

Assignees under a second commission, under which a bankrupt had obtained his certificate, but had not paid 15s. in the pound upon the debts proved, permitted the bankrupt again to go forth to the world and gain credit as a trader:—Held, that they had thereby lost their right under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 127, to call upon the assignee under a third fiat to pay over the assets which he had collected. Butler, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 731; 6 Jur. 937.

Held, also, that the principle of equity applied as well to real as to personal property, notwithstanding the clause of order and disposition in 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 72, only referred to personal property. Ib.

A party who has taken possession of the goods of an intestate after his death, cannot set up as a defence to trover by the administrator, that the intestate had been first insolvent and then bankrupt, and had not paid 15s. in the pound under the fiat, and that therefore the property in the goods vested absolutely in the assignees: the goods having been acquired by the intestate after the bankruptcy, and he having been allowed by the assignees to retain possession of them. Fyson v. Chambers, 9 M. & W. 460.

—Of Second Assignees.—The acquiescence of the assignees under a second bankruptcy in a subsequent trading by the bankrupt, does not bar their claim to his future estate and effects, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 127. Birch or Bisell, In re, 2 Kay & J. 328; 25 L. J., Ch. 323; 2 Jur., N. S. 370.

19. PROPERTY HELD BY BANKRUPT AS TRUSTEE FOR OTHERS.

Real Estates.—Estates of which a bankrupt is seised as a bare trustee, do not pass to his assignees. Gennys, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Mac. 255.

Debts.—A debt due to a bankrupt as trustee for another does not pass to his assignees. Winch v. Keeley, 1 T. R. 619; S. P., Carpenter v. Marnell, 3 B. & P. 40.

Action by husband and wife for money lent by the wife whilst she was sole and unmarried. Plea, that the husband became bankrupt, and that his assignees were appointed before the action, by reason whereof the assignees became entitled to the debt. Replication, that before the marriage, and whilst the wife was sole and unmarried, by a deed between the husband and the first part, the wife of the second part, and H. and J. of the third part (being a settlement entered into before the intermarriage of the plaintiffs), the money was assigned to H. and J. to have, receive and recover, and to hold the same to them, upon trust in the deed mentioned in favour of the wife, and for her sole and separate use during her life, and for the child or children of the intended marriage. The replication stated, that the plaintiffs appointed H. and J. as their attorneys, to recover the money from the defendant for the purpose of holding the same upon these trusts, and that the action was commenced and prosecuted in the names of the plaintiffs, by the direction of H. and J., by virtue of the power given to them, and for recovering, receiving and holding the money as the trustees named in the deed, and upon the trusts in favour of the wife, and of the children of the marriage, and not for the use or benefit of the husband, or of his creditors.—Held, that the replication was good, and that the debt did not pass to the assignee; under the bankruptcy of the husband, but might be sued for by the husband and wife. Parnham v. Hurst, 8 M. & W. 743.

Goods set aside for particular Creditor.—The assignees of a bankrupt do not take under the assignment property the equitable title to which has been transferred before the bankruptcy. Burn v. Carvalho (in error), 4 N. & M. 889; 1 A. & E. 883. Affirming Carvalho v. Burn, 3 B. & Ad. 382; 1 N. & M. 700; 4 Mylne & C. 690; 3 Jur. 1141.

But such equitable transfer must have been complete before the bankruptcy; it must have been a transfer of the whole, or an ascertained part of specific property, and absolute, not contingent. Ib.

A., having goods in the hands of B., as his agent at a foreign port, and being under liabilities to C., by letter to C. promised that he would direct, and, by a subsequent letter to B., did direct B. to deliver over the goods to D., as the agent of C. at that port. Before the delivery of the goods, a commission issued against A. under an act of bankruptcy committed while the letter was on its way to B., and the goods were delivered by B. to D., in ignorance of the bankruptcy.—Held, that C. had a good title in equity to the goods. Ib.

Money received by Overseer of Poor.—If money is received by an overseer of the poor, and kept apart by itself, and he becomes a bankrupt, it does not pass to his assignees. Rex v. Eggington, 1 T. R. 369.

Bankrupt—A Stranger to Trust.—A trustee instructed his stockbroker to sell for him a sum of consols, which he informed the broker he held as a trust fund, and to invest the proceeds of sale in the purchase of certain railway stock. The broker sold the consols for cash, and received in payment a cheque which he paid to the credit of his current account with his bankers, and he bought the railway stock for the next settling day. On the settling day the railway stock not having been paid for, the broker was declared a defaulter on the Stock Exchange, and soon afterwards he filed a liquidation petition. The principal claimed to have the balance which, at the time of the failure, was standing to the broker's credit at his bankers, appropriated to make good the proceeds of sale of the consols.—Held, that as the broker had notice of the trust, the proceeds of sale retained the character of trust money in his hands, and could be followed by the principal if they could be traced. Cooke, Ex parte, Strachan, In re, 4 Ch. D. 123; 46 L. J., Bk. 52; 35 L. T. 649; 25 W. R. 171—C. A.

Trustee with Life Interest in Trust Property.—W. A., who at the time of his death in 1867 was carrying on the business of a farmer, gave his residuary personal estate to his widow and a co-trustee, upon trust to permit his widow to have the use and enjoyment of his household furniture, and the dividends, interest and annual income and produce of his other residuary estate for life, and then upon trusts in favour of the testator's two sons. The testator's residuary estate consisted almost entirely of the household furniture and farm stock, and the widow, with the consent of her co-trustee, carried on the business of the farm. She took a new lease of the farm in her own name, and painted her own name upon the carts; but the financial part of the business was carried on through a joint banking account opened in the names of "the executors of the late W. A." In 1879, the widow presented her petition for liquidation. All the property in her possession consisted of the furniture and farm stock bequeathed by the testator, or of stock which had replaced the original stock in the ordinary course of business. Upon being sold, it realized a sum of 2,063*l.* 15*s.* 6*d.*, with produce estimated at 250*l.* still to be realized. The testator's residuary account had been passed at 1,917*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*:—Held, that the farming stock in the hands of the widow was well ear-marked as trust property, and that only the life interest of the widow in the proceeds of the realization passed to the trustees in the liquidation. Barber, Ex parte, Anslow, In re, 42 L.T. 411; 28 W. R. 522.

See further, ORDER AND DISPOSITION, post, col. 894.

20. SECURED CREDITORS AND PROPERTY HELD AS SECURITY.

Judgment Creditor who has obtained and served Garnishee Order Nisi.]—A judgment creditor who has obtained a garnishee order nisi attaching debts due to the judgment debtor, before the debtor has filed a liquidation petition, is a secured creditor within the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 16, sub-s. 5. Joselyne, Ex parte, Watt, In re, 8 Ch. D. 327; 47 L. J., Bk. 91; 38 L. T. 661; 26 W. R. 645—C. A.

The judgment creditor's title to the attached debts will therefore prevail over that of the trustee, even though some of the debts did not become actually payable till after the commencement of the liquidation. Ib.

A garnishee order obtained and served by an execution creditor, especially when made absolute before the bankruptcy, constitutes the execution creditor a creditor "holding a security on the property of the bankrupt" within the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 12. Emanuel v. Bridger, 9 L. R., Q. B. 286; 43 L. J., Q. B. 96; 30 L. T. 194; 22 W. R. 404.

An execution creditor who has obtained, served and made absolute a garnishee order before the bankruptcy, is also a creditor holding a "charge on the bankrupt's estate, as a security for a debt due to him" within the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 16, sub-s. 5. Ib.

The word "charge" in s. 16, sub-s. 5, has a wider meaning than the word "mortgage" or "lien" contained in the same section. Ib.

A judgment creditor who has obtained a garnishee order under the C. L. P. Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 125), s. 61, and served it on the garnishees before the presentation by the judgment debtor of a petition for liquidation by arrangement or composition, is a creditor holding a security on the property of the judgment debtor within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 12. Low v. Blakemore, 10 L. R., Q. B. 485; 44 L. J., Q. B. 155; 33 L. T. 473; 23 W. R. 856.

A garnishee's order and an attachment issued under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, unless followed by seizure and sale before the presentation of a petition for liquidation, do not make the creditor a secured creditor within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 40. Greenway, Ex parte, Adams, In re, 16 L. R.,

Eq. 619; 42 L. J., Bk. 110; 29 L. T. 75; 21 W. R. 866. But see preceding cases.

Foreign Attachment.]—A creditor who has served a writ of foreign attachment in an action in the court of the Lord Mayor of London is a "creditor holding security upon the property of the debtor" within the meaning of s. 12 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, although the presentation of a liquidation petition by the debtor, followed by an interpleader order, has prevented the creditor from proceeding to judgment in the action. Lery v. Lovell, 11 Ch. D. 220; 48 L. J., Ch. 357; 27 W. R. 428.

A writ of foreign attachment in the Mayor's Court of London, subsequently perfected by judgment, gives the issuing creditor a security within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 12, although the debtor may have filed a liquidation petition before judgment is actually signed. London Cotton Mills Company, In re, Brander, In re, 25 W. R. 109.

A creditor who obtains a foreign attachment in the Mayor's Court is not a creditor holding security within s. 12 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, at all events until he is paid under the attachment; and, although he has obtained and served his garnishee order prior to the debtor's act of bankruptcy, he will have no right as against the trustee to the debt attached. Barnfather v. Barrow, 37 L. T. 231.

Money paid into Court.]—An action upon an overdue bill of exchange for 1,200*l.* was brought against the acceptors. They obtained leave to appear and defend the action, upon paying into court 880*l.* to abide the event. An order was afterwards made referring the matter in dispute to arbitration. Before any award was made, they filed a liquidation petition. The trustee claimed the 880*l.* for distribution among the creditors generally:—Held, that the plaintiff in the action was, at the commencement of the liquidation, a secured creditor, and that an inquiry must be directed in the Court of Bankruptcy to ascertain to how much of the 880*l.* he was entitled. Banner, Ex parte, Keyworth, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 379; 43 L. J., Bk. 102; 30 L. T. 620. Affirming, N. C., 43 L. J., Bk. 55; 29 L. T. 849; 22 W. R. 350.

An alleged debtor having in November committed an act of bankruptcy by non-compliance with a debtor summons, the summoning creditor presented a bankruptcy petition against him. He disputed the debt and applied to have the petition dismissed, and an order was made adjourning the petition sine die, on the terms of his paying 125*l.* into court, to abide the result of an action to be brought by the summoning creditor for the alleged debt. The 125*l.* was paid into court on the 18th of January, and the action was commenced on the 21st of January. On the 10th of May the debtor was adjudicated a bankrupt on the petition of another creditor. Afterwards judgment was entered in the action for the plaintiff for the debt claimed and costs:—Held, that the title of the trustee in the bankruptcy did not relate back to the act of bankruptcy committed on the debtor summons so as to defeat the right of the summoning creditor to the 125*l.*, but that he was entitled to have the 125*l.* paid out to him. Bouchard, Ex parte, Moijen, In re, 12 Ch. D. 26; 48 L. J., Bk. 105; 28 W. R. 129—C. A.

Lands held by Creditor under Elegit.—Since the coming into operation of the Judicature Act, 1873, it is not necessary for a judgment creditor, who seeks to obtain equitable execution of the judgment creditor's equitable interest in land, previously to sue out an elegit. Ecans, Ex parte, Watkins, In re, 11 Ch. D. 691; 48 L. J., Bk. 97; 40 L. T. 526; 27 W. R. 712. Affirmed, 13 Ch. D. 252; 49 L. J., Bk. 7; 41 L. T. 565; 28 W. R. 127—C. A.

The appointment of a receiver of the rents of land at the instance of a judgment creditor, though conditional upon the receiver's giving security, operates as an immediate delivery of the land in execution. When the security is afterwards given the order relates back to the date when it was made. Ib.

A judgment creditor became the transferee of a legal mortgage of leaseholds belonging to the judgment debtor. He then commenced an action in the Chancery Division, claiming an account and payment of what was due to him on both mortgage and judgment; or a sale of the property and payment out of the proceeds; and the appointment of a receiver. On the same day he obtained ex parte an order extending over eight days, appointing an interim receiver of the rents, without security. On the eighth day he obtained, on notice, an order absolute for the appointment of the same person to be receiver of the rents, upon his giving security. On the same day the debtor filed a liquidation petition, and a receiver of his property was appointed by the Court of Bankruptcy. It did not appear which receiver was appointed first. The receiver in the action never gave security. The creditor had not sued out an elegit.—Held (affirming the decision of Bacon, C. J.), that the appointment of the receiver in the action was such a delivery in execution by lawful authority of the mortgaged lands within the meaning of s. 1 of the act 27 & 28 Vict. c. 112, as to render the judgment creditor a secured creditor, within the meaning of s. 16, sub-s. 5, of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and that he was entitled to hold the lands as a security for his judgment debt as well as for his mortgage debt. Ib.

Deeds deposited.—S. & Co., who were merchants in London and Shanghai, applied to A. & Co., who were merchants in Prussia, to open a credit on their behalf for 5,000*l.*, and offered to deposit with them as a security the title-deeds of a house at Shanghai. The negotiation was commenced verbally, when all parties were in Prussia, but was concluded, after some correspondence, by a letter written by S. & Co. to A. & Co. from London, inclosing the title-deeds of the house at Shanghai. A. & Co. accordingly accepted bills drawn by S. & Co. and payable in London. S. & Co. shortly afterwards became liquidating debtors, a considerable sum being then due to A. & Co. on the bills. No conveyance or memorandum of the deposit was made at the British Consulate at Shanghai, but the house remained registered in the name of S. & Co. A. & Co. accordingly applied for an order that the trustee in liquidation should convey the house to them. Evidence was adduced, that according to the law of Prussia, the contract was binding personally on S. & Co., but that, as the necessary formalities for perfecting the security at Shanghai had not been gone through, A. & Co. had no mortgage or lien on the house:—Held, by Mellish, L. J., that the contract must be governed by English law, and that A. & Co. had a good security on the house by the deposit of the deeds. Holthausen, Ex parte, Scheibler, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 722; 44 L. J., Bk. 26; 31 L. T. 13.

Held, by both the Lords Justices, that whether the contract was governed by English or by Prussian law, the contract was personally binding on S. & Co., and could be enforced against their trustee in liquidation; and the court made an order to sell the house and pay the proceeds to A. & Co. Ib.

21. DISCLAIMER OF ONEROUS PROPERTY.

a. Under Statutes prior to the Bankruptcy Act, 1869.

Under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 145.—A let to B., from year to year, premises adjacent to a shop previously occupied by B. Some time afterwards, A. allowed B. to convert the front of the premises into one large shop window, and to make an entry through the party-wall into his old shop, upon condition that at the determination of the tenancy the premises should be restored by him to their original state. Subsequently he became bankrupt.—Held, that as the agreement to restore the premises was not made contemporaneously with the letting, it was not a condition or agreement within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 145, and from which the bankrupt could be relieved under that section upon the assignees declining to take. Maples v. Pepper, 18 C. B. 177; 25 L. J., C. P. 243; 2 Jur., N. S. 739.

—Section must be strictly complied with.]

—A plea under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 145, to an action for breaches of covenants in a lease, that the lessee became bankrupt, that the assignees declined to take the lease, and that within fourteen days after notice thereof the lessee executed a surrender, and offered to deliver up the possession of the premises to the lessors, is bad, for not shewing the impossibility of a literal compliance with the conditions of the section, as that the lease was lost or destroyed, or the like. Colles v. Ecanon, 19 C. B., N. S. 372; 34 L. J., C. P. 320; 12 L. T. 672; 13 W. R. 1017.

—Liability of Tenant for Rent.—A tenant who has become bankrupt, and delivers to his landlord the possession of the premises during a current half year, is not liable for a proportionate part of the rent to the time when he so delivered them up to his landlord. Slack v. Sharp, 3 N. & P. 390; 8 A. & E. 366; 1 W., W. & H. 496; 2 Jur. 839.

Assignee cannot enforce Covenants against Lessor.—By indenture of demise, reciting that the lessee had purchased certain fixtures on the premises, on condition of their being repurchased as after mentioned, it was agreed between the lessor and lessee, and the lessor covenanted that, on the expiration or other sooner determination of the term, he, the lessor, should and would take the fixtures at such price as they should be appraised at by two competent persons, one to be named on each side. The lessee became bankrupt, and his assignee declined the lease (which was delivered up), but he required the fixtures to be repurchased, and brought an action of covenant against the lessor for not appointing an appraiser :—Held, that, as by 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 75, the bankrupt, on delivering up the lease, was discharged from all the covenants on his part, performance of the covenant in question could not be enforced by the assignee against the lessor. Kearsey v. Carstairs, 2 B. & Ad. 716.

— Nor Agreements made in Contemplation of Tenancy continuing.—A bankrupt agreed in writing to take a lease of a manufactory for a term of years, and the landlord agreed to erect at his own expense certain buildings, upon the bankrupt paying an additional rent upon the amount so expended. The buildings, however, were subsequently erected by the bankrupt, on the verbal assurance of the landlord that the bankrupt might deduct the amount expended from the rent. The assignees elected not to adopt the agreement for the lease, but refused to deliver up possession to the landlord unless he allowed them the sum which the bankrupt had expended on the buildings :—Held, that as both the written and verbal agreement between the landlord and the bankrupt contemplated a continuance of the tenancy, which the assignees had themselves repudiated, they had no lien on the premises for the money expended by the bankrupt. Ladd, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & Chit. 647.

— Liability of Surety.—A surety for a lessee is liable in respect of the breaches of covenant which accrue after the date of a commission against the lessee, but before the delivery up of the lease by the bankrupt. Tuck v. Tyson, 6 Bing. 346; 3 M. & P. 715.

If a lease is delivered up by the lessee, in pursuance of the statute, it does not operate, by relation, as a surrender of the lease from the date of the commission. Id.

— Underlease of Disclaimed and Undisclaimed Leaseholds.—In 1840, A. being lessee of a warehouse and cellar, under a demise from B., and also lessee, under C., of other adjoining property, comprising a vault, D. became tenant from year to year to A. of the warehouse and cellar, and vault, at an annual rent of 185*l.*, made up of 140*l.* for the warehouse and cellar, and 45*l.* for the vault. On the 27th October, 1845, A. became bankrupt, 92*l.* 10*s.* being at that time due as rent from D. to the bankrupt. The assignees, upon being appointed, elected to take the property held under B., and on 26th February, 1846, elected not to take the property held under C. An action having subsequently been brought by the assignees of A. against D. to recover the 92*l.* 10*s.* and 35*l.* for a quarter's rent, due at Christmas, for the warehouse and cellar :—Held, that they could well sue for the quarter's rent due since the bankruptcy in their representative character as assignees. Graham v. Allsopp, 3 Ex. 186; 18 L. J., Ex. 85.

— Bankruptcy of Assignee of Lease.—Covenant for rent. Plea, that before the rent became due, the defendants, by deed, assigned all their interest in the demised premises to A., subject to the payment of the rent, and performance of the covenants contained in the lease; and that A. covenanted to pay the rent and perform the covenants contained in the lease; that the defendants delivered the lease to him, and he accepted the same, and entered on the premises by virtue of the assignment; the plea then stated, that A. became bankrupt, and that the arrears of rent accrued after the date of the commission; that the assignee of his estate declined the lease, and that the bankrupt, within fourteen days after notice of that fact, delivered up such lease to the plaintiffs, devisees of the reversion :—Held, that the plea was bad, inasmuch as the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 75, did not put an end to the lease, but merely discharged the bankrupt from any subsequent payment of the rent or observance of the covenants. Manning v. Flight, 3 B. & Ad. 211.

b. Under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869.

— What Interests may be Disclaimed.—A bankrupt was tenant of leasehold premises under an agreement for a monthly tenancy. By an agreement of even date the bankrupt contracted to purchase the unexpired residue of the lease. This contract remained unperformed at the time of his bankruptcy. On application to the court by the trustee for leave to disclaim :—Held, that he had an interest in the premises, and was entitled to apply for and obtain leave. Roberts, In re, 30 L. T. 266.

— Lease of Chattels.—A lease of chattels is not a "leasehold interest" within the meaning of r. 28 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1871; and therefore a trustee in bankruptcy may disclaim a lease of chattels under s. 23 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, without leave of the court. Sheffield Waggon Company v. Stratton, 48 L. J., Ch. 35; 40 L. T. 238; 27 W. R. 120—C. A.

— Expired Lease.—A lease of a house was vested in a bankrupt as assignee. The trustee in the bankruptcy did not disclaim the lease, but he did not take possession of the property or exercise any act of ownership over it. The bankrupt continued to live in the house, his friends paying the rent for him. After the expiration of the term the lessor sued the original lessee on his covenant to repair, claiming 400*l.* damages. The lessee served a third party notice on the trustee, claiming to be indemnified by him, as assignee of the term, against all breaches of the covenant since the date of the bankruptcy and the trustee's appointment. The trustee then applied to the Court of Bankruptcy for leave to execute a disclaimer in respect of the lease. The lessor opposed the application, and the registrar refused it on the ground that the lease had expired. The trustee appealed, giving notice to the lessor, who did not appear on the hearing of the appeal :—Held, that leave to disclaim might be given, as it could not prejudice the rights of any person who was not before the court, but without expressing any opinion of those rights. Paterson, Ex parte, Throckmorton, In re, 11 Ch. D. 908—C. A.

The trustee in a bankruptcy may disclaim a lease of the bankrupt even though the lease has been determined by effluxion of time or by forfeiture between the appointment of the trustee and the execution of the disclaimer. And in such a case the effect of the disclaimer, when executed, is that neither the lessor nor the trustee can claim the benefit of any provisions contained in the lease which were to come into operation at the expiration or sooner determination of the term. Dyke, Ex parte, Morrish, In re, 22 Ch. D. 410; 52 L. J., Ch. 570; 48 L. T. 303; 31 W. R. 278—C. A. Affirming, 47 L. T. 26; 30 W. R. 592.

Semble, that the trustee may also disclaim a lease which has been determined before his appointment. Ib.

When Disclaimer allowed.]—In cases where the property acquired by the trustee under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, consists of leasehold interests, the Court will exercise its discretion in allowing the trustee to disclaim such interest. Wilson, In re, 13 L. R., Eq. 186; 20 W. R. 363.

Power of Court to impose Conditions.]—In giving leave to the trustee in a bankruptcy to disclaim a leasehold interest of the bankrupt, the court has, under r. 28 of 1871, power to impose a condition (such as the payment to the lessor of the rent in full up to the date of the disclaimer), even though no third party has acquired from the bankrupt an interest in the lease. Ladbury, Ex parte, Turner, In re, 17 Ch. D. 532; 50 L. J., Ch. 838; 45 L. T. 5—C. A.

On giving leave, under r. 28 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1871, to the trustee in a bankruptcy to disclaim a leasehold interest of the bankrupt, the court will not order the trustee to pay the landlord any compensation for his use and occupation of the demised property, except under special circumstances, one instance being where the trustee's occupation has been beneficial to the bankrupt's estate. Isherwood, Ex parte, Knight, In re, 22 Ch. D. 384; 52 L. J., Ch. 370; 48 L. T. 398; 31 W. R. 442—C. A.

Rule 28 does not mean that in every case in which leave to disclaim a lease is given, the lessor is to be placed in the same position as regards the interval before execution of the disclaimer as if there had been no disclaimer. Ladbury, Ex parte (17 Ch. D. 532), explained and distinguished. Ib.

Notwithstanding the insertion of an attornment clause in a mortgage deed, the real relation between the parties is that, not of landlord and tenant, but of mortgagee and mortgagor, and this fact, as well as the nature of the rent reserved by the clause, must be taken into account in considering whether, on giving leave to the trustee in the bankruptcy of the mortgagor to disclaim the tenancy created by the attornment clause, any terms should be imposed for the benefit of the mortgagee. Ib.

When the trustee in a bankruptcy applies for leave to disclaim a lease of the bankrupt, the court will not order any compensation to be paid to the landlord unless the trustee has kept him out of possession of the property, and his occupation has resulted in a benefit to the bankrupt's estate. Icard, Ex parte, Bushell, In re (No. 2), 23 Ch. D. 115; 48 L. T. 502—C. A.

The principle on which the court exercises its discretion under r. 28 is that the trustee ought not to be allowed to increase the bankrupt's estate at the expense of the landlord. Isherwood, Ex parte (22 Ch. D. 384), explained. Ib.

In determining whether, on giving leave to the trustee in a bankruptcy to disclaim a lease of the bankrupt, the trustee should be ordered to pay compensation to the landlord in respect of his occupation of the leasehold premises, the court will have regard not merely to the question whether the occupation has actually produced a profit to the bankrupt's estate, but also to the question whether the possession was retained by the trustee with a view to obtaining such a profit. Arnall, Ex parte, Witton, In re, 24 Ch. D. 26; 49 L. T. 221—C. A.

The rule, as laid down by Cotton, L. J., in Isherwood, Ex parte (22 Ch. D. 384), adopted in preference to that expressed by Jessel, M. R., in Icard, Ex parte (23 Ch. D. 115). Ib.

The court ordered compensation to be paid by the trustee in a bankruptcy as a condition of giving him leave to disclaim the lease of the bankrupt's place of business, although during part of the time during which the trustee had been in occupation a bailiff had been in possession of the bankrupt's goods under a distress for rent, and the landlord had been allowed to place bills on the premises stating that they were to be let, and that application for that purpose was to be made to him. Ib.

Whether Discretion the Subject of Appeal.]—The imposing of conditions on the trustee is a matter of judicial discretion, and the Court of Appeal will not readily interfere with the exercise of discretion by the judge of first instance. Arnall, Ex parte, Witton, In re, 24 Ch. D. 26; 49 L. T. 221—C. A.

Injury to third Parties.]—In determining whether leave should be given to a trustee in bankruptcy to disclaim a leasehold interest of the bankrupt, the court ought to have regard only to the question whether the disclaimer will be for the benefit of the persons interested in the administration of the bankrupt's estate, and ought not to have regard to any collateral consideration, such as the injury which the disclaimer might occasion to third parties. East and West India Dock Company, Ex parte, Clarke, In re, 17 Ch. D. 759; 50 L. J., Ch. 789; 45 L. T. 6; 30 W. R. 22—C. A.

Lease deposited with equitable Mortgagee—Assignment by Trustee—Right of Trustee to Indemnity.]—When the trustee of a bankrupt desires to disclaim a lease which the bankrupt has deposited by way of equitable mortgage, he will not be allowed to do so to the prejudice of the mortgagee, but if he assigns the lease to the mortgagee, the latter must covenant to indemnify him against liability under the lease. Buxton, Ex parte, Müller, In re, 15 Ch. D. 289; 43 L. T. 183; 29 W. R. 28—C. A.

Application to Trustee to Disclaim—Notice by Post.]—The mere posting of an application to the trustee in bankruptcy requiring him to decide whether he will disclaim or not is not sufficient under the 24th section of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, but such application must be received in order that the time for disclaimer may be limited in accordance with the section:—Semble, that the application would be received within the section if delivered through the post at the office of the trustee to the person there in charge. Reed v. Harvey, 5 Q. B. D. 184; 49 L. J., Q. B. 294; 42 L. T. 511; 28 W. R. 423; 44 J. P. 474.

Time in which to Disclaim.]—A trustee in liquidation received from the lessors, on the 24th of November, a notice, calling on him to disclaim a lease held by the debtor within twenty-eight days, under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 24. After some correspondence respecting the property, the lessors wrote a letter to the trustee on the day before the twenty-eight days expired, in which they asked for a reply to their letter of the 24th of November, at his earliest convenience. The trustee, after the twenty-eight days had expired, applied to the court for leave to disclaim the lease:—Held, that the lessors had waived their right to insist on an answer within twenty-eight days, and leave to disclaim was given. Moore, Ex parte, Stokoe, In re, 2 Ch. D. 802; 35 L. T. 386; 24 W. R. 720—C. A.

— Extension of Time.—When the trustee of an estate has received a notice calling upon him to disclaim a lease within twenty-eight days, under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 24, and requires an extension of time beyond the twenty-eight days in order to obtain the consent of the court under r. 28 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1871, he must apply for such extension before the twenty-eight days have elapsed, unless he can shew some special circumstances to excuse the delay. Lovering, Ex parte, Jones, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 586; 43 L. J., Bk. 94; 30 L. T. 621; 22 W. R. 853.

The mere fact that the lessor has availed himself of the provisions contained in the debtor's lease to compel the trustee in liquidation to pay half a year's rent in advance, is not, in the absence of negotiation, or of anything to mislead the trustee, or of special circumstances to excuse the delay, a ground for enlarging the time, after the expiration of the twenty-eight days (fixed by the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 24), for notice to be given by the trustee, whether he disclaims the lease or not. Harris, Ex parte, Richardson, In re, 16 Ch. D. 613; 44 L. T. 282; 29 W. R. 899.

Appeal against Leave to Disclaim.—On the application of a trustee, leave was given to him to disclaim a lease which was vested in the bankrupt. The trustee executed a disclaimer, and after this had been done, but within the time allowed for bringing an appeal, a person with whom the bankrupt had deposited the lease by way of equitable mortgage, and who was present when the order giving the leave to disclaim was made, gave notice of appeal from the order:—Held, that the disclaimer having been executed, the lessor's title was complete, and the appeal was dismissed. Woods, In re, Ditton, Ex parte, 3 Ch. D. 459; 45 L. J., Bk. 141; 24 W. R. 1008—C. A.

After unconditional leave has been given by the court to a trustee in bankruptcy to disclaim a lease of the bankrupt, and the trustee has executed a disclaimer, it is too late for the lessor to appeal from the order even for the purpose of getting conditions imposed on the trustee. The Court of Appeal has then no power to impose conditions. If the lessor desires to appeal from such an order, he ought to apply when it is made for a stay of proceedings under it. Sadler, Ex parte, Hawes, In re, 19 Ch. D. 122; 51 L. J., Ch. 201; 30 W. R. 173—C. A.

The discretion of the county court judge in giving leave to disclaim is not properly the subject of appeal. Edmonds, Ex parte, Tipping, In re, 48 L. T. 77.

Effect of Disclaimer without Leave of Court.—The 28th rule of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1871, provides that when any property of a bankrupt acquired by a trustee in bankruptcy shall consist of a leasehold interest the trustee shall not execute a disclaimer without leave of the court:—Held, that the effect of the rule was to make it the duty of the trustee as between himself and the Court of Bankruptcy to obtain the leave of the court before disclaiming a tenancy, but that it did not render the disclaimer inoperative as between the landlord and the trustee where no such leave had been obtained. Reed v. Harvey, 5 Q. B. D. 184; 49 L. J., Q. B. 294; 42 L. T. 511; 28 W. R. 423; 44 J. P. 474.

"Whatever may be the effect of a disclaimer by a trustee without the leave of the court, I would recommend any trustee in bankruptcy to think once, to think twice, to think thrice, before he ventures to disclaim without leave of the court." Per James, L. J., in Ladbury, Ex parte, Turner, In re, 17 Ch. D. 532; 50 L. J., Ch. 838; 45 L. T. 5—C. A.

Signature of Disclaimer.—A disclaimer in writing signed by the trustee's solicitor is not a valid disclaimer "by writing under the hand" of the trustee within s. 23. Wilson v. Wallani, 5 Ex. D. 155; 49 L. J., Ex. 437; 42 L. T. 375; 28 W. R. 597; 44 J. P. 475.

Omission to Disclaim.—If a trustee when called upon to decide whether he will disclaim a continuing contract of the bankrupt, does not disclaim it, but carries it on for the benefit of the estate, he is still at liberty, when he finds it unprofitable, to cease to perform it, and in that case the other party to the contract is entitled, under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 31, to prove against the bankrupt's estate for the damages occasioned by the breach of the contract, and this is his only remedy. Sneezum, In re, Davis, Ex parte, 3 Ch. D. 463; 45 L. J., Bk. 137; 35 L. T. 389; 25 W. R. 49. Affirming, 34 L. T. 805—C. A.

The trustee does not by not disclaiming adopt the contract, either personally or on behalf of the estate. Id.

Disclaimer operates as a Surrender of Chattels and Land.—Sect. 15 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, must be read in conjunction with and as qualified by sect. 23, and the effect of a disclaimer of a lease to a bankrupt by the trustee in the bankruptcy, is to give up to the lessor the entirety of that which is comprised in the demise. Therefore, if a bankrupt be the lessee of land and personal chattels, demised to him as one subject-matter at one entire rent, a disclaimer of the lease by the trustee operates as a surrender to the lessor of the chattels, as well as the land, and the trustee cannot claim the chattels under sect. 15 (sub-s. 5), as having been at the commencement of the bankruptcy in the order or disposition of the bankrupt as reputed owner with the consent of the true owner. Allen, Ex parte, Fussell, In re, 20 Ch. D. 341; 51 L. J., Ch. 724; 47 L. T. 65; 30 W. R. 601—C. A.

— Fixtures.—After the trustee in a bankruptcy has executed a disclaimer of a lease vested in the bankrupt, he is not entitled, even though he be in possession of the leasehold premises, to remove the tenant's fixtures. Stephen, Ex parte,

The effect of the disclaimer is to give the landlord an absolute title to the fixtures as from the date of the order of adjudication. Ib.

Where a trustee severs and sells tenant's fixtures attached to leasehold property of a bankrupt and subsequently disclaims the lease, the landlord is entitled to the proceeds of the sale of the fixtures. Brook, Ex parte, Roberts, In re, 10 Ch. D. 100; 48 L. J., Bk. 22; 39 L. T. 458; 27 W. R. 255—C. A. Reversing S. C., nom. Foster, Ex parte, Roberts, In re, 47 L. J., Bk. 101; 38 L. T. 888; 26 W. R. 834.

The effect of a disclaimer by the trustee in a liquidation of a lease vested in the debtor is to place the trustee in the position of never having had any estate in the leasehold property. Consequently, any severance by the trustee of the fixtures attached to the disclaimed property after the date of the trustee's appointment, is necessarily a wrongful act, and gives the landlord a right to recover the value of the fixtures from the trustee. Whether, after severing the fixtures, the trustee has any right to disclaim the lease, quære. But at any rate he cannot as against the landlord assert the invalidity of his own disclaimer. Ib.

—Removal by Trustee before Disclaimer.]—

A lease contained a proviso that the lessee, his executors, administrators and assigns, might at any time or times during the continuance of the term, or within twelve months from the expiration or other sooner determination thereof, but not afterwards, remove any buildings or machinery which he or they might have erected on the demised premises for trade purposes. The lessee filed a liquidation petition, and the trustee in the liquidation sold the trade machinery and fixtures, which were then removed by the purchaser. The trustee afterwards disclaimed the lease:—Held, that the disclaimer having, by virtue of sect. 23, the operation of a surrender of the lease as from the date of the appointment of the trustee, the proviso was, by construction of law, with all the other provisions of the lease, put an end to before the removal, and consequently that the removal could not be justified, and the lessor was entitled to the proceeds of sale. Glegg, or Gregg, Ex parte, Latham, In re, 19 Ch. D. 7; 51 L. J., Ch. 367; 45 L. T. 484; 30 W. R. 144—C. A.

—Sale by Trustee before Disclaimer.]—

A trustee in liquidation of the affairs of the tenant for years of leasehold premises upon which were certain fixtures, sold the fixtures by auction, and subsequently, without any formal disclaimer, surrendered the premises to the landlord prior to the expiration of the term and before the purchaser of the fixtures had removed them. The landlord having let the premises with the fixtures thereon to an incoming tenant:—Held, that the purchaser was nevertheless entitled to the fixtures, as the trustee, having sold them to him, could not deprive him of his right by afterwards surrendering the lease. Saint v. Pilley, 10 L. R., Ex. 137; 44 L. J., Ex. 33; 33 L. T. 93; 23 W. R. 753.

Effect of Disclaimer on Covenants in Lease.]

—By a covenant in the lease the landlord agreed, at the end or other the sooner determination of the term, to pay and allow to the tenant for (inter alia) the hay and straw grown in the last year, which should be left for the incoming tenant, at a feed price. Certain other farming covenants in the lease had been admittedly broken by the tenant:—Held, that by reason of the operation of the disclaimer by the trustee, the lease must be considered as at an end for all purposes; and that therefore the landlord must pay for the hay and straw at the market price:—Held, also, that the landlord could not be entitled to damages in respect of breaches of the covenants in the lease. Morriash, Ex parte, Dyke, Ex parte, Morriash, In re, 47 L. T. 26; 30 W. R. 952. Affirmed, 22 Ch. D. 410; 52 L. J., Ch. 570; 48 L. T. 303; 31 W. R. 278—C. A.

Effect of Disclaimer on Rights and Liabilities of third Parties—Underlessee.]—

A disclaimer by the trustee in bankruptcy of a lease or other onerous property of the bankrupt operates as a surrender only so far as is necessary to relieve the bankrupt and his estate and the trustee from liability, and does not otherwise affect the rights or liabilities of third parties in relation to the property disclaimed. If, for instance, the bankrupt has granted an underlease of property demised to him, a disclaimer of the original lease by his trustee in bankruptcy does not affect the right of the lessor to distrain on the property for the rent reserved by the original lease, and to re-enter for breach of the lessee's covenants in the lease, or for non-payment of the rent reserved thereby. But, if the underlease is made at a rent less than the rent reserved by the original lease, the underlessee is, after the disclaimer, entitled to prove in the bankruptcy for the value of the difference between the two rents. Walton, Ex parte, Lery, In re, 17 Ch. D. 746; 50 L. J., Ch. 657; 45 L. T. 1; 30 W. R. 395—C. A.

The lessee of a house agreed to underlet a portion of it at less rent than he paid and taking a premium, and the provisions of the agreement differed in material respects from those of the lease. The underlessee paid the premium and took possession under the agreement. The lessee afterwards became bankrupt; the trustee disclaimed the lease; and the lessor commenced an action of ejectment against the underlessee. Upon a bill by the underlessee to restrain the action of ejectment and compel the lessor to grant him a lease in accordance with the terms of his agreement with the lessee:—Held, that the underlessee had no equity to compel the lessor to grant him a lease in accordance with the terms of the underlease. Taylor v. Gillott, 20 L. R., Eq. 682; 44 L. J., Ch. 740; 32 L. T. 795; 24 W. R. 65.

When a lessee sublets, and afterwards becomes bankrupt, and his trustee, under s. 23 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and under an order of the Court of Bankruptcy, disclaims the lessee's interest in the premises, the lessor is not entitled to eject the sub-tenant. A lessee for a term of years by deed demised part of the premises for a shorter term, and the sub-lessee entered into possession. The lessee afterwards liquidated by arrangement, under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and his trustee, under an order of the Court of Bankruptcy, disclaimed the lessee's interest in the premises. Notice of the application to the court for leave to disclaim was given to the sub-lessee, within a reasonable time before the order was made. The lessor having brought an action to recover possession of the part of the premises demised to the sub-lessee as from the date of the appointment of the trustee:—Held, that the lessor was not entitled to recover possession. Taylor v. Gillott (20 L. R., Eq. 682), commented upon. Smalley v. Harding, 7 Q. B. D. 524; 50 L. J., Q. B. 367; 44 L. T. 503; 29 W. R. 554—C. A.

The disclaimer of a lease under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 23, will not destroy an underlease if the provisions of the underlease harmonize with those in the original lease. Lovering, Ex parte, Jones, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 586; 43 L. J., Bk. 94; 39 L. T. 621; 22 W. R. 853.

Disclaimer by Trustee of Assignee of Lease.]—The assignee of a lease became bankrupt, and his trustee disclaimed. In an action by the lessor against the lessee upon his covenant in the lease, to recover rent which had accrued due between the order of adjudication and the disclaimer:—Held, that the lessee was liable; and by Martin and Pigott, B.B. (Bramwell, B., dissentiente), that a disclaimer under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 23, by the trustee of the assignee of a lease does not affect the rights and liabilities inter se of the lessor and original lessee. Smyth v. North, 7 L. R., Ex. 242; 41 L. J., Ex. 103; 20 W. R. 683.

The disclaimer of a lease by the trustee in bankruptcy of the assignee of the lease does not affect the liability of the lessee on his covenant to pay rent, in respect of rent accruing either before or after the date of the disclaimer, although he has never been in actual possession of the demised property, and the bankrupt assignee has sub-demised it. East and West India Dock Company v. Hill, 22 Ch. D. 14; 52 L. J., Ch. 44; 47 L. T. 270; 31 W. R. 55—C. A.

Liability of Bankrupt's Surety.]—The plaintiff being lessee of a farm for a term of years assigned the lease to P., taking the covenant of the defendant as surety for the due payment of the rent to the lessor for the residue of the term. During the continuance of the term P. became bankrupt, and his trustee having obtained the requisite leave of the court disclaimed all interest in the lease. Subsequently the lessor demanded from the plaintiff the half-year's rent accruing after the bankruptcy. The plaintiff paid the rent and brought an action to recover the amount from the defendant under his covenant. Neither the plaintiff nor the defendant had entered upon or taken possession of the farm:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. By Manisty, J., on the ground that the disclaimer operated only as a surrender so far as was necessary to relieve the bankrupt, his estate, and the trustee from liability without otherwise affecting third parties, and that the plaintiff as lessee remained liable for the rent and had his remedy over against the defendant as the bankrupt's surety. By Watkin Williams, J., solely on the authority of East and West India Dock Company v. Hill, supra. Harding v. Preece, 9 Q. B. D. 281; 51 L. J., Q. B. 515; 47 L. T. 100; 31 W. R. 42; 46 J. P. 646.

Contract to Purchase—Deposit Money.]—A person contracted to purchase certain lands and paid a deposit, the contract containing no provision for forfeiture of the deposit on non-completion through the purchaser's default. After the title had been accepted, but before completion, the purchaser was adjudicated bankrupt, and his trustee disclaimed all interest under the contract, and demanded that the deposit should be returned to him:—Held, that, as the contract had gone off through the purchaser's default, the trustee had no right to recover the deposit. Barrell, Ex parte, Parnell, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 512; 44 L. J., Ch. 138; 33 L. T. 115; 23 W. R. 846

Contract to Sell—Trustee's Right to Indemnity.]—The lessee of certain premises having agreed, prior to the filing of a liquidation petition, to assign the lease to a third party, the trustee in the liquidation will not be permitted to execute a disclaimer of the lease except upon the terms of executing such assignment, but upon executing the assignment he will be entitled to an indemnity against any liability which he may incur thereby. Edmonds, Ex parte, Tipping, In re, 48 L. T. 77.

Disclaimer relieves Trustee from all Liability.] A trustee in bankruptcy upon disclaimer of a lease granted to the bankrupt does not become personally liable to the lessor, either upon an implied contract of tenancy, or as a trespasser, in respect of the period between the time when his actual occupation ceases, and the date when the disclaimer is executed:—Quære (per Cockburn, C. J., and Thesiger, L. J.), whether upon the execution of the disclaimer all personal liability of the trustee ceases in respect of the period during which he has had an actual occupation of the demised hereditaments. Lourey v. Barker, 5 Ex. D. 170; 49 L. J., Ex. 433; 42 L. T. 215; 28 W. R. 559—C. A.

A disclaimer of a lease to a bankrupt by the trustee in the bankruptcy operates to relieve the trustee from all liability under the lease, not merely from liability as from the date of the adjudication. Allen, Ex parte, Fussell, In re, 20 Ch. D. 341; 51 L. J., Ch. 724; 47 L. T. 65; 30 W. R. 601—C. A.

Disclaimer of Freehold Estate of Bankrupt.]—An owner of freehold property, "burdened with onerous covenants" within the meaning of s. 23 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, the title-deeds of which he deposited with an equitable mortgagee, became bankrupt. The trustee in bankruptcy executed a disclaimer of the property under the said section. Subsequently he and the bankrupt purported to convey the property to the equitable mortgagee, whose assigns contracted to sell the same to a purchaser. On a summons taken out by the purchaser under the Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874:—Held, that there had been a complete disclaimer by the trustee of the bankrupt's estate; that the subsequent conveyance was inoperative; and that the legal estate was outstanding and could not be got in under the Trustee Act, 1850. Mercer and Moore, or Beardsworth and Moore, In re, 14 Ch. D. 287; 49 L. J., Ch. 201; 42 L. T. 311; 28 W. R. 485.

Property Disclaimed reverts to Crown.]—Semble, where the freehold property of a bankrupt is disclaimed by the trustee under s. 23 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, it reverts to the crown. Id.

22. ORDER AND DISPOSITION.

a. Generally.

Under 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, Bankrupt must have been Trader at time of Ownership.]—Under 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11, in order to bring a case within the statute, the bankrupt must have been a trader when he was in possession of the property. Gornon v. East India Company, 7 T. R. 228.

Question of Fact for Jury.]—The question of order and disposition is essentially a question of fact for the jury. Emmerson v. Barnett, 20 W. R. 110.

In Case of Person employed to manage Property.]—A person who was employed by the trustee under a bankruptcy to continue in the management of an hotel at weekly wages, presented a petition for liquidation:—Held, that the doctrine of order and disposition could not arise. Bolland, Ex parte, Gatehouse, In re, Porter, In re, 24 L. T. 335.

Consent of true Owner.]—The true owner has a right, at any time before the fiat, to take back his goods which he has allowed the bankrupt to have the possession of as the reputed owner, provided he does so without notice of any prior act of bankruptcy, it being a transaction with the bankrupt within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 133, and therefore protected. Graham v. Furber, 14 C. B. 134; 2 C. L. R. 10; 23 L. J., C. P. 10; 18 Jur. 61.

Under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 125, goods are not in the possession of a bankrupt at the time of the bankruptcy by the consent and permission of the true owner, if such owner, before the act of bankruptcy, gives notice that he requires the possession. Brewin v. Short, 5 El. & Bl. 227; 24 L. J., Q. B. 297; 1 Jur., N. S. 798.

If before the date of a fiat, and before notice of an act of bankruptcy, the true owner bona fide demands possession of the goods, and communicating with the bankrupt, does that which shews that the goods do not longer, with his consent, remain in the possession, order and disposition of the bankrupt, the title of the true owner is not defeated by a prior act of bankruptcy. Ib.

H. had given a bill of sale of his effects to secure a sum of money borrowed from C. At a meeting of H.'s creditors, at which C. was present, it was proposed that H. should execute an assignment of all his property for the benefit of his creditors; and on the following morning H. executed such an assignment to M., under which possession was taken. A few hours after C. sent a man, N., to take possession under his bill of sale. N. came to the door of H.'s house, and H. said to him, "You are too late; you must see Mr. M." N. then went to M., who asked him what he wanted. N. said, "I have come to take possession under the bill of sale for C." shewing the bill of sale. M., after seeing it, said, "Too late, as I am in possession under a bill of sale for the benefit of all the creditors." N. then said, "Well, if I am too late, I cannot help it; I will go to Mr. C." He then went away:—Held, that this was only an intention to demand the goods and to get possession, and therefore was not a transaction within s. 133 of the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 125. Ib.

— Possession obtained by Fraud.]—Oil merchants gave a lien on oil belonging to them in the hands of other persons to a creditor, who, trusting to an incorrect representation of the oil merchants, delayed taking possession or giving notice of the lien, and the merchants repossessed themselves of the oil, mixed it with their general stock, and became bankrupt:—Held, that the lien was good, and that the oil was not in the order and disposition of the bankrupts with the consent of the true owner. Bell, Ex parte, De Gex, 577; 17 L. J., Bk. 9; 11 Jur. 986.

A., a trader, induced B., by fraud, to contract to sell him goods. After they were delivered a fiat issued against A., and his assignees refused to deliver up the goods to B., who thereupon sued them in trover:—Held, that he was entitled to recover, these not being goods in the possession, order and disposition of the bankrupt. Load v. Green, 15 M. & W. 216; 15 L. J., Ex. 113; 10 Jur. 163. See Stevenson v. Newnham, 13 C. B. 285; 22 L. J., C. P. 110.

Merchants in London were in the habit of dealing with Reed Brothers, of Old Town Street, Plymouth. On receipt of an order from Joseph Reed & Sons, of Mincing Lane, Plymouth, they forwarded the goods asked for, under the mistaken belief that they were dealing with their old customers. The person trading as Joseph Reed & Sons was an uncertificated bankrupt, and his trustee at once seized the goods:—Held, that the trustee was bound to restore the goods, or to pay the amount due for them. Barnett, Ex parte, Reed, In re, 3 Ch. D. 123; 45 L. J., Bk. 120; 34 L. T. 664; 24 W. R. 904.

— Goods Bought after Act of Bankruptcy.]

—A trader bought goods at an auction after he had committed an act of bankruptcy, and he obtained possession of the goods without paying for them, and before the act of bankruptcy was known to the vendor. Two days after he had received the goods he was adjudicated bankrupt. The vendor applied to the trustee in the bankruptcy for the return of the goods, on the ground that the purchase by the bankrupt was fraudulent:—Held, that no case of fraud had been proved, and that the goods passed to the trustee. Rhodes, Ex parte, Shackleton, In re, 44 L. J., Bk. 52; 32 L. T. 102; 23 W. R. 303. Affirmed, nom. Whittaker, Ex parte, Shackleton, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 446; 44 L. J., Bk. 91; 32 L. T. 443; 23 W. R. 555—C. A.

Goods in Ownership of Bankrupt at Time of prior Act of Bankruptcy.]

—The 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 125, relating to goods in the order and disposition of a bankrupt at the time he becomes bankrupt, extends to goods which are in his order and disposition at the time of his committing any act of bankruptcy capable of supporting the adjudication, though such act is prior to the act on which the adjudication is founded. Stansfeld v. Cubbitt, 2 De G. & J. 222; 27 L. J., Ch. 266; 4 Jur., N. S. 395.

On the 19th April, 1856, A., a trader, executed a bill of sale, assigning all his furniture and effects on the premises where he was carrying on business to B., for securing a sum of money and interest. On the 15th May, the 5th June, the 24th June, the 15th July, and the 5th August, similar bills of sale were made by A. to B., but the last of such bills of sale was the only one of them which was registered under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 36. Such registration took place on 23rd August, 1856. In July, 1856, A. had committed one or more acts of bankruptcy, and the goods comprised in the bills of sale continued in his possession during the first ten days of August, 1856. In December, 1856, A. was adjudicated bankrupt. Prior to the date of the first bill of sale, in April, 1856, and thence to his bankruptcy, A. was in embarrassed circumstances, and that fact was known to B. Upon a bill in equity by his assignees, for setting aside all the bills of sale as fraudulent and void:—Held, first, that if B. had any title at all under the bills of sale, or any of them, it was only under the last of such bills of sale; and that as to that bill of sale, it was not a contract or dealing, within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 133. Ib.

Held, secondly, that notwithstanding the subsequent registration, the goods comprised in the bills of sale were in the order and disposition of the bankrupt during the first ten days of August. Ib.

The 17 & 18 Vict. c. 36, has in no degree affected the doctrine of reputed ownership. Ib.

Articles not connected with Business—Onus of Proof.]—When a trader is in possession at his place of business of articles not in their nature connected with his business, and the trustee in his bankruptcy claims the articles on the ground that the bankrupt was the reputed owner of them, much stronger evidence will be required to prove the reputed ownership than in the case of articles connected with the business, the inference from the nature of the articles being that they are not connected with the business. Loxering, Ex parte, Murrell, In re, 24 Ch. D. 31; 52 L. J., Ch. 951; 49 L. T. 242; 32 W. R. 217—C. A.

b. Goods and Chattels not subject to reputed Ownership.

Chattels Real.]—Chattels real are not within the doctrine of reputed ownership. Stephens v. Sole, 1 Ves. 352; Roe v. Galliers, 2 T. R. 133.

Heirlooms.]—Furniture left by a testator to trustees to be enjoyed with the mansion-house by whomsoever should be entitled for the time being to the freehold estates, but not to be removed without leave of the trustees, will not pass. Shaftesbury (Earl) v. Russell, 3 D. & R. 84; 1 B. & C. 666.

Fixtures.]—Stills and other things fixed to the freehold did not pass to the assignees under the words "goods and chattels," in 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11. Horn v. Baker, 9 East, 215.

Machinery affixed to the freehold of iron works is not considered to be within the order and disposition of a bankrupt trader, where, by the custom of the country, such articles are furnished by, and continue to be the property of, the lessor. Rufford v. Bishop, 5 Russ. 346. And see Hubbard v. Bagshaw, 4 Sim. 326.

The furniture of a coal-mine is property of which the party who works the mine is the reputed owner, and which, upon his bankruptcy, will vest in his assignees. Coombs v. Beaumont, 2 N. & M. 235; 5 B. & Ad. 72.

A steam-engine erected for the purpose of working a colliery, to be used by the lessee of such colliery during his term, but to be held as the property of the landlord, subject to such use, will not pass to the assignees of the tenant on his bankruptcy, for it does not come within the description of goods and chattels in 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 72, nor had the bankrupt the actual or apparent ownership. Ib.

—Mortgaged.]—Where A. took the lease of a house and premises for a term of years, and took the tenant's fixtures in the house at a valuation from the landlord and afterwards assigned the term to B. by way of mortgage, expressly including the fixtures, and subsequently became bankrupt:—Held, that the fixtures were not goods and chattels within the order and disposition of the bankrupt, and did not pass to his assignees. Boydell v. M'Michaels, 1 C., M. & R. 177; 3 Tyr. 974.

L. took a lease of a mill and iron-forge, and bought the fixed and moveable implements; but it was agreed that they should be delivered up at the end or other determination of the term, at a valuation, if the lessors should give fifteen months' notice of their desire to have them. L. afterwards conveyed all his interest in the premises, implements, &c. to a creditor, in trust, if default should be made by L. in paying certain instalments, to enter upon and sell the same, and satisfy himself out of the proceeds, re-assigning the residue: and if the lessors should require a re-sale of the implements, the proceeds of such re-sale were to go in discharge of the debt, if unsatisfied. L. made default, and subsequently became bankrupt, after which, and during the term, the creditor, who had not before interfered, entered upon the property:—Held, on trespass brought by the assignees, that L. had, at the time of the bankruptcy, the reputed ownership of the moveable goods, but not of the fixtures. Clark v. Crownshaw, 3 B. & Ad. 804.

A tenant of leasehold premises assigned them by way of mortgage, and afterwards became bankrupt. The lease contained a covenant to yield up all fixtures to the mortgagee belonging or to belong:—Held, that the fixtures did not pass to the assignees as goods and chattels in the possession, order and disposition of the bankrupt; and that the mortgagee might maintain an action as reversioner against the assignees for removing them. Hitchman v. Walton, 4 M. & W. 409; 1 H. & H. 374.

A. & B., being in trade as copper rolling manufacturers, purchased the fee-simple of an old mill, and fitted it up with greatly improved and altered machinery and gear. They then mortgaged the property to the plaintiff by the description of "all that land, mills, and factories, and also all the steam-engine, boilers, mill gear, millwright work, and machinery, then or thereafter to be fixed on the said land," with a covenant not to remove any part without permission of the mortgagee. Afterwards A. & B. became bankrupts:—Held, first, that they having placed the machinery and chattels in connection with the land while seized of the land in fee, they had united the property in the chattels with property in the land, and therefore a conveyance of the land itself alone would pass all chattels so connected with it. Mather v. Fraser, 2 Kay & J. 536; 25 L. J., Ch. 361; 2 Jur., N. S. 900.

—What are Fixtures.]—Held, secondly, that the conveyance to the mortgagee passed every description of chattel connected with the land in any manner further than by its own weight, but that such chattels as were on the premises merely resting by their own weight did not pass, Ib.

v. Miller, 12 C. B., N. S. 659; 31 L. J., C. P. 309; 9 Jur., N. S. 60.

A registered bill of sale does not take goods thereby assigned out of the reputed ownership of the assignor if they remain in his possession, though the possession may be in accordance with the terms of the instrument. Harding, Ex parte, Fairbrother. In re, 15 L. R., Eq. 223; 42 L. J., Bk. 30; 28 L. T. 241.

A bill of sale was executed on the 9th of January, 1872. On the 23rd of January the grantor filed a petition for liquidation. On the 30th of January the bill of sale was registered, and on the 12th of February the trustee under the liquidation took possession of the property. The bill of sale provided that the grantor should continue in possession of the property until default in payment upon demand of what should be due to the grantee. The grantor remained in possession of the property until the 12th of February, no demand for payment or possession having been made by the grantee. On that day the grantee authorized an agent to take possession, but no possession was taken by him:—Held, that the trustee was entitled to the property as against the bill of sale holder. Ib.

A trader assigned his goods by way of mortgage, subject to a proviso that it should be lawful for him to hold and make use of the goods until default in payment of the money secured, after demand in writing. The mortgagee allowed the trader to continue in possession of the goods until after his bankruptcy:—Held, that the goods were at the time of the bankruptcy in his order and disposition, with the consent of the true owner. Freshney v. Carrick, 1 H. & N. 653; 26 L. J., Ex. 129.

— Life Estate of Grantor.—A., being at the time in partnership with his son and others, executed a deed of gift, whereby he gave, granted, and confirmed to his son certain paintings, articles of plate, and other effects, which he had in his dwelling-house, upon trust for himself (A.) for life, and after his decease for his son absolutely. At the time the deed was executed, formal possession was given to the son by the delivery of one painting in the name of the whole; but, with that exception, the effects were left in the possession of A. at his house, and the change of ownership was not made public, further than by its being communicated by A. to some of his friends. The firm afterwards became bankrupt:—Held, that, inasmuch as the son had omitted to give notice of the change of ownership, the possession of A. was referable to his original title, and that he was in the reputed ownership of the goods at the time of the bankruptcy. Castle, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 17; 12 L. J., Bk. 30; 7 Jur. 47.

Ante-nuptial Settlement.—Household furniture, linen and plate belonging to B. were assigned to him by deed, in contemplation of his marriage to the plaintiff, in trust, after the marriage, to stand possessed thereof during the joint lives of B., the settlor, and his intended wife, for her sole and separate use independently of A. The marriage took place, and B. afterwards became bankrupt. The settled furniture was then in the house in which he resided with his wife:—Held, that it was not at the time of his bankruptcy in his order and disposition with the consent of the true owner, so as to pass the property in it, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 72, to his assignees; and the fact of the furniture not having been the wife's before the marriage was immaterial. Simmonds v. Edwards, 16 M. & W. 838; 11 Jur. 592.

— Post-Nuptial Settlement.—A husband and wife, at a time when she was under age, executed a deed which purported to convey freehold property of the wife to a purchaser for 500*l.* The deed was not acknowledged by the wife. The husband received the 500*l.* The purchaser afterwards contracted to sell the property, and his sub-purchaser required the concurrence of the wife in the conveyance to him. The wife, who was then of age, refused to concur, unless the husband would execute a bill of sale of his furniture to a trustee for her, to secure the payment of 425*l.* for her separate use. This was done by the husband; and she then executed the conveyance to the sub-purchaser. The bill of sale was registered. Possession of the furniture was given to the trustee by delivering to him a silver fork in the name of the whole, and the keys of the house where the furniture was. But the furniture remained, until the husband filed a liquidation petition, in the house which was occupied by him and his wife, and it was used by them:—Held, that the execution of the bill of sale amounted to a purchase of the wife's concurrence in the conveyance; that the possession was consistent with the terms of the deed; and that the wife's trustee was entitled to the furniture as against the trustee under the liquidation. Cor, Ex parte, Reed, In re, 1 Ch. D. 302; 33 L. T. 757; 24 W. R. 302.

A husband, in consideration of an advance made to him by his wife of her separate property, agreed by parol to settle the furniture in their residence to her separate use, and subsequently assigned it to a trustee for her by a deed-poll which was registered as a bill of sale, but the registration turned out to be void. The husband afterwards became bankrupt:—Held, that his assignee was entitled to the furniture. Ashton v. Blackshaw, 9 L. R., Eq. 510; 39 L. J., Ch. 205; 21 L. T. 197; 18 W. R. 307.

Character of Possession changed—Death of Grantor.—A trader being indebted to certain persons, gave them a bill of sale of his furniture, which was not registered. He died intestate, and his widow took out administration to him, and continued to carry on his business on her own account for fourteen months, when she became bankrupt:—Held, that the furniture and other things included in the bill of sale were in the order and disposition of the bankrupt, with the consent of the true owners, and formed part of her assets distributable amongst her creditors. Kitchen v. Ibbetson, 17 L. R. Eq. 46; 43 L. J., Ch. 52; 29 L. T. 450; 22 W. R. 68.

— Grant by Partners—Dissolution.—On the 29th of April, 1876, two partners in trade executed a mortgage of their trade fixtures and loose chattels. The mortgage was not registered as a bill of sale. On the 7th of June, 1876, the partnership was dissolved, and the business was thenceforth carried on by one of the two partners alone. On the 29th of January, 1877, the outgoing partner executed an assignment of his half share in the mortgaged property to the com-tinuing partner, subject to the mortgage. On the 22nd of March, 1878, the continuing partner filed a liquidation petition. At the date of the filing of the petition the mortgaged property was in his sole possession. The retiring partner remained solvent. The mortgagee had not demanded possession of the loose chattels, but there was no evidence of any actual consent on his part to the change of possession:—Held, that the loose chattels passed by virtue of the reputed ownership clause to the trustee in the liquidation. Brown, Ex parte, Reed, In re, 9 Ch. D. 389; 48 L. J., Bk. 10; 39 L. T. 338; 27 W. R. 219—C. A.

Grantee taking Possession.—The holder of a bill of sale of the household furniture and other effects of a trader (the inventory relating only to the household furniture and not to the stock-in-trade), by agreement with the trader, sent to take and preserve possession of the furniture and effects for the holder a young woman, who thenceforth lived with the trader in all respects as one of his family, the apparent possession of the trader continuing as before. The trader shortly afterwards became bankrupt, and his assignees having brought an action against the holder of the bill of sale to recover the value of the goods assigned by it, the jury was directed to find a verdict for the defendant if they believed that the young woman actually, and not merely colourably, took possession of the goods on the part of the holder of the bill of sale, and would not allow them to be dealt with without his instructions:—Held, that this was not a misdirection, and (the jury having found for the defendant) that the furniture and effects were not in the possession, order, or disposition of the trader at the time of his bankruptcy. Vicario v. Hollingworth, 20 L. T. 362; 17 W. R. 613.

A bonâ fide assignee for value under a bill of sale of household furniture and effects, immediately sent a person into the house to take and keep, and who took and kept, possession; but the assignor, down to the date of his bankruptcy, continued to live in the house and use the furniture as before:—Held, that the furniture and effects were in the possession or apparent possession of the bankrupt within the meaning of the Bills of Sale Act, 17 & 18 Vict. c. 36. Hootman, Ex parte, Vining, In re, 10 L. R., Eq. 63; 39 L. J., Bk. 4; 22 L. T. 179; 18 W. R. 450.

A., an innkeeper at Sheerness, being indebted to B., under what the jury thought sufficient pressure on the 30th of May employed his own attorney to prepare a bill of sale of all his effects in favour of B., to secure an existing debt and a small further advance (the amount being about a fair equivalent for the value of the goods), and sent it to B. On the 10th of July B. sent a man to A.'s premises to paint out A.'s name, and on the 13th went down to Sheerness and took possession, leaving A. there to manage the concern on his behalf. On the 15th A. filed a petition in bankruptcy, and on the 16th was duly adjudged bankrupt. In an action by the assignees to recover the value of the goods thus conveyed, the jury having found that the transaction was bonâ fide, and the possession was really and notoriously taken by B. prior to the bankruptcy:—Held, that the transaction could not be avoided, either as an act of bankruptcy (there being no relation) or as a fraudulent preference; and that the goods were not in his order and disposition at the time of his bankruptcy. Shrubsole v. Sussans, 16 C. B., N. S. 452.

A trader executed a bill of sale of his stock-in-trade, and all his other effects, to an auctioneer, on the 17th of June; in pursuance of an arrangement between the parties, the auctioneer came on the premises of the trader, and attempted to sell the goods, but there were no buyers, and nothing was sold; he then left the premises, and the trader remained there, and continued to carry on business till the 22nd, when he committed an act of bankruptcy. The sale had been advertised, but it did not appear that the goods were advertised to be sold as the goods of the auctioneer:—Held, that notwithstanding the attempted sale, the goods were in the possession of the bankrupt as reputed owner, with the consent of the true owner at the time of the bankruptcy, and therefore passed to his assignees. Reynolds v. Hall, 4 H. & N. 519; 28 L. J., Ex. 257.

But where at a meeting of B.'s creditors, A. claimed certain property pledged to him, and it was agreed to place the same in the hands of third persons to be sold, and such persons took possession accordingly, and afterwards a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy was presented against B., and he was made a bankrupt:—Held, that the goods were no longer in his order and disposition at the time of his bankruptcy. Tatham v. Andree, 1 Moore, P. C. C., N. S. 386; 9 L. T. 2.

— Goods on Grantee's Premises.—A., having contracted with a canal company to build locks and bridges on the canal, as their engineer, purchased timber and other materials for the purpose, which were laid on the company's premises, on the banks of the canal; and on the company's advancing money to him, they took a bill of sale of these goods, and a symbolical delivery of them by a halfpenny; afterwards the company issued execution upon a judgment confessed by A., and the sheriff seized these goods, and A. became a bankrupt:—Held, that A. had not such a possession of the goods, as would enable his assignees to take them within the 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11; for the best delivery was given that the nature of the goods would admit of, they being before on the company's premises. Manton v. Moore, 7 T. R. 67.

On the 29th of November, the holder of an unregistered bill of sale of the household furniture of H., took possession by sending in a broker's man, who remained in the house and slept in an upper room, but did not remove any of the furniture or interfere with the use of it by H., who went on using it exactly as before. On the 19th of December placards were posted in the neighbourhood of the house announcing a sale of the furniture on the 28th, but, with the exception of a reference to a firm of solicitors for particulars, there was nothing in the placards from which it could be inferred that the sale was not made by H. himself. On the 23rd he committed an act of bankruptcy, and was adjudged bankrupt on the following day:—Held, that the goods belonged to the trustee, as being in the apparent, if not the actual, possession of the bankrupt, for that the possession taken by the broker's man was merely "formal possession," within the Bills of Sale Act, 1854; and that the placards could not take the furniture out of the bankrupt's apparent possession, as they did not shew that the sale was to be made under a bill of sale. Lewis, Ex parte, Henderson, In re, 6 L. R., Ch. 626; 24 L. T. 785; 19 W. R. 835.

— Before Time provided by Deed—Assent of Grantor.—On the 2nd of November, 1870, B. and H. executed a bill of sale of their machinery and plant to R., for securing the repayment of a sum of money advanced by him. The bill of sale contained a proviso for entry and seizure by R. in case default should be made in payment for the space of twenty-four hours after demand. R. demanded payment on the 3rd of May, 1871, by a notice which was served on B. at half-past two p.m., and on H. at five p.m. R. took possession at half-past nine on the following morning. On the 6th of May, B. and H. having previously surrendered the keys to R., filed a petition for liquidation; and N. was appointed receiver and took possession. The workmen were paid off by N. on the morning of the 9th of May. The person put in possession by R. continued in possession until the 19th of May. N. was subsequently appointed trustee. It was contended on behalf of the trustee that the possession by R., having been taken before the expiration of the twenty-four hours after demand, was illegal; and that R. could not set up a title through an illegal act:—Held, nevertheless, that as no objection had been made by the debtor to the possession taken by R., the title of R. must prevail over that of the trustee. Redfern, Ex parte, Ball, In re, 19 W. R. 1058.

— Possession, how obtained.—If the grantee under an unregistered bill of sale has, before the bankruptcy of the grantor, acquired possession of the goods so as to exclude the apparent possession of the grantor, it is immaterial whether the possession has been obtained by means of a transaction which, taken per se, would have amounted to a fraudulent preference. Symons, Ex parte, Jordan, In re, 14 Ch. D. 693; 42 L. T. 106; 28 W. R. 803—C. A.

Attempt to take Possession.—A trader, on the 23rd of September, in consideration of H. discounting some acceptances which would fall due within twenty-one days, gave him a bill of sale on his furniture. It was arranged that the bill of sale should not be registered before the acceptances became due and were dishonoured. They were so dishonoured on the 12th of October. On that day the trader gave H. fresh acceptances in lieu of the old ones, and a second bill of sale of the furniture. The same arrangement as before was made respecting the registration of this bill of sale. On the 30th of October the last-mentioned acceptances were dishonoured, and H. instructed his broker to take possession of the furniture. On the 31st of October H. registered the bill of sale, and the trader committed an act of bankruptcy. On the same day the broker attempted to obtain possession of the goods, but was refused admission to the house until next day, when he took possession:—Held, that the second bill of sale having been made upon a new arrangement and for a fresh consideration, and having been duly registered within twenty-one days, was valid, and that since the creditor before the bankruptcy had done all he could to obtain possession of the goods, the order and disposition clause did not apply. Harris, Ex parte, Pulling, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 48; 42 L. J., Bk. 9; 27 L. T. 501; 21 W. R. 44.

A trader debtor assigned goods to his creditor as security for the payment of his debt on a certain day, by a bill of sale which authorized the creditor to enter the house at any time, take possession of the goods, and if refused admission break into the house. The debtor retained possession without interference by the creditor till the day when payment was due. On that evening and the next morning the creditor's agents kicked at the gates and tried for hours to get in, intending to take possession. The gates were kept closed, and they were refused admission, till the debtor had filed a petition for liquidation, and thereby committed an act of bankruptcy. A trustee was afterwards appointed, who claimed the goods as being at the commencement of the bankruptcy in the possession of the debtor as reputed owner by the consent of the true owner:—Held, that though the creditor had made no actual demand of possession, yet as he had done all in his power to take possession short of a forcible entry, there was no consent of the true owner, and that the creditor was entitled to his security. Cohen, Ex parte, Sparke, In re, 40 L. J., Bk. 14.

Taking Possession of Part.—A trader executed a bill of sale of his stock-in-trade in his shop and his furniture in his dwelling-house to secure a debt. The shop and the dwelling-house were situate in different streets in the same town. An agent of the bill of sale holder took possession of the stock-in-trade just before the debtor filed a liquidation petition, but he did not take possession of the furniture till after he had received notice of the filing of the petition:—Held, that the possession taken of the stock-in-trade operated as a withdrawal of the consent of the mortgagee to the furniture remaining in the debtor's order and disposition. Edick, In re, Phillips, Ex parte, Alexander, Ex parte, 4 Ch. D. 496; 46 L. J., Bk. 30; 35 L. T. 912; 25 W. R. 231.

The day before the possession was taken the mortgagee had instructed his agent to go and take possession of the property. Semble, that the giving of these instructions amounted to a withdrawal of the mortgagee's consent to the property remaining in the debtor's order and disposition. Id.

Ten months before his bankruptcy a trader assigned all his goods to the plaintiff by a bill of sale, executed under a threat of seizure. Six days before the issuing of the fiat, upon the sheriff's seizing the goods under a fi. fa., the plaintiff claimed them as his, but the sheriff refused to give him possession. He also claimed the goods from the messenger of the Court of Bankruptcy, and, on his refusing to deliver them, brought an action against the assignees. The jury found that the bill of sale was bonâ fide and for a full consideration:—Held, that the goods and chattels did not remain in the order and disposition of the bankrupt. M'Cue v. James, 19 W. R. 158.

— Requirements of Bills of Sale Act, 1854.—To defeat the title of the holder of an unregistered bill of sale of chattels as against the trustee under the liquidation of the mortgagor, it is sufficient that the chattels are, at the commencement of the liquidation, in the visible possession of the mortgagor, even though the mortgagee has taken possession, so as to prevent the goods being removed by any one else, and with the bona fide intention of himself removing them forthwith. Jay, Ex parte, Blenkhorn, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 697; 43 L. J., Bk. 122; 31 L. T. 260; 22 W. R. 907. Reversing, 43 L. J., Bk. 37.

In order to defeat the title of the trustee in bankruptcy of the mortgagor, the Bills of Sale Act, 1854, requires that much more should be done by the mortgagee than would be necessary with reference to the doctrine of reputed ownership. Id.

Two ladies executed, on the 16th of June, 1873, a bill of sale of all their furniture and other effects, including some cows and a pony, to secure the repayment of a loan of 144l. The bill of sale was never registered. On the 10th of February, 1874, the mortgagee put two men into possession. These men slept in the house, but the mortgagors continued to use the furniture and other articles just as formerly. They retained the keys of the premises and used the pony when they pleased, and the cows were milked by their servant. On the morning of the 14th of February the men in possession commenced removing the furniture and packing it into vans which had been brought there, the vans, while they were being loaded, standing on a drive inside the premises occupied by the mortgagors. In the afternoon the vans with the furniture and also the cows and the pony were taken away. But before this had been done, about noon the same day, the mortgagors filed a liquidation petition:—Held, that the mortgagee had not done enough before the petition was filed to take the goods out of the possession or apparent possession of the mortgagors; that up to the morning of the 14th of February the mortgagee's possession was only a formal one, and inasmuch as the mortgagors had, on the 11th of February, committed an act of bankruptcy, by executing a second mortgage of their furniture and other effects (which formed substantially their whole property) to secure an antecedent debt, that the trustee under the liquidation was entitled to the goods. Id.

Under the terms of an unregistered bill of sale of goods, given to secure a debt, the grantor was to be allowed to remain in possession of the goods until default in payment of the debt after demand. Default having been made, the grantee became entitled under the bill to take possession of the goods, and accordingly demanded them from the owner of a house in which the grantor had placed them, and threatened to take them by force. The grantor, however, remained in possession of the goods until she filed a petition for liquidation:—Held, that the fact that the grantee was entitled to and demanded possession did not take the goods out of the grantor's possession within the Bills of Sale Act, and that the trustee was entitled to the goods as against the grantee. Ancona v. Rogers, 1 Ex. D. 285; 46 L. J., Ex. 121; 35 L. T. 115; 24 W. R. 1000—C. A. Reversing, 33 L. T. 749.

Held, also, that if the grantor had bailed the goods with a bailee to hold on account of the grantor, the goods would still have been in the possession of the grantor within the act, and would not have been taken out of the grantor's possession by the fact that the grantee was entitled to and demanded possession. Id.

In an action to enforce an agreement by B., an innkeeper, to give a bill of sale of his furniture and effects, A., obtained the appointment of a receiver, who entered into possession on the 16th of March, 1876, and served the customers. During the night B. absconded, and next day (the 17th of March) filed a liquidation petition, under which a receiver was appointed in bankruptcy. The two receivers remained in joint possession:—Held, that the case did not fall within the provisions of the Bills of Sale Act, and that the possession of A.'s receiver had taken the goods out of the order and disposition of B. at the time of his bankruptcy; and accordingly that the title of A. prevailed over that of B.'s trustee in bankruptcy. Taylor v. Eckersley, 5 Ch. D. 740; 36 L. T. 442; 25 W. R. 527.

A bill of sale was executed in July, 1870, in accordance with an agreement made in October, 1868. The grantor filed a petition for liquidation on the same day, but after the execution of the bill of sale, and the bill of sale was registered within twenty-one days. The grantee having taken possession of the goods before adjudication:—Held, that the title of the holder of the bill of sale prevailed over that of the trustee. Homan, Ex parte, Broadbent, In re, 12 L. R., Eq. 598; 19 W. R. 1078.

A debtor on the eve of insolvency being pressed for payment by a creditor, wrote a letter purporting to transfer to him 500 tons of coals lying at his wharf, the proceeds of which he agreed to hand over to the creditor till his debt was discharged. On the following day the debtor filed a petition for liquidation. The next day the creditor, not having heard of the filing of the petition, but suspecting that the debtor was insolvent, made a formal demand for the coals, and sent a man to take possession of them, who was forcibly ejected by the debtor. The letter was registered under the Bills of Sale Act, and a resolution was afterwards passed by the creditors agreeing to a liquidation:—Held, that the letter operated as an equitable assignment of the coals, and although it was intended by the parties that the coals should remain in the possession of the debtor, yet the creditor had a right to demand possession of them if he suspected the insolvency of the debtor; and that when that was done they ceased to be in the order and disposition of the debtor with the consent of the true owner. Montagu, Ex parte, O'Brien, In re, 1 Ch. D. 554; 34 L. T. 197; 24 W. R. 309—C. A.

Prior Act of Bankruptcy without Notice.]—The holder of an unregistered bill of sale of personal chattels, given to secure a bona fide present advance, took actual possession under the powers contained in his mortgage deed. Five days later the mortgagees filed a liquidation petition, and the trustee claimed the goods comprised in the bill of sale, on the ground that his title related back to an act of bankruptcy which the debtor had committed by denying himself to some of his creditors who called at his place of business the day before possession was taken. The mortgagor was ignorant of the prior act of bankruptcy:—Held, that the trustee was entitled to the goods. Turner, In re, Attwater, Ex parte, 5 Ch. D. 27; 46 L. J., Bk. 41; 35 L. T. 682; 25 W. R. 206—C. A.

Unregistered Agreement for Bill of Sale.]—

Though an unregistered agreement may be a good consideration to support a duly registered bill of sale, it cannot be itself relied on as giving any right to the holder against the trustee in bankruptcy, though possession has been demanded under it. Mauckay, Ex parte, Jerome, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 643; 42 L. J., Bk. 68; 28 L. T. 828; 21 W. R. 664.

Validity of Contracts not to charge or alienate Goods assigned by Bill of Sale.—There is nothing illegal or contrary to the policy of the bankrupt laws in a stipulation by the assignor on an assignment of goods, under which they are to remain in his possession, not to do any act by means of which the goods assigned might become charged or alienated, or whereby the assignment might become ineffective, or the assignor might be deprived of them. Hill v. Cowdery, 1 H. & N. 360; 25 L. J., Ex. 285.

It is a breach of such stipulation for the assignor, while the goods are in his possession, to file a declaration of insolvency, upon which a fiat issues, under which the goods are seized by the assignees as being in the possession and order of the bankrupt as reputed owner by the consent of the true owner; for there would be nothing illegal or contrary to the policy of the bankrupt laws in an express stipulation by the assignor not to file such a declaration, so as that the goods assigned might be liable to be seized in bankruptcy, or while the goods remained in his possession; and his duty would be, to give notice to the assignee of his insolvency, that the latter might remove them, and thus they might no longer remain in the possession and order of the assignor as the owner by consent of the true owner; and as the effect of the act of bankruptcy, while the goods so remained in his order and possession was to vest them in the assignees in bankruptcy, the act of filing the declaration was an act by means whereof the assignee was deprived of the goods. Id.

Bills of Sale Act, 1882, s. 15.—The Bills of Sale Act, 1882, repeals the 20th section of the Bills of Sale Act, 1878, in respect of bills of sale given by way of security, but not in respect of bills of sale given by way of absolute transfer, and therefore chattels comprised in a registered bill of sale given by way of absolute transfer are not in the order and disposition of the grantor within the Bankruptcy Act. Swift v. Pannell, 24 Ch. D. 210; 48 L. T. 351; 31 W. R. 543.

Notwithstanding the repeal of s. 20 of the Bills of Sale Act, 1878, by s. 15 of the Bills of Sale Act, 1882, the effect of s. 3 of the latter act is, that the grantee of a bill of sale, registered under the Act of 1878 before the coming into operation of the Act of 1882, is, so long as the registration is subsisting, entitled to the protection afforded by s. 20 against the "order and disposition" of the grantor, even when an act of bankruptcy is committed by the grantor after the coming into operation of the Act of 1882. Isard, Ex parte, Chapple, In re, 23 Ch. D. 409; 52 L. J., Ch. 802; 49 L. T. 230; 32 W. R. 218—C. A.

d. Ships and Cargoes.

Under 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11.—The sole owner of a ship secretly mortgaged three fourth shares in her to a creditor as a security for a debt, and was allowed by the latter to retain the sole possession, management, and control of her until he became bankrupt, and though the requisites of the registry acts had been complied with:—Held, that the whole vessel passed to the assignees under 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11, and that trover would lie against the mortgagee, who had taken possession of the ship upon the bankruptcy of the mortgagor. Kirkley v. Hodgson, 2 D. & R. 848; 1 B. & C. 588.

The owner of the major part of a vessel lying in port mortgaged it, and transferred the bill of sale to the mortgagees. The mortgagees did not take possession, but suffered the mortgagor and the other part owners to have the management, and act as the visible owners of the vessel. The mortgagor having become bankrupt, his share in the vessel passed to his assignees, under 21 Jac. 1, c. 19. Hall v. Gurney, 3 Dougl. 356.

—Bill of Sale—Parol Agreement.—A. & B., owners of a ship, executed an absolute bill of sale to C. & D. for a nominal consideration. There was a parol agreement between them that C. & D. should accept bills for the accommodation of A. & B.; that the ship should be a security to C. & D. for any advances they should make on such acceptances; and that, until default made by A. & B. in providing for the acceptances, the ship should remain in their possession and management. The ship was registered in the names of C. & D., but A. & B. remained in the possession and management of her, appeared to the world as owners, and obtained credit from appearing so. Before default made by A. & B. in providing for the acceptances, C. & D. became bankrupt, and their assignees immediately seized and sold the ship. A. & B. afterwards became bankrupt:—Held, that trover for the ship could not be maintained by their assignees against the assignees of C. & D.; for the parol agreement could not be set up against the bill of sale, and the case did not come within the 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11, the ship having been seized before the bankruptcy of A. & B.; and though the bill of sale, unaccompanied by possession, might be void as against creditors, it was binding upon A. & B. and their assignees. Robinson v. McDonnell, 2 B. & A. 134.

—Mortgagee taking Possession on Arrival.—Where a ship was mortgaged at sea, with a proviso that the mortgagor should continue in possession till failure of payment of the mortgage money on demand; the grand bill of sale was delivered, and the mortgagor became bankrupt before the arrival of the ship, and the mortgagee took possession on her arrival:—Held, that he might maintain trover against the assignees who took the ship from him, notwithstanding he made no demand either on the bankrupt or his assignees. Atkinson v. Maling, 2 T. R. 462. And see Richardson v. Campbell, 5 B. & A. 196.

A transfer of a ship and cargo at sea, conveyed by M. to S. as a security for money borrowed, by executing and delivering to S. a bill of sale of the ship, and a policy upon the ship and cargo, and indorsing the bills of lading, did not pass the property to S., where S. neglected, upon the ship's return and notice thereof, to take possession, or to do any act to notify the transfer of the property to him; but that the property passed to the assignees of M., who became bankrupt, as being in the possession, order, and disposition of M. at the time when he became bankrupt, within the 21 Jac. 1, c. 19. Mair v. Glennie, 4 M. & S. 240.

Under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 125.—A ship purchased by a firm consisting of A., B., and C., and subject to a lien in favour of D. and E., was registered in the names of B., C., D., and E., and an agreement was subsequently entered into by the firm to assign the ship to other persons as security, of which no notice was given to D. and E. The firm having subsequently become bankrupt:—Held, that if the agreement had not been void under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, the interest of the mortgagees would not have passed to the assignee under the order and disposition clause in the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 125. Liverpool Borough Bank v. Turner, 1 Johns. & H. 159; 29 L. J., Ch. 827. Affirmed, 30 L. J., Ch. 379.

—Assignment of Ship in course of Building.]

—A ship-builder assigned to a creditor an unfinished ship, and agreed to complete it at his own expense, the value of the finished ship to be set off against an equal amount of the pre-existing debt. The ship-builder's course of trade was to build ships on his own account, and sell them when complete. Before he had quite completed his ship, he became bankrupt:—Held, that the ship did not pass to his assignees as being within his order and disposition. Holderness v. Rankin, 2 De G., F. & J. 258; 29 L. J., Ch. 753; 6 Jur., N. S. 928; S. C., 28 Beav. 180; 6 Jur., N. S. 903, affirmed.

—Bill of Sale Registered after Bankruptcy.]

—By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 55, s. 31, the sale of a registered ship shall be by an instrument in writing containing a recital of the certificate of registry, otherwise such transfer shall not be valid or effectual for any purpose whatsoever, either in law or equity; by s. 34, no instrument shall be valid to pass the property in a ship or for any other purpose, until it shall have been registered by the proper officers; and by s. 35, as soon as it shall have been registered, it shall be valid and effectual to pass the property against all persons whatsoever. The mortgagees of a ship under a bill of sale in writing, executed before, but not registered until after, the bankruptcy of the mortgagor, had not taken possession of the ship; the bankrupt's assignees claimed to hold the ship, on the ground, either that it had not passed from the bankrupt at the time of the bankruptcy, or that it was in his order and disposition:—Held, that under these sections, the operation of a bill of sale commenced not from the time of execution, but from the time of registration only, and that all rights which accrued by the act of the law or of the vendor before registration, were as valid against the mortgagee or vendee as if the unregistered bill of sale had not existed; that the ship therefore passed to the assignees as part of the property of the bankrupt, and not as property of the mortgagee in the bankrupt's order and disposition. Boyson v. Gibson, 4 C. B. 121; 16 L. J., C. P. 147.

—Unregistered Deposit of Mortgage Deeds

—Bankruptcy of Mortgagees.]—Where registered mortgagees of three fishing boats deposited the mortgage deeds with their bankers as security for a debt, and afterwards became bankrupt:—Held, that, the statutory form of assignment being by indorsement, the mortgages could not be dealt with by the bankrupts, and, therefore, were not in their order and disposition. Lacon v. Liffen, 4 Giff. 75; 9 Jur., N. S. 13. Affirmed on appeal, 32 L. J., Ch. 315; 9 Jur., N. S. 477; 7 L. T. 774; 11 W. R. 474.

Cargoes at Sea—Notice to Master excused.]—

A., by deed, dated the 11th of November, 1857, assigned the cargo with which the ship Esturias was then laden, and which thereafter should be placed on board, to B. for securing the balance of a banking account. On the 23rd January, 1858, notice of the deed was sent, directed to the captain of the ship, "west coast of Africa," but it never reached him. At the date of the deed, B. had reason to expect that the ship would soon sail on her homeward voyage. In fact, she was then on the west coast of Africa taking in and seeking cargo. On the 18th January, 1858, she was still taking in and seeking cargo, and on the 1st February to the 11th received part of the cargo of another ship belonging to A. On the 12th February she sailed on her homeward voyage. On the 1st March A. was adjudicated bankrupt. On the arrival of the Esturias the master was served with a copy of the notice. In an action by A.'s assignees to recover the proceeds of the cargo:—Held, that the deed operated as an equitable assignment of the cargo, and that there was no distinction between the part of the cargo put on board before the assignment and the part put on board after; and that there was no default in B. in not giving notice of the deed; and therefore the goods were not in the order and disposition of the bankrupt with the consent of the true owner within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 125. Acraman v. Bates, 2 El. & El. 456; 29 L. J., Q. B. 78; 6 Jur., N. S. 294; 1 L. T. 322.

—Assignment to Shipowner.]—Goods, the property of A., which were on board a ship were assigned to B., the owner of the ship, in order to secure a debt from A. to B. The ship at the time of the assignment was abroad, and under the command of the mate; before she arrived in England, A. committed an act of bankruptcy:—Held, that the goods were virtually in the possession of B. at the time of the assignment, and that he retained his lien as against the assignees of the bankrupt. Belcher v. Oldfield, 8 Scott, 221; 6 Bing. N. C. 102; 3 Jur. 1194.

e. Goods Sold by Bankrupt but not Delivered.

Set Apart.]—Wine sold by the bankrupt, remaining in the bankrupt's cellar, set apart in a particular bin, and marked with the purchaser's seal, and entered in the bankrupt's books as belonging to the purchaser, is not in the order and disposition of the bankrupt. Marrable, Ex parte, 1 Glyn & J. 402.

The plaintiff agreed to purchase from K. 100 quarters of barley, being part of a larger quantity which the plaintiff saw and approved of, and of which he took away a sample. It was also agreed that the plaintiff should send his own sacks to K.; that K. should fill the sacks with the barley, take them to a railway, and place them on trucks, to be conveyed to the plaintiff. The plaintiff sent 200 sacks, and K. filled 155 of them with barley from a larger quantity. The barley was not delivered, though repeatedly demanded by the plaintiff, and promised by K.; K. becoming embarrassed, took the barley out of the sacks, and mixed it with the bulk, without the privity of the plaintiff. K. was soon after adjudicated a bankrupt. The assignees thereupon removed the barley, and claimed the whole as the bankrupt's property:—Held, that the property in the barley in the 155 sacks passed to the plaintiff by the appropriation made by K., with the assent of the plaintiff, a priori as well as subsequently. Allridge v. Johnson, 7 El. & Bl. 885; 26 L. J., Q. B. 296; 3 Jur., N. S. 913.

Held, also, that notwithstanding the prior conversion by K., the removal of the barley by the assignees was a conversion by them. Ib.

A carriage finished and paid for before the bankruptcy of the maker, but suffered to remain on his premises at the request of the person for whom it was made, on account of his being about to go abroad, cannot be taken by the assignees as in the order or disposition of the bankrupt, although such bankrupt put it in his shop front, and actually sold it to another. Bartram v. Payne, 3 C. & P. 175.

In such case an actual delivery of the carriage at the house of that person for whom it is made is not necessary to constitute him the owner. Ib.

A chariot was built to the plaintiff's order, and paid for by him: when finished in other respects, the plaintiff ordered a front seat to be added; but the builder being slow in making the addition, the plaintiff sent for the chariot repeatedly, and the builder promised to deliver it. The plaintiff, being afterwards dissatisfied, ordered the chariot to be sold; and while it was, according to the custom of the trade, standing in the builder's warehouse for that purpose, the front seat not having been added, the builder became bankrupt, and his assignees seized the chariot:—Held, that the chariot did not pass to the assignees. Carruthers v. Payne, 5 Bing. 270; 2 M. & P. 429.

A. employed S. & B. to build him a greenhouse; when it was completed, they gave him notice of that fact, and requested him to remit them the price agreed on; A. accordingly remitted the money to S. & B., and desired them to keep the greenhouse until he sent for it. S. & B. afterwards packed up the sashes and framework, and deposited the whole with W., telling him it was the property of A., and requesting him to keep it for him, which W. consented to do; there had been no previous communication between A. and W. S. & B. becoming bankrupts, the greenhouse was taken possession of for their assignees:—Held, that the jury was warranted in finding that the greenhouse was not in their possession, order, and disposition as reputed owners. Wilkins v. Bromhead, 7 Scott, N. R. 921; 6 M. & G. 963; 13 L. J., C. P. 74; 8 Jur. 83.

If a person buying wine of a merchant permits it to remain in his cellar, though for the purpose of ripening, and the merchant becomes bankrupt, the assignees may take the wine as being in the possession of the bankrupt. Tanner v. Barnett, Peake's Add. Cas. 28.

Goods Sold and Hired Back.—A draper in London, being the owner of household furniture which was in his dwelling-house and shop, signed a written agreement by which he sold the furniture to a furniture dealer and hired it back at a rent of 12s. 6d. a week. He remained in the use and occupation of the furniture under the agreement for more than four years, and then filed a petition for liquidation, under which a trustee was appointed:—Held, that the furniture was in the order and disposition of the debtor as the reputed owner at the commencement of the liquidation, and that the trustee was entitled to it. Lovering, Ex parte, Jones, In re, 9 L. R. Ch. 621; 43 L. J., Bk. 116; 30 L. T. 622; 22 W. R. 853.

P., a trader, being in want of capital, sold to the plaintiffs certain agricultural machinery (including a steam-engine and threshing machine, with their appurtenances) for the sum of 700*l.*, and signed a sale or receipt note for the same. The plaintiffs, thereupon, by an agreement in writing, let the said machinery on hire to P. for a term of three years at or for the sum of 882*l.* payable by quarterly instalments of 73*l.* 10*s.* and the said agreement provided (amongst other things) that in case of default being made by P. in the payment of the sum of 882*l.*, or the said quarterly instalments, or any part thereof, or if P. during the term became bankrupt, or assigned, or parted with the possession of the machinery or any part thereof, without the consent of the plaintiffs, it should be lawful for them to resume and take absolute possession of the said machinery. Neither the sale note nor the agreement was registered under the Bills of Sale Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 36), and P. paid two instalments of 73*l.* 10*s.* due under the agreement and no more. P., without the consent or knowledge of the plaintiffs, and after he had made default in the payment of the instalments, parted with the possession of the steam-engine and threshing machine, with their appurtenances, and delivered the same to the defendant, who had no notice of the above agreement, for the purpose of having them sold by auction, and the defendant advanced 100*l.* to P. on them, and also incurred expenses in attempting to sell them. P. then committed an act of bankruptcy by absconding, and the plaintiffs demanded possession of the steam-engine and threshing machine, with their appurtenances, from the defendant, who claimed a lien upon them in respect of his commission and charges as auctioneer in such attempted sale, and also in respect of the advance of 100*l.*, which had not been repaid to him by P. In an action brought to recover the steam-engine and machinery with their appurtenances, or their value, and damages for their detention:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to judgment on the grounds that the steam-engine and machinery (whether the agreement amounted to a bill of sale or not) were not in the possession or apparent possession of P. at the time of his bankruptcy, within the meaning of the Bills of Sale Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 36), s. 1; nor in the order and disposition of P. within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 71), s. 15, sub-s. 5. Lincoln Waggon and Engine Company v. Mumford, 41 L. T. 655.

The purchaser of a dyer's plant, being unable to pay the purchase-money, re-sold it to the vendor, who never took actual possession, but demised it to the purchaser for three years, who, during that time, became bankrupt, and the assignees seized the plant in his possession, under 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11:—Held, that the property passed. Bryson v. Wylie, 1 B. & P. 83, n.

Custom to Leave Goods in Seller's hands.]—A custom that purchasers of hops from hop merchants should leave them in the merchant's warehouse for the purpose of resale, upon rent, undistinguished from the merchant's stock, is not such a custom of trade as will prevent the hops from becoming the property of the merchant's assignees, in case of bankruptcy, as being in his possession, order, and disposition—the custom not being clear, distinct, and precise enough to enable others to know that the hops so left were not the property of the possessor. Thackwaite v. Cock, 3 Taunt. 487; 2 Rose, 105. And see White v. Wilks, 5 Taunt. 176; 1 Marsh. 2.

Where a custom exists for the buyer to leave goods bought in the hands of the seller, and is so notorious as to be practically known to all persons dealing with the seller in his business, goods so left in the hands of the seller for a time not longer than is clearly within the custom do not on the bankruptcy of the seller pass to his assignees. Priestley v. Pratt, 2 L. R., Ex. 101; 36 L. J., Ex. 89; 16 L. T. 64; 15 W. R. 639.

P. purchased live stock from G., who became bankrupt within a week afterwards. Some of the animals were taken away by the buyer at the time of purchase; the remainder was left on the vendor's premises, and was taken possession of by his assignees. In an action of trover against the assignees, the jury found that it was a notorious custom in the trade to leave purchased cattle on the vendor's premises for the vendee's convenience, for such time as might be agreed upon between them:—Held, that upon this finding the animals were not at the time of the bankruptcy within the order and disposition of the bankrupt. Ib.

Goods in Warehouse of Third Party.]—A., a spirit merchant, sold to B., a wine merchant, several casks of brandy, some of which, at the time of the sale, were in A.'s own vaults, and others in the vaults of a warehouse-keeper. It was agreed between the parties, that the brandies should remain where they were until the vendee could conveniently remove them. Immediately after the sale, the vendee marked the several casks with his initials. It was notorious to the persons carrying on the wine-trade at the place where the parties resided, that this sale had taken place; but no notice of it had been given to the warehouse-keeper, with whom some of the casks were deposited: A. having become bankrupt while the brandies remained where they were originally deposited.—Held, that the whole of them passed to his assignees as goods in his possession, order, and disposition, by the consent and permission of the true owner. Knowles v. Horsfall, 5 B. & A. 134.

Custom.]—Where the custom of country tea dealers in purchasing teas from wholesale houses in London was to leave the warrants, after payment, in the hands of the London dealers, to pass the entries and make the necessary arrangements with the dock authorities for the delivery of the teas so purchased and to deliver the teas in portions as the country dealers required them; and teas were purchased in the usual course from the bankrupts, who credited the purchasers in their books with the moneys so paid to them, and indorsed the names of the purchasers upon the warrants:—Held, that the teas so purchased were not the subject of reputed ownership. Birt, In re, 15 L. T. 368.

When before the commencement of a bankruptcy the owner of goods in the possession or under the control of the trader demands the goods, bona fide, with the object of obtaining delivery of them, his consent to their remaining in or under the trader's possession or control is determined by the demand. Ward, Ex parte, Conston, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 144; 42 L. J., Bk. 17; 27 L. T. 502; 21 W. R. 115.

Therefore, when a publican purchased of spirit merchants certain hogsheads of whisky, stored in the bonded warehouse of a third party, subject to the vendor's control, and the purchaser paid to the vendor the price of the goods and also the sum required to clear a particular hogshead of the whisky and demanded delivery thereof, although the vendor filed a petition for liquidation before any steps were taken for delivering the hogshead, the purchaser was entitled to the hogshead as against the trustee in liquidation. Ib.

At the time of the presentation of a petition for liquidation by arrangement there were lying in the bonded warehouse of the debtors, who were wine and spirit merchants, in Liverpool, certain butts of whisky which they had sold to the purchaser. The goods were left there for the convenience of the purchaser, to whom a delivery warrant had been given by the vendors, in which they stated that they held the goods to his order as warehousemen. The vendors did not carry on business as general warehousemen, but it was proved to be the usual custom of the wine and spirit trade, in Liverpool, for goods sold in bond to remain in the possession or under the control of the vendors, in the bonded warehouse in which they were at the time of sale, until they were required by the purchaser for use:—Held, that the existence of a custom of this nature, shewn to be well known among persons concerned in the wine and spirit trade, excluded the doctrine of reputed ownership, and that the goods did not pass to the trustee. Watkins, Ex parte, Conston, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 520; 42 L. J., Bk. 50; 28 L. T. 793; 21 W. R. 530.

At the commencement of the liquidation of wine and spirit merchants, whisky which they had sold was lying in the bonded warehouse of a third party to the order of the vendors. The delivery order was not sent to the purchaser till after the petition had been filed. It was shewn that it is the well-known custom in the wine and spirit trade for goods after sale to remain in the bonded warehouse of the vendor, or in that of a third party to his order, till the purchaser requires them for use:—Held, that the custom excluded reputation of ownership in the vendors, and that the purchaser was entitled to the whisky, the giving of the delivery order being immaterial. Vaun, Ex parte, Conston or Conston, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 602; 43 L. J., Bk., 113; 30 L. T. 739; 22 W. R. 811.

Held, also, that it was immaterial that the goods were in the warehouse of a third party, instead of being in the vendor's own warehouse. Ib.

Furniture conveyed with House—Formal Delivery—Vendor remaining in Possession—Notoriety of Transaction.]—Where, by agreement between B. and the defendant, B. agreed, on payment to him of a sum certain, to convey to the defendant a dwelling-house, and to deliver possession of all the household furniture and stock; and that, after formal possession delivered to the defendant, B. should be allowed to remain in possession for three months, without paying rent; which agreement was notorious in the neighbourhood, and the money was paid by the defendant, and a formal delivery made to him, and B. afterwards left in possession according to the agreement, and became bankrupt whilst he so remained in possession, and before the expiration of the three months:—Held, that this was not a possession by the bankrupt within 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11. Muller v. Moss, 1 M. & S. 335; 2 Rose, 99.

f. Goods of Bankrupt in Warehouses.

Dock Warrants and Warehouse Receipts.—If property is assignable by transfer tickets, the reputed owner is the possessor of the tickets. Ridout v. Lloyd, 1 Mont. 103.

—Where Transfer Complete.—The custom of the London docks is to acknowledge no title in wines, unless accompanied with possession of dock warrants indorsed by the party to whom they were originally issued. Where A. received warrants from B. not indorsed by B., and A. delivered and indorsed them to C., who afterwards procured B.'s indorsement, and A. became bankrupt:—Held, that the wines passed to C. though the notice of the transfer to the dock company, and of the indorsement by B., were subsequent to the bankruptcy. Davenport, Ex parte, 1 Deac. & Chit. 397; 1 Mont. & Bligh. 165.

Held, also, that for want of B.'s indorsement to A., and transfer into A.'s name in the company's books, A. never had the order and disposition of them. Ib.

—Deposited as Security.—A. sold a quantity of lac dye, then lying in the E. I. Company's warehouse, to B.; and after being allowed to retain possession of the delivery warrant, pledged the latter to C. for an advance of money, and shortly afterwards became bankrupt, without having redeemed the warrant:—Held, that A. had not the possession, order, and disposition of the goods at the time of his bankruptcy within 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11, and consequently the property in the warrant did not vest in his assignees. Greening v. Clarke, 6 D. & R. 735; 4 B. & C. 316.

Where A., having occasion to borrow money of B., left with him, as a collateral security, warrants of the West India Dock Company for sugars deposited in their warehouses, and entered in his name in their books, and afterwards became bankrupt:—Held, that A. had not such a possession of the sugars as would enable his assignees to maintain trover for them, as the transfer of the warrants was a complete transfer of the possession before the bankruptcy, so as to take the case out of 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11. Lucas v. Dorrien, 1 Moore, 29; 7 Taunt. 278.

Goods were deposited in bond in the warehouse of L. to await the order of the depositor, who signed receipts for the same and delivered the receipts to his bankers to secure advances. No notice of such delivery of the receipts was given to L. The depositor subsequently became bankrupt:—Held, that the goods remained in his order and disposition, and as such passed to his assignees. In re, Wilson, 14 L. T. 369.

Goods left in Vendor's Name—Demand by Vendee.—A., in France, employed B., in England, to sell wines on commission, as well as to purchase other wines on A.'s account, in London, for which he furnished him with letters of credit. The wines were generally bought and sold by B. in his own name. Part of the wines consigned by A. was in the dock warehouses, standing in B.'s name, and part formed one indiscriminate stock in B.'s cellar. A. closed connexion with B., and required him to deliver up all the wines; but B. neglected to comply with this requisition, and shortly afterwards became bankrupt:—Held, first, that the court had jurisdiction to order the assignees of B. to deliver up these wines to A.; secondly, that it was not a case of reputed ownership; thirdly, that A. might sue the purchasers of the wines, in the name of B., or his assignees. But, fourthly, that no order could be made for the payment to A. of any moneys, the produce of the wines, if mixed with the other moneys of B. at the time of his bankruptcy. Moldant, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & Chit. 351.

The 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11, only transferred to the assignees of a bankrupt such goods as, by the consent of the true owner, the bankrupt had in his possession at the time of his bankruptcy; therefore, where a purchaser of goods, lying at a wharf in the name of the seller, received from him at the time of the sale an order on the wharfinger for the delivery of the goods, but suffered them to remain in the name of the seller for several months after, during which time the seller disposed of a part; but upon notice of the seller's insolvency, the purchaser carried the order to the wharfinger, and had the goods transferred into his own name; and nine days after that the seller became bankrupt:—Held, that his assignees were not entitled to these goods; for there was a complete transfer of the possession before the bankruptcy. Jones v. Dwyer, 15 East, 21; 1 Rose, 339.

g. Goods of Bankrupt taken in Execution.

Re-let to Debtor.—If the furniture of a coffee-house is taken in execution by a creditor, and, without ever being removed, let by him to the keeper of the coffee-house, who becomes bankrupt while in possession of it, the assignees may seize it under 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11. Lingham v. Biggs, 1 B. & P. 82.

Secus, as to furniture in a ready furnished private house; and also as to horses. Ib. 88.

Where a judgment creditor purchased by a bill of sale from the sheriff machinery seized in execution, belonging to his debtor; and, after marking the same with the initials of his name, allowed the debtor to retain possession, upon his agreeing to pay a rent for the use of it, and the latter remained in possession until he committed an act of bankruptcy:—Held, that as the change of ownership was not notorious, the assignees were entitled to recover the property in trover, as there was no evidence to go to the jury, that the bankrupt had ever ceased to be the reputed owner. Lingard v. Messiter, 2 D. & R. 495; 1 B. & C. 308.

—Custom of Hiring.—The fact that it is the custom of furniture dealers to let out furniture on a three years' hiring and purchase agreement does not disentitle the general public to assume that an ordinary householder is the real owner of the furniture which is in his house. Brooks, Ex parte, or Pickering, Ex parte, Fowler, In re, 23 Ch. D. 261; 48 L. T. 453; 31 W. R. 833; 47 J. P. 470—C. A. Affirming, 48 L. T. 32.

The furniture in the dwelling-house of a trader having been seized under an execution, a friend of his bought it from the sheriff at a valuation, and then verbally agreed that the debtor should continue in possession of it and use it as before, paying, by way of rent, interest at 5 per cent. per annum on the purchase money, until he should be able to repurchase it at the price given for it. This arrangement was carried out, and the debtor remained in possession of the furniture as before, until he filed a liquidation petition. He had not repurchased it. The trustee in the liquidation claimed it under the reputed ownership clause. It was admitted that there is a custom for furniture dealers to let out furniture on a three years' hiring and purchase agreement, but there was no other evidence as to the existence of any custom of hiring furniture:—Held, that the trustee was entitled to the furniture. Id.

The plaintiff's attorney, upon issuing execution, wrote to the sheriff's officer, directing him to leave the defendant's mother, or any one else, in possession of the defendant's goods, and to allow his business to be carried on as usual. The officer delivered the warrant to the defendant's shopman, ordering him to carry on the business, and account for moneys received. No money was ever paid to the plaintiff, and the warrant lay in the shopman's hands from April to June; the defendant having then become bankrupt, and his assignees claiming his goods, the sheriff returned nulla bona to the plaintiff's writ. The jury having found a verdict for the sheriff in an action against him for a false return, the court refused to grant a new trial. Doker v. Hasler, 2 Bing. 479; B. & M. 198; 10 Moore, 210.

Adverse interference with Debtor's Possession.]

—Goods left in the possession of a trader at the time he becomes bankrupt, with the consent of the true owner, pass to his assignees, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 125, although before the bankruptcy the sheriff, under a fieri facias against the goods of the bankrupt, entered on the premises and stated that he took possession of the goods, but in fact left the bankrupt still apparently in possession of them; for the sheriff was not justified in seizing the goods, and therefore his assertion that he took possession had no effect in law. Barrow v. Bell, 5 El. & Bl. 540; 25 L. J., Q. B. 2; 2 Jur., N. S. 159.

Goods which had been mortgaged by a trader, before his bankruptcy, were, at the time of the bankruptcy, in the hands of the sheriff, under an execution against the bankrupt:—Semble, that they did not pass to his assignees, as being in his order and disposition with the consent of the true owner. Fletcher v. Manning, 12 M. & W. 571; 1 C. & K. 350; 13 L. J., Ex. 150.

On the 2nd of May a bill of sale of chattels was executed, and it was afterwards duly registered. The mortgagee did not demand possession of the goods until the 15th of June. The goods had been seized on the 5th of June by the sheriff under an execution issued by another creditor, and on the 13th of June the debtor had filed a liquidation petition. The sheriff remained in possession till the 20th of June:—Held, that the sheriff's possession, being wrongful as against the mortgagee, did not prevent the goods from being in the order or disposition of the debtor at the commencement of the liquidation, and that they consequently passed to the trustee. Edey, Ex parte, Cuthbertson, In re, 19 L. R., Eq. 264; 44 L. J., Bk. 55; 31 L. T. 851; 23 W. R. 519.

h. Goods of Bankrupt in hands of Agent.

Where Agent carries on Business on Bankrupt's Premises.]—A Scotch firm had a branch in London, which was wholly conducted by an agent and manager, at a salary, but in their name. By contract he was to have a lien on goods consigned to him for bills accepted by him for the firm. The firm became bankrupt in Scotland:—Held, that the goods under the manager's control at the time were within the order and disposition of the bankrupts, and passed to their assignees unaffected by his lien. Hoggard v. Mackenzie, 25 Beav. 493; 4 Jur., N. S. 1008.

Goods sent on Approval.]—A horsedealer supplied a customer with a pair of horses, for which she paid 170*l.*, but finding the horses not according to warranty, she returned them. Thereupon the dealer sent another pair no better than the former, requesting the customer to keep them until he could furnish her with a better pair. This she did, until the dealer became bankrupt, without having repaid the 170*l.*, when it was found that the horses did not belong to him but to an employer, for whom he was agent to sell, but not to pledge, the horses:—Held, that the horses were in the bankrupt's order and disposition; and that the customer could not enforce a lien on them as against the trustee in bankruptcy. Roy, Ex parte, Silence, In re, 7 Ch. D. 70; 47 L. J., Bk. 36; 37 L. T. 508; 26 W. R. 82.

Factor—Lien.]—S., who had for many years traded as a timber merchant in his own name, entered into an agreement with F. & Co. who were also timber merchants, to carry on his business thenceforth as their agent at a remuneration by way of a share of profits. The business was thenceforth carried on under this agreement, but in the name of S. as before. S. dealt with the timber in his possession as if he were the absolute owner of it (except as between himself and F. & Co.), and there was nothing done to inform the outside world of the change which had taken place. In the course of the business F. & Co. drew bills on S., which he accepted in his own name to be protected by F. & Co. Both F. & Co., and afterwards S., filed liquidation petitions. Before S.'s liquidation F. & Co.'s trustee demanded the timber in his hands, which was refused:—Held, that to the extent of the current bills, S.'s estate had a lien on the timber. Fawcus, In re, Buck, Ex parte, 3 Ch. D. 795; 34 L. T. 807.

Money paid to Acceptor to take up Accommodation Bill—Bankruptcy of Drawer.]—A drawer of an accommodation bill, a few days before it was due, voluntarily, and not in contemplation of bankruptcy, gave to the acceptor money wherewith to pay the bill. Before the bill was due, the drawer became bankrupt, and his assignees sued the acceptor for the amount of the bill, as for money had and received to their use:—Held, that the action was not maintainable, as the authority to apply the money in payment of the bill having been conferred by the drawer upon the acceptor in performance of his implied contract to indemnify, was irrevocable. Yates v. Hoppe, 9 C. B. 541; 19 L. J., C. P. 180; 14 Jur. 372.

1. Property incapable of Manual Delivery.

i. Policies of Assurance.

Authority to retain Proceeds.]—A letter was written by a trader, before his bankruptcy, to the agent of an insurance company, authorizing him to retain out of the proceeds of a fire policy the amount of the account due by the bankrupt to a particular creditor; the letter was not acted upon, and the policy remained in possession of the trader up to the time of his bankruptcy, when the policy came to the hands of the assignees, to whom the insurance company paid the full amount:—Held, that upon the true construction of the letter, it did not operate as an assignment pro tanto of the policy, nor create, in favour of the particular creditor, any charge or lien upon the proceeds; although the company had notice of the letter before they paid the money to the assignees. Foster, In re, 7 Ir. R., Eq. 294.

Assignment—Notice must be given.]—The assignment of a policy of insurance without notice to the office, does not prevent the operation of the clause of reputed ownership. Tennyson, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 67.

If notice of the assignment of a policy of assurance on a life is not given to the insurer, it remains, upon the bankruptcy of the assignor, in his order and disposition, although the office does not require notice, and keeps no book or registry of notices which might be given; and it passes to his assignees. Williams v. Thorp, 2 Sim. 257; S. P., Colvill, Ex parte, 1 Mont. 110; Duncan v. Chamberlayne, 4 Jur. 819.

Actual notice of the assignment of a policy effected with the Equitable Assurance Society is necessary to take the policy out of the order and disposition of the assured. Thompson v. Speirs, 13 Sim. 469.

Deposit.]—A policy effected by a bankrupt on his life, and deposited by him, before his bankruptcy, with the defendants, as a security for money then and previously advanced by them to him, is not in the order and disposition of the bankrupt, with the consent of the true owner, within 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 72. Gibson v. Overbury, 7 M. & W. 555. Explained in next case.

A bankrupt delivered a policy of insurance on his life to the defendant, with the intention of giving him an interest in the money receivable under the policy, as security for a debt due to him from the bankrupt. No notice of the transaction was given to the office:—Held, that the policy itself, as well as the money receivable under it, was in the order and disposition of the bankrupt, and that, therefore, the assignee was entitled to recover that document from the defendant. Green v. Ingham, 36 L. J., C. P. 236; 2 L. R., C. P. 525; 16 L. T. 455; 15 W. R. 841.

Three policies of assurance on a life were deposited by A. with B., to secure a debt due from A. to B. No notice of the deposit was given to the offices with which the insurances had been effected. A. afterwards became bankrupt:—Held, that the policies were in his order and disposition at the time of his bankruptcy. Prior, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 586; 13 L. J., Bk. 15.

A. (a retiring partner) agreed to assign a policy (part of the partnership assets) to B. (the continuing partner) on certain terms. B. mortgaged it to C., who gave notice to the office. B. afterwards became bankrupt:—Held, that the policy was not within the order and disposition of B., either as against A. or C. Langmead, In re, 20 Beav. 20.

— Mutual Offices.]—A bankrupt assigned, by way of security, two policies which he had effected on his life at two mutual offices, constituted on the principle of permitting the parties assured to participate in the profits, but no notice of the assignment was given at either of the offices previously to the bankruptcy. At one of the offices the custom was not to enter the transfer of any policy in the books of the office until the dropping of the life on which it was effected; and at the other office no entry of the assignment could be found:—Held, that the policies were subject to the charge, and did not belong to the assignees. Heathcote, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 714; 6 Jur. 1001.

Notwithstanding a policy may have been effected with a mutual insurance company, express notice of a deposit of it by way of equitable mortgage must be given to the company, in order to take it out of the order and disposition of the depositor. Bromley, In re, 13 Sim. 475.

And notwithstanding the company has indorsed on the policy a regulation to the effect that they do not require notice; and the fact that one of the parties to the assignment was an agent for the office, does not amount to constructive notice of the assignment to the office, if he was not an agent for that particular purpose. Patch, Ex parte, 12 L. J., Bk. 44; 7 Jur. 820.

Where a policy of assurance is mortgaged, it is necessary for the mortgagee to give notice to the assurance office, in order to take such policy out of the order and disposition of the mortgagor, in the event of his becoming bankrupt. Thompson v. Tomkins, 2 Drew. & Sm. 8; 31 L. J., Ch. 633; 8 Jur., N. S. 185; 6 L. T. 305; 10 W. R. 310.

Sub-mortgage by Mortgagee.]—Policies of assurance were mortgaged and delivered to A., who gave notice to the offices. A. mortgaged and delivered these policies to B., who gave no notice to the offices, and did not make the transaction public. A. afterwards became bankrupt:—Held, that the policies were in the order and disposition of A. at the time of his bankruptcy. Pott, Ex parte, 12 L. J., Bk. 33; 7 Jur. 159.

Bankrupts, being mortgagees of various life policies, of which the respective offices had notice, deposited them with their bankers, to secure the repayment of advances, but the bankers gave no notice of such deposit to the different offices:—Held, that the policies must be considered as in the order and disposition of the bankrupts within 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 72, and that the same principle applied to one of the policies which was effected with a mutual company. Arkwright, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 129.

A mortgagee of a policy of assurance created an equitable sub-mortgage of it, by deposit, and became bankrupt. No notice of the original mortgage was given to the office, nor was any notice of the sub-mortgage given either to the office or to the mortgagor:—Held, that the sub-mortgage was invalid, as against the assignees. Wood, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 315; 12 L. J., Bk. 42; 7 Jur. 521.

Life Policy—Notice to Company of Mortgage.]

—On the 7th of October, 1874, B. mortgaged a policy effected on his own life with the L. Company to P., who, on the 9th of October, 1874, gave notice of the mortgage to the insurance company. P., being indebted to the M. Bank on foot of a promissory note in which he joined for the accommodation of B., deposited the policy and mortgage deed with the bank on the 21st of February, 1878, but notice of the deposit was not given to the insurance company until July, 1880. B. filed a petition for arrangement on the 12th of September, 1877, and under a resolution of the 12th of March, 1878, all his estate and effects were vested in the official assignees and a trustee, for the benefit of his creditors. P. also filed a petition for arrangement on the 13th of June, 1879, and under a resolution all his estates and effects were vested in the official assignees and a trustee, in trust for his creditors. On the 19th of November, 1879, P. and C., who were partners, were adjudicated bankrupts on a creditor's petition:—Held, that the policy of insurance was, at the date of the adjudication, in the order and disposition of P. with the consent of the true owners. Power, In re, 11 L. R., Ir. 93.

Notice to Office—No Notice to Mort-

gagor.]—A mortgagee of a policy deposited it by way of sub-mortgage, and gave notice of the sub-mortgage to the insurance office, but not to the original mortgagor:—Held, that this was sufficient to take the policy out of the reputed ownership of the mortgagee. Barnett, Ex parte, 1 De Gex, 194.

Sufficient Notice.]—A letter to the secretary of an insurance office, in which the writer says, "I am holder of the under-mentioned policies," and inquires what the office would give for them, is sufficient notice of an assignment. Stright, Ex parte, 1 Mont. 502; 2 Deac. & Chit. 314.

A party to whom a bankrupt had assigned a policy of insurance, sent an agent to the office for the purpose of paying the annual premium, who, in the course of conversation with one of the clerks in the office, told him of the policy having been so assigned:—Held, that this was not sufficient notice to the insurance office. Carbis, Ex parte, 4 Deac. & Chit. 354.

A casual remark addressed to the secretary of an insurance company by a policy-holder, to the effect that he had deposited his policy as a security, is not notice to the company sufficient to take the policy out of the holder's order and disposition on his subsequent bankruptcy. Edwards v. Martin, 1 L. R., Eq. 121; 35 L. J., Ch. 186; 13 L. T. 236; 14 W. R. 25.

A party, with whom a bankrupt deposited a policy as security for an advance of money, sent an agent to the office for the purpose of ascertaining whether the bankrupt had paid the premium, with directions to him to pay it if the bankrupt had omitted to do so. The agent told a clerk in the office that the policy had been so deposited; semble, that this was not such a notice to the office as to take the policy out of the order and disposition of the bankrupt; be the practice of the office requiring the notice to be in writing. Edwards v. Scott, 2 Scott, N. R. 266; 1 M. & G. 962; 1 Drink. 6; 4 Jur. 1062.

In 1845, R. effected a policy upon his life, and assigned it by way of mortgage to G. In 1858, W. (who was G.'s attorney) went to the office to pay a premium and to confer with the secretary upon other business connected with the office, and then informed him of the assignment. In 1862, R. became a bankrupt, and he died in 1871. After his death the office for the first time had notice of his bankruptcy:—Held, that the conversation between W. and the secretary in 1858 was a sufficient notice to the office that the policy had been assigned and was not in the bankrupt's order and disposition; the 30 & 31 Vict. c. 144 requiring such notice to be in writing not being at that time in force. Alleton v. Chichester, 10 L. R., C. P. 319; 44 L. J., C. P. 153; 32 L. T. 151; 23 W. R. 393.

Where Solicitor Agent of Office.]—D., having agreed to lend 1,000*l.* to W. upon a policy on his life, gave directions for effecting it to his attorney, L., of Tiverton, who was agent there of the West of England Insurance Company. L. accordingly transmitted proposals for a policy to the head office at Exeter, without mentioning that D. was the beneficial owner, and obtained it therefrom, and delivered it to D. L. was authorized by the company to receive notices of assignment of policies on their behalf. W. became bankrupt:—Held, that there was sufficient notice to take the policy out of the order and disposition of W., and to give the assignment validity as against his assignees, inasmuch as notice to L. was notice to the company, and notice communicated to him in his character of attorney to D., for the purpose of being transmitted to the company, was effectual as a notice to him in his capacity as agent to the company. Gale v. Lewis, 6 Q. B. 730; 16 L. J., Q. B. 119; 11 Jur. 780.

Sending Notice by Post.]—In 1816, D. assigned a policy on his life to a trustee, to secure a sum of money owing to W.; and soon afterwards the solicitor of W. caused a memorandum to be entered in the office of the company, directing that all letters were to be sent to such solicitor; and the premiums were thenceforth paid by W. through the hands of such solicitor, but the company was not informed on whose behalf the solicitor acted. In 1826, D. became bankrupt, and his assignees declined to interfere respecting the policy. The premiums continued to be paid by W. through his solicitor during his life, and by the executors of W. through their bankers after his death. D. died in 1839:—Held, that the policy was in the order and disposition of the bankrupt, and that there was not any notice given to the office of the assignment of the policy, to take it out of such order and disposition; that the conduct of the assignees did not amount to an abandonment of any right which they had to the benefit of the policy; that the executors of W. had a lien on the policy for the amount of the premiums which had been paid by W. and his estate, and the interest thereon, and that they were entitled to payment of the amount thereof out of the moneys payable under the policy. West v. Reid, 2 Hare, 249; 12 L. J., Ch. 245; 7 Jur. 147.

Notice after Act of Bankruptcy.]—A deposit of a policy, by way of security for a debt, made previously to the commission of an act of bankruptcy by the depositor, and, previously to the issuing of a fiat, though subsequently to the act of bankruptcy, notified to the insurance company by the party with whom the deposit was made, is valid as against the assignees, under 2 & 3 Vict. c. 29 (similar to 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106); it not appearing that, at the time the notice was given to the company, the party giving it was aware of an act of bankruptcy having been committed. Slyan, In re, 1 Ph. 105; S. P., Smith, Ex parte, 6 Jur. 158.

— After Adjudication.]—W. having mortgaged a policy on his life, afterwards became bankrupt, and died four years after the bankruptcy. The mortgagee thereupon gave notice to the insurance office and claimed the proceeds of the policy. No previous notice had been given of the mortgage or of the bankruptcy:—Held, that notice after the bankruptcy was insufficient, and that the policy remained in the order and disposition of the bankrupt. Webb, In re, 2 L. R., Eq. 456; 36 L. J., Ch. 341; 16 L. T. 89; 15 W. R. 529.

No act of an assignee for value after bankruptcy can give validity to his assignment as against assignees in bankruptcy. Id.

Previously to his marriage, C. insured his life in two offices for two sums of 500*l.* each, and by his marriage settlement covenanted to insure his life for not less than 2,000*l.* On the 29th of October he handed over one of the policies to the solicitor for the trustees of the settlement, and on the 9th of December signed a memorandum stating that he handed over the policies to the trustee in pursuance of the covenant contained in the settlement. He was adjudicated bankrupt on the 13th of December. The other policy was handed over to the solicitor for the trustees on the 10th of January in the following year. Notice of the claim of the trustees to the policies was given to the offices after the bankruptcy, but before any notice had been given by the assignee:—Held, that the policies were in the order and disposition of the bankrupt at the commencement of the bankruptcy, and belonged to his assignee. Caldwell, Ex parte, Currie, In re, 13 L. R., Eq. 188; 41 L. J., Bk. 55; 20 W. R. 363.

Evidence.]—To secure a balance in which a bankrupt was indebted to a banking company, he had deposited two life policies, but no notice of the deposit had been given to the insurance office:—Held, that the want of notice to the office was not conclusive evidence of the policies being in the reputed ownership of the bankrupt, and that no evidence having been adduced of such reputed ownership, the company was entitled to the policies. Cooper, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 1; 6 Jur. 467.

Memorandum of Deposit Incorrect.]—A memorandum of deposit stated that a policy on the life of the obligor was also deposited with a bond, but this was not the fact, and the policy was found in the bankrupt's chest at the time of their bankruptcy:—Held, that the policy passed to the assignees. Halifax, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 544.

Assignee in Bankruptcy must give Notice.]—The assignee in bankruptcy must be as diligent in giving notice to the company of the assignment of a policy, as a purchaser for value, and the notice is not sufficient unless given to the head office of the company. Russell, In re, 15 L. R., Eq. 26; 27 L. T. 706; 21 W. R. 97.

A policy effected by A. on his life was mortgaged in 1860 without notice to the office. He became bankrupt in 1862, and in 1868 joined in a transfer of the mortgage to B., who had no notice of the bankruptcy. After the death of A., B.'s solicitor gave notice to the office that this and other policies were mortgaged, and that he acted for the mortgagees, not naming them. Subsequently notice of the bankruptcy was given to the office:—Held, that this was sufficient to give priority to B. over the creditors in the bankruptcy of the assured. Id.

Under Irish Bankruptcy.]—On the 28th of June, 1873, M. H. by deed agreed to assign for value a policy, effected with the Reliance Assurance Society on his own life, to his father, W. H., who on the same day, by a separate deed assigned it to D. by way of equitable mortgage to secure a present loan and future advances. The parties were all resident in Ireland, and a memorandum at foot of the policy, which had been issued from the Dublin branch office, directed that notice of assignments should be given at the head office in London. Immediately upon the execution of the deeds of the 28th June, D. prepared a formal notice of the assignment to W. H., in whose name and at whose request it was signed by him and addressed and posted in Dublin to B., the society's secretary at the London office. M. H. was adjudicated a bankrupt in January, 1874, and died in the following August, when his assignees in bankruptcy gave notice to the London office, and claimed the proceeds of the policy as having been in his order or disposition at the time of his adjudication, B. deposing that D.'s notice had never reached the London office:—Held, per Ball, C., that the notice, having been duly posted, must be presumed to have reached its destination; and, per Christian, L. J., that, irrespectively of the question whether the notice was actually received at the office, the mere posting of it was effectual to prevent the policy from being in the order or disposition of the bankrupt at the date of his bankruptcy by the consent and permission of the true owner within the meaning of the Irish Bankrupt and Insolvent Act, 1857, 20 & 21 Vict. c. 60, s. 313. Hickey, In re, 10 Ir. R., Eq. 117.

M. having effected a policy of insurance on his own life, and assigned it by a post-nuptial settlement to two trustees, became bankrupt, and his assignees served notice of the adjudication on the insurance company and claimed the policy; but no order for the sale of it was made under the Irish Bankruptcy Act of 1857, s. 313. The trustees gave no notice of the assignment to them till after the adjudication, when the surviving trustee claimed the policy, and served notice of the assignment on the company, in conformity with the provisions of 30 & 31 Vict. c. 144:—

Held, on an interpleader issue between the trustee and the assignees in bankruptcy, first, that the order of adjudication did not vest the policy in the assignees, and that the trustee, in the absence of an order for its sale under s. 313, was entitled to the policy as against them. Bradley v. James, 10 Ir. R., C. L. 441.

Held, secondly, that the trustee having given to the company the statutory notice of the assignment, though after the adjudication, the validity of the notice was not affected by the possibility of the assignees subsequently obtaining an order for sale under s. 313, and that, at least till such order was obtained, he was entitled to sue at law. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that an order giving the assignees power to intervene, if so advised, in an action brought by the trustee against the company, did not amount to, and had not the effect of, an order for sale under s. 313. Ib.

Held, fourthly, that the nonjoinder of the co-trustee, if alive, ought not to be permitted to defeat the result of the trial, inasmuch as the real question had been determined which the parties came to try, viz., the respective rights of the parties claiming under the settlement, and of the assignees in bankruptcy. Ib.

ii. Shares in Companies.

Transfer in Blank—Notice.]—A transfer of shares in a company was executed by a shareholder, a blank being left for the name of the transferee and for the date. On the day on which the transfer was executed by the transferor, the assistant-secretary certified on the transfer, on the application of the purchaser, that the certificates for the shares were at the company's office, the certificates not having yet been issued to the shareholders. Before the name of a purchaser was inserted in the transfer, the transferor became bankrupt. The assistant-secretary of the company in his evidence said that after the certificate which he had made on the transfer, a transfer of the shares would not have been permitted except under the transfer or upon the production of that transfer cancelled.—Held, that the shares were neither in the order and disposition nor in the reputed ownership of the transferor at the date of his bankruptcy. Morris v. Cannan, 4 De G., F. & J. 581; 31 L. J., Ch. 425; 8 Jur., N. S. 653; 6 L. T. 521; 10 W. R. 589.

Assignment—No Notice—Qualification as Director.]—In 1846, A. lent money to B. to enable him to purchase the requisite amount of shares in two public companies, to qualify him for the office of director in each, and B. assigned the shares in both the companies, in which he had become director, to A. as a security for the loan. The qualification for the office of director in one of the companies, which was constituted by act of parliament, would have been lost by the disposal or reduction of the amount of that qualification, and the provisions of the deed by which the other company was constituted required that its directors should be possessed of or entitled to the requisite amount of shares in their own right. In 1854, B. signed a declaration of insolvency, upon which he was adjudicated a bankrupt, the shares then standing in his name, but five days previously A. gave notice to the directors of both companies of the assignment to him. At the time of his bankruptcy B. was actually a director of one of the companies, and out of office by rotation in the other, in which he probably would have been re-elected:—Held, that the shares in neither company were in the possession, or order or disposition of B. at the time of his bankruptcy, with the consent of the true owner. Littledale, Ex parte, 6 De G., Mac. & G. 714; 24 L. J., Bk. 9; 1 Jur., N. S. 385.

Mortgage—Notice to Directors.]—A shareholder in a company made an assignment of certain paid-up shares by way of mortgage. The assignee gave no notice to the company. The assignor had also unpaid shares in the same company, and in the course of discussions at the board of directors respecting the unpaid shares the assignor verbally informed the directors of the assignment of his paid-up shares; but no entry was made on the minutes of this notice. The assignor afterwards became bankrupt:—Held, that, inasmuch as the directors received the information in the course of the transaction of the business of the company, the notice was sufficient to make the assignment complete in equity; and that the shares did not remain in the order and disposition of the bankrupt. Agra Bank, Ex parte, Worcester, In re, 3 L. R., Ch. 555; 37 L. J., Bk. 23; 18 L. T. 866; 16 W. R. 879.

Certificates of shares were deposited by the secretary of a company with a bank as a security for money advanced for the use of the company. The deposit was made with the knowledge of the directors of the company, but no formal notice of such deposit had been given to them:—Held, on the bankruptcy of the secretary, that the directors having knowledge of the transaction, no further notice was necessary and that the shares were not therefore within his order and disposition. Strickart, Ex parte, 34 L. J., Ch. 6; 11 Jur., N. S. 25; 11 L. T. 554; 13 W. R. 356.

The object of the Joint Stock Companies Act, 1856, s. 19, was that the company itself should not be bound by any trust, and that no notice should have any effect as against the company; but there is nothing in the act which precludes an equitable mortgage of shares in a company, or renders an equitable mortgagee incapable of perfecting his title as against the mortgagor and his assignees in bankruptcy, by giving notice of the mortgage to the company. Stewart, Ex parte, Shelley, In re, 4 De G., J. & S. 543.

The managing director, who was also the sole secretary of a company registered under the above act, joined with all his co-directors in making an equitable mortgage of their shares to a bank, as a security for an advance to the company. The bank gave no notice to the company. On the bankruptcy of the managing director:—Held, that his shares were not in his order and disposition with the consent of the bank as the true owner thereof, but that the bank was entitled to them as mortgagee. Ib.

— By Secretary.]—A holder of shares in a railway company, which was subject to the Companies Clauses Act, 8 & 9 Vict. c. 16, was one of the secretaries of the company, and a solicitor. He borrowed money of a client on a deposit of the certificates of the shares, but no further notice of the deposit was given to the company on the solicitor becoming bankrupt:—Held, that the shares were in his order and disposition, with the consent of the client. Boulton, Ex parte, 1 De G. & J. 163; 26 L. J., Bk. 45; 3 Jur., N. S. 425.

— By Director to Company.—The directors of a company assigned their salaries and shares to the company to secure debts due from them on their private accounts, and empowered the company to direct the treasurer to retain their salaries and dividends, and to sell their shares for payment of their debts. One of the directors became bankrupt, but the power given to the company had not been exercised, and his shares still remained in his name:—Held, that they passed to his assignees as being in his order and disposition, but that the company had a right to set off against the bankrupt's debts the dividends and salary due to him at his bankruptcy. Nelson v. London Assurance Company, 2 Sim. & Stu. 292.

Shares in Name of Another.—R., having taken shares in a mining company, it became necessary, in order to complete his title, that he should sign a deed of association in London by a certain day. Finding this inconvenient, he desired his son to sign in his stead, and to let the shares stand in his (the son's name). The son executed the deed and received a voucher, certifying him to be the proprietor of seventy shares, not transferable without consent of the directors. The son afterwards sold the shares, and paid the proceeds to R., who had become bankrupt. His assignees having brought trover against him and his son for the voucher and shares:—Held, that there was no legal title on which the assignees could maintain an action. Dawson v. Rishworth, 1 B. & Ad. 574.

Shares and Certificates of Shares.—Shares in a company are not things in action within the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 15, sub-s. 5. Union Bank of Manchester, Ex parte, Jackson. In re, 12 L. R., Eq. 354; 40 L. J., Bk. 57; 24 L. T. 951; 19 W. R. 872.

A trader deposited with a bank the certificates of five shares in a gas company to secure the balance of his account current. The bank gave no notice to the company of the deposit thus made. The trader became bankrupt, and the registrar, acting for the county court judge, ordered the bank to deliver up the shares to the trustee:—Held, that the bank was the true owner of the shares to the extent of the mortgage, and that the order had been properly made. Id.

Chairman holding Shares on behalf of Company.]

—The chairman of a company, with the assent of the company, held in his name shares in another company, which had been purchased with the money of the first-named company. The chairman became bankrupt:—Held, that, though the purchase by one company of shares in another company was illegal, the shares were not within the order and disposition of the bankrupt so as to pass to his assignees, and that he must transfer them as the company should direct. Great Eastern Railway Company v. Turner, 8 L. R., Ch. 149; 42 L. J., Ch. 83; 27 L. T. 697; 21 W. R. 163. Reversing S. C., 41 L. J. Ch. 634; 26 L. T. 819; 20 W. R. 736.

Sub-Mortgage.—A trader, before his bankruptcy, agreed to give, as security for a debt which he owed, his interest in some shares in a company which were already subject to a prior mortgage. At the commencement of the bankruptcy the shares were registered in the name of the first mortgagee. It was not satisfactorily proved that notice of the second mortgage had been given to the first mortgagee:—Held, that the bankrupt's interest in the shares at the time of the bankruptcy was a chose in action, and was therefore not, under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 15, in the order or disposition of the bankrupt, and consequently that, subject to the first mortgage, the second mortgagee was entitled to the shares to secure his debt. Barry, Ex parte, For. In re, 17 L. R., Eq. 113; 43 L. J., Bk. 18; 29 L. T. 620; 22 W. R. 205.

Lien by Company.—By a clause in the deed of settlement of a banking company, it was stipulated that the company should have a lien on the shares of such proprietors as were customers, and indebted to the bank, and that no share should be transferred without the consent of the directors; and an abstract of these provisions was indorsed on the certificate of the share held by each proprietor. The bankrupt, at the time of his bankruptcy, was the owner of thirty of these shares, and had in his possession the certificate of ownership thus indorsed, being then largely indebted to the bank for advances:—Held, that these shares did not pass to his assignees under the clause of reputed ownership, so as to defeat the lien of the bank, which had been provided for in the deed. Plant, Ex parte, 4 Deac. & Chit. 160.

iii. Debts.

Sums retained by bankers against acceptances, and for which they have given marginal notes, are not debts due to the bankrupt in the course of his business within the order and disposition clause, Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 15, sub-s. 5. Kemp, Ex parte, Fastledge, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 383; 43 L. J., Bk. 50; 30 L. T. 109; 22 W. R. 462.

The expression "debts due" in that clause is not to be confined to debts presently payable, but, on the other hand, will not include debts which were only contingent at the commencement of the bankruptcy. Id.

The words "debts due to the bankrupt in the course of his trade" in s. 15, sub-s. 5, of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, do not extend to all debts due to the bankrupt during the period of his trading, but include only debts connected with the trade. Pryce, In re, Rensburg, Ex parte, 4 Ch. D. 685; 36 L. T. 117; 25 W. R. 432.

iv. Things in Action.

Assignment of—Notice.—Where a debt is assigned, unless notice is given to the debtor, the assignor must be considered as continuing to have the order and disposition of the debt until notice to the debtor of the assignment. Dean v. James, 1 N. & M. 392; 1 A. & E. 809; S. P., Buck v. Lee, 3 N. & M. 580; 1 A. & E. 804.

So, where one of two co-debtors releases his interest to his companion. Id.

— Bond Debt.—A bond debt was assigned by the obligee, and the bond delivered to the assignee, but notice of the assignment was not given to the obligor previously to the bankruptcy of the obligee:—Held, that the debt remained in his order and disposition. Monro, Ex parte, Buck, 300.

— Obligee Trustee interested in Bond.—Where an obligee of a bond is a trustee for others, has himself an interest in the bond, and deposits it as security, notice must be given to the obligor to prevent the reputed ownership of the obligee. Turk, Ex parte, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 1.

— Notice—To whom.—Where a trader assigns a debt, the only person to whom notice of the assignment need be given, in order to vest a good equitable title in the assigned, is the party from whom the trader was to have received payment of the money; in other words, the party holding the property at the order and disposition of the trader. Gardner v. Lachlan, 4 Mylne & C. 129; 8 Sm. 115; 2 Jur. 1056.

— Given Orally.—A. made advances to B., a trader, and afterwards took from him, as a security, an assignment of an equitable life interest in stock and other property, standing in the name of and vested in three trustees under a marriage settlement. There being rumours about the solvency of B., A., in the course of conversation, subsequently to the assignment, and not with a view of giving validity to his security, mentioned to one of the trustees, who was not the acting trustee, that he was secured by the assignment:—Held, that this communication was a sufficient notice to prevent the interest of B. passing to his assignees on his bankruptcy, as property in his order and disposition. Smith v. Smith, 2 C. & M. 231; 4 Tyr. 52.

— Notice not required.—A firm of two solicitors had a mortgage of 600*l.* upon a share of an estate in Kent. The estate was sold, and in order to indemnify the purchasers from certain claims on it, the purchase-money was invested in consols in the name of one of the solicitors and another party, upon trust for indemnity, and subject thereto to secure the debt due to the firm. After this, the firm having money of a client in their hands, wrote to her a letter, offering to give her a charge for the amount on a mortgage for 600*l.* on a share of the estate in Kent. Upon the bankruptcy of the firm:—Held, that the letter created a valid charge upon the interest of the firm in the consols; and that, as one of the firm was a trustee of the stock, there was sufficient notice of the transaction to prevent the charge being defeated, on the ground that the stock was in the order and disposition or reputed ownership of the bankrupts. Rogers, Ex parte, 25 L. J., Bk. 41; 2 Jur., N. S. 480—L. J.

— Bills of Lading—Deposit—Notice.—A., having a contract with the Admiralty to deliver coals at certain foreign ports at stipulated prices, shipped coals in performance of the contract; and, in pursuance of the terms of the contract, deposited three parts of the bills of lading with the Admiralty, retaining a fourth part himself, which he deposited, together with the policies on the ships, with B., to secure an advance. The deposit was accompanied by a letter, stating that it was made to secure the amount of the advance, and undertaking, in case of default in repayment at maturity or on demand, to enable B. to receive the value of the cargoes. B., having given no notice to the Admiralty until after he, B., was aware of an act of bankruptcy by A., on which an adjudication was afterwards founded:—Held, that the moneys which became due from the Admiralty passed to the assignees under the order and disposition clause of the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 125. North v. Gurney, 1 Johns. & H. 509; 5 L. T. 18; 9 W. R. 678.

— Goods substituted for those Pledged.—A merchant pledged for value the bills of lading of an expected cargo, his property, in the profits of which his agents abroad were interested in a certain proportion. His agents, without the knowledge of the owner or the pawnees, disposed of part of the cargo abroad, after which the owner became bankrupt: he induced the agents to replace the goods disposed of by others, of which the agents gave him bills of lading, and he sent them to the pawnees, to make good their security:—Held, that the substituted goods passed to the assignees. Meyer v. Sharpe, 5 Taunt. 74; 2 Rose, 124.

— Assignment of Contract for Supply of Goods—Bankruptcy of Assignor—No Notice.—R. contracted to supply meat to a lunatic asylum; but, being unable to carry out the contract, assigned it to H., who delivered his own meat, but in R.'s name, the governing body of the asylum having no notice of the assignment, and not being aware that the contract was not being performed by R. The contract having been put an end to by notice from the committee of visitors of the asylum, and R. having become bankrupt, the assignee under the bankruptcy claimed the sum then due for meat supplied as being goods and chattels in the possession, order, or disposition of R. at the time of his bankruptcy, as reputed owner, with the consent and permission of H., the true owner:—Held, by Bovill, C. J., Byles and Keating, J.J., that the debt was within the order and disposition clause, and passed to the assignee; but that the latter could not avail himself of his right thereto without an order from the Court of Bankruptcy to sell,—a permission to sue for the debt not being sufficient for that purpose. Cooke v. Hemming, 3 L. R., C. P. 334; 37 L. J., C. P. 179; 18 L. T. 772; 16 W. R. 903.

Held, by Willes, J., that, the meat never having been in R.'s possession, the debt which resulted from the supply to the asylum (though apparently by R.) was not a debt in his possession, order, or disposition at the time of his bankruptcy, with the consent of the true owner. Id.

— Where Assignee has taken every possible Step to obtain Debt.—H., residing in Australia, was indebted to A. in 77*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* On the 8th January, 1844, A. bona fide and for a valuable consideration assigned the debt to W., and on the 22nd January joined W. in a letter notifying to H. the assignment, and requiring him to pay the debt to W. This letter was posted on 1st February, 1844, in the ordinary way in which letters to New South Wales were posted, and could not have reached Australia before the 10th of February, on which day a fiat in bankruptcy issued against A. On the 29th of January, 1844, H. remitted by letter 50*l.*, which was received after the fiat, and delivered over to W. The assignees of A. having sued W. for the amount:—Held, that W. having taken every possible step to obtain possession of the debt, it could not be said to remain in the order and disposition of the bankrupt, with the consent of the true owner, within 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 72. Belcher v. Bellamy, 2 Ex. 303; 17 L. J., Ex. 219; see Brewster, Ex parte, 22 L. J., Bk. 62.

Assignment of Plaintiff's Interest in pending Action.—A debtor as plaintiff in an action then pending, by letter authorized his solicitor to pay over to the solicitor of the creditor whatever damages he might recover in the action, less his solicitor's costs, and also undertook to prosecute the action; thereupon the debtor's solicitor wrote to the creditor's solicitor, communicating the contents of that letter, and undertaking to hold over for the benefit of the creditor any sum to be recovered in the action, and notice of this undertaking was also given to the solicitor of the defendant in the action, who communicated the same to his clients:—Held, that there was a valid agreement to assign which prevented the amount recovered in the action from being in the order and disposition of the bankrupt. Knowles, In re, 1 Ir. L. R., Ch. 251.

Assignment of Costs—Bankruptcy of Assignor before Order for Payment.—B., a solicitor, entitled to costs in a suit, assigned the same to R., who gave notice to the plaintiff and the various solicitors in the suit of this assignment. B. became insolvent, and a few months afterwards, an order being made for the payment of his costs, the official assignee claimed them, on the ground that they were within B.'s order and disposition at the time of his insolvency:—Held, that the costs were not within his order and disposition at the date of the vesting order, inasmuch as the order for taxation and payment was not made until after that time. Lord v. Colvin, 2 Drew & Sm. 82; 6 L. T. 211; 10 W. R. 420.

—Bankruptcy of Assignor before Fund for Payment of Costs created.—A solicitor who had a claim for costs in an administration suit, borrowed money, and made an equitable assignment of his costs. At this time no order for payment of these costs had been made, and the solicitor's remedy was merely personal against his clients. He served notices on his clients, and on the defendant who represented the estate under the administration. Afterwards, the court made an order that a fund should be brought into court, and that, after paying certain charges, the same should be applied in payment of the solicitor's costs. The money was paid in, but was not sufficient to pay any part of the costs. The solicitor then became bankrupt, and after the bankruptcy money was paid into court, but the lender of the money did not obtain any stop order. Romilly, M. R., held that the costs passed to the assignees of the bankrupt (see 23 Beav. 391; 26 L. J., Ch. 288; 3 Jur., N. S. 403), but upon appeal, the court decided that there was no negligence on the part of the lender of the money, for that the notices served before the money was paid into court prevented the costs from being in the order and disposition of the bankrupt with the consent of the true owners, and that therefore they did not pass to his assignees, but belonged to the lender of the money. Day v. Day, 1 De G. & J. 144; 26 L. J., Ch. 585; 3 Jur., N. S. 782.

Notice of Assignment of Chose in Action—Stop Order—Priority.—A legatee of a reversionary interest under a will, which had been paid into court in an administration suit, presented a petition for liquidation in March, 1873, and a trustee was appointed. In July he assigned his interest in the legacy to J., who obtained a stop order on the fund in court. In November, 1876, he assigned his interest to E., without notice of the liquidation, who also obtained a stop order on the fund. Afterwards the trustee in liquidation obtained a stop order. The plaintiffs purchased the interest of the trustee in liquidation and of J., and contracted to sell the legacy to the defendant. The defendant required E.'s mortgage to be abstracted as an incumbrance on the estate:—Held, by Jessel, M. R., that E. having obtained a stop order before the trustee in liquidation, his interest was prior to that of the trustee's, and was an incumbrance on the estate:—Held, by the Court of Appeal, that the question of the priority of E.'s incumbrance was too doubtful to justify the vendor in omitting it from the abstract; and the decision of the Master of the Rolls was accordingly affirmed. Palmer v. Locke, 18 Ch. D. 381; 51 L. J., Ch. 124; 45 L. T. 229; 30 W. R. 419—C. A.

Reversionary Interests.—Leaseholds were bequeathed to trustees in trust to sell, and out of the proceeds to invest 3,000*l.* in government stock, and pay the dividends to F., the wife of E., for life, to her separate use without power of anticipation, and, subject thereto, to pay the principal to the children of F. and E. in such shares as she should appoint, with gifts over in default of appointment to the children of F. and E. living at the testator's death; powers were given to the trustees to sell the stock and invest the proceeds on private security or in the purchase of land, to be held upon the same trusts as were declared of the government stock. At the testator's death there were three children of F. and E. The trustees sold, and left the 3,000*l.* outstanding on a mortgage of the property (which was then held for a term of sixty-two years), executed by the purchaser to them. F., by deed, appointed the 3,000*l.* in different shares to her three children, subject to her life estate. The appointees, during F.'s life, assigned to D. the sums appointed to them, together with their respective estates and interest therein, to secure moneys advanced to their father. D. gave notice of the assignment to the trustees. Two of the appointees became bankrupt in F.'s lifetime; F. died, having had no other children. D. then filed a bill to raise the amount due to him:—Held, first, that the interests of F.'s children were not interests in lands, but were choses in action. Daniel v. Freeman, 11 Ir. R., Eq. 233.

Held, secondly, that the shares of the bankrupts were in their order and disposition with the consent of D. at the time of the bankruptcy, and passed to their assignees in bankruptcy. Id.

Where notice to trustees of an assignment of a chose in action is essential to complete title as between particular assignees, notice, as a general rule, is equally essential to complete title as against the assignees in bankruptcy of an assignor. Ib.

Trustees were directed to raise out of real estate, by sale, mortgage, or otherwise, 2,000*l.*, for portions to be paid to younger children. Before the portions were raised or payable, one of the younger children created an incumbrance on his share, of which notice was not given to the trustees until after his bankruptcy:—Held, that the interest of the bankrupt was not of the nature of realty so as to exempt it from the doctrine of notice, and that the share passed to the assignees in bankruptcy, as in the order and disposition of the bankrupt. Hughes, In re, 2 H. & M. 89; 33 L. J., Ch. 725; 10 L. T. 813; 12 W. R. 1025.

The assignee of a share in a reversionary fund standing to the account of B. and her children, obtained a stop order and afterwards assigned the share by way of mortgage to A., and became bankrupt before the fund became distributable. A. presented a petition for payment to him, but obtained no stop order; the assignees of the bankrupt claimed the share, as being within his order and disposition, with the consent of the true owner:—Held, that the assignees were entitled to the fund, discharged of the mortgage. Bartlett v. Bartlett, 1 De G. & J. 127; 26 L. J., Ch. 577; 3 Jur., N. S. 705.

A bankrupt's reversionary interest in a legacy is not exempted from the rule as to order and disposition, by the mere circumstance of such interest being reversionary at the time of the act of bankruptcy. Rawbone, In re, 3 Kay & J. 476; 26 L. J., Ch. 588; 3 Jur., N. S. 837.

But to bring such an interest within the operation of the rule, it must be in the order and disposition of the bankrupt with the consent of the true owner; and where the true owner has no knowledge, nor any means of knowing, of the bankrupt's interest, consent on his part cannot be predicated. Ib.

Where a reversionary interest in a fund in court had been mortgaged, but the mortgagees obtained no stop-order, and the mortgagee became insolvent before the interest became reducible into possession:—Held, that the reversionary interest was not in the order and disposition of the insolvent so as to vest in his assignee. Grainge, In re, 12 L. T. 564; 13 W. R. 833.

Notice of an assignment of a reversionary interest given to the solicitor of the trustees is notice to the trustees, so as to take it out of the order and disposition of the assignor on his insolvency. Rickards v. Gledstones, 2 Giff. 298; 8 Jur., N. S. 455; 5 L. T. 416. Affirmed, 5 L. T. 568.

A person entitled to a reversionary share of a trust fund became bankrupt in 1866. The trustees of the fund had no notice of the bankruptcy till 1878. In 1871 the bankrupt assigned his reversionary share for value to a purchaser who had no notice of the bankruptcy and who gave immediate notice of the assignment to the trustees of the fund. The reversion fell into possession in 1878:—Held, by the Court of Appeal, that under the terms of the Bankruptcy Act, 1849, s. 141, the title of the assignee in bankruptcy must prevail against that of the particular assignee. Bright's Settlement, In re, 13 Ch. D. 413; 42 L. T. 308; 28 W. R. 551—C. A.

Under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 71.—A., for good consideration, gave B. a written undertaking to pay over to him all dividends that he should receive on his proof against a bankrupt's estate. A. became bankrupt, and B. then gave notice of his claim to the trustees in the first bankruptcy:—Held, that there was a good equitable assignment of the dividends, and that B. was entitled as against A.'s trustee in bankruptcy. Irring, In re, Brett, Ex parte, 7 Ch. D. 419; 47 L. J., Bk. 38; 37 L. T. 507; 26 W. R. 376.

Warrants of Attorney.—C. gave a warrant of attorney to A. to secure payment of a debt due from C. to A. D., who was the solicitor of C., as agent of A. deposited this warrant of attorney with B., to secure a debt due from A. to B. No express notice of this deposit was given to C. A. afterwards became bankrupt:—Held, first, that the circumstance of D. being the solicitor of C. did not amount to notice to C. of the deposit; and, secondly, that the warrant of attorney was in the order and disposition of A. at the time of his bankruptcy. Price, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 586; 13 L. J., Bk. 15.

Proof of Notice.—A grantee of an annuity on the bankruptcy of the grantor stating that he had no doubt that his partner in business, who managed the transaction, had given the executors of the estate charged notice of the annuity, is not sufficient to take the share of the grantor out of his order and disposition. Foster v. Bonner, 8 L. T. 530; 11 W. R. 742.

Mortgages.—A person to whom estates are mortgaged to secure the balance due from time to time on an account current, mortgages his security and becomes bankrupt. In such a case, it is not necessary to give notice of the sub-mortgage to the original mortgagor, to take the mortgage debt out of the order and disposition of the original mortgagee. Wright, In re, 1 Mont., D. & D. 550.

London sub-mortgagees of shipments at Ceylon and Hong Kong sent thither, directed to the parties in possession, notices of their security by the next direct mail, there being another and earlier mail by a different route, by which the notices might possibly have sooner reached their destination. Before, however, this could have taken place by either mode of transmission, the sub-mortgagors became bankrupt:—Held, that the notice was sufficient to take the goods out of their reputed ownership. Kelsall, Ex parte, De Gex, 352.

A bond executed to secure the payment of bills of exchange was mortgaged, together with the bills which were indorsed. Afterwards the mortgagor deposited the bonds and bills by way of sub-mortgage, and became bankrupt. No notice of the sub-mortgage having been given to the obligor:—Held, that the sub-mortgage was good against the assignees. Barnett, Ex parte, 1 De Gex, 194.

v. Right to publish Newspapers.

If the printer and publisher of a newspaper assigns his interest therein to a creditor, as a security, but continues to print and publish as before, and no affidavit of the change of interest is delivered to the commissioners of stamps, and the printer becomes bankrupt, the right to the paper will pass to his assignees. Longman v. Tripp, 2 N. R. 67.

A., being registered proprietor of a newspaper, mortgaged the copyright, and the type and machinery used in printing it, to B. After the mortgage to B., A. continued to be the sole registered proprietor of the newspaper, and was generally known and recognized as its proprietor. On the 16th February, 1857, the sheriff seized the type and machinery under a feri facias, upon a judgment obtained by a creditor. On the 18th February, 1857, when the sheriff was in possession of the type and machinery, A. was declared bankrupt:—Held, first, that A.'s right to publish the newspaper came within the term goods and chattels in the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 125. Baldwin, In re, Fins, Ex parte, 2 De G. & J. 230; 27 L. J., Bk. 17; 4 Jur., N. S. 522.

Held, secondly, that such right was in the order and disposition of the bankrupt at the time of his bankruptcy. Ib.

But held, thirdly, that the type and machinery were not in the order and disposition of the bankrupt at the time of his bankruptcy. Ib.

Property of which the Bankrupt was not the original Owner.

i. Goods to be dealt with in way of Bankrupt's Trade.

Goods sent to be Sold.—[If a person sends his servant to sell his timber at another man's wharf, such timber does not pass to the assignees of the owner of the wharf, who becomes bankrupt, as goods in his order and disposition. Boddy v. Esdaile, 1 C. & P. 62.

—Sold in Bankrupt's Name.—[Where goods are delivered to a bankrupt to sell in the name of another, his selling them in his own name does not place them in his reputed ownership. Carlson, or Carlson, Ex parte, 2 Mont. & Ayr. 39; 4 Deac. & Chit. 120.

Skins sent to be Dressed—Mixing with Debtor's Stock.—[A. was in the habit of sending skins to B.'s tan-yard to be dressed, with an account, as of a sale, of each parcel of skins to B.; and B. rendered an account of the dressed leather, as being sold by him to A. This mode of dealing was only practised by B. with A., nor was B. in the habit of dressing skins for any other persons:—Held, that a quantity of these skins, which were mixed with B.'s general stock at the time of his bankruptcy, passed to his assignees, on the principle of reputed ownership. Batten, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & Chit. 328.

Goods to be Repaired.—[In order to render goods in the possession, order or disposition of a bankrupt, two things are required—first, they must be in his possession under such circumstances as to render him reputed owner of the goods; and secondly, they must have been left in his possession through some impropriety or laches of the true owner, under circumstances calculated to enable the bankrupt to obtain a false credit by inducing the world to look on him as the true owner. Hamilton v. Bell, 10 Ex. 545; 24 L. J., Ex. 45; 18 Jur. 1109.

When property is left by the true owner in a shop where goods are notoriously left by parties for other purposes than for sale, the proprietor of the shop is not a reputed owner of them within the statute. Ib.

A. purchased some clocks of a London tradesman who kept a shop, in which were exposed for sale clocks and watches. A portion of the tradesman's business was to clean and repair clocks, and such as were sent to him for that purpose stood amongst those in the shop which were for sale. A. kept the clocks which he had purchased with the tradesman, with directions that they were to be sent to him when they had been cleaned and put in order. The tradesman some time afterwards became bankrupt, A.'s clocks still remaining in his shop. In an action by him against the assignees for taking these clocks:—Held, that under the circumstances, there was no evidence either that the bankrupt was the reputed owner of the goods or that they were in his possession, order or disposition, and, consequently, that the goods did not pass to the assignees. Ib.

The question of reputed ownership is one purely of fact. Ib.

Corn to be Ground—Miller's Option to Buy.]

—On the bankruptcy of a miller, C. claimed as his own, and removed from the mill without the knowledge of the receiver, 109 sacks of wheat, which he had sent five weeks previously (as he alleged) on approval. It was proved by the bankrupt and his clerk, and from his books, that he was not in the habit of receiving other people's corn to grind and return as flour, but that he used to receive corn from C. and kept it until a price was fixed for it, when he debited himself with such price. C. deposed that the bankrupt might have found a purchaser for it, or have bought it for himself, or that he, C., might have taken it back:—Held, that the wheat was in the order and disposition of the bankrupt at the time of the bankruptcy with the consent of the true owner, and must be given up to the trustee. Bell, In re, Clarke, Ex parte, 47 L. J., Bk. 33; 37 L. T. 509.

Goods sent on Sale or Return—Notorious Trade Custom.—[In order that goods of another person in the possession of a bankrupt should pass to his trustee under the latter words of sub-s. 5 of s. 15 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, as "goods of which the bankrupt has taken upon himself the sale or disposition as owner," it is necessary that the bankrupt should have been the reputed owner of the goods. Wingfield, Ex parte, Florence, In re, 10 Ch. D. 591; 40 L. T. 15; 27 W. R. 346—C. A.

The effect of a notorious trade custom in excluding the operation of the reputed ownership clause, considered. Ib.

Books deposited by the owner with a bookseller, as part of his general stock, and sold by him on commission, do not, on his bankruptcy, pass to his assignees, as being in his possession, order or disposition, as reputed owner, within 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 72. Whitfield v. Brand, 16 M. & W. 282; 16 L. J., Ex. 103.

Goods were sent from London to Sunderland, upon sale or return, and a letter, inclosing an invoice, requesting the buyer to return such of them as were not approved by him in as short a time as possible. The goods arrived at the shop of the buyer on the evening of the 13th November, and on the following day he committed an act of bankruptcy. In an action of trover by the seller against the assignees to recover these goods:—Held, that they did not pass to the assignees under the 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11, as the bankrupt should have been allowed a reasonable time to select such goods as he was disposed to retain. Gibson v. Bray, 1 Moore, 519; 8 Taunt. 76; Holt, 556.

Goods were sent to a trader on a contract of sale and return, within the Statute of Frauds, and he having become bankrupt before the delivery of them, they were received and detained by his assignees; the vendor thereupon brought trover, to which the assignees pleaded that the goods were bargained and sold before the bankruptcy:—Held, that there was no acceptance to support a bargain and sale, and that the property in the goods did not pass to the assignees. Sadler v. Whitmore, 5 Jur. 315.

Goods sent on sale and return not actually delivered at the time of the bankruptcy, are not in the reputed ownership of the bankrupt. Ash-ton, In re, Fonb., N. R. 258.

Factor—Equitable Charge—Factors Act.—A., being a factor and a warehouse keeper, by letter of hypothecation pledged to B. certain wools to secure a sum of money. No delivery of the warrants for the wools was made, but a promise to deliver them on the following morning, was added at the foot of a letter. After being pressed daily to deliver the warrants, A. absconded. B. thereupon obtained from A.'s clerk the keys of the warehouses and possession of the wools. A. was a few days afterwards adjudicated bankrupt. The wools belonged to third parties, who had, however, been under advances from the bankrupt and made no claim:—Held, that the letter created a good equitable charge; that it did not require registration under the Bills of Sale Act; that the goods were not in the order and disposition of the bankrupt; that the transaction was a valid pledge under the Factors Act; and that B. had a good title against the trustee in bankruptcy. North Western Bank, Ex parte, Sice, In re, 15 L. R., Eq. 69; 42 L. J., Bk. 6; 27 L. T. 461; 21 W. R. 69.

Book Debts owing to Factor on Account of Principal.—If it is a matter of notoriety that a man is acting in the capacity of a factor to another person, and the factor becomes bankrupt, the book debts owing to the factor on behalf of his principal will not pass to the trustee of his estate; nor will goods consigned by the principal to the factor for sale. Boden, Ex parte, Wood, In re, 28 L. T. 174.

Goods sent by Factor on Approval.—When chattels were sent by their owner to A., and he, acting necessarily as factor or agent to the owner, sent the chattels to B. on approval, in exchange for other chattels previously bought from A. and paid for but returned as unsatisfactory by B.; upon A.'s bankruptcy the chattels were held to be in his order and disposition within s. 15, sub-s. 5 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, although they were at that time actually in the possession of B. upon the terms mentioned above. Roy, Ex parte, Sillence, In re, 7 Ch. D. 70; 47 L. J., Bk. 36; 37 L. T. 508; 26 W. R. 82.

Notice of Agency.—Goods were consigned by manufacturers under an agreement which, in the opinion of the court, made the consignees, not purchasers of the goods, but agents of the manufacturers for their sale. The agents described themselves, upon a brass plate which was affixed at their place of business, and also upon the invoices which they used, as merchants and manufacturers' agents. They acted as agents in the same way for several other manufacturers:—Held, that the creditors of the agents had notice of the agency sufficient to exclude the operation of the reputed ownership clause, and the trustee in their liquidation was ordered to deliver up to the manufacturers goods of theirs which were in the possession of the agents, in specie, at the commencement of their liquidation, and to pay over to the manufacturers the proceeds of the sale of their goods which had been sold. Bright, Ex parte, Smith, In re, 10 Ch. D. 566; 48 L. J., Bk. 81; 39 L. T. 649; 27 W. R. 385—C. A.

ii. Goods in Bankrupt's Hands for Specific Purposes.

Bills of Exchange.—Bills remitted to a banker on the general account, cannot, on his bankruptcy, be laid hold of by the remitter; if remitted for a particular purpose, they must be so applied. Pease, Ex parte, 19 Ves. 49; S. C. nom. Pearce, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 232.

Bills lodged in a banker's hands, to be applied for a particular purpose, but not so applied, are claimable on the banker's becoming bankrupt, as they do not pass to his assignees. Aiken, Ex parte, 2 Madd. 192.

Whether bills in the possession of a bankrupt, not due at the time of the bankruptcy, pass to the assignees, or remain the property of the remitter, always depends upon the question of agency. So, where a foreign mercantile house remitted to a London house bills, some of which were not due when the London house became bankrupt:—Held, under the circumstances of the case, that the London house acted as agents to procure payment for the foreign house, and being fixed with the trust, that the bills did not pass to the assignees. Smith, Ex parte, Buck, 355; 2 Rose, 457.

A., a merchant abroad, wrote to B., his agent in England, a letter, inclosing bills, in which he said, "The above bills are belonging to and on account of C., and I will thank you to dispose of the same to him." Before the bills arrived B. became bankrupt, and the bills came to the possession of the assignees:—Held, that the directions in A.'s letter amounted to an appropriation of the bills, and that C. was entitled to claim them from the assignees. Cotterell, Ex parte, 3 Deac. 12; 3 Mont. & Ayr. 376; 1 Jur. 825.

If A. and B. have a general running account, consisting of bills drawn by B. on C. in favour of A., and of bills and other securities deposited by A. with B.; and, upon the failure of B. and C., A. is obliged to take up the bills received by him from B., whereby the balance of the accounts is in favour of A., still he cannot maintain trover for the bills deposited by him with B., unless they were specifically appropriated to answer B.'s drafts on C. in favour of A., and deposited for that purpose expressly. Bent v. Fuller, 5 T. R. 494.

By the terms of an agreement between F. & Co. and their bankers, S. & Co., the permission to discount indorsed bills of exchange was limited to the amount necessary to meet such acceptances of F. & Co., as were in the course of immediate payment at the house of S. & Co. To cover certain acceptances becoming due, F. & Co. remitted to S. & Co. an indorsed bill of exchange; these acceptances were however dishonoured by S. & Co., who soon afterwards stopped payment; S. & Co. then procured the bill to be accepted, and made an entry in their books of their having discounted it. A commission of bankruptcy having issued against S. & Co. :—Held, that S. & Co. had no right to discount the bill without executing the trust reposed in them, and their assignees were bound to deliver up the bill to F. & Co. Frere, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Mac. 263.

Where a draft for money was intrusted to a broker to buy Exchequer bills for his principal, and the broker received the money and misapplied it by purchasing American stock and bullion, intending to abscond with it and go to America, and did accordingly abscond, but was taken before he quitted England, and thereupon surrendered to the principal the securities for the American stock and the bullion, who sold the whole and received the proceeds :—Held, that the principal was entitled to withhold the proceeds from the assignees of the broker, who became bankrupt on the day on which he so received and misapplied the money. Taylor v. Plummer, 3 M. & S. 562; 2 Rose, 457.

Securities sent to Debtor to meet Bills—Shares.—An agreement was made between a firm in England and another in America, that the latter should purchase American bank shares, and remit them to the English house for sale, drawing bills on the English house for the amount of the purchase-money, and that the proceeds of the sale of the shares should be applied by the English house in payment of the bills. Various bills were drawn by the American on the English house, and were negotiated by the former. Both houses became bankrupt, and the certificates of the bank shares did not arrive in England until after the bankruptcy of the English house, when they got into possession of the assignees :—Held, that the bill-holders were entitled to have the proceeds of the shares applied in payment of the bills, and that the shares were not within the operation of the clause of reputed ownership. Brown, Ex parte, 3 Deac. 91; 3 Mont. & Ayr. 471; 2 Jur. 82.

— Bills.—S. & J., of Buenos Ayres, bought from Latham & Co., of that place, in May and June, ten bills, drawn by them on Latham Brothers, of Liverpool, the sellers giving an express assurance that they would make remittances to Liverpool to meet them. On the 1st of August, Latham & Co. despatched bills to Latham Brothers, with a letter specifically appropriating them to meet the first five of the purchased bills. On 8th August, Latham Brothers became bankrupt. On 1st September, Latham & Co., not knowing of the bankruptcy, despatched other bills to Latham Brothers with a letter, appropriating them to meet the other five purchased bills :—Held, that the first remittance was effectually appropriated to meet the first five purchased bills, whether the drawing and accepting houses were identical or not; and that the assignees of Latham Brothers held it for S. & J., to the extent of what was due on those bills. Lambert, Ex parte, 1 De G. & J. 152; 26 L. J., Bk. 65; 3 Jur., N. S. 801.

B. was in the habit of drawing bills on H. & Co., bankers, and of remitting bills to them to an amount fully sufficient to meet their acceptances.

H. & Co. became bankrupt. At that time there were in the hands of holders for value undue bills to a large amount drawn by B. upon H. & Co., and accepted by them; but H. & Co. had misappropriated the greater part of the bills remitted to meet them :—Held, that B. could not claim to have returned to him such of the remitted bills as remained in the hands of H. & Co. at the time of their bankruptcy, but that they must be applied so far as they would extend in payment of the bills accepted by H. & Co. Carrick, Ex parte, 2 De G. & J. 208.

— Gold and Bills.—A. and B. came to an agreement, that B. should purchase of A. all the light gold coin which he could send at a stated price, and that A. should, from time to time, draw upon B. for the money due upon such sale; and that B. should also, from time to time, accept other bills drawn by A. for his own convenience, for which A. was to remit value; after they had acted under this contract for some time, B. became a bankrupt, being under acceptances to a large amount; and A. (not knowing of the bankruptcy) sent a parcel of light gold and bills, to enable B. to discharge the acceptances, which parcel was taken by B.'s assignees :—Held, that A., who had since paid B.'s acceptances, might recover back the gold and bills sent after the bankruptcy, on the ground that they were sent for the particular purpose of paying the acceptances, and that, as that purpose was not answered, the property in the gold and bills remained in A. Tooke v. Hollingworth, 5 T. R. 215; 2 H. Bl. 501.

Money lent to Debtor to arrange with Creditors.—Where a trader, upon being arrested, borrowed money of his brother-in-law for the purpose of settling with his creditors, but not being able to do so, returned a part of it, and then became a bankrupt :—Held, that as the money was advanced for a special purpose, it did not pass by the assignment. Toucey v. Milne, 2 B. & A. 683; S. P., Edwards v. Glyn, 2 El. & El. 29; 28 L. J., Q. B. 350.

Dividend Warrants sent to Brokers for Collection.—Dividend warrants, on which bankrupts, in their character of stock-brokers, were intrusted to receive the dividends, and which they had pledged for their own debt, were ordered to be delivered up to trustees who had employed the bankrupts as their brokers. Gregory, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 613.

iii. Goods in Hands of Bankrupt's Agent.

Banker's Agent—Notice to Agent not to remit Funds.—A London banker, having a branch bank at Edinburgh, stopped payment on the 2nd January, and wrote to his agent at Edinburgh, apprising him of the fact, and directed the business of the branch bank to be discontinued. On the 4th January, before this notice reached the agent, C. paid into the Edinburgh bank 305l. 15s. in notes and cash, to be remitted to the house in London; but after the news reached Edinburgh, and whilst the notes were still in the agent's possession gave him notice not to part with them; and they remained in his hands on the 26th January, when a fiat issued against the banker in London. The agent at Edinburgh having a lien on the funds in his hands, the assignees permitted him to retain the 305*l.* 15*s.* in part satisfaction of his lien :—Held, that the assignees were bound to refund the sum to C. Cunningham, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & Chit. 58, 87 ; 1 Mont. & Blight, 269, 286.

So held, also, where the notes delivered to the agent were not identified. Solomans, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & Chit. 77.

So, also, where the notes were paid in by the customer on the 3rd January, to a sub-agent of the banker at Glasgow, who remitted them on the 4th to the banker's managing agent at Edinburgh. Wylie, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & Chit. 83.

iv. Goods Distrained on Bankrupt's Premises.

Goods belonging to a third person, which are on the premises of a bankrupt under a distress for rent by his landlord, are not in the possession, order and disposition of the bankrupt, although he is allowed to use them off the premises. Sacker v. Chidley, 11 Jur., N. S. 654 ; 13 W. R. 690.

v. Goods purchased by Bankrupt but not delivered.

Goods left in Vendor's Possession.—[A party, having goods in his own warehouse at Liverpool, sold them, and gave the following delivery order to the vendee :—"We hold to your order 39 pipes, &c., rent free, to the 29th November next." The goods remained in the warehouse unpaid for till the vendee became bankrupt. In trover for the goods by the assignee, evidence was given that, by the usage of Liverpool, goods sold while in warehouse, are delivered by the vendor handing to the vendee a delivery-order ; and that the holder of such order may obtain credit with a purchaser as having possession of the goods :—Held, that the bankrupt had not possession of the goods as reputed owner, with the consent of the true owner, within 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 72. Townley v. Crump, 4 A. & E. 58 ; 5 N. & M. 606 ; 1 H. & W. 564.

Goods were sold under an invoice which expressed that they remained as rent. The vendee subsequently accepted a bill drawn by the vendor for the price, which was negotiated by the vendor. Whilst the bill was running, the vendee sold a part, which, by his direction, was delivered by the vendor to the sub-vendee, whom the vendor charged with warehouse rent for the part, which he paid. Subsequently the vendee became bankrupt, and the bill was dishonoured :—Held, that the assignee of the bankrupt vendee could not without paying the price maintain trover against the vendor for the residue of the goods which had remained in his hands. Miles v. Gorton, 2 C. & M. 504 ; 4 Tyr. 295.

Bankruptcy of Purchaser before Delivery of Goods sold on Credit.—[When the purchaser of goods sold on credit becomes bankrupt before the vendor has parted with the possession of the goods, the trustee in the bankruptcy has a right to elect to complete the contract by paying the agreed price in cash within a reasonable time. But, if he does not do so, the vendor is entitled to treat the contract as broken, and to resell the goods, without first tendering them to the trustee. And the vendor is entitled to prove in the bankruptcy for damages for the breach of contract, the measure of damages, if the market is falling, being the difference between the contract price and the price obtained on the re-sale. Stapleton, Ex parte, Nathan, In re, 10 Ch. D. 586 ; 40 L. T. 14 ; 27 W. R. 327—C. A.

Where farming produce has been purchased and the price paid before bankruptcy, but it appeared to be the custom of farmers to leave such produce upon the farm of the seller until it suited the convenience of the buyer to take it away :—Held, that this custom exempted such produce from passing to the assignees under the law of reputed ownership. Terry, In re, 7 L. T. 370 ; 11 W. R. 113.

Possession is Question for Jury.—[A, a farmer, meeting B. on his way to a fair with some sheep, negotiated for their purchase, but not being able to come to terms, the parties agreed that the sheep should remain for a time at A's farm. They remained there five days, and before the price was agreed upon, A. became bankrupt. In an action by B. against the assignees for seizing the sheep :—Held, that the question whether the sheep were in A.'s possession so as to make him reputed owner within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 125, was a matter of fact for the jury, and that the assignees having put it as a matter of law at the trial, could not afterwards contend that the judge should have left the question to the jury. Trismall v. Lovegrove, 6 L. T. 329 ; 10 W. R. 527.

Delivered at Railway Station.—[Goods sold by a defendant to W., were by him delivered at a railway station, together with a delivery note (such delivery being in accordance with previous transactions between the parties), on the 7th of November. On the 9th, W. became bankrupt, and on the 11th (he not having in the meantime given any orders respecting the goods, or signified his acceptance of them) the defendant gave notice to the station master not to part with the goods. On the 1st of December, W.'s assignees gave notice to the railway company that they claimed the goods, which on the 5th were re-delivered to the defendant :—Held, first, that by delivery at the railway station, the defendant had divested himself of the right of stoppage in transitu ; secondly, that there was no such acceptance and receipt by the bankrupt, or any one on his behalf, of the goods, as would satisfy s. 17 of the Statute of Frauds ; and thirdly, that the goods were not in the order or disposition of the bankrupt. Smith v. Hudson, 6 B. & S. 431 ; 34 L. J., Q. B. 145 ; 11 Jur., N. S. 622 ; 12 L. T. 377 ; 13 W. R. 683.

Delivery to Vendee's Agent.—[Where goods are furnished to the agent of a bankrupt, on the agent's credit, he may, to protect himself, stop them in transitu, and give them a new direction adverse to his principal ; but if he gives them a fresh direction in furtherance of the usual course of business of the principal, they pass to the assignees, as being in the order and disposition of the bankrupt. Hawkes v. Dunn, 1 Tyr. 413 ; 1 Price's P. C. 24.

Engines fitted to Debtor's Ship.—[Engineers contracted with the debtor, the owner of a barge, to supply steam machinery to the vessel, at the docks of a dock company, for the price of 1,050*l.*, to be paid by approved bills ; one at three months for 260*l.* when the boiler and engine should be placed in the vessel, one at three months for 260*l.*, and one at six months for 530*l.*, when the vessel should have made a trial trip. The vessel having been taken to the docks was there entered in the name of one of the engineers; and, whilst shipwrights and other agents of the debtor were occasionally or constantly on board, the vessel remained in the possession of the engineers till the boat was ready to make a trial trip. In the interim the engineers had been paid 360*l.*, partly in cash and partly by the debtor's acceptance, which they discounted. On the day appointed for the trial trip the debtor filed a liquidation petition, and a receiver took possession of the vessel. A few days afterwards the debtor's acceptance was dishonoured:—Held, that the lien of the engineers for the unpaid price for the machinery and their labour was not affected by their having agreed to take bills in payment, nor by the nature of the possession, nor by their having discounted the debtor's acceptance. Willoughby, Ex parte, Westlake, In re. 16 Ch. D. 604; 44 L. T. 111; 29 W. R. 985.

vi. Goods let on Hire to Bankrupt.

Where Let with Land—Colliery.]—Where a colliery, with all the machinery and implements necessary for working it, was leased for years, with a proviso for re-entry for the landlord on non-payment of rent, and a covenant on the part of the lessee, at the expiration or other sooner determination of the demise, to deliver up the machinery and implements, conformably to an inventory annexed to the lease, of which a revaluation was to be made three months before the expiration of the demise, and the landlord recovered judgment in ejectment in Trinity term, for a forfeiture for non-payment of the rent, but did not execute the writ of possession until the 8th November, and the tenant committed an act of bankruptcy next day:—Held, first, that the landlord was entitled to take possession of all the machinery and implements (some of which had been brought on the premises by the tenant during the term), though no previous valuation had been made; secondly, that the possession of the machinery and implements by the tenant was only qualified, and did not come within the 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, so as to bar the landlord's right of re-entry on the 8th November; and thirdly, that the tenant's use of the machinery and implements, in the interval between the judgment in ejectment and the execution of the writ of possession, did not give him the "possession, order, or disposition" thereof, with the consent of the true owner, within the meaning of the statute, so as to pass the property to his assignees. Storer v. Hunter, 5 D. & R. 240; 3 B. & C. 368.

—Furniture.]—A. lets a house to B. with a covenant that the lease shall determine on B. committing an act of bankruptcy, on which a commission should issue; and by another deed of the same date, A. grants the use of furniture to B. in like manner, and with a similar covenant, to allow A. to resume the possession of the furniture on the commission of an act of bankruptcy. If B. becomes bankrupt, and the jury find that B. was the reputed owner of the furniture, it will pass to the assignees, notwithstanding these covenants. Hickenbotham v. Groves, 2 C. & P. 492.

In 1870 a daughter purchased from the trustee of her father in liquidation, and paid for out of her own moneys the household furniture and effects of her father, but no formal assignment was made to her. The daughter continued to live with her father as before. She furnished the money for the rent, and he paid the rates and taxes and other outgoings. He voted at municipal and other elections in respect of his occupation. He carried on his business at the house, and his name was on the door-plate. In 1876 he became bankrupt:—Held, that the goods were in his order and disposition, and passed to his trustee in bankruptcy. Moore, Ex parte, Cook, In re, 36 L. T. 560.

Where not Let with Land.]—A., B. & C., partners and distillers, occupied certain premises, leased to A. and another, and used in common, in the trade, the stills, vats, and utensils necessary for carrying it on; the property of which stills, &c., afterwards appeared to be in A. On the dissolution of the partnership, which was a losing concern, it was agreed that C. and one J. should carry on the business on the premises; and by deed between the two last and A. it was covenanted and agreed that A. should withdraw from the business, and permit C. and J. to use, occupy, and enjoy the distil-house and premises, paying the reserved rent, and the several stills, vats, and utensils of trade, specified and numbered in a schedule annexed, in consideration of an annuity to be paid by C. and J. to A. and his wife, and the survivor, with liberty for C. and J., on the decease of A. and his wife, to purchase the distil-house and premises for the remainder of A.'s term, and the stills, vats, &c., mentioned in the schedule; and C. and J. covenanted to keep the stills, vats and utensils in repair, and deliver them up at the time if not purchased; and there was a proviso for re-entry if the annuity were two months in arrear. Under this, C. and J. took possession of the premises, with the stills, vats, and utensils, and carried on the business as before; and made payments of the annuity, which afterwards fell in arrear more than two months; but A.'s widow and executrix, who survived him, did not enter, but brought an action for the arrears, which was stopped by the bankruptcy of C. and J., who continued in possession of the stills, vats, and utensils, on the premises:—Held, that the vats, &c., which were not fixed to the freehold, did pass to the assignees, as being left by the true owner in the possession, order, and disposition (as it appeared to the eye of the world) of the bankrupts, as reputed owners. Horn v. Baker, 9 East, 215.

—Cart Horse.]—W., a horse contractor, let out a cart horse on hire to N. & Co., who had it in their possession more than twelve months, and then became bankrupt:—Held, that it did not pass to their assignees, as being in their reputed ownership. Wiggins, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & Chit. 369.

Goods to be paid for by Instalments.]—A timber merchant hired from manufacturers of engines an engine upon the terms of an agreement of hiring and suspensory sale, the payment to be by monthly instalments, with liberty to the manufacturers to retake possession upon his default, the name of the manufacturers in the meanwhile to remain on engines as owners. He became bankrupt before all the instalments were paid, and his trustees claimed to retain the engine as against the manufacturers:—Held, that the manufacturers continued owners under the agreement, and that there was no reputed ownership on the part of the bankrupt, as against them. Stooke, Ex parte, Bampfild, In re, 20 W. R. 925.

— Custom.—In an action by an owner of furniture let on hire to an hotel-keeper, who became bankrupt while it was in his possession, to recover damages from his assignees for seizing and selling it, if the plaintiff relies on a custom for hotel-keepers to hire a portion of their furniture, the question for the jury will be, whether the custom is so general as to raise a fair doubt and suspicion in the minds of persons trusting him, that the goods were not actually the goods of the plaintiff, or, in other words, whether it is so general, that persons must be supposed to have known that the goods, though in the possession, were not the property of the bankrupt. Mullett v. Green, 8 C. & P. 382.

When a custom of holding goods on hire is relied on to take the goods out of the order and disposition of a bankrupt, the custom must be one which the ordinary creditors of the bankrupt may be reasonably presumed to have known. Pourell, Ex parte, Matthews, In re, 1 Ch. D. 501; 45 L. J., Bk. 100; 34 L. T. 224; 24 W. R. 378—C. A.

Such custom may be proved either by reported cases, or by evidence of the custom as on a question of fact. Id.

On the bankruptcy of an hotel keeper a custom was alleged of hiring furniture for hotels. The custom was on slight but uncontradicted evidence considered by the chief judge to be sufficiently established, and on appeal, the appellant having declined an offer to have the custom tried by a jury, the appeal was dismissed. Id.

— Re-sale and Hiring.—A. and B. contracted for the purchase by B. of a billiard-table, the price to be paid by instalments. The table was delivered, and part of the price paid. B., having failed to pay some of the instalments as they became due, was induced by A. to sign the following agreement for the hire of the table at a monthly rent:—"This agreement is signed for A.'s satisfaction, and will become null and void on B. carrying out the original agreement." Upon the bankruptcy of B. the trustee sold the table and received the proceeds:—Held, that the trustee was entitled to the proceeds of the sale, upon the ground that the agreement for the purchase was not abrogated by the agreement for hire, and that consequently the table, being the property of the bankrupt, passed to the trustee. Orme, Ex parte, Lloyd, In re, 38 L. T. 328.

A coal merchant, at the time of his bankruptcy, had in his possession barges which bore his own name and number, and were registered in his name under the Waterman's Act. These barges he had hired of the defendant, it being the custom for coal merchants to hire barges, and to paint on them the name of the hirer. Upon a question whether the barges passed to the coal merchant's assignees, under his bankruptcy:—Held, that it was properly left to the jury to find whether the custom was generally notorious in the coal trade; and that it was not necessary to direct them to inquire whether the custom was notorious to the world at large. Watson v. Peache, 1 Scott, 149; 1 Bing. N. C. 327.

— Hiring Agreement—Custom.—C. & Co., upholsterers, lent furniture on hire to the defendants (who were hotel-keepers) to be paid for by monthly instalments, and on payment of the full price agreed upon, it was to become the property of the defendants. Until this had been done it was to remain the property of C. & Co. Upon one instalment being unpaid C. & Co. put a man in possession of the furniture, and the defendants executed an assignment of the lease of the hotel, and of all their personal chattels and effects including the hired furniture to C. & Co., and afterwards became bankrupts. The trustee in bankruptcy claimed the furniture on the ground that it was at the date of the bankruptcy in the possession of the bankrupts as reputed owners, with the consent of the true owners C. & Co.:—Held, that the assignment of the whole property which was duly registered was an act of bankruptcy, but that C. & Co.'s furniture not having been paid for remained their property, and was not in the order and disposition of the bankrupts, and did not pass by the assignment; that the assignment was good so far as it was a mortgage of the leasehold, but was void so far as it was an assignment of personality as being an act of bankruptcy, and that the trustee was entitled to all the personal effects of the bankrupts, but not to the hired furniture. Craucour v. Salter, 18 Ch. D. 30; 51 L. J., Ch. 495; 45 L. T. 62; 30 W. R. 21—C. A.

The custom of hiring furniture for the purposes of hotels is so notorious that no person giving credit to an hotel keeper is entitled to assume that the furniture of which he is in possession is his own property. The foundation of the doctrine of "reputed ownership," is that a man has been permitted to obtain false credit; this custom is so common, and so well known, that a man cannot gain false credit by the possession of furniture. Id.

A trader hired household furniture under a written agreement, whereby he was to pay a weekly rent for its use, and was to insure it, and the owner was empowered to repossess himself of it upon the hirer becoming bankrupt. The hirer became bankrupt. At the time of the bankruptcy the furniture remained in his house, in his apparently uncontrolled possession. Although no evidence was adduced of the existence of a custom of hiring furniture:—Held, that the court must take notice of such custom, and that the goods were not in the order and disposition of the bankrupt. Emerson, Ex parte, Hawkins, In re, 41 L. J., Bk. 20; 20 W. R. 110.

H., on the 30th of August, 1869, agreed with B., a furniture dealer, to hire furniture from him at the rate of 2l. per week. In the memorandum of agreement there was a provision that if H. should be sued or become bankrupt, B. should be at liberty to possess himself of the furniture. The agreement was never registered under the Bills of Sale Act. H., being still in possession of the furniture, became bankrupt on the 9th of June, 1871, and on the 6th of July the trustee took possession. On the 7th of July the trustee first received notice of B.'s claim to the furniture. The trustee applied that the furniture might be declared to be in the order and disposition of the bankrupt with the consent of the true owner:—Held, that the furniture was not in the order and disposition of the bankrupt with the consent of the true owner, as the bankrupt could not have used it as his own without a direct fraud. Id.

Held, also, that the Bills of Sale Act had no application to the case. Id.

Piano on Three Years' Hire System.—A trader hired a piano from H. & Co. at 15*l.* a year, payable by monthly instalments, on the terms that in the event of default in payment of the instalments, or of his death, bankruptcy or insolvency, or execution issuing against him, H. & Co. might put an end to the hiring and take possession of the instrument; and that when the instalments amounted to 45*l.*, H. & Co. should assign the piano to the debtor, but that till such payment the debtor should have no property in the piano. The debtor paid one instalment under the agreement, and four months afterwards filed a liquidation petition, still having the piano in his possession:—Held, that a custom to let pianos on hire on the above terms being established, there was nothing in the agreement obnoxious to the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 15, sub-s. 5, and that the piano did not pass to the trustee under the order and disposition clause. Blanchard, In re, Hattersley, Ex parte, 8 Ch. D. 601; 47 L. J., Bk. 113; 38 L. T. 619; 26 W. R. 636.

vii. Property held by Bankrupt as Trustee for others.

Shares.—Where shares of a company stood in the name of a bankrupt, who was on all occasions the only apparent owner, and had possession of the certificate of the shares, but the shares belonged to another person, in whose favour there existed a secret declaration of trust:—Held, that the shares were not in the reputed ownership of the bankrupt. Watkins, Ex parte, 2 Mont. & Ayr. 349; 4 Deac. & Chit. 87.

A debenture for a tontine annuity was deposited by an intestate with his bankers, one of whom received the dividends, and placed them to the credit of the intestate's account. The intestate died in 1801, and a commission issued against the bankers in 1810; notwithstanding which, the same partner continued to receive the dividends, and pay them to the intestate's widow up to the period of his own death, which happened in 1822; some time after which the assignees of the bankers claimed a lien on the debenture, for a debt due from the intestate to the banking-house:—Held, that after so long an abandonment of any claim of lien, the assignees could not support such claim; and the debenture, also, could not be considered as having been left in the order and disposition of the bankers, having been deposited in the nature of a trust. Douglas, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & Chit. 310.

By the rules of an insurance company, no person, except a director, was permitted to hold more than two shares in his own name; but no rule prevented a person from being beneficially entitled to more than two shares by holding them in the name of another party. A proprietor, who was already a holder of two shares, having purchased two others, caused them to be entered in the name of the bankrupt, in the company's books, with the knowledge of one of the directors and the actuary. The bankrupt signed a declaration of trust, that he held the shares as trustee for the proprietor; but no notice of the trust was taken in the books of the company, and the bankrupt held the certificate of the shares, and continued to receive the dividends thereon, accounting for them from time to time to the proprietor up to the period of his bankruptcy, when the shares were still standing in his name, during all which time he was treated as owner by the company, had notice of meetings served upon him, attended the meetings of the shareholders, and voted as a shareholder:—Held, that this was such a secret trust as was not within 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 79, and that the shares were in the order and disposition of the bankrupt as reputed owner. Burbridge, Ex parte, 1 Deac. 131.

By the rules of a company, only principals could become subscribers. A. purchased forty shares in the name of the bankrupt, who verbally declared that he held them as a trustee for A., and the certificates of the shares were kept in A.'s possession, but no notice was given to the company of the trust, nor did the bankrupt sign a written declaration of trust until seven days before the fiat was issued:—Held, that the shares were in the order and disposition of the bankrupt as reputed owner, and passed to the assignees. Orde, Ex parte, 1 Deac. 166.

W., at the time of his bankruptcy, had standing in his name shares in the capital of the Provincial Bank of Ireland, as to some of which he was a trustee under a formal declaration of trust, and, as to the rest, beneficial owner. The shares were not numbered, and there was nothing in the mode of entry or transfer by which they could be distinguished. After the investment of the trust property in these shares, and before the bankruptcy, W. bought and sold several shares, but there were always sufficient standing in his name to answer the trust:—Held, that so many of the shares standing in his name at the time of his bankruptcy as equalled in number those upon which the trust fund had been invested were not in the order and disposition of the bankrupt. Pinkett v. Wright, 2 Hare, 120; 12 L. J., Ch. 119; 6 Jur. 1102.

S. became possessed (in trust, as executor of his deceased father) of certain shares in the joint stock of the Lead Smelting Company. The only evidence of a party's interest in the stock of this company, was a book in which were entered all transfers of shares. In this book there was an entry signed by S., purporting to be a transfer of the shares in question; from himself as executor, to himself in his individual character. Where the transfer was made in pursuance of a bona fide sale for a money consideration, the words "sell and assign" were used; but in this instance those words were erased. On the faith of his apparent ownership of these shares, S. acted as a director of the company, and received the dividends to his own use up to the time of his bankruptcy; and, on passing his accounts under the commission, he treated the shares as his own property. Upon an issue directed to try the right to these shares, between S. and another, as executors of the original proprietor, and the assignees of S., it was left to the jury to say whether or not the shares were, at the time of the bankruptcy, in the possession, order, or disposition of the bankrupt, with the consent and permission of the true owner. The jury having found for the plaintiffs, the court refused to disturb the verdict. Cooper v. De Tastet, 2 M. & Scott, 714.

Personal Representatives—Omitting to Administer.]—Where a son entitled on the death of his mother to take out letters of administration, neglected to do so for twelve years, and remained in possession of her goods during that period, and became a bankrupt; and a creditor of the intestate afterwards took out letters of administration, and claimed the goods from the assignees of the son in trover:—Held, that such goods were within 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, as being in the possession and disposition of the bankrupt with the consent of the true owner; and that the assignees were therefore entitled to them, as the bankrupt might have obtained a legal right by taking out letters of administration. Fox v. Fisher, 3 B. & A. 135.

— Wife of Bankrupt.]—Where the wife of a bankrupt has administered to her father, and become possessed as administratrix of his estate, to which she and her infant brothers and sisters are entitled, and the husband has continued the business of the father for their benefit, this is not such a possession of the goods as will be deemed an ordering and disposition within the statute. Viner v. Cadell, 3 Esp. 88.

A testator bequeathed furniture and effects to his wife, upon trust to be sold as soon as possible, and appointed her his executrix. Eight years afterwards she married, having still the goods in her possession; and she and her husband used and enjoyed them for six years more, at the end of which period he became bankrupt:—Held, that the assignees of the husband were entitled to the goods. Moore, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 616; 6 Jur. 828.

— Carrying on Testator's Trade.]—An inn-keeper, who was a widow, having died intestate, two of her children, a son and daughter, took possession of her furniture and stock-in-trade, and carried on her business in their own names, for two years after her death, during which time they paid her funeral expenses and some of her debts, but without taking out administration to her estate, and at the end of that time became bankrupt, the daughter having a few months previously retired from the business and sold her share of it to the son. Another of the children then took out administration to the intestate, and claimed that part of her furniture and stock-in-trade which still remained in specie:—Held, that it belonged to the assignees as having been in the order and disposition of the son at the time of his bankruptcy. Thomas, In re, 1 Ph. 159; 3 Mont., D. & D. 40; 12 L. J., Ch. 59; 6 Jur. 979.

A husband directed his debts to be paid, and gave the residue of his estate to his wife, whom he appointed executrix. The widow proved the will, paid some of the debts, and for four years carried on, ostensibly on her own account, her late husband's business of a cow-keeper. At the end of that period she married a second husband, who shortly afterwards became bankrupt. There were then creditors of the testator still unsatisfied, who had been throughout aware of the widow's dealings in relation to the business:—Held, that they had no interest in the stock and property of the business as against the trustee in bankruptcy.

Fells, In re, Andrews, Ex parte, 4 Ch. D. 509; 46 L. J., Bk. 23; 36 L. T. 38; 25 W. R. 382.

Where Trust Fund improperly dealt with.]—

An owner of negotiable notes allowed the partners of a firm, one of whom was her trustee, to deposit them with a bank as security for advances. They were afterwards redeemed, and, without the knowledge of the owner deposited with another bank as security for a loan. Upon the eve of bankruptcy, the trustee, out of the partnership funds, paid off the debt and withdrew the notes. The notes had been treated by the firm as partnership property, but while not deposited they were kept in the possession of the trustee alone:—Held, that the notes remained trust property, and were not in the order and disposition of the bankrupts. Sindair v. Wilson, 20 Beav. 324; 24 L. J., Ch. 527; 1 Jur., N. S. 967.

A sole trustee who had appropriated 4,000*l.*, part of the trust property, deposited in the box in which he kept the trust deed and the securities for other portions of the trust funds two policies of insurance, one on his own life for 2,000*l.*, the other on the life of his father for 3,000*l.*, enclosing them in an envelope, with a memorandum that, in the event of his (the trustee's) death the amount of the inclosed policies was to be applied to the repayment of 4,000*l.* borrowed by him of the cestui que trust. Six years afterwards the trustee became bankrupt. The policy for 2,000*l.* was found by the officer of the Court of Bankruptcy inclosed with the memorandum in the box, the other policy having been paid to the bankrupt upon his father's death:—Held, as between the cestui que trust and the assignees in bankruptcy: first, that notwithstanding the words importing contingency, the memorandum was a valid declaration that the policy was, in any event, subject to the trusts of the settlement. Bankhead, In re, 2 Kay & J. 560.

Held, secondly, that there being a valid declaration of trust by the sole trustee, he was the proper person to be in possession of the policy; in other words, the true owner within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 125; and he being also in the reputed possession of the property when the bankruptcy took place, there was no separation of interests; the true owner and the reputed owner were the same person, and the 125th section did not apply. And an order was made, under the 130th section, for an assignment of the policy to the new trustees of the settlement. Id.

Trustees of a settlement only authorizing investments in government or real securities advanced part of the trust moneys to a banking firm, in which one of the trustees was a partner, on the security of a mortgage of bonds, in which some of the bankers were obligees. Afterwards another partner in the bank was appointed a new trustee of the settlement. The bankers became bankrupt. The bonds were left in the custody of the bankers, and no notice of the mortgage was given to any of the obligors. One of the partners and trustees of the settlement was the sole surviving obligee in one of the bonds:—Held, that he was the real, and not merely the reputed, owner of the bond debt, but that he held it in trust, and that it was not in the reputed ownership of the firm or of himself. Geaves, Ex parte, 8 De G., Mac. & G. 291; 25 L. J., Bk. 53; 2 Jur., N. S. 651.

Others of the bonds had, without the knowledge of the cestuis que trustent, been paid off and replaced by different securities, which the bankers had set apart and marked with the names of the trustees of the settlement:—Held, that the securities were not in the reputed ownership of the bankers. Id.

Goods held as Trustee—Malting Agent—Custom in Trade.—Brewers had a malting agent, who acted for them alone. He had power, for the purpose of purchasing barley for malting, to draw on certain banking accounts of the brewers. He drew out money fraudulently, and bought barley on credit, which by his conduct, he represented to the brewers to be barley paid for with their money. He also bought malt, which he represented to have been made from barley bought with their money. He became bankrupt. The brewers seized all barley and malt upon his premises, the value of which was less than the moneys he had drawn out. The trustee in his bankruptcy sued the brewers for the value:—Held, that the barley and malt were not in the order or disposition of the malting agent as reputed owner thereof, it being notorious that malting agents are not usually the owners of the barley and malt on their maltings; and that consequently the brewers were entitled to judgment. That, as the bankrupt could not have been heard to say he was not trustee of the barley and malt for the brewers, the trustee in his bankruptcy likewise (the bankrupt not having been reputed owner) could not dispute the equitable right of the brewers. Harris v. Truman, 9 Q. B. D. 264; 51 L. J., Q. B. 338; 46 L. T. 844; 30 W. R. 533—C. A. Affirming, S. C., 7 Q. B. D. 340; 50 L. J., Q. B. 633; 45 L. T. 255; 30 W. R. 135.

A. drew two bills upon B., which C. indorsed upon the security of cement in A.'s possession, and stored in A.'s warehouse. A. packed the cement in barrels, which he set apart in his own warehouse, which he marked with the initial letters of B.'s name, to whom also the invoice was sent, as on a purchase by him. A.'s bankers discounted the bills, and A. received the proceeds. A. soon after filed a petition for liquidation, at which time the cement remained in his warehouse, set apart and marked as before stated. One bill became due before and one after the filing of A.'s liquidation petition, and both were paid by C. C. claimed the cement as being held by A. as a trustee for him:—Held, that A. did not hold the cement as a trustee within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and that the cement passed to his trustee, as being in his order and disposition, with the consent of C., the true owner. Cohn, Ex parte, Cohn, In re, 38 L. T. 884.

viii. Partnership Property.

Dormant Partner.—A dormant partner was within the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 72. Church, Ex parte, 1 Mont. 457.

Where A., the dormant partner of B., in a trading firm (the whole of the business being carried on by B. and in his name), allowed, on the dissolution of the partnership by effluxion of time, the partnership stock, effects, and debts to remain in the order and disposition of B.; and B., after continuing in trade for about two years afterwards on his sole account, became bankrupt:—Held, that A.'s share of the partnership property and effects, and of the debts due on the partnership account at the time of the dissolution, passed to B.'s assignees, as being in the order and disposition of B. within 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11. Gilpin, In re, 3 D. & R. 636; S. C., nom. Enderby, Ex parte, 2 B. & C. 389; S. P., Wilson, Ex parte, Buck, 48. But see next case.

The goods of a partnership, in which one of the partners is a dormant partner and the sole ostensible partner becomes bankrupt, do not pass to his assignees, as being in his possession, order or disposition by the consent of the true owner. Reynolds v. Bowley, 2 L. R., Q. B. 474; 36 L. J., Q. B. 247; 16 L. T. 532; 15 W. R. 813; 8 B. & S. 406—Ex. Ch.

The fact of a business being carried on in the name of one ostensible partner does not make a reputed ownership in the partner whose name is used. Id.

A brother and a sister took to the business of their father, a farmer and a cowkeeper, and bought the stock. They then agreed to carry on business in partnership, but in the brother's name alone, the partnership of the sister being kept secret. She, however, lived on the farm, and helped her brother in carrying on the business. The partnership had lasted three years when he became bankrupt:—Held, that the sister's interest in the partnership effects was not in his order and disposition. Id.

A secret partnership is not within the meaning of the law as to reputed ownership, as there is a joint ownership, and no true owner as distinct from an apparent owner. Id.

Enderby, Ex parte (2 B. & C. 389), overruled. Id.

The share of a secret partner in the joint stock-in-trade, being in the possession of an apparent partner and the sole ostensible trader, was not liable on the bankruptcy of the latter, as being within the meaning or mischief of 21 Jac. 1, c. 19; the bankrupt having such an interest and qualified property in the secret partner's share as to destroy the essential requisites of a true and independent ownership on the one hand, and of a fraudulent and reputed ownership on the other. Coldwell v. Gregory, 1 Price, 119; 2 Rose, 149.

Where a secret partnership existed between A. and B. to underwrite policies of insurance in their separate names on their joint account, and A. died and B. became bankrupt:—Held, that premiums due on policies effected in A.'s name during his lifetime were not in the order and disposition of the bankrupt. Brett v. Beckwith, 26 L. J., Ch. 130; 3 Jur., N. S. 31.

Nominal Partner.—A trader, carrying on business in Regent-street, but residing elsewhere, associated the name of his son with his own in the business; the son, however, having no share in the profits, but merely a yearly salary. The house in Regent-street was leased to the father, the ground floor being used for the purposes of the business, and the other parts let out in lodgings, the rents of which were placed to the father's private account, and all taxes and other outgoings were also placed to his debit in the partnership books. The son was permitted to occupy apartments in the house for his own residence, but the father had the control over the entire property:—Held, that this property was not distributable among the joint creditors, but belonged to the separate estate of the father.

Murton, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 252; 4 Jur. 849.

A wine merchant, carrying on business under the firm of J. R. & Co., announced by a circular that he had taken his nephew into partnership. The business was thenceforth carried on under the style of J. R., sen., & Co., but, as between the uncle and nephew, the latter received a salary only, and did not participate in the capital, profits or losses of the concern. Part of the stock-in-trade consisted of wines in the docks, which the uncle, on announcing the partnership, directed the dock company to deliver to the order of the new firm. On both becoming bankrupt:—Held, that these wines were in the reputed ownership of the two, and ought to be administered as joint estate. Arbouin, Ex parte, 1 De Gex, 359.

P., having dissolved a former partnership with H. & C., continued the business alone under the style of P., Son & Co., his own name alone being placed over the shop front. He employed his son to assist him in the management of the business, and authorized him to sign cheques and to order goods in the name of the firm, his intention being to take his son into partnership if the business prospered; but no partnership was in fact entered into between the father and the son. Ultimately P. and his son were jointly adjudicated bankrupts as ostensible partners. Of fifty-seven creditors who proved in the bankruptcy two deposed that the son had been held out to them as a partner by the father, and eight others deposed that they had always believed the son to be a partner:—Held, that there had been a sufficient holding out of the son as a partner to convert the assets of the business, which were originally the separate estate of the father, into joint estate of him and his son, so far as the creditors were concerned. Hayman, Ex parte, Pulsford, In re, 8 Ch. D. 11; 47 L. J., Bk. 54; 38 L. T. 238; 26 W. R. 597—C. A.

Held, also, that the doctrine of reputed ownership applied, and that the assets were distributable among the creditors of the firm as being in the apparent possession and reputed ownership of the firm with the consent of the true owner. Id.

Infant Partner.—[In order to bring goods, in the order and disposition of a bankrupt, within the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 15, sub-s. 5, they must be in the sole possession and sole reputed ownership of the bankrupt. Dorman, Ex parte, Lake, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 51; 42 L. J., Bk. 20; 27 L. T. 528; 21 W. R. 94.

Therefore, where two partners, one of whom was an infant, committed an act of bankruptcy, and the adult partner was adjudicated bankrupt:—Held, that the machinery and trade fixtures in the house where the business was carried on, which belonged to the landlord, and were with his consent in the possession of the firm, did not pass to the trustee in the bankruptcy. Id.

Dissolution of Partnership.—[By a decree in a suit a partnership between the plaintiff and defendant was dissolved, and the business and partnership property were ordered to be sold as a going concern, either party being at liberty to bid. Under a subsequent order the plaintiff became the purchaser, he having in the meantime been carrying on the business for the benefit of the purchaser. Under the order approving of the purchase by him he was allowed to go into possession at once as purchaser. He continued in possession for some time, and ultimately became bankrupt:—Held, that under the circumstances the business and partnership property were in his order and disposition with the consent of the true owner. Graham v. McCulloch, 20 L. R., Eq. 397; 32 L. T. 748; 23 W. R. 786.

Two partners traded under the name of one of them only, and upon a dissolution that one continued the business, the other retiring, but no apparent change took place in the firm. By the agreement, on the dissolution the stock-in-trade belonged to the continuing partner, who afterwards became bankrupt. The stock-in-trade was sold by his assignees as his separate property, and the retired partner, though cognizant of the fact, made no objection or claim. On the retired partner becoming bankrupt:—Held, that the stock-in-trade was not in the reputed ownership of the two, but ought to be administered as the separate estate of the continuing partner. Wood, Ex parte, 1 De Gex, 134.

Death of Partner—Securities given to continuing Partners for Debt to old Firm.—[If one of four partners dies, and the surviving partners compromise, and obtain securities for a debt due to the original firm, and become bankrupts, the securities are, by reputed ownership, distributable amongst the creditors of the three. Taylor, Ex parte, 1 Mont. 240.

If goods are purchased and paid for by a firm of four, on the joint account of themselves and two other firms, and one member of the firm of four dies, and the goods are in the possession of one of the two firms: upon the bankruptcy of the survivors the goods do not pass by reputed ownership to the assignees of the survivor. Id.

If a firm consigns goods to Hayti, which, after the death of one member, are returned, and a bill of lading from Hayti is sent to the holder of a bill of exchange dishonoured by the partnership, and the goods remain in the West India Docks, they, upon the bankruptcy of the survivors, are not in their reputed ownership. Id.

If a firm is possessed, as mortgagees, of a real estate, which, after the death of one member, remains in the possession of the survivors, it is not in their reputed ownership. Id.

Property affected by Trust.—[A father and son carried on business in partnership, under articles which provided that the machinery employed in the business should not form part of the capital, but should belong to the father. The father died, having by his will appointed his wife, his son, and his son-in-law executors and trustees. He authorized his trustees to continue his business, either alone or in conjunction with any person or persons, and to employ the capital employed in it in carrying it on, and also to employ in it any money, part of his general estate. After his death the widow and the son continued to carry on the business until they became bankrupt. The son-in-law took no part in the business, though he knew that it was being continued:—Held, that as the carrying on of the business by two only of the trustees was not authorized by the will, the machinery was not converted into assets of the new firm, and that consequently the unpaid creditors of the old firm were entitled to such of the machinery as remained in specie at the date of the bankruptcy of the new firm. Butcher, Ex parte, Mellor, In re, 13 Ch. D. 465; 42 L. T. 299; 28 W. R. 484—C. A. Affirming, S. C., 28 W. R. 186. See also Manchester Bank, Ex parte, Mellor, In re, 12 Ch. D. 917; 48 L. J., Bk. 94; 40 L. T. 723.

Held, also, that the creditors of the new firm were not entitled to the machinery on the ground that it had remained in the order and disposition of the new firm with the consent of the creditors of the old firm. Ib.

Dissolution of Partnership—Debts.—A dissolution of partnership was advertised in the Gazette, and a circular sent to the creditors in the name of the dissolved firm, requesting debtors to the firm to pay their debts to one partner:—Held, that the notice was insufficient to take the debts out of the reputed ownership of the firm. Sprague or Brewster, Ex parte, 4 De G., Mac. & G. 866; 22 L. J., Bk. 62.

The plant and stock-in-trade were taken possession of by the same partner, and used in his separate trade after the dissolution:—Held, that it was in his separate reputed ownership. Ib.

—Fund appropriated for Special Purpose.—At the death of one of two partners, a considerable balance belonging to the partnership was in the hands of their bankers, a specific portion of which the surviving partner drew out, and handed over to sureties for the completion of a previous arrangement for the purposes of the partnership, upon the understanding that, if the arrangement was not carried into effect, the money should be returned. The arrangement was not completed, and the surviving partner became bankrupt. The money still remaining in the hands of the trustees:—Held, that the money belonged to the joint estate of the two partners, and not to the separate estate of the surviving partner. Leaf, Ex parte, 4 Deac. 287; 1 Mont. & Chit. 662; 4 Jur. 28.

Taking in new Partner.—J. C. S. and W. S., carrying on business as brewers, in co-partnership, admitted W. as a dormant partner. It was stipulated by deed that the stock and effects of the old firm, including the plant, and book debts, should form part of the capital stock of the new co-partnership; that W. should be paid 10 per cent. on the capital advanced by him, and should not otherwise interfere. The business was carried on, as before, in the names of J. C. S. and W. S. only, until the new firm became bankrupt. Upon the petition of several creditors of the old firm, some of whom had notice of the dormant partner:—Held, that all the personal chattels of the new firm were within the order and disposition of J. C. S. and W. S., and ought to be administered in the bankruptcy as the separate estate of the two. Jennings, Ex parte, 1 Mont. 45.

Change of Partners—New Firm carrying on different Trade to old.—S. & O. assigned all their stocks and effects to trustees for the benefit of their creditors, and dissolved their partnership. S. continued on the same premises and carried on a different branch of trade, and soon afterwards took in H. as a partner. Part of the stock of S. & O. which had been assigned to trustees was a quantity of New Zealand flax, which remained unsold upon the premises, but was separately warehoused and kept distinct from the stock of the new partnership, and was not adapted for the new manufacture carried on by S. & H. A separate fiat sued out against H., and six months afterwards a joint fiat against S. & O.:—Held, that the assignees of S. & O. were entitled to the flax, and that the clause of order and disposition did not apply to such a state of circumstances. Vardon, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 694.

Death of Partner—Survivor left Executor.]

—A. authorized the sale of his share in a brewery to B., his surviving partner, whom he appointed one of his executors. B. conceiving that he had duly become the purchaser, carried on the business until his death, and it was subsequently carried on by C., his executor. Afterwards the sale was set aside, and the estate of A. became entitled to share in the profits made subsequent to A.'s death. C. afterwards became bankrupt, having the whole trade property in his possession:—Held, that the property was not within his order and disposition. Stocken v. Dawson, 9 Beav. 239. Affirmed, 17 L. J., Ch. 282.

—Executor entering Partnership.]

B., as trustee and executor of his father's will, became entitled to one half-share in a distillery business lately carried on in partnership between his father and another. In pursuance of a provision in the will, B. continued the partnership business, and afterwards purchased the interest of the beneficiaries under the will, and executed mortgages to secure the purchase-money, by one of which, dated September, 1872, B. assigned all his beneficial interest under his father's will as a security for payment of the money due, and by the same deed charged all his share and interest in the distillery partnership, and in the good-will of the business, with the repayment of the money due. New articles of partnership were then entered into between B. and the old partner, in which the former appeared as the owner of one-half the business. In June, 1877, B. was adjudicated bankrupt, and his share in the partnership had since been sold to the other partner:—Held, as between B.'s trustee in bankruptcy and the mortgagee, that the mortgage of B.'s share and interest in the partnership was a charge upon a chose in action, and as such was not affected by the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 15, or by the Bills of Sale Act, 1854. Bainbridge, In re, Fletcher, Ex parte, 8 Ch. D. 218; 47 L. J., Bk. 70; 38 L. T. 229; 26 W. R. 439.

Held, also, that to bring partnership goods within the order and disposition clause, they must have been in the sole and absolute possession of the bankrupt; and that, as the mortgage of B.'s share had not acquired the right to take possession of any of the partnership property, B. was not in possession with the consent of the true owner. Ib.

Partnership Articles—Proviso in Event of Bankruptcy of Partner.]—A provision in a deed of partnership, that, in the event of the bankruptcy or insolvency of a partner, his share in a mining lease (forming part of the partnership property) shall go over to his co-partners, is void, as being in fraud of the bankrupt laws. Wattmore v. Mason, 2 Johns. & H. 204; 31 L. J., Ch. 433; 8 Jur., N. S. 278; 5 L. T. 631; 10 W. R. 168.

k. Evidence as to Ownership.

Reputation in Neighbourhood.]—In an action of trover by assignees of a bankrupt for a rick of bark, of which he was the reputed owner, a witness may be asked what was the reputation of the neighbourhood as to whom the rick belonged to at the time of the bankruptcy, and if it appears that the bankrupt had exercised repeated acts of ownership over it previously to that time, the action will lie. Oliver v. Bartlett, 3 Moore, 592; 1 B. & B. 269.

In an action by assignees of a bankrupt, claiming property which he was alleged to have had in his possession, order and disposition, as the reputed owner at the time of his bankruptcy, it was competent for the defendant who had paid a valid consideration for the property to give in evidence a contrary reputation, and to resist the claim under 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11, upon those grounds. Gurr v. Rutton, Holt, 327.

Conduct of Bankrupt.]—Upon a question whether A., after executing a conveyance of property to trustees for the benefit of his wife, had the disposition of the property; evidence of his making an assignment of it is not admissible against the trustees, unless they were privy to it, or unless the property was delivered, and the assignment acted upon. Meyer v. Sefton, 2 Stark, 274.

Declarations by Bankrupt.]—In trover against assignees for goods claimed by them as belonging to the bankrupt, or as being in his order and disposition at the time of his bankruptcy, with the consent of the true owner, they offered in evidence declarations made by the bankrupt before his bankruptcy, as to the goods, in the absence of the plaintiff, in order to show an exercise of dominion over them as owner. This evidence having been rejected, and the jury having found for the plaintiff, the court sent the cause down for a new trial. Sharpe v. Mewsholme, 8 Scott, 21; 5 Bing. N. C. 713; 3 Jur. 581.

Assignees of Goods allowing Assignor to trade for their Benefit—Estoppel.]—A., a horse-dealer and jobber, assigned all his stock in trade to trustees for the benefit of his creditors, until all his debts should be paid off, to hold on certain trusts, that so long as A. should observe the orders of the trustees, he was to be allowed to carry on and conduct the business subject to their orders, but that they should have the power to determine his possession on his failing to observe their orders; that all moneys received in the business were to be paid to the account of the trustees, and all moneys paid by their cheques; and that A. was to receive a weekly salary. The creditors also advanced a sum of money to carry on the business. The business was carried on by A. for some time, his name being over the door at the place of business, and he had dealings with various persons as if he carried on the business on his own account; but, on his neglecting to observe the orders of the trustees, they determined his right to carry on the business, and he admitted in writing that they had a right to and did assume the possession of the stock in trade. The trustees thereupon gave notice to the parties who had some of the horses, part of the stock in trade, that they belonged to them. Two days after this notice A. committed an act of bankruptcy. On an interpleader issue to try whose horses these were:—Held, that the trustees, by allowing A. to carry on the business in his own name, were not estopped from denying the horses were A.'s; and that the horses were not in the possession, order and disposition of the bankrupt at the time of the bankruptcy, within 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 72. Price v. Groom, 2 Ex. 542; 17 L. J., Ex. 346.

Person dealing with Goods by Bankrupt's orders—Estoppel.]—M., the owner of goods, put C. into possession of them, who remained so until after the death of the owner, who died intestate. After M.'s death the defendant sold the goods by the desire and as the property of C., who had previously committed an act of bankruptcy of which the defendant was cognizant. The intestate's goods had not been administered, and the ordinary had not claimed them. In an action by the assignees of C. for the conversion of the goods:—Held, that the defendant was not entitled to set up the right of the ordinary to the goods, and therefore that the defendant could not insist that the property was not shewn to have been in the order and disposition of the bankrupt with the consent of the true owner. White v. Mullett, 6 Ex. 713; 20 L. J., Ex. 291.

1. Order for Sale by Court of Bankruptcy.

Under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 125.]—Goods in the order and disposition of a bankrupt, as reputed owner, do not pass to his assignees under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 141, but in order to vest the property in such goods in the assignees or other person, the Court of Bankruptcy must make an order under s. 125. Heslop v. Baker, 6 Ex. 740; 20 L. J., Ex. 350; 15 Jur. 684.

Order must be Specific.]—An order by a commissioner for the sale of goods in the possession, order or disposition of a bankrupt as reputed owner, must be specific as to the goods to which it is to apply (although it may be made on an ex parte application). Quartermaine v. Bittles-ton, 13 C. B. 133; 22 L. J., C. P. 105; 17 Jur. 281.

An order is sufficient if it specifies the goods ordered to be sold, without referring by name to the persons supposed to be the true owners of such goods. Freshney v. Carriek, 1 H. & N. 653; 26 L. J., Ex. 129.

An order was made by a county court judge for the sale of all the goods of a bankrupt in and about his premises, called the Cross Keys. The bankrupt had on his premises, with the consent of the true owner, certain goods, of which the bankrupt was the reputed owner:—Held, that the order sufficiently described the goods to be sold, though it did not state the name of the true owner. Fielding v. Lee, 18 C. B., N. S. 499; 34 L. J., C. P. 143; 11 Jur., N. S. 323; 12 L. T. 25; 13 W. R. 462.

Made ex parte.]—An order made by the Court of Bankruptcy for sale of goods, as in the reputed ownership of a bankrupt, is ex parte. Mather v. Lay, 2 Johns. & H. 374.

Seemingly, it cannot be appealed against by the true owner. Ib. But see next Case.

The Court of Chancery has jurisdiction (notwithstanding such order) to restrain a sale, and determine the rights of the parties. Ib.

An application by the true owner to the Court of Bankruptcy for a stay of proceedings, is not a bar to a subsequent bill for an injunction to stay a sale. Ib.

Appeal by True Owner.—An order is not final and conclusive against the true owner. Graham v. Furber, 14 C. B. 134; 2 C. L. R. 10; 23 L. J., C. P. 10; 18 Jur. 61.

Relation of Trustee's Title.—By the order vesting the property in the assignees or vendee of the goods, their title has relation back to the act of bankruptcy, in the same way as the title of the assignees has by the general assignment. Heaslop v. Baker, 8 Ex. 411; 22 L. J., Ex. 333.

Authority to bring Action.—The usual order by the Court of Bankruptcy, authorizing the bankruptcy assignee to bring an action for the recovery of a debt, was not an order for the sale and disposal of the property for the benefit of the bankrupt's creditors within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 125. Cooke v. Hemming, 3 L. R., C. P. 334; 37 L. J., C. P. 179; 18 L. T. 772; 16 W. R. 903.

Evidence of Reputed Ownership.—Mortgages of a cargo on board a ship on the coast of Africa, sent no notice of their security to the captain till two months after the date of the mortgage, during all which time, and more, the ship was lying off that coast, nor was any notice received by the captain till after the mortgagor had become bankrupt:—Held, that affidavits of these facts, and of there having been opportunities of earlier communication with the vessel, constituted a sufficient prima facie case for an application ex parte for an order for sale of the cargo, as being in the reputed ownership of the bankrupt, with the consent of the true owner. Lucas, Ex parte, 3 De G. & J. 113.

XI. PROOF OF DEBTS.

1. GENERAL PRINCIPLE.

The object of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, is to set the bankrupt free from every contract of every description, which he entered into prior to his bankruptcy, and to enable the other parties to such contracts to prove against the estate for what they could have recovered at law in an action for breach of contract against the bankrupt. Llynvi Coal and Iron Company, Ex parte, Hyde, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 28; 41 L. J., Bk. 5; 25 L. T. 609; 20 W. R. 105.

Voluntary Obligations.—By the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 32, all debts provable under the bankruptcy, after those to which priority is given by that section, are to be paid pari passu; and therefore the rule of equity that creditors by specialty who are mere volunteers are not entitled to compete with creditors on simple contract for valuable consideration is no longer applicable. Stewart, In re, Pottinger, Ex parte, 8 Ch. D. 621;

47 L. J., Bk. 43; 38 L. T. 432; 26 W. R. 648—C. A.

2. NATURE OF DEBT.

Moral Obligation.—A. died intestate and insolvent, having abstained from making a provision by will for his daughters, in consequence of a promise from his son to pay an annuity of 50*l.* to each of them while single, and 500*l.* to each upon her marriage; but it did not appear what the nature or amount of the provision was which A. abstained from making:—Held, upon the bankruptcy of the son, that this promise, though morally, was not legally binding upon the son, and that it did not constitute a debt provable under the fiat. Mudie, Ex parte, 6 Jur. 1093.

Illegal—Scotch Bank Notes in England.—A., being agent of and also partner in the Leith Banking Company, opened an office at Carlisle, and circulated there promissory notes, drawn by the company's cashier in Scotland, and made payable to the bearer on demand at the company's office in Leith:—Held, this was in violation of the statutes passed for the protection of the Bank of England, and that a debt formed of notes so issued could not be proved under a commission of bankruptcy. Randleson, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Mac. 86.

Contraband Goods.—A seller abroad of contraband goods is entitled to prove, unless he is a participator in smuggling them. Cacalierre, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 227.

Trading with Enemy.—A debt arising out of a contract to convey British goods to a market in an enemy's country, cannot be proved under a commission after peace has been established between that country and Great Britain. Schmalding, Ex parte, Buck. 93.

Broker acting as Merchant.—A proof may be made of a debt to a broker of the city of London, arising out of a transaction in which he acted as a merchant, although in contravention of his duty in his office and the bond given by him. Dyster, Ex parte, 2 Rose, 349; 1 Mer. 155.

Illegal Insurance.—A bill was indorsed to a broker in consideration of the money paid by him in effecting insurances, one of which was illegal; the acceptor becoming bankrupt, the petition of the indorsee to prove as to what arose upon the illegal insurance was dismissed. Mather, Ex parte, 3 Ves. jun. 373.

Gaming Transactions—Stock Exchange Bargains.—A debt arising out of a loan transaction or bargain contract on the Stock Exchange, between the members, is not a gambling transaction, and may be proved for on the bankruptcy of one of the parties. Phillips, Ex parte, 2 De G., F. & J. 634; 30 L. J., Bk. 1; 6 Jur., N. S. 1273; 3 L. T. 516; 9 W. R. 131.

Coursing with Greyhounds.—Where a steward of a coursing club, who had collected subscriptions and other contributions from the members, which he was bound to hand over to the treasurer, became bankrupt:—Held, that the treasurer might prove for the amount. Held, also that, though one of the purposes to which the fund was to be applied was to provide stakes for running matches with greyhounds, this afforded no objection to the proof, under the statutes for prevention of gaming. King, Ex parte, 2 Deac. 23.

—Money lent to pay Bets.—Money lent to pay a lost bet is not "money knowingly advanced for gaming or betting" within 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 41, s. 1, and the lender will be admitted to prove in the bankruptcy of the borrower for money so lent. Pyke, Ex parte, Lister, In re, 8 Ch. D. 754; 47 L. J., Bk. 100; 38 L. T. 923; 26 W. R. 806—C. A.

Inducing Parties to Trust Debtor.—[A., an innkeeper, assigned the premises and furniture to B., as his successor in the inn, and placed his son, who was a minor, with B., at a yearly salary in the first instance, but upon the understanding that he was afterwards to be taken in as partner. The licence was transferred to B. and A.'s son jointly, and B. became bankrupt, after contracting a large debt with A., the proof of which was rejected by the commissioners, on the ground that A. concealed his son's minority, and thus induced parties to trust the bankrupt, who had no capital:—Held, that the commissioners were not justified in rejecting the proof. Archer, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 784.]

Debts arising from a Felony.—[If one of three partners obtains by forgery a sum from the sale of stock, which he, in fraud of his partners, pays into the banking-house, and withdraws it, it is provable against the joint estate by the stock proprietor, although he has not prosecuted or given evidence against the convicted felon. Boland, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Mac. 315.]

Where an actuary embezzled various sums, rendering forty indictments necessary, and became bankrupt, and five indictments were preferred, which failed from technical reasons which would apply to any other indictment, the proof was allowed for the whole sum embezzled. Jones, Ex parte, 2 Mont. & Ayr. 193; 3 Deac. & Chit. 525.

A proof, resting on a felony, cannot be made till after a prosecution, except where conviction is hopeless. Ib.

A servant acknowledged that he had misapplied sums received from his master's debtors, and gave his master a warrant of attorney for securing the amount by instalments, the master treating his conduct as a mere breach of trust; after which the servant became bankrupt:—Held, that the master could not prove for the amount until he had prosecuted the bankrupt for the felony. Elliot, Ex parte, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 110, 123; 2 Deac. 172.

A. committed a forgery upon a banking company (B.), was prosecuted by them, and a true bill found against him by the grand jury. At the same assizes A. was tried upon another indictment for forgery upon another banking company (C.), to which he pleaded guilty, and received sentence of penal servitude. The judge directed B.'s indictment, to which A. had pleaded not guilty, to stand over, as justice was satisfied by the sentence already passed upon A. Previously to the conviction A. had assigned all his estate for the benefit of his creditors:—Held, that the banking company (B.) was entitled to prove as creditors of A. under this assignment for the amount paid by them upon the forged cheque, and that they had not forfeited their rights by abstaining from pressing for an actual conviction upon the indictment preferred by them. Dudley and West, Bromwich Banking Company v. Spittle, 1 Johns. & H. 14; 2 L. T. 47; 8 W. R. 351.

A bankrupt, who was a banker's clerk, having absconded on the 16th of March, 1877, defalcations to the extent of a few hundred pounds were being discovered, when on the 24th of the same month the bankers received from the bankrupt a letter confessing thefts to the amount of 7,852l. 19s. Instructions were given on the 26th, in consequence of which a warrant for his apprehension was, on the 28th, placed in the hands of a detective, who failed to find him in England. Conversations on the 19th and again on the 22nd of March, between a partner of the bank and relatives of the bankrupt, were deposed to. In the course of the former the partner said, "My advice is, that he should get out of the country to America, or elsewhere;" and on the latter occasion an offer having been made by the bankrupt's wife that the bankrupt should return and throw himself on the mercy of the bank, the partner said, "No, if he did that, we should be obliged to prosecute him; if he were abroad I don't suppose we should trouble further for him." After the conversation on the 19th, one of the relatives who was present had an interview with the bankrupt in this country, since which he had disappeared. The registrar of the county court having refused to admit to proof a claim of the bankers for 7,852l. 19s.:—Held, that there was not proof of such negligence on the part of the bankers to bring the criminal to justice as disentitled them to prove for the amount stolen; and appeal allowed. Turquand, Ex parte, Shepherd, In re, 9 Ch. D. 704. Affirmed sub nom. Ball, Ex parte, Shepherd, In re, next case.

Per James and Bramwell, L. JJ.:—Even if a person injured by a felony is debarred from proving in the bankruptcy of the felon in respect of the injury until he has prosecuted the felon, the obligation to prosecute does not extend to his trustee in bankruptcy, though the injured person himself tendered his proof before his own bankruptcy. Ball, Ex parte, Shepherd, In re, 10 Ch. D. 667; 48 L. J., Bk. 57; 40 L. T. 141; 27 W. R. 563; 14 Cox, C. C. 237—C. A.

Per Baggallay, L. J.:—A person who has been injured by a felony is not allowed by the policy of the law to seek civil redress, if he has failed in his duty of bringing or endeavouring to bring the felon to justice. And the trustee in bankruptcy of the injured person stands in no better position than he himself. Ib.

But this rule does not apply where the offender has escaped from the jurisdiction before a prosecution could have been commenced by the exercise of reasonable diligence. Ib.

Bankers allowed a customer to overdraw his current account on his depositing with them as security for the overdraft some bills of exchange drawn by him upon, and purporting to be accepted by, a third person. After the customer had overdrawn his account the bankers discovered that the acceptances were forgeries. They then communicated with the customer, and ultimately gave up the forged acceptances to him, receiving from him in exchange joint and several promissory notes of himself and his father. The customer was afterwards adjudicated a bankrupt. The notes were not paid at maturity:—Held, that, though the bankers had not prosecuted the bankrupt for the felony, and whether they had or had not agreed not to prosecute him, they were entitled to prove in the bankruptcy for the balance due to them upon the bankrupt's current account. Lealie, Ex parte, Guerrier, In re, 20 Ch. D. 131; 51 L. J., Ch. 689; 46 L. T. 548; 30 W. R. 344; 15 Cox, C. C. 125—C. A.

Statute of Limitations.—After a commission has issued, the Statute of Limitations does not affect debts not previously barred. Ross, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 46, 330.

A. and B. made a joint promissory note, ten years after the date of which B. executed an assignment of his property, in trust for his creditors, under which a dividend was paid to the holder of the note. A. became bankrupt:—Held, that the payment of the dividend under B.'s assignment, being after the Statute of Limitations had already run, did not revive the debt as against A., so as to enable the holder to prove on the note under the fiat against A. Woodward, Ex parte, 3 Deac. 294.

If a debt which is barred under a commission is revived prior to a second, it is provable under the latter. Roberts v. Morgan, 2 Esp. 736.

Acknowledgment in Writing—Bill of Exchange.—A bill of exchange was given by a bankrupt to a creditor, in consideration of an advance of money made more than six years before the bill was given. Five years after proof was made upon the bill, and dividends had been received upon it, the commissioners ordered the proof to be expunged, on the ground that the bill was not such an acknowledgment in writing of the debt as took the case out of the Statute of Limitations:—Held, that the bill was sufficient for that purpose, and, consequently, that the proof must be restored. Wilson, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 586.

Payment on Account.—A debtor, in 1831, agreed with his creditor to pay him a composition of five shillings in the pound upon the amount of his debt, by instalments. The first instalment was paid; when the creditor agreed to give the debtor a release in full, on his paying the balance of the composition. The debtor made default in payment of the balance; but in February, 1839, being pressed for the payment of the demand of the creditor, he made a payment of 100*l.*, in part of the balance of the composition, and required a receipt as for a composition of five shillings in the pound upon the balance of account owing by him. The creditor acknowledged the payment of the 100*l.*, but declined signing a receipt in this form. In September, 1839, the debtor became bankrupt:—Held, that the agreement for the composition did not preclude the creditor from proving for the balance of the original debt, and that it was not barred by the Statute of Limitations. Bateson, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 289.

A debtor, one of whose debts had been contracted more than six years, had joined in executing a deed of inspectorship, reciting that he was indebted to divers persons, and assigning his business and effects to inspectors who were to realise and pay his creditors by instalments. The deed provided that if the debtor should be adjudicated a bankrupt, or if execution should issue against him (which event happened), the inspectors might declare the deed at an end, and the creditors might sue for their debts, any instalments that had been paid being taken as part payment. A schedule of the debts verified by the debtor's affidavit was filed, and a small dividend paid under the deed to the creditors. A proof being tendered for the debt on the debtor's subsequent bankruptcy:—Held, that neither the execution of the deed, nor the filing of the schedule, nor the payment of the dividend was sufficient to take the case out of the Statute of Limitations, and that the proof must be rejected. Topping, Ex parte, 34 L. J., Bk. 44; 12 L. T. 787; 13 W. R. 1025.

Scotch Sequestration.—A sequestration in a foreign country does not suspend the running of time prescribed by the Statute of Limitations; and therefore a creditor under a Scotch sequestration issued in 1836 was not allowed to prove his debt against the estate of his debtor, who had subsequently set up business in London, had become embarrassed, and filed a petition in bankruptcy, in 1860. Kidd, Ex parte, 7 Jur., N. S. 613; 4 L. T. 334.

Ca. sa.—Death of Plaintiff—Discharge from Prison.—A creditor, having, before the bankruptcy of his debtor, taken him in execution, died shortly before the issuing of the fiat; and the bankrupt, eight months after the issuing of the fiat, obtained a judge's order for his discharge, on the ground that the action abated by the death of the plaintiff, the plaintiff's executrix interfering in no way whatever to oppose the discharge:—Held, that the discharge was not an extinguishment of the debt, and that the executrix could prove. Goodman, Ex parte, 3 Deac. 631; 1 Mont. & Chit. 151.

Debt scheduled under Insolvent Act.—A creditor, whose debt is inserted by his debtor in his schedule, on taking the benefit of the Insolvent Act, may prove for the balance due to him under a subsequent fiat in bankruptcy issued against his debtor, and is entitled to receive dividends pari passu with the other creditors of the bankrupt, without any reference to the sources from which the whole divisible fund is derived. Fenwick, Ex parte, 2 Deac. 27.

Release of one Joint Debtor.—Proof under the bankruptcy of one joint debtor, after receiving a composition from the other, was expunged, the release to one being a release to both. Slater, Ex parte, 6 Ves. 146.

By his Bankruptcy.—The bankruptcy and certificate of one of several joint grantors of an annuity and covenantors for payment, discharge the bankrupt, but not his co-defendants. Barter v. Nicholls, 4 Taunt. 90; 2 Rose, 111.

Payable at a future Day.—The 7 Geo. 1. c. 31, s. 1, was confined to written securities. Parslow v. Dearlove, 4 East, 438; 1 Smith, 281; 5 Esp. 78. And see Hoskins v. Despercy, 9 East, 498; 6 Esp. 58.

And the statute extended to all personal securities for a valuable consideration, where the time of payment was certain though future. Pattison v. Bankes, Cowp. 543.

A bond for the payment of an annuity for a term of years was within the statute. Ib.

A bond payable by instalments given in consideration that the obligee would marry and settle a small estate upon a servant woman, and also maintain a bastard of the obligor, was within the 7 Geo. 1, c. 31, and might be proved under a commission of bankruptcy against the obligor. Cottrell, Ex parte, Cowp. 742. And see Brooks v. Lloyd, 1 T. R. 17.

Where it was agreed, upon a loan to the bankrupt, bearing interest, that six months' notice should be given before repayment was required, the debt is provable, though no notice was given before the bankruptcy. Downman, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 241; S. P., contra, Downman, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 85; Minet, Ex parte, 14 Ves. 189.

Moneys were advanced by E. to the bankrupt, secured by a note, whereby the bankrupt promised to pay, after three months' notice, the moneys advanced, with interest at 5 per cent. Two years' interest had been paid before the commission, but no notice had been given:—Held, that E. was entitled to prove for the principal moneys, and interest up to the commission. Elgar, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 1.

The drawer of a bill which had been accepted and was not refused payment by the acceptor till after the bankruptcy of the drawer, is discharged by his certificate, inasmuch as such debt is made provable under his commission, by 7 Geo. 1, c. 31. Starey v. Barns, 7 East, 435; 3 Smith, 441.

Payable by Instalments—Before 24 & 25 Viet. c. 134, s. 151.—A defendant against whom a fiat issued on the 19th April, 1839, and who obtained his certificate on the 6th August, 1839, gave the following undertaking to the plaintiff on the 17th November, 1838:—"In consideration of your discharging B. out of custody (who had been taken under a ca. sa. at the suit of the plaintiff), I undertake he shall pay the debt due to you by four yearly instalments, the first to be paid on the 17th May, 1839:—"Held, that the certificate was a bar to an action for the two first instalments, because B. having been discharged from the debt, this was an original undertaking on the defendant's part to pay by the hand of B. Lane v. Burghart, 1 G. & D. 311; 1 Q. B. 993; 6 Jur. 155.

Held, in another action upon the same undertaking, that the certificate was no bar to an action against the bankrupt for the third instalment due on the 17th May, 1840—first, because, inasmuch as B. continued liable as the plaintiff's debtor by virtue of the warrant of attorney executed by him before his discharge, and the undertaking was given with reference to B.'s liability, and as a collateral guarantee for the payment of the instalment secured by the warrant of attorney, and as no instalment became due before the fiat, there was no debt due from the bankrupt at the date of the fiat that could have been proved under it. S. C., 4 Scott, N. R. 287; 3 M. & G. 597.

Debts Compounded for—Bankruptcy of Debtor before Final Instalment.—Where a composition was made between a debtor and his creditors to pay them 9s. in the pound, by four instalments, with a proviso that, in case the composition should not be duly paid them, the release should be null and void; and the debtor paid three instalments, and became bankrupt before the time for payment of the fourth:—Held, that the creditors were not remitted to their original debt, but entitled to a proof only for the amount of the remaining instalments. Peele, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 435; S. P., Vere, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 281.

— After act of Bankruptcy.—By a deed of composition entered into by the bankrupt with his creditors, dated September 5, 1831, he agreed to pay them 10s. in the pound, by two instalments of 5s. each; in consideration of which the creditors covenanted to release him from his debts, as soon as both the instalments were paid. This deed was executed by the major part of the creditors. After the payment of the first instalment, on the 31st October, 1831, a commission issued on an act of bankruptcy committed in June, 1831:—Held, that the creditors who had received the first instalments were entitled to prove for the residue of their debts, without refunding the amount of the instalments. Wood, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & Chit. 508.

— Fraudulent Arrangement with one Creditor.—An insolvent compounded with her creditors for 13s. 6d. in the pound, but promised to pay one of her creditors the whole of his debt, in order to induce him to sign the composition deed. After paying him in full, she contracted a fresh debt with him, and then became bankrupt:—Held, that the payments made to the creditor above the composition of 13s. 6d. in the pound, were fraudulent and void, and that the creditor could not prove for the amount of his fresh debt contracted with the bankrupt, without first deducting these payments. Minton, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & Chit. 688.

— Security for Payment—Right to Retain.—A creditor having agreed to accept a composition for his debt, took bills for the amount of the composition, and a bond was also assigned to him as part security for the composition. The composition deed contained a clause, that in default in payment of the instalments, the composition should fall to the ground. Default was made, and subsequently a fiat issued:—Held, that the creditor might prove the balance of the original debt, and also retain the bond. Reay, Ex parte, 4 Deac. & Chit. 525; 2 Mont. & Ayr. 33.

— Failure to pay Composition.—A debtor, in 1831, agreed with his creditor to pay him a composition of 5s. in the pound upon the amount of his debt, by instalments. The first instalment was paid; when the creditor agreed to give the debtor a release in full, on his paying the balance of the composition. The debtor made default in payment of the balance; but, in February, 1839, being pressed for the payment "of the demand" of the creditor, he made a payment of 100l. in part of the balance of the composition, and required a receipt as "for a composition of 5s. in the pound upon the balance of account owing by him." The creditor acknowledged the payment of the 100l., but declined signing a receipt in this form. In September, 1839, the debtor became bankrupt:—Held, that the agreement for the composition did not preclude the creditor from proving for the balance of the original debt. Batson, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 289.

3. DEBTS ENTITLED TO PRIORITY.

a. Assessed Taxes and Parochial Rates.

One year's parochial rates due at the time of the bankruptcy, may be paid in full. Saberton, In re, 9 L. T. 267.

b. Debts due by Officers of Friendly Societies and Savings Banks.

Treasurer retaining Debt due to himself out of advance made to his Debtor.—The treasurer of a friendly society, having a debt due to him from a person who offered a security, took a security in the name of the society, and retained the amount of his debt out of the society's moneys in his hands. Some time afterwards he became a bankrupt, having in the meanwhile debited himself annually in his accounts with the society with the interest of the amount for which the security was taken. The security proved insufficient, and was not of the description, or taken in the manner required by the Friendly Societies Act:—Held, that the omission on the part of the society to take steps for setting aside the transaction and calling in the money before the bankruptcy did not deprive it of the statutory right to be paid in full before the other creditors. Burge, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 540; 5 Jur. 346.

Bankers not officers.—By the rules of a friendly society it was provided; that the treasurer retaining upwards of 10l. more than seven days after he was required to pay it over should be excluded the society; and that a particular firm should be the bankers of the society, with power for a general meeting to appoint other bankers:—Held, that the bankers for the time being were not officers, so as upon their bankruptcy to entitle the society to payment in full. Harris, Ex parte, 1 De Gex, 162; 14 L. J., Bk. 25.

The trustees of a friendly society were in the habit of paying money into the bank of W. & Co. at N., in order that W. & Co. might at once transmit it to their London bankers, to be paid by them into the Bank of England. A sum was paid into the bank of W. & Co. for the above purpose, but before it was transmitted to London, W. & Co. became bankrupt:—Held, that W. & Co. had not moneys in their hands by virtue of their office or employment, within the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 40, s. 12. Whipham, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 564; 13 L. J., Bk. 8; 8 Jur. 204.

By the rules of a friendly society it was provided that there should be appointed a treasurer or treasurers, in whose hands should be deposited all the cash belonging to the society, until the same should be placed out at interest; and that as soon as a sufficient sum should be collected, it should (after leaving in the club box a sufficient sum to pay the sick and other expenses of the society) be deposited in the hands of the treasurer or treasurers of the society, and that the clerk and two stewards should take the same to the bank. No formal appointment of treasurer was made, but the moneys of the society were paid into a bank:—Held, that the bankers were not employed as officers of the society so as to entitle the society upon their bankruptcy to payment in full. Oxford, Ex parte, 1 De G., Mac. & G. 483; 21 L. J., Bk. 31; 16 Jur. 851.

Loan by Society to Treasurer.—If money is intrusted to the treasurer of a friendly society, for which he is to pay interest, and another sum for which he is not to pay interest, and he enters into a statutable bond, as treasurer, for the whole sum, the society, upon the bankruptcy of the treasurer, is entitled to full payment within the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 40, s. 12, and no part is to be treated as a loan to him in his private character. Ray, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Chit. 50; 3 Deac. 537.

Building Society.—A benefit building society, established under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 32, is not entitled, on the bankruptcy of its treasurer, to priority over the other creditors. Bailey, Ex parte, 5 De G., Mac. & G. 380; 23 L. J., Bk. 36; 18 Jur. 988.

Savings Bank—Evidence.—A savings bank, not within 9 Geo. 4, c. 92, is not entitled to the benefit given by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 14, s. 28. Haynes, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 663; 13 L. J., Bk. 12; 8 Jur. 791.

The certificate of the barrister appointed under that act, that the rules of the savings bank are in conformity with the act is not conclusive evidence of the fact. Id.

Fiat against Treasurer and his Partner—Joint Estate.—Where a joint fiat issues against the treasurer of a savings bank and his partner in trade, the trustees can claim only a priority of payment of any debt owing by him out of his separate estate, and have no claim whatever against the joint estate, although the separate estate may prove insufficient to satisfy the debt. Appach, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 83.

A firm was, from 1816 down to the time of their bankruptcy, employed by a savings bank carried on under 9 Geo. 4, c. 92, and 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 14, as the bankers of the institution, the account of which with the firm was headed in the books of the latter—"Dr. —. Savings Bank, Cr." In 1818, L., one of the bankrupts, became a partner in the firm, and was soon afterwards appointed to the office of treasurer to the savings bank; but upon that event no alteration was made in the heading of the account in the books of the firm, and the payments and receipts between the savings bank and the firm were continued to be made in the names of the trustees of the savings bank, and in the manner usual between bankers and their customers. Certain monthly returns, however, which the trustees of the savings bank, in pursuance of 9 Geo. 4, c. 92, were in the habit of making to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, for many years contained acknowledgments by L. in the following terms:—"Remaining in my hands, £—, J. L., treasurer." The sum for which the last of such acknowledgments was signed, together with the interest allowed upon it by the firm, being in the bank at the time of the bankruptcy:—Held, that the trustees of the savings bank were entitled to be paid in full out of the separate estate of L. the whole of such sum and interest, in priority to the other creditors of L.

Riddell, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 80 ; 12 L. J., Bk. 19 ; 7 Jur. 21.

Committee—Cashier.—A linendraper was appointed actuary and cashier of a savings bank, the rules of which provided that one or more members of the committee should attend at the cashier's shop to receive the deposits. The committee failed to attend, and permitted the deposits to be received by the cashier :—Held, upon his bankruptcy, that they were not moneys in his hands by virtue of his office, and could not be claimed in full by the savings bank. Fleet, Ex parte, 4 De G. & S. 52 ; 19 L. J., Bk. 10 ; 14 Jur. 685.

Priority affects all Assets.—Under the Friendly Societies Act, 1875, s. 15, sub-s. 7, the trustees of the society are entitled to preferential payment out of the estate of a bankrupt treasurer in respect of money received by him by virtue of his office notwithstanding the fact that the debtor's assets consist only of stock-in-trade, furniture, and other property, which cannot be considered as specifically belonging to the society. Edmonds, Ex parte, Atkins, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 406 ; 46 L. T. 240 ; 30 W. R. 432.

c. Wages and Salaries.

Who are Servants.—The guard of a stage coach, hired at weekly wages, is not a servant. Skinner, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 417 ; 3 Deac. and Chit. 332.

Weekly labourers and workmen employed as excavators and bricklayers are not servants. Crawfoot, Ex parte, 1 Mont. 270.

Length of Hiring.—It is not requisite to prove a hiring for a year certain, but it must be something more than a mere hiring by the week. Collier, Ex parte, 4 Deac. & Chit. 520 ; 2 Mont. & Ayr. 29.

If a clerk and foreman was engaged at a weekly salary, and to have two suits of clothes per annum, it was a yearly hiring within the section. Humphreys, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 413 ; 3 Deac. & Chit. 114.

Piece Work.—The workmen of a coachmaker, who worked by the piece, and received a specific sum for each job, under separate and distinct contracts, and where there was no hiring for a specific time, are not servants within the act. Grellier, Ex parte, 1 Mont. 264.

Annual Salary.—A person engaged as traveller at an annual salary is a servant or clerk within the act. Neale, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Mac. 194.

Mate of Vessel.—The mate of a vessel, hired by the master, who was also one of the owners, was a servant within 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 48. Homborg, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 642 ; 6 Jur. 898.

Teachers paid by the Lesson.—A music master attending a school twice a week, and being paid at the rate of 2s. 6d. an hour for the time during which he was occupied ; and a drill sergeant attending twice a week, and being paid at the rate of 4s. a lesson, are not clerks or servants, labourers or workmen, within the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 32, sub-s. 2, so as to be entitled to payment of their salary or wages in full. Walter, Ex parte, Heath, In re, 15 L. R., Eq. 412 ; 42 L. J., Bk. 49 ; 21 W. R. 523.

Persons employed by Servants.—A coal proprietor employed colliers, to whom the work was let off at so much per score baskets, and each collier had a drawer attached to him, whom he brought when he was himself hired. The colliers were not hired unless the managers approved of the drawers, or unless, in case of disapproval, the colliers took drawers provided for them by the managers. The colliers paid the drawers out of their earnings, according to an agreement between them (in which the coal proprietor took no part), and discharged the drawers as they thought fit, without interference on the part of the proprietor, except that the latter might discharge the collier if he unjustly discharged the drawer, and that both collier and drawer might be discharged for transgressing the rules of the mine. Upon the proprietor becoming bankrupt, and the colliers' wages being in arrear :—Held, that the drawers were not servants of the coal proprietors so as to be entitled to payment in full of half a year's wages. Ball, Ex parte, 3 De G., Mac. & G. 155 ; 22 L. J., Bk. 27 ; 17 Jur. 198.

A miner who is employed to get ironstone out of a mine, and for which he is paid by the yard or by the ton, and who has under him to assist in the work other men for whose wages he alone is responsible, but who is bound to conform to the regulations in force at the mine, by which he is obliged to work himself a stated number of hours per day and is subject to be dismissed at a moment's notice for misconduct, and cannot leave or absent himself without the consent of the manager, is a "labourer or workman" within the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 32, sub-s. 2. Allsop, Ex parte, Disney, In re, 32 L. T. 433.

Clerk or Partner.—In June, 1844, A. entered the service of B., as book-keeper and cashier, and so continued until December, 1848, without coming to any agreement as to the amount of his salary. It was stated by A. that in December, 1848, it was agreed between him and B., that the salary should be at the rate of 250l. a-year, from June, 1844, and that the reason that such arrangement was not made before was, that B. was engaged in making experiments in a certain manufacture, from which he hoped to derive a considerable fortune, out of which A. expected to be paid. B. became bankrupt in February, 1849 :—Held, that A. was a clerk, and not a partner, and was entitled to prove for his salary. Hickin, Ex parte, 3 De G. & S. 662 ; 19 L. J., Bk. 8 ; 14 Jur. 405.

A trader borrowed 550l. under an agreement, by which the lender was to become his clerk, at a salary of 220l. 10s. a-year. The trader agreed to produce his accounts and balance sheet to the lender, who was to get in the debts, and alone to draw cheques on the banking account. If the balance was in the trader's favour at any time, he might draw the amount of it. On payment of the loan, or on proceedings being taken to recover it, the agreement was to be at an end. The lender was to have the option of becoming a partner. On the trader becoming bankrupt :—Held, first, that the lender was a clerk entitled to three months' salary in full under 5 & 6 Vict.

c. 122, s. 28. Harris, Ex parte, De Gex, 165; 14 L. J., Bk. 26; 9 Jur. 497.

Absence from Business.]—Held, secondly, that the circumstance of the clerk having been absent from business, owing to ill health, for the three months immediately preceding the bankruptcy with the bankrupt's sanction, did not take away his right. Ib.

Throwing up Employment.]—A clerk voluntarily quitting the bankrupt's service nine months previously to the fiat, through the approaching insolvency of the bankrupt and his decreasing business, the trade going on in the meantime, and he obtaining employment elsewhere, is not entitled to six months' wages in full, especially when he has allowed the first and final dividend to be declared before making his claim. Gee, Ex parte, 3 Deac. 563; 1 Mon. & Chit. 99.

A clerk who voluntarily left an insolvent master was not within 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 48, as to wages. Bennett, Ex parte, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 669.

Bankrupt not a Trader during whole Employment.]—A clerk who had served more than six months is entitled to the allowance, although the bankrupt was not, in fact, a trader for more than two months out of the six. Gough, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & Chit. 189.

Salary in lieu of Notice.]—Where clerks or servants claim to be paid in full, the court will include an allowance for notice according to the custom of the trade or profession. Jennings, Ex parte, 7 L. T. 601.

Contracts not Dissolved.]—The contracts of a trader with his clerks and his servants are not dissolved by the issuing of a commission of bankruptcy against him: therefore the clerk of a trader against whom a commission issues, may, after the bankrupt has obtained his certificate, recover his salary for the whole year. Thomas v. Williams, 3 N. & M. 545; 1 A. & E.

Right to Immediate Payment.]—Proofs were made against the estate of a liquidating debtor in respect of sums due for wages and salaries, entitled to priority under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 32. The trustee deposed that he intended to prosecute the debtor under the Debtors Act, 1869, and that he desired to examine him as to his affairs, and claimed the right to retain the funds in his hands, which were small to meet costs:—Held, that the preferential creditors were entitled to immediate payment. Powis, Ex parte, Bowen, In re, 17 L. R., Eq. 130; 43 L. J., Bk. 24; 29 L. T. 654; 22 W. R. 218.

Composition.]—32 & 33 Vict. c. 71, s. 32, sub-s. 2, does not apply in the case of a composition. Walter, Ex parte, Heath, In re, 15 L. R., Eq. 412; 42 L. J., Bk. 49; 21 W. R. 523.

4. ANNUITIES.

Annuity until Loan paid off.]—On a loan transaction between a debtor and a creditor, it was arranged that the creditor should, in addition to interest, be paid an annuity so long as any money remained owing in respect of the loan. The annuity was secured by a bond in a penalty and by mortgage. The creditor proved against the estate for the money due on the loan, and afterwards tendered a proof in respect of the annuity, or for the penalty mentioned in the bond:—Held, that the annuity was merely in the nature of increased interest, and was not a subject of proof. Robinson, Ex parte, 31 L. J., Bk. 12; 6 L. T. 143; 10 W. R. 360.

Annuity by way of Interest—Security for Loan.]—B. contracted for a loan of 7,000*l.* at 9*l.* per cent. by way of annuity, and by the annuity deed covenanted to pay annually 924*l.*, which was the amount of the interest, together with the premiums on the assurances of his life for 7,000*l.* The deed also contained a covenant by B. to do what was necessary to enable V. the lender, if he thought fit, to insure B.'s life, and a proviso that any part, not less than one-seventh part, of the annuity might be redeemed on payment of 1,000*l.* for every seventh part redeemed; and that, on redemption of the whole, V. should assign to B. any policies effected by V. on B.'s life. B. became bankrupt:—Held, that V. might prove for the full value of the annuity without giving up the policies effected by him. Farnish, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 514; 5 Jur. 489.

Annuity—Warrant of Attorney as further Security.]—A. and B., for a valuable consideration paid to them, joined with C. as their surety in granting an annuity to D., and the three jointly, and any two of them separately, covenanted that the three, or some or one of them, should well and truly pay the annuity. A warrant of attorney of even date with the deed was also given by the three as a collateral security, and it was thereby declared that the judgment to be entered up on the warrant of attorney, should be considered as a further security to D. A. and B. afterwards became bankrupts:—Held, 1st, that D. might prove against the estate of A. and B. for the value of the annuity; 2nd, that the covenant to pay the annuity was not merged in the judgment. Pennell, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 273; 5 Jur. 899.

Annuity in Reversion.]—A bankrupt, previously to his marriage, became bound to trustees in the penal sum of 3,000*l.*, conditioned for payment to them by his executors of an annuity of 150*l.* in case his intended wife should survive him, in trust for her use and benefit. The bankrupt and his wife were both living:—Held, that the trustees could prove for the value of the annuity, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 54, although it was not an annuity in possession. Broadley, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 524; 6 Jur. 200.

Annuity of Uncertain Amount.]—A trader upon his daughter's marriage covenanted to pay, so long as the intended husband and wife, or any issue of the marriage, entitled under the provisions of the settlement, should live, such a sum as, with the annual produce of any property which might be received as therein mentioned, would amount to 150*l.*:—Held, that the payments of the annuity becoming due after the issuing of a fiat against the trader could not be proved. Evans, Ex parte, 3 De G. & S. 561; 13 Jur. 183.

By a settlement of the 14th July, 1841, in contemplation of a marriage between A. and B., C. covenanted to pay to the trustees, so long as A. and B., or either of them, or any issue of the intended marriage, should be living, an annuity of such an amount as would, either alone, in the meantime, and until any real or personal estate should devolve upon or vest in A. and B.'s right, or any issue of the marriage, under the settlement of her father and mother, or otherwise, or together with the annual produce to arise from any such real or personal estate, after any such devolution or vesting should take place, make up an annuity of 150*l.*, payable half-yearly. The marriage took place. No real or personal estate had devolved upon or become vested in A. and B. in right of the latter, or in any issue of them. On the 24th October, 1842, a fiat issued against C., under which he was declared bankrupt, and under which he obtained his certificate on the 6th March, 1843. The trustees proved against C.'s estate, on the 25th March, 1843, for 105*l.*, being partly for arrears due at the time of the bankruptcy, and partly for a proportionate part of the current half year, up to the time of tendering the proof. They at the same time tendered a proof for the value of the annuity as a contingent debt, but such proof was rejected, on the ground that the contingencies were such that the value of the annuity could not be ascertained. The instalments of the annuity accruing after the date of the proof down to the 21st September, 1848, amounted to 823*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.*, on account of which C. had, since his bankruptcy, made payments amounting to 120*l.* In February, 1849, the trustees petitioned to be admitted as creditors for the remaining 703*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.*, and to receive dividends thereon, not disturbing former dividends :—Held, that the trustees were not entitled to prove against the estate of C. in respect of such subsequent instalments. Foster, In re, 9 C. B. 422; 19 L. J., C. P. 274; 14 Jur. 814.

Deed of Separation.]—By a deed of separation a husband covenanted to pay an annuity to his wife by quarterly instalments, the annuity to cease in the event of future cohabitation by mutual consent :—Held, not an annuity provable under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 175, nor a liability to pay money under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 154. Mudge v. Rowan, 3 L. R., Ex. 85; 37 L. J., Ex. 79; 17 L. T. 576; 16 W. R. 403.

By deed of separation between husband and wife, he covenanted with a trustee that he would every year during the joint lives of himself and his wife pay to the trustee for the wife to her separate use such sum as together with the dividends and interest or other income to arise from certain Bank 3 per Cent. Annuities, or from other funds settled or which might be settled to her separate use, and which might be received by her, would make one clear annuity or yearly sum of 200*l.*, to commence on the 11th January, 1854, and to be paid by four even and equal quarterly payments, provided that if they should at any time thereafter cohabit as man and wife, that then and thenceforth the annuity should cease. On the 29th September, 1854, and while they continued to live separate, the husband became bankrupt :—Held, that the annual sum so covenanted to be paid for the separate use of his wife, was not an annuity within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 175. Parker v. Ince, 4 H. & N. 53; 28 L. J. Ex. 189; 32 L. T. 279; 7 W. R. 201.

Consideration for Annuity.]—The giving up of a business in consideration of an annuity is not such a consideration as can be valued under 6

Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 54, that section being confined to money considerations. Saxe, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & Chit. 172; 1 Mont. & Bligh. 134.

Annuity during Joint Lives.]—An annuity was given by a father on his daughter's marriage, by a letter to the intended husband, in these words, viz. :—"I promise you, until it is convenient to me to do something better for you, to allow my daughter 100*l.* a year, which you can have as you may require :"—Held, to be an annuity during the joint lives of the father and daughter; and though incapable of valuation was provable. Annandale, Ex parte, 4 Deac. & Chit. 511; 2 Mont. & Ayr. 19.

Annuity charged on Sums payable during Continuance of a Lease.]—A. and B. having a lease of salt works, the bankrupt undertook the manufacture of the salt; and it was provided that the contract should subsist for the term granted by the lease, wanting three months; but that if there should be a failure of brine for ten days successively, the bankrupt was to be exonerated from his liability to manufacture the salt, to a proportionate extent. The bankrupt afterwards granted an annuity, charging it on the sums payable from A. and B. for the manufacture of the salt :—Held, that notwithstanding the possibility of the discontinuance of the salt contract, and of the forfeiture of the lease, the annuity was capable of valuation. Perratt, Ex parte, 1 Deac. 696.

Where Notice required before enforcing Arrears of Annuity.]—A. granted an annuity to C., and A., with B. as his surety, jointly and severally covenanted to pay the annuity, provided that if default should be made in payment of the annuity by A., C. would give notice in writing for so much of the annuity as might be in arrear, twenty-one days previous to the adoption of any measures against B. to enforce the payment of the arrears; B. became bankrupt before any default was made by A. in the payment of the annuity :—Held, that C. could not prove for the value of the annuity under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 54. Marks, Ex parte, 3 Deac. 133.

Dissolution of Partnership.]—On the dissolution of a partnership between two tailors, it was agreed that one should continue the business, and by the deed of dissolution he covenanted to pay the retiring partner an annuity of 120*l.* for his life, the retiring partner covenanting on his part not to carry on the business of a tailor within one hundred miles of his former place of business, and it was agreed that for any breach of that covenant the annuity should cease and determine, and the covenant to pay it should become null and void. The continuing partner subsequently failed, and filed a petition for liquidation by arrangement :—Held, that the retiring partner's claim in respect of his annuity was provable under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 31, and that it was not open to the debtor to have the value of the annuity assessed by a jury, as he had submitted the matter in the first instance to the registrar. Jackson, Ex parte, Jackson, In re, 27 L. T. 696; 20 W. R. 1022—L. J.

Annuity—Omission to Secure—Penalty or Liquidated Damages.]—An action was by consent referred, and the arbitrator awarded and ordered that the defendant in the action should pay to the plaintiff an annuity of 1,200*l.* a year for life, and that, in order to secure the annuity, the defendant should, within two months, purchase and convey to trustees, on behalf of the plaintiff, a government annuity of 1,200*l.* a year, and that if for any reason the annuity should not have been legally secured before the last day of the second month from the date of the award, then, in addition to the annuity, a further sum of 100*l.* should become due and payable by the defendant to the plaintiff on the last day of the second month, and a like sum on the last day of each successive month, until such annuity should be legally secured; and the award added: "These monthly payments are to be considered as additional to the payments due in respect of the annuity, and as a penalty for delay in the legal settlement of the same." No annuity, as directed by the award, having ever been purchased; the plaintiff having been adjudicated a bankrupt; the defendant having died; and the 1,200*l.* a year and 100*l.* a month having been regularly paid to the plaintiff and her assignees up to the defendant's death, but not since; upon claim by the assignees to prove against the defendant's estate for the payments due in respect of the annuity, and of the monthly payments accrued due since his death:—Held, that the 100*l.* a month, though called a penalty, was not to be regarded strictly as such; and that the assignees were entitled to prove for the arrears both of the annuity and the 100*l.* a month. Parfitt v. Chambre, D'Alteyrac, Ex parte, 15 L. R., Eq. 36; 42 L. J., Ch. 6; 27 L. T. 750; 21 W. R. 50.

Annuity during Widowhood.—A widow was entitled under the will of her husband to an annuity during her life or widowhood, and it was charged upon property bequeathed by him to his sons, and was further secured by the joint and several bond of the sons. The sons filed a liquidation petition:—Held, that the value of the contingency of the widow's marrying again was capable of being fairly estimated, and that proof must be admitted for the value of the future payments as ascertained by an actuary. Blakemore, Ex parte, 5 Ch. D. 372; 46 L. J., Bk. 118; 36 L. T. 783; 25 W. R. 488—C. A.

Annuity during Joint Lives.—A man went through the ceremony of marriage with a sister of his deceased wife, and lived with her as his wife. They afterwards separated, and a separation deed in the ordinary form was executed, in which she was described as his wife, and he covenanted with the trustees of the deed to pay her an annuity for their joint lives. There was a proviso that, if the parties should live together again by mutual consent, the deed should become void. The annuity was paid for twelve years, and then the man became bankrupt:—Held, that the value of the future payments of the annuity was capable of estimation, and was provable in the bankruptcy. As the parties never could legally live together as husband and wife, the proviso, making the deed void in the event of their doing so, must be disregarded. Naden, Ex parte, Wood, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 670; 43 L. J., Bk. 121; 30 L. T. 743; 22 W. R. 936. Affirming, 30 L. T. 575; 22 W. R. 768.

Death of Annuitant—Dividend paid greater than Annuity—Right to Excess.—A bankrupt had covenanted to pay a life annuity to trustees for the benefit of his wife. The annuity was valued, and proof was made by the trustees for the amount thus ascertained, and a dividend was paid to them. The wife died, and the dividend which the trustees had received exceeded the amount of the payments of the annuity which the bankrupt would have had to make if he had remained solvent:—Held (reversing the decision of the registrar), that the trustees could not be called upon to refund the excess of the dividend above the payments of the annuity which accrued due during the wife's life. Bates, Ex parte, Pannell, In re, 11 Ch. D. 914; 48 L. J., Bk. 113; 41 L. T. 263; 27 W. R. 927—C. A.

Annuity payable to Wife under Separation Deed.—By a separation deed between a husband and wife the husband covenanted with trustees to pay to them an annuity of 350*l.*, during the joint lives of himself and his wife, for her benefit. The annuity was made determinable in case the wife should not lead a chaste life; in case the husband and wife should resume cohabitation; and in case the marriage should be dissolved in respect of anything done, committed, or suffered by the other party after the date of the deed. The annuity was to be proportionally diminished in the event of the wife becoming entitled to any income independent of the husband exceeding 350*l.* a year. After the execution of the deed the husband filed a liquidation petition:—Held, that the value of the annuity was capable of being fairly estimated, and was provable in the liquidation. Neal, Ex parte, Bates, In re, 14 Ch. D. 579; 43 L. T. 264; 28 W. R. 875—C. A.

Annuity to cease in certain Event.—An annuity deed provided, that if the annuitant refused, neglected, failed or became incapable of performing the stipulations contained in it, the annuity was to cease; that the annuitant should use his best endeavours to preserve, extend and promote the success of a certain business, and not impede its success by any act, neglect, omission or default; that he should perform such services and duties as certain persons should reasonably require; that he should not carry on a certain business during a certain time and within a certain area; and that all disputes should be referred to arbitration:—Held, that such annuity was not capable of valuation under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 175, and therefore not barred by a deed of assignment made by the grantor for the benefit of his creditors. Brett v. Jackson, 4 L. R., C. P. 259; 38 L. J., C. P. 139; 19 L. T., 790; 17 W. R. 532.

Bankruptcy of Surety for Payment of Annuity.—The instalments of an annuity, for the payment of which a bankrupt is surety only, and which he covenants to pay in case of the default of the grantor, are not, where they become due after his bankruptcy, provable under a fiat against the surety. Thompson v. Thompson, 2 Bing. N. C. 162; 2 Scott, 266; 1 Hodges, 225; S. C., 1 Mont. & Bligh, 219; 2 Deac. & Chit. 126.

Where it appears on the face of a bond to secure an annuity that one of the joint and several obligors is in fact a surety only for the other, he is to be looked upon as a surety and not as a principal in all questions under the bankrupt laws, consequently his bankruptcy and certificates will not discharge him from liability to pay arrears of the annuity accruing due since his bankruptcy and unpaid by the principal. White v. Corbett, 1 El. & El. 692; 28 L. J., Q. B. 228; 5 Jur., N. S. 407—Ex. Ch.

An annuity deed recited that A. had agreed to grant an annuity, and that B. was to join as surety. It contained a joint covenant by A. and B. to pay the annuity, and also a proviso, that in case of default by A., the grantee should not take any steps against B. till he had given him twenty-one days' notice of A.'s default. On the bankruptcy of B., without any default by A. :—Held, no proof could be made under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 54. Marks, Ex parte, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 521; 2 Jur. 398.

Statute of Limitations.—Declaration, on the obligatory part only, upon two bonds, dated in 1828 and 1829. Pleas, first, that the causes of action did not accrue within twenty years; and secondly, that before action, the defendant became bankrupt, and that the causes of action accrued before such bankruptcy. Replication, joining issue on the first plea, and, to the second plea, that the causes of action did accrue within twenty years. The plaintiff then set out the bonds and the conditions. The first bond stated that M. and the defendant bound themselves, and each of them to the plaintiff in 300*l*. The condition (after reciting that M. had agreed with the plaintiff for the sale to him for 150*l*. of an annuity of 20*l*. to be paid to the plaintiff, during the joint and several lives of the plaintiff and his wife, and the survivor; that M. had requested the defendant to join in and execute the bond, which he had agreed to do, for securing the regular payment of the annuity; and that the 150*l*. had been paid to M.) was for payment of the annuity by M. or the defendant, by equal half-yearly payments during the joint and several lives of the plaintiff and his wife, and of the survivor, and a proportionate part in case of the survivor dying between the days of payment. The second bond and condition were similarly framed for the payment by and to the same parties, of an annuity of 10*l*. The plaintiff then suggested that, in 1851, two and a half years' arrears were due in respect of each annuity, and were still unpaid. At the trial, it appeared that the defendant had become bankrupt in 1836; that M. had paid the annuities half-yearly down to 1848, but never till after the day of payment fixed by the condition, so that there had been breaches of the conditions twenty years before action, and before the bankruptcy; and that the arrears suggested by the plaintiff were still due. The plaintiff had not attempted to prove as an annuity creditor under the defendant's bankruptcy :—Held, that a new cause of action arose upon each successive breach of the condition; that, on the record, as it stood, the plaintiff was entitled to prove, at the trial, breaches within twenty years; and that, on such proof, he was entitled to a verdict upon the issue on the Statute of Limitations. Amott v. Holden, 18 Q. B. 593; 22 L. J., Q. B. 14; 17 Jur. 318.

Held, also, by Lord Campbell, C. J., and Erle, J., dissentiente Wightman, J., that the defendant's liability under the bonds and conditions was that of a surety only; that M. was the principal, and grantor of the annuity; that the plaintiff, therefore, could not have proved under the defendant's bankruptcy, in respect either of the penalties, or of the breaches of condition committed before the bankruptcy; and that consequently the matter pleaded and proved was no bar to the action. Ib.

Mode of Valuation.—In valuing an annuity the altered state of health of the annuitant cannot be taken into consideration. Fisher, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 102.

Where the consideration is not money, but property, the price paid by the grantee for that property is not the criterion of value, provided such value is altered by accidental circumstances, whether general or local, or by improvement of the property. Ib.

The state of the money market is not a circumstance which can affect the rule. Webb, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 29.

If an annuity is granted in consideration of the relinquishment of a business, the creditor is entitled to prove for the market value, without reference to the original consideration given, or the lapse of time since the grant. Save, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 134; 2 Deac. & Chit. 172.

An annuity given for a term of years, the consideration for which was the good-will of a business, may be valued. Scholes, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 384; 4 Jur. 1189.

Assessment of Value by Jury.—The trustee in liquidation is entitled, if he desires it, to have the value assessed by a jury. Neal, Ex parte, Bates, In re, 14 Ch. D. 579; 43 L. T. 264; 28 W. R. 875—C. A.

Sale of Security for Payment of Annuity.—The commissioners are not authorized to order a sale of an estate on which an annuity is charged, for payment of the value of the annuity. Delves, In re, 1 Mont. 492. And see Slack, Ex parte, 1 Glyn & J. 346.

An annuity creditor who has a policy of insurance cannot prove without a sale of the policy. Tierney, Ex parte, 1 Mont. 78.

Where the grantor of an annuity secured by real property becomes a bankrupt, and arrears of the annuity become due after the bankruptcy, the real security will, on the petition of the grantee, be ordered to be sold, and the produce applied in satisfaction of so much of the arrears and value of the annuity as the same would extend to satisfy, and the grantee be allowed to prove the residue under the commission. Key, Ex parte, 1 Madd. 426.

5. APPRENTICE FEES.

An articulated clerk to an attorney and solicitor was not an apprentice within the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 49. Prideaux, Ex parte, 3 Mylne & C. 327; 2 Jur. 366; reversing the decision of the Court of Review, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 516; but see St. Pancras v. Clapham, 2 El. & El. 742.

But in another case it was held, that an articulated clerk to an attorney was an apprentice, and, as such, entitled to a return of a reasonable portion of the premium upon his master becoming bankrupt as a scrivener. Fussell, Ex parte, 2 Deac. 158; 3 Mont. & Ayr. 67.

Where an agreement of apprenticeship is concluded, and the apprentice fee is paid, and the apprentice is actually serving under the concluded agreement, and the execution of the indenture has not taken place from mere inattention, the father is entitled to a return of part of the fee. Haynes, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 122.

6. AWARDS.

An award is not conclusive evidence of a debt. Proof upon an award made after the act of bankruptcy was expunged, and an account directed before the commissioners. Kemshcad, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 149.

See further, JUDGMENTS, post.

7. BARRISTERS' FEES.

A conveyancing counsel was allowed to prove in respect of fees which the bankrupt, a solicitor, had actually and specifically received from the clients before his bankruptcy. Hall, In re, 2 Jur., N. S. 1076.

8. BILLS AND NOTES.

Instruments Inchoate at time of Bankruptcy.]

—Proof admitted on an acceptance which had been in blank at the date of the bankruptcy, and had been filled up afterwards. Bartlett, Ex parte, 3 De G. & J. 378.

In July, 1846, the defendant having been arrested under a ca. sa., in order to obtain his discharge gave to the attorney of the execution creditor 5*l.*, and a blank promissory note stamp, with his name written on it. In 1851 the defendant obtained a certificate in bankruptcy, and in 1852 the attorney filled up the blank stamped paper by making it a promissory note for 24*l.* 18*s.* 6*d.*, at one month's date, and indorsed it to the plaintiff for value:—Held, first, that it was properly left to the jury to say whether the stamped paper was filled up within a reasonable time, considering the circumstances of the defendant and his ability to pay the note. Temple v. Pullen, 8 Ex. 389; 22 L. J., Ex. 151.

Held, secondly, that there was no claim provable under the fiat, and consequently the certificate was no bar to an action on the note. Ib.

Guarantor of Honour.]—A bankrupt had, in consideration of the payment of a sum of money to him by the vendors of goods, guaranteed the payment of the purchase-money by the purchasers according to the contract of purchase, viz., by the due honour of a bill of exchange accepted by the purchasers. The bill did not fall due till after the fiat issued against the guarantor. On its being dishonoured:—Held, that the vendors were entitled to prove. Brook, Ex parte, 6 De G., Mac. & G. 771.

Bills given as Deposit for Performance of Contract.]—An agreement was entered into for the purchase of 4,000 tons of iron rails, at 12*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* per ton, according to a section, to be delivered by 1st November, 1846; and 11,500*l.* was to be paid by the purchaser by way of deposit. According to the custom of the trade, this deposit was to be retained by the seller as a security against any damages from the non-performance of the contract. The deposit was paid in bills of exchange. In June, 1846, the purchaser became bankrupt. On the bills becoming due, they were dishonoured:—Held, that the vendors were entitled to prove upon two of the bills remaining in their hands. Bolokow, Ex parte, 3 De G. & S. 656.

Payable with Interest after Notice.]—Where a note payable with interest twelve months after notice was expressed to be for value received, and the maker became bankrupt before any notice was given:—Held, that the payee might prove it under the commission. Clayton v. Gosling, 5 B. & C. 360; 8 D. & R. 110.

Acquired after Bankruptcy.]—A bill or note having been indorsed after the bankruptcy of the acceptor, the indorsee can only prove such debt as the indorser could have proved at the time of the bankruptcy. Deey, Ex parte, 2 Cox, 423.

Notes bought up after the bankruptcy of the maker, cannot be proved unless it is shewn that the persons from whom they were purchased were individually entitled to a proof, in respect of the notes. Rogers, Ex parte, Buck, 490.

Unaccepted Drafts on Debtor.]—A. sends B., as his agent, to America to purchase cotton, and authorizes him to draw bills on A., and to sell and discount the same, and with the proceeds to pay for the cotton. B. accordingly draws a bill on A. for 3,000*l.* in favour of R., who discounts for B., and afterwards negotiates it to third persons. B. applies the proceeds of the bill in payment of the cotton, which is shipped off to A., at Liverpool; but before the arrival of the cotton, or the presentation of the bill for acceptance, A. becomes bankrupt, and the cotton is sold by the assignees, and the proceeds applied for the benefit of the estate:—Held, that these circumstances did not amount to a virtual acceptance of the bill by A., and that a subsequent indorsee for value could not prove the amount of it against A.'s estate. Bolton, Ex parte, 2 Deac. 537; 3 Mont. & Ayr. 367.

Bills to be Paid out of Specific Funds.]—If a party takes bills for the price of goods, and it is agreed that the bills are to be paid out of the proceeds, and the acceptors become bankrupt, the indorsers of the bills, without notice of the agreement, are entitled to the benefit of it. Prescott, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 316.

Exchange of Paper.]—Where there was cross paper dishonoured on each side, and both parties were bankrupts, the proof, as between the two estates, was confined to the cash balance with regard to the dishonoured bills. Earle, Ex parte, 5 Ves. 833.

In such case, no proof can be made in respect of the bad paper, or the excess of damage eventually sustained on that account. Walker, Ex parte, 4 Ves. 373.

A. draws a bill on B., payable to his own order, which B. accepts, and B. draws a bill on A., payable to the order of B., which A. accepts, for their mutual accommodation; both bills are payable at the same time, have the same dates, and contain the same sums: one is a good consideration for the other, and neither is an indemnity; so that, if either party becomes a bankrupt, the bill accepted by him may be proved under his commission, and consequently to an action brought on it, his bankruptcy may be pleaded. Rolfe v.

Caslon, 2 H. Bl. 570. And see Stacey v. Barns, 7 East, 435; 3 Smith, 441.

Where A. and B. were bankrupts, proof was allowed in respect of a cash balance due from A. to B., but the dividends were retained to reimburse the estate of A. what it should overpay upon a distinct transaction on an advance of bills from A. to B., some of which were dishonoured. Metcalfe, Ex parte, 11 Ves. 404.

K. & Co. sent to A. five bills drawn by them on D. & S., and received from him in return his acceptances for the precise amount, which they discounted with their own bankers; but none of which being paid by A. (who became bankrupt before they became due), they were proved by the holders under K. & Co.'s commission. A. having negotiated the five bills sent him by K. & Co.:—Held, that A. having become bankrupt, his assignee could not prove them under K. & Co.'s commission. Solarte, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & Chit. 261; 1 Mont. & Ayr. 270.

A. & B. exchange their acceptances of various bills drawn upon them respectively by C., and all three become bankrupt before any of the bills fall due. The acceptances of A. are negotiated by the drawer, C., and are proved by the holders under each commission, who receive dividends on their respective proofs:—Held, that A.'s assignees might prove the amount of B.'s acceptances, under B.'s commission, subject to a retention of the dividends, until it was ascertained what each estate would pay on the whole of their liabilities. Solarte, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & Chit. 419.

The defendants gave the plaintiff their own bills, accepted by third persons, in exchange for acceptances of other bills drawn by them upon him, the different sets of which tallied in the gross amount (except as mentioned, &c.), but no stress was laid at the time on these trifling differences:—Held, that the transaction being that of an absolute exchange of securities, each party was confined to his remedy on those securities; and that the law would not raise an implied promise in the defendants, who had become bankrupts, to repay to the plaintiff the amount on the balance of his acceptances, paid after such bankruptcy. Butler v. Buttivant, 3 East, 72.

Six persons were in partnership as bankers, under two firms, and J. and W. J., two of them, carried on a distinct trade; and G. accepted a bill for J. and W. J., and, in exchange, they delivered to him, at the same time, a bill to the same amount, drawn and accepted by the six, but not endorsed by J. and W. J.:—Held, that it was a purchase by G., and that, having paid his acceptance, and the bill he received being dishonoured, he was entitled to prove the amount against J. and W. J. Hustler, Ex parte, Buck, 171; 1 Glyn & J. 9; 3 Madd. 117.

Where, by agreement between the plaintiffs, bankers at Carlisle, and the defendants, bankers at Newcastle, the plaintiffs were weekly to send to the defendants all their own notes, and the notes of certain other banking houses; and the defendants were in exchange to return to the plaintiffs their own notes, and the notes of certain other bankers, and the deficiency, if any, was to be made up by a bill drawn by the defendants in favour of the plaintiffs; at a certain date:—Held, that the notes so sent by the plaintiffs to the defendants constituted a debt against them which the defendants might pay by a return of notes according to the agreement; but if they made no such return, or a short return, and gave no bill for the balance, such balance remained as a debt against them, which was provable by the plaintiffs under a commission issued against the defendants on an act of bankruptcy committed after the time when the bill for the balance, if drawn, would have been due. Forster v. Surtees, 12 East, 605.

Two bankrupts had large mercantile dealings with P., and at the time of the bankruptcy they owed him a cash balance of 11,000*l*. Bills had, however, been accepted by the bankrupts and negotiated by P. in part payment of the balance, and these bills had been proved by the holders against the bankrupt's estate. The bills had been accepted by P. in favour of the bankrupts for an independent consideration which had failed, and these bills also had been discounted. P.'s estate was also in liquidation, and his trustee claimed to prove for the whole amount of the cash balance:—Held, that he could only prove for the difference between the cash balance and the amount of the bills given in part payment. Macredie, Ex parte, Charles, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 535; 42 L. J., Bk. 90; 28 L. T. 827; 21 W. R. 328, 535. Compare, Cuma, Ex parte, 9 L. R., Ch. 689.

The rule that when there are cross-acceptances between two houses, both of which become bankrupt, there can be no proof as between the two estates in respect of the bad paper, only applies where the acceptances given by the one party are the consideration for the acceptances given by the other. Ib.

By Drawer against Indorsee without consideration.—Where a sum of money being due from A. to B., C., by B.'s request, and for his accommodation, drew a bill of exchange on A. for the amount, which A. accepted, and C. indorsed the bill and gave it to B., who indorsed and negotiated it: B. having subsequently become bankrupt:—Held, that the amount of the bill, which was dishonoured, and paid by C., was provable by him under the fiat, and, therefore, that his right of action against B. was barred by the certificate. Haigh v. Jackson, 3 M. & W. 598.

By Indorser against Accommodation Acceptor.—Where the plaintiff lent his indorsement upon a bill at the desire of the drawer; but without any privity with the defendant (the acceptor), who had himself no consideration at the time for such acceptance; and the day before the bill became due the defendant became bankrupt, and it was immediately after taken up by the plaintiff (the indorser) out of the hands of the indorsee:—Held, that the bill was provable as a debt under the commission. Houle v. Baxter, 3 East, 177.

Taking up for Honour.—W. claimed to prove against a bankrupt's estate for a bill of exchange which he had taken up for the honour of the acceptor. The bankrupt was not a party to the bill, and it was not protested. By agreement between W. and the assignees, the right to prove was referred to arbitration, but without the leave of the court, as required by 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 153. The arbitrator decided against the right to prove. The claimant insisted upon such right, notwithstanding the award. The commissioner, however, refused to admit the proof:—Held, that although the award was not made, pursuant to the statute, W., having agreed to the arbitra-apprentice is actually serving under the concluded agreement, and the execution of the indenture has not taken place from mere inattention, the father is entitled to a return of part of the fee. Haynes, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 122.

J. Hustler, Ex parte, Buck, 171; 1 Glyn & J. 9; 3 Madd. 117.

Where, by agreement between the plaintiffs, bankers at Carlisle, and the defendants, bankers at Newcastle, the plaintiffs were weekly to send to the defendants all their own notes, and the notes of certain other banking houses; and the defendants were in exchange to return to the plaintiffs their own notes, and the notes of certain other bankers, and the deficiency, if any, was to be made up by a bill drawn by the defendants in favour of the plaintiffs; at a certain date:—Held, that the notes so sent by the plaintiffs to the defendants constituted a debt against them which the defendants might pay by a return of notes according to the agreement; but if they made no such return, or a short return, and gave no bill for the balance, such balance remained as a debt against them, which was provable by the plaintiffs under a commission issued against the defendants on an act of bankruptcy committed after the time when the bill for the balance, if drawn, would have been due. Forster v. Surtees, 12 East, 605.

Two bankrupts had large mercantile dealings with P., and at the time of the bankruptcy they owed him a cash balance of 11,000*l*. Bills had, however, been accepted by the bankrupts and negotiated by P. in part payment of the balance, and these bills had been proved by the holders against the bankrupt's estate. The bills had been accepted by P. in favour of the bankrupts for an independent consideration which had failed, and these bills also had been discounted. P.'s estate was also in liquidation, and his trustee claimed to prove for the whole amount of the cash balance:—Held, that he could only prove for the difference between the cash balance and the amount of the bills given in part payment. Macredie, Ex parte, Charles, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 535; 42 L. J., Bk. 90; 28 L. T. 827; 21 W. R. 328, 535. Compare, Cama, Ex parte, 9 L. R., Ch. 689.

The rule that when there are cross-acceptances between two houses, both of which become bankrupt, there can be no proof as between the two estates in respect of the bad paper, only applies where the acceptances given by the one party are the consideration for the acceptances given by the other. 1b.

By Drawer against Indorsee without consideration.—Where a sum of money being due from A. to B., C., by B.'s request, and for his accommodation, drew a bill of exchange on A. for the amount, which A. accepted, and C. indorsed the bill and gave it to B., who indorsed and negotiated it: B. having subsequently become bankrupt:—Held, that the amount of the bill, which was dishonoured, and paid by C., was provable by him under the fiat, and, therefore, that his right of action against B. was barred by the certificate. Huish v. Jackson, 3 M. & W. 598.

By Indorser against Accommodation Acceptor.—Where the plaintiff lent his indorsement upon a bill at the desire of the drawer; but without any privity with the defendant (the acceptor), who had himself no consideration at the time for such acceptance; and the day before the bill became due the defendant became bankrupt, and it was immediately after taken up by the plaintiff (the indorser) out of the hands of the indorsee:—Held, that the bill was provable as a debt under the commission. Houle v. Baxter, 3 East, 177.

Taking up for Honour.—W. claimed to prove against a bankrupt's estate for a bill of exchange which he had taken up for the honour of the acceptor. The bankrupt was not a party to the bill, and it was not protested. By agreement between W. and the assignees, the right to prove was referred to arbitration, but without the leave of the court, as required by 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 153. The arbitrator decided against the right to prove. The claimant insisted upon such right, notwithstanding the award. The commissioner, however, refused to admit the proof:—Held, that although the award was not made, pursuant to the statute, W., having agreed to the arbitration, and not having taken any objection to the validity of the submission before the commissioner, was bound by it. Wyld, Ex parte, 2 De G. F. & J. 642; 30 L. J., Bk. 10; 7 Jur., N. S. 294; 3 L. T. 934; 9 W. R. 421.

Independently of the award, the claim was well founded, and at the time of the bankruptcy he was entitled to prove for the amount of the bill. Id.

Bona Fide Holder of Bill accepted for Specific Purpose.—A bankrupt having accepted a bill for 200*l.* which had been negotiated by the drawer, and finding shortly before it fell due that he should be unable to pay it, persuaded the drawer to draw another bill on him for 220*l.*, and to get it discounted, in order that he might take up the first bill. The drawer discounted the bill for 220*l.* with A., but instead of applying the proceeds to pay off the first bill, appropriated them to his own use, and the holder of the first bill proved the amount of it under the fiat:—Held, that A., who had no knowledge of the circumstances under which the second bill was given, or of the breach of trust committed by the drawer, was not prevented from proving the amount of such second bill. Samuel, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 384.

Buying Bills at Undervalue.—Bills of exchange were drawn by S., who was the London agent for the firm of G. & Co., and accepted by them; the drawer and acceptors were at the time in a position of hopeless insolvency and contemplating bankruptcy. The bills were then offered for discount to J., who retained them for some time in his hands and made inquiries, whereby he ascertained that the acceptors would be unable to pay the bills in full, as they were in difficulties, but that they were possessed of assets, and that there was a fair prospect of his being able to obtain payment of part of the amount; he did not make any inquiry as to the solvency of the drawer; he then gave 200*l.* for the bills, which were of the nominal value of 1,727*l.* in all; one of them, for 227*l.*, falling due within a month; the firm of G. & Co. soon afterwards filed a petition for liquidation and were adjudicated bankrupts; J. then sought to prove for the whole nominal amount of the bills:—Held, that the circumstances affected J. with notice, that the bills were concocted in fraud of the creditors of G. & Co., and that consequently J. could not prove for more than the amount actually given by him for the bills. Jones v. Gordon, 2 App. Cas. 616; 47 L. J., Bk. 1; 37 L. T. 477; 26 W. R. 172. Affirming, S. C. nom. Gomersall, In re, 1 Ch. D. 137; 45 L. J., Bk. 1; 33 L. T. 483; 24 W. R. 257.

When lost.—Proof was allowed in respect of a bill alleged to be lost, but the most extensive indemnity was ordered to be given. Greenway, Ex parte, 6 Ves. 812.

A bill having been, in mistake for another bill, sent by the holders to the bankrupts before the bankruptcy, and retained by them, was lost: proof was, under the circumstances, allowed, without the production of the bill, and without security or indemnity. Webster, Ex parte, 1 De Gex, 414; 11 Jur. 136.

Transferred without Indorsement.—A person giving cash for a bill or note without the indorsement of the person from whom he takes it, cannot prove it under his bankruptcy. Shuttleworth, Ex parte, 3 Ves. 368; S. P., Harrison, Ex parte, 2 Bro. C. C. 615.

Unindorsed bills, given by the bankrupt, must be sold, and the holder may prove for the residue. Smith, Ex parte, 2 Cox, 209.

An agent applied to a banking company, on several occasions, to discount bills drawn by his principal, and at the commencement of these transactions informed the company who the drawers and acceptors were, and inquired whether the company would discount a bill without requiring the agent to indorse it. The company agreed to do so in this and other instances; but upon some of the bills required and obtained the agent's indorsement. The acceptances turned out to have been forged by the principal, of which fact the agent was wholly ignorant. On the agent becoming bankrupt, and there being nothing to shew that he had not handed over the proceeds of the bills to the principal, or that those proceeds were in such a position that they could be recalled:—Held, that the company could not prove upon the bills which the agent had not indorsed. Bird, Ex parte, 4 De G. & S. 273; 20 L. J., Bk. 16; 15 Jur. 894.

Indorsement of Promissory Note after Application to register Resolutions.—A bona fide holder for value of a promissory note procured the indorsement after tender of his proof but before the application to register resolutions in a liquidation:—Held, that the time of the indorsement was immaterial, and that the holder was entitled to prove in the liquidation. Pike, Ex parte, Eslick, In re, 40 L. T. 529.

Double Insolvency—Rights of Holder.—Where part of the account between two mercantile houses which have become bankrupt, consists of bills that may be proved against both estates, there can be no proof in respect of bills as between the two houses, unless there is a surplus after satisfying the holders of the bills. Rawson, Ex parte, Jacob, 274.

Indorser against Acceptor.—If an acceptor of a bill, not due, becomes bankrupt, and the indorser is afterwards obliged to take up the bill on account of non-payment by the acceptor, he may prove the amount under the commission; and if the acceptor afterwards obtains his certificate, he will be discharged from the debt. Joseph v. Orme, 2 N. R. 180.

Joint and Several Promissory Notes—Bankruptcy of one maker.—One of several makers of a joint and several promissory note in favour of a third party, having paid the debt secured by the note, may not prove upon the note against some of the co-makers under their bankruptcy. His remedy is by way of contribution from each of his co-contractors pro proportione. Schenk, Ex parte, 10 L. T. 44.

Bankruptcy of Indorser—Notice of Dishonour.—Where an indorser of a bill becomes bankrupt before it falls due, notice of its dishonour, if occurring before the choice of assignees, must be given to the bankrupt, if after such choice, to the assignees, to enable the holder to prove. Chapple, Ex parte, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 493; 3 Deac. 218.

A bill was dishonoured after the drawer had been adjudicated a bankrupt, and a trustee had been appointed. The holder, being aware of the bankruptcy, but not knowing of the appointment of the trustee, gave notice of dishonour to the bankrupt, and not to the trustee:—Held, that the notice was sufficient, and that the holder was entitled to prove in the bankruptcy in respect of the bill. Baker, Ex parte, Bellman, In re, 4 Ch. D. 795; 46 L. J., Bk. 60; 36 L. T. 339; 25 W. R. 454—C. A.

Semble, that where a creditor proves under a fiat for a debt due on bills of exchange of which the bankrupt is the drawer, it is not necessary for him to aver in his deposition, that the bills were duly presented, and that notice of their dishonour was given to the bankrupt. Fletcher v. Manning, 1 C. & K. 350.

Pledge of Bills and Notes.—The pledgee of a bill or note (though for part only), may prove the whole amount. Crossley, Ex parte, 3 Bro. C. C. 237.

Other Cases.—The holder of notes payable in cash or Bank of England notes, who did not receive them immediately from the maker, is not entitled to prove the amount as for money had and received against the estate of the maker. Davison, Ex parte, Buck, 31; S. P., Imeson, Ex parte, 2 Rose, 225.

Holder may be compelled to Prove against Acceptor.—The holder of a bill may be compelled to prove against the acceptor, for the benefit of the drawer. Wright v. Simpson, 6 Ves. 734.

Amount.—Where proof upon a bill of exchange accepted by a bankrupt is made, deductions must be made for all the previous payments on account by other parties to the bill, and the proof can only stand for the amount actually due at the time of the bankruptcy. Dunne, In re, 7 Ir. Ch. Rep. 285.

The holder of a bill of exchange who has received from the drawer sums of money in part payment of it, is not entitled to prove against the estate of the bankrupt acceptor for the full amount of the bill, but only for what remains due upon it after deducting all the sums paid in respect of it by the drawer before the proof is tendered, whether such payments were made before or after the bankruptcy. Taylor, or Taylor, Ex parte, 1 De G. & J. 302; 26 L. J., Bk. 58; 3 Jur., N. S. 753.

Where A., at the request of B., and upon the security of a bill from him for the amount, delivered goods to C., and such goods were afterwards partly paid for by C., and then B. became bankrupt:—Held, that A. could only prove, as against the estate of B., the sum remaining due for the goods, and not the full amount of the bill. Reader, Ex parte, Buck, 381.

Expenses of Protest and Re-Exchange.—A drawer in Louisiana of bills of exchange upon acceptors in London is entitled to prove, under a deed of arrangement executed by the latter, upon their becoming insolvent, to their creditors, not only for the amount of the bills, but also for 10% per cent. upon that amount, in lieu of re-exchange, which by the law of Louisiana, he had been obliged to pay to the holders of the bills on their return dishonoured and protested for non-payment in Louisiana. Walker v. Hamilton, 1 De G., F. & J. 602.

The costs arising from the protests of bills can be proved under a commission only when incurred antecedent to the act of bankruptcy, not to the issuing of the commission. Moore, Ex parte, 2 Bro. C. C. 597.

9. BONDS.

Cancellation by one of Joint Obligees.—The cancellation of a bond by an obligee, on an agreement between her and the obligor, without the consent of her co-obligee, does not affect the latter's right of proof on the bond against the obligor's estate. Smith, Ex parte, 7 Jur. 864.

Bond under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 8.—Action on a bond under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 8, given by a defendant and others, his partners in trade:—Held, that the bankruptcy and certificate of the defendant and his partners, after the action in which the judgment was obtained, but before judgment, furnished no answer to an action upon the bond; the demand arising thereon not being a debt (contingent or otherwise) provable under the fiat, by virtue of any of the provisions of the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16. Hinton v. Acraman, 2 C. B. 367; 3 D. & L. 426; 15 L. J., C. P. 52; 10 Jur. 203.

Void Provision in Bond.—A man on his marriage gave a bond, conditioned for payment of 1,000*l.*, with interest. By a settlement of even date it was declared that the trustees should, during his life, or until he should become bankrupt or insolvent, allow him to retain in his hands the 1,000*l.*, or such part of it as he should think fit. In 1826 he became bankrupt. The trustees, in 1827, proved for the 1,000*l.*, but the commissioners expunged the proof, and the trustees did not take any steps to have a value set upon the bond as for a sum payable on the bankrupt's death, and to be allowed to prove for the amount of the valuation. In 1860, the bankrupt being dead, and fresh assets having come in, the trustees applied again to prove for the whole amount:—Held, that although the provision for calling in the money on bankruptcy was void, the debt was valid as a debt payable upon the death of the bankrupt, and that proof of it ought to be allowed, not disturbing former dividends. Boddam, Ex parte, 2 De G., F. & J. 625.

Held, that the decision in 1827 was not a judgment against the claim, the debt not being then payable, and no attempt having been made to prove for it on the footing of its being payable in futuro. Id.

Antenuptial Settlement — Post-obit.—Where the condition of a post-obit bond, given by way of antenuptial settlement, had been broken, proof was ordered to be admitted for the whole amount secured. Griffiths, Ex parte, 1 De Gex, 597.

Bond for Sum less than Debt—Accord and Satisfaction.—A. was indebted to B. & Co. in 20,000*l.* on a banking account. B. & Co. agreed, that, if A. and C. would give a bond for paying 10,000*l.* by yearly instalments of 1,000*l.*, paying interest on any instalments in arrear, the debt should be considered as reduced to 10,000*l.* and cancelled. The bond was given. Before one instalment became due both B. & Co. and A. became bankrupt. The assignees of B. & Co. claimed to prove for the whole 20,000*l.* and interest:—Held, that, as an additional debtor was introduced, and as the bond contemplated the falling into arrear of the instalments, and as none of the particulars of the agreement were reduced into writing, the old debt must be considered to have been intended to be satisfied by the bond, and the proof must be rejected. Hernaman, Ex parte, 17 L. J., Bk. 17; 12 Jur. 643.

Bond conditioned to Pay after Demand.—A bond conditioned for the payment of a sum to the executors of the obligee, and interest in the meantime to him, on certain days or within twenty days after demand, is not provable under a commission against the obligor, though no interest has been paid, and there has been no demand, for the bond was forfeited only on neglect to pay after demand. Winter v. Mousely, 2 B. & A. 802. And see Parker v. Ramsbotham, 5 D. & R. 138; 3 B. & C. 257.

A covenant to pay a sum of money when requested by A., or after his death by the covenantee, with interest in the meantime, creates a present debt which may be proved for. Stone, Ex parte, Welck, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 914; 42 L. J., Bk. 73.

A debtor, before his bankruptcy, covenanted to pay a sum of money which was due to his father, to a trustee to whom the father assigned it; and trusts were declared of the money, under which the debtor took a reversionary interest:—Held, that the trustee of the settlement could prove for the whole amount without deducting the debtor's interest. Ib.

A sum covenanted by a husband to be paid when demanded by the trustees on the request of the wife, is, if demanded before the bankruptcy, provable. Brenchley, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 174.

Where parties jointly indebted enter into a covenant by which they promise on demand jointly and severally to pay, but expressly stipulate that the demand shall be in writing and sent by post to a particular place, and no demand is made previously to the bankruptcy, the debt is not provable against the separate estate of the respective parties. Flintoff, Ex parte, 3 M., D. & D. 726; 8 Jur. 766.

A., B. & C. being bankers in co-partnership, were appointed treasurers of a corporate body, and executed a joint and several bond in a penalty of 20,000*l.*, conditioned for the performance by them of various duties as treasurers, and especially that they would, "when thereunto required by the company," pay all balances in their hands. A commission issued against A., B. & C., who had at the time a large balance in their hands as treasurers, but no demand under the bond having been made by the company before the bankruptcy:—Held, that there was not a sufficient breach of the condition to constitute a debt provable against the separate estates of the bankrupts. Lancaster Canal Company, Ex parte, 1 Mont. 27.

Bond conditioned to settle Money on Wife after Marriage.—A bond is provable, given by the bankrupt in consideration of his wife's fortune, that he, his heirs, &c., would, within three months from the marriage, on receiving notice from the trustees, pay them 1,000*l.*, to be held on the trusts of the marriage settlement, though no notice was given before the bankruptcy. Hopper, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 395.

By an ante-nuptial settlement, a trader covenanted with the trustees of it to pay them 3,000*l.* out of the first capital moneys, or real or capital personal estate, or capitalized income, of or to which he should be or become possessed or in anywise entitled after the solemnization of the marriage within six months after he should have become so possessed or entitled. The trader was at the time possessed of stock in trade and effects exceeding in value 3,000*l.*, and so continued for more than six months after the date of the settlement, but did not after the marriage acquire additional property to that amount. He became bankrupt after the expiration of the six months:—Held, that the event contemplated by the covenant had happened before the bankruptcy, and that there was a breach of the covenant entitling the trustees to prove. Ecans, Ex parte, 2 De G., Mac. & G. 948; 22 L. J., Bk. 5.

Voluntary Bonds.—Voluntary bonds, though given under a strong moral obligation, as a marriage contracted, and property received as a husband, by a man having a wife living at the time, are not provable, being void as against creditors. Gilham v. Locke, 9 Ves. 613.

—Bond given in Substitution for.—A voluntary bond, though void against creditors, being valid as between the parties, its surrender is a consideration that will sustain a substituted bond against creditors, unless with a fraudulent design, as by an insolvent to substitute a valid for an invalid security against creditors; and therefore such substituted bond may be proved. Berry, Ex parte, 19 Ves. 218.

A partner in a bank gave a bond to his sister, in performance, as it was alleged, of a promise voluntarily made to their father on his deathbed. The sister died, having specifically bequeathed the sum secured by the bond. The bankrupt gave the legatees fresh bonds for sums amounting together to the sum secured by the original bond, in consideration of the delivery up of that instrument. Six years afterwards, the partners in the bank, including the obligor, became bankrupt; at the times of both the transactions, the firm must have been insolvent, and the obligor must have then known or suspected this to have been the case; but the transactions were entered into fairly, and without reference to this circumstance. There was no evidence, however, of any notice or suspicion on the part of the obligees:—Held, that they were entitled to prove upon the bonds. Hoskins, Ex parte, 3 De G. & S. 549; 18 L. J., Bk. 11; 13 Jur. 114.

Bonds of Indemnity.—Where there is a bond of indemnity, and the petitioners have paid part before bankruptcy and part after, they may prove the whole. Cockshot, Ex parte, 3 Bro. C. C. 502.

Where a bankrupt had given an indemnity bond to the sheriff, and the amount of damage was not ascertained, the court directed a claim to be entered. Marshall, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 242; 3 Deac. & Chit. 120; 2 Deac. & Chit. 589; 1 Mont. & Ayr. 118, 145; 1 Mont. & Bligh, 242.

Appropriation of Dividends.—Where one of two obligors in a joint and several bond became bankrupt, and the obligee having, by several dividends, been paid 20s. in the pound upon the amount of principal and interest due at the rate of the commission, also carried in a claim in respect of the same bond under a decree in a suit for the administration of the estate of the co-obligor who had died:—Held, that the amount due to the obligee in respect of such claim was to be computed by treating the dividends as ordinary payments on account, that is, by applying each dividend in the first place to the payment of the interest due at the date of such dividend, and the surplus, if any, in reduction of the principal. Bower v. Morris, 1 Craig & Ph. 351.

10. CALLS.

Calls—Surrender of Shares.]—A railway company proving against the estate of a bankrupt for calls must, according to the universal principle in bankruptcy, deduct the price or value of the shares from the amount of their claim, or give up the shares for the benefit of the creditors of the bankrupt. Jennings, In re, 1 Ir. Ch. Rep. 236.

—Deed of Settlement of Company.]—By the deed of settlement of a company, the shareholders covenanted to pay the calls on their shares; and it was stipulated that no assignees of bankrupts should be entitled to become shareholders in respect of the shares held by a bankrupt shareholder in the capital of the company, but that such assignees should be entitled to sell the same upon proof of the bankruptcy, and of their title as assignees; and a general power was given to the directors to make calls on the holders of shares other than the bankrupt shareholders:—Held, that the bankruptcy of a shareholder was an answer to an action for calls made and due after his certificate, although the assignees had not availed themselves of the power of sale, and the bankrupt still remained the nominal holder of the shares. Wylam Steam Fuel Company v. Street, 10 Ex. 849; 3 C. L. R. 880; 24 L. J., Ex. 208.

Future Calls.]—A shareholder in a trading company became bankrupt. The company continued, for a year subsequent to the bankruptcy, to carry on its business, and then stopped; and its affairs were ordered to be wound up. By the company's deed of settlement, the assignees of any bankrupt shareholder were authorized to sell his shares. The assignees of this bankrupt shareholder did not avail themselves of this provision. The master placed the names of the assignees upon the list of contributories as liable in respect of the bankrupt's estate up to the bankruptcy, on which the assignees disclaimed. The master then placed the name of the bankrupt, who was certificated, upon the list as liable in respect of calls made subsequent to his bankruptcy:—Held, that shares in a joint-stock partnership were not property, as the shares in an incorporated company, but that they were an interest determinable on bankruptcy, and that the bankrupt's name ought not to be put on the list in respect of the subsequent calls. Greenshield's case, 5 De G. & S. 599; 21 L. J., Ch. 733; 16 Jur. 517.

The liability of a shareholder of a company to pay future calls is not a liability to pay money on a contingency within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 186, s. 178.

VOL. I.

and consequently such shareholder's bankruptcy is no bar to an action for a call made subsequently to such bankruptcy. General Discount Company v. Stokes, 17 C. B., N. S. 765; 34 L. J., C. P. 25; 10 Jur., N. S. 1205; 11 L. T. 423; 13 W. R. 138; S. P., South Staffordshire Railway Company v. Burnside, 5 Ex. 129; 6 Railw. Cas. 611; 20 L. J., Ex. 120.

Future calls are not a liability the present value of which is provable under s. 154 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861. Hastie, Ex parte, 7 L. R., Eq. 3; 38 L. J., Ch. 43; 17 W. R. 152.

Contributories.]—The amount of a call made upon a contributory under the Winding-up Act of 1848, before his bankruptcy, might be proved against his separate estate by the official manager, although all the debts of the company are not paid, for which the contributory is liable. Brown, Ex parte, 3 De G. & S. 590; 19 L. J., Bk. 4; 13 Jur. 978.

A. was a shareholder in a banking company, which stopped payment. He became bankrupt, and before he obtained his certificate, an order for the winding up of the affairs of the company was obtained, and subsequently he obtained his certificate. The commissioner declined to permit the official manager to prove for the amount of calls on the bankrupt's shares; but the court held that, under ss. 14 and 30 of the Winding-up Act of 1849, the official manager was entitled to go in and prove for the amount of calls in competition with his separate creditors. Nicholas, Ex parte, 2 De G., Mac. & G. 271; 21 L. J., Bk. 64; 17 Jur. 6.

After the bankrupt has been settled upon the list of contributories, the liquidators may prove against his estate for the estimated value of future calls in respect of the shares held by him in the company which is being wound up, but the court will reserve liberty to the assignees to institute inquiry, and call upon the liquidators to shew in what way the estimate was arrived at. Gibbons, Ex parte, 11 L. T. 752.

A shareholder in a company under the Companies Act, 1862, was adjudicated a bankrupt, and after the adjudication a call was made upon him which subsequently became due. After the call became due, but before he obtained his order of discharge, the company went into liquidation. An action having been brought by the company against him for the call before the commencement of the proceedings in liquidation, and judgment having been obtained in default of appearance:—Held, that the call was not a debt provable, and that the judgment, therefore, ought not to be set aside. City Discount Company v. Lloyd, 24 L. T. 512; 20 W. R. 22.

The liability of a past member of a company in liquidation, who is placed on the B. list of contributories, is capable of being proved as a debt under the bankruptcy of such contributory if the bankruptcy takes place after the commencement of the winding-up; and the bankrupt, on obtaining his discharge, is entitled to be removed from the list of contributories. The fact that the B. list is not made out till after the adjudication of bankruptcy makes no difference. Land Credit Company of Ireland, In re, McEwen's case, 6 L. R., Ch. 582; 40 L. J., Ch. 341; 24 L. T. 654; 19 W. R. 738.

11. CONTINGENT DEBTS AND LIABILITIES.

Loan of Securities to be replaced on Demand.]

—A customer of a banking firm, whose practice it was to receive deposits, at their banking-house, of boxes of securities belonging to their customers, for safe custody, lent part of the securities contained in his box to the firm, upon an undertaking to replace them in three months, or sooner if required; and he afterwards lent other part of such securities to W., one of the partners in the firm, on his own separate account, other securities being on both occasions deposited by the borrowers, according to agreement, in pledge for those which were borrowed. After the expiration of three months from the time of the first loan, the firm, with the consent of the customer, deposited other securities in the box, in exchange for those first pledged, and afterwards became bankrupt, when it appeared that the customer had been regularly credited in the books of the firm with interest on all the securities borrowed, but that W. had, without the knowledge either of his co-partners or the customer, abstracted the securities pledged by himself upon the second loan, and had applied the proceeds to his own individual use:—Held, that the value of the securities lent to the firm was not a contingent debt within 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 56, and that, as there had been no demand for their replacement before the bankruptcy, the customer had no provable debt in respect thereof, either against the joint estate or any of the separate estates. Eyre, Ex parte, 1 Ph. 227; 3 Mont., D. & D. 12; 12 L. J., Ch. 266; 7 Jur. 162.

Agreement to buy Ship on her Arrival.]—A. agreed to sell to B., for 4,000*l.*, a ship employed on a distant voyage, when she should arrive at her port of discharge in the United Kingdom; and B. agreed, within one month after her arrival, or within such further time as should be necessary for effecting the repairs and discharging the cargo, on the execution of a bill of sale of the vessel, to deliver to A. two promissory notes for the amount of the purchase-money; in default of which A. might sell the ship and keep the proceeds in part of the purchase-money, B. undertaking to pay to A. any deficiency within one calendar month after such sale; and in case the vessel should be lost, the agreement was to be void. On the 27th of March the ship arrived, before which time B. became bankrupt. On the 31st of March, A. gave notice of her arrival to the assignees, who declined to complete the contract; and A. sold the ship for 2,833*l.*:—Held, that this agreement amounted to a contract on the part of B. to pay a certain sum on a contingency, liable to be reduced on another contingency; and that A. could prove for the balance of the 4,000*l.* after deducting the amount of the proceeds of the ship. Harrison, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 350; 10 Jur. 166.

Principal and Surety.]—A covenant by sureties that the principal debtor would pay a debt by three yearly instalments is on the principal debtor becoming bankrupt after payment of the first, and before the time for payment of the second instalment, a contingent liability properly the subject of a claim under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 178. Barwis, Ex parte, 6 De G., Mac. & G. 762; 25 L. J., Bk. 10; 2 Jur., N. S. 5.

A., in consideration of 1*l.* 10*s.* 7*d.* received of B., undertook, in writing, to make himself liable for the due payment of a note upon which H. was then indebted to B., and B. thereupon consented to furnish H. with more goods; and then A., before the note was due, became bankrupt:—Held, that A.'s undertaking was intended as a collateral engagement only, in case H. should not pay the note when due; consequently, as it rested on a contingency whether it would ever become a debt or not, it could not be proved under A.'s commission. Adney, Ex parte, Cowp. 460. See Hoffman v. Foudrinier, 5 M. & S. 21.

Consent by Defendant to Order of Reference.]

—Where a defendant to an action for injury to property caused by the explosion of his steam-engine, consented at the trial to an order of reference, and the award was not made till after his bankruptcy:—Held, that the defendant had not before the bankruptcy contracted a liability to pay money upon a contingency within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 178. Todd, Ex parte, 6 De G., Mac. & G. 744; 24 L. J., Bk. 20; 1 Jur., N. S. 897.

Agreements to restore Premises to original State.]—Ten years ago, A. let to B. as tenant from year to year, premises adjoining other premises occupied by B. About seven years ago A. permitted B. to make a communication through the party-wall, and to make alterations, upon condition that B. should, at the termination of his tenancy, restore the premises to their original state. In April, 1855, B. became bankrupt, and, on the 17th of May, B. gave notice to A. that he would deliver up possession of the premises, the assignees having declined to take them:—Held, that the damages resulting from the non-compliance with the condition upon which the permission to alter was given, did not constitute a liability to pay money upon a contingency within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 178. Maples v. Pepper, 18 C. B. 177; 25 L. J., C. P. 243; 2 Jur., N. S. 739.

Money payable at various Times on various Contingencies.]—A demand arising upon an undertaking which creates a liability to pay money at several different periods, if several contingencies shall happen at those several periods, is not a demand provable under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 178. Warburg v. Tucker, 5 El. & Bl. 384; 24 L. J., Q. B. 317; 1 Jur., N. S. 871; 16 C. B. 418, n. S. P., Young v. Winter, 16 C. B. 401; 24 L. J., C. P. 214; 1 Jur., N. S. 960.

Guarantee terminable by Notice in Writing.]

—In July, 1850, B. gave C. a guarantee (continuing) for 200*l.* for goods to be supplied to D., with a stipulation that the security should subsist "until C. received a notice in writing to the contrary." Goods were supplied to D. upon the faith of this guarantee, and a balance, exceeding 200*l.*, was due in respect thereof. In June, 1853, B. became bankrupt, and duly obtained his certificate:—Held, that B.'s liability upon this guarantee was not a contingent liability within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 178, and consequently that his certificate was no bar to a claim in respect of goods supplied to D. after the bankruptcy of B. Boyd v. Robins, 5 C. B., N. S. 597; 23 L. J., C. P. 73; 5 Jur., N. S. 915; 7 W. R. 78.—Ex. Ch.

Promissory Note—Joint Makers.]—The liability of one of two makers of a promissory note, who have signed as sureties for a third maker, to contribution, upon the contingency of the co-surety paying the note in default of the principal, is, before the note arrives at maturity, a liability to pay money upon a contingency which shall not have happened within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 178, and the demand in respect of such liability is, therefore, provable under that section, against the estate of the bankrupt co-surety, when the contingency has happened. Adkins v. Farrington, 5 H. & N. 586; 29 L. J., Ex. 345; 2 L. T. 287.

Marriage Settlement—Default of Issue.]—By a marriage settlement, S. covenanted to cause 4,000*l.* to be paid to his wife's trustees within twelve months after his own decease, in trust to pay her the interest for her life in case she survived him, and afterwards the principal to their children; but, if they had no children, to the survivor of them, S. and his wife, his or her executors or administrators. —Held, that this was a debt on a contingency, provable under a commission against S. within the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 56, and that the valuation should be the present worth of 4,000*l.* payable twelve months after the death of the bankrupt. Tindall, Ex parte, 1 M. & Scott, 607; 8 Bing. 402; 1 Mont. 462; 1 Mont. & Mac. 415; 1 Deac. & Chit. 291.

Deed of Separation—Allowance to Wife while living Apart.]—By a deed of separation between husband and wife, the husband covenanted that he would every year during the joint lives of himself and his wife pay to a trustee for her, to her separate use, such sum as, together with the dividends and interest or other income to arise from 948*l.* 6*s.* 4*d.* Three per Cent. Annuities, or from other funds settled or which might be settled to her separate use and which might be received by her, would make one clear annuity of 200*l.*, such annuity to commence from the 11th of January, 1854, and to be paid by four even and equal quarterly payments; provided, if he and his wife should at any time thereafter cohabit as man and wife, that thenceforth the annuity should cease. On the 29th of September, 1854, and while he and his wife continued to live separate, he became bankrupt. —Held, that the annual sum, so covenanted to be paid for the separate use of his wife, was not a debt payable upon a contingency, within s. 177 of 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, or a liability to pay money upon a contingency within s. 178, and consequently his certificate was no bar to an action for the recovery of a quarterly payment which became due after the bankruptcy. Parker v. Ince, 4 H. & N. 53; 28 L. J., Ex. 189; 32 L. T., O. S. 279; 7 W. R. 201.

Bond to pay Plaintiff's Costs if Unsuccessful.]—A surety entered into a bond in a penal sum, with the condition that if he should pay to the plaintiff such costs as he should in due course of law be liable to pay in case the verdict should pass for the defendant in an action pending, which had been brought by C. in the name of the plaintiff, such costs to be first taxed in the usual manner, the bond was to be void. The action mentioned in the condition was a scire facias on a judgment obtained by the plaintiff, and which had been assigned to C. by H., since deceased, of whom the plaintiff was executor. The action was tried at the Spring Assizes, in 1848, when a verdict was found for the defendant. In Easter Term a rule nisi for a new trial was obtained. On the 14th of November following, a fiat issued against the defendant. In Hilary Term, 1849, the rule for the new trial was discharged. On the 29th of May the defendant obtained his certificate, and on the 22nd of August the costs were taxed:—Held, that, at the time the fiat issued, the defendant's liability under the bond was a mere contingent liability, and not a contingent debt, within 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 56; and therefore that the plaintiff's claim for the costs was not barred by the certificate. Hankin v. Bennett, 8 Ex. 107; 21 L. J., Ex. 326.

Goods Bought for future Delivery—Bankruptcy of Purchaser.]—B. & Co. employed Messrs. W., who were metal brokers, to purchase iron for them, to be delivered and paid for at a future day. Messrs. W., as the custom of the trade was, entered into contracts for the purchase of the iron, without disclosing the names of their principals. Before the day for delivery and payment arrived an adjudication against B. & Co. took place, and the assignees having declined to complete the contract, Messrs. W. completed the purchase on their own account, and resold the iron at a loss, and carried in a proof against the bankrupt estate for the amount of the loss so sustained:—Held, that the claim could not be supported either as a liability to pay money on a contingency, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 178, or as a debt payable upon a contingency, under s. 177, nor could it be sustained as a demand in the nature of damages, to which the bankrupts were liable at the time of the adjudication, under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 153, and the proof was therefore disallowed. Kempson, Ex parte, 34 L. J., Bk. 21; 11 Jur., N. S. 165; 11 L. T. 723; 13 W. R. 418.

Administration Bond.]—An administration bond, forfeited before the bankruptcy of the administrator, is not provable under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 178, and consequently a certificate under that act is no bar to an action on the bond. Marchman v. Brookes or Hughes, 2 H. & C. 908; 9 L. T. 726.

Premiums on Policy of Insurance.]—A covenant to pay recurring premiums on a life policy is an absolute covenant, and does not constitute a liability to pay money upon a contingency, within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 178. The only contingency being that of the continuance of the life assured, it is an absolute covenant to pay, not upon, but until, the happening of a certain event, so that the contingency specified does not create, but puts an end to, the liability. Mitcalfe v. Hanson, 1 L. R., H. L. 242; 35 L. J., Q. B. 225.

The statute contemplated only one single liability arising upon one contingency, and that cannot apply to a liability to make periodical payments, nor is there any provision in the statute which gives such a liability the character of an annuity. Id.

Indemnity Calls.]—A defendant, having transferred into the plaintiff's name shares in a mine conducted on the cost-book principle as security for a debt, covenanted with him to indemnify him from all calls which might be made upon such shares, and all charges, liabilities, and costs that might attach to the said shares. The defendant became bankrupt, and the plaintiff was afterwards compelled to pay in respect of such shares certain debts of the mine which accrued before the bankruptcy:—Held, in an action on this covenant for not indemnifying the plaintiff against such payment, that the defendant's liability was not to pay money upon a contingency within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 178, nor did the plaintiff stand in the position of surety for the defendant within the meaning of s. 173; and that therefore his bankruptcy was no bar to the action. Betteley v. Stainsby, 2 L. R., C. P. 568; 36 L. J., C. P. 293; 16 L. T. 701; 15 W. R. 1047.

—Retiring Partner.—A partner, continuing the business, took an assignment of all the stock, and covenanted to indemnify the retiring partner from the debts then owing from the partnership. The continuing partner became bankrupt, and obtained his certificate; and subsequently an action was commenced against the retiring partner, upon an acceptance of the partnership. Judgment was obtained against him, and he paid the debt and costs:—Held, that an action would not lie against the bankrupt upon the covenant, since, under 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 8, the retiring partner might, on his liability, have resorted to and proved his debt under the commission, and was therefore barred by the certificate. Wood v. Dodgson, 1 Rose, 47; 2 M. & S. 195.

—Stakeholder.—A contract of indemnity does not create a liability to pay money upon a contingency within the meaning of the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 178, because the contracting party is not in such a case necessarily made liable by the contract itself to pay a sum of money. Wiseman, Es. parte. Kelson, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 35; 25 L. T. 545; 20 W. R. 138—L. J.

K. & Co. having made a claim to bills of exchange, which were in the hands of W. as stakeholder, he handed them over to K. & Co. they giving him a guarantee to save and keep him harmless and indemnified from and against all claims and demands which might be made against him for the bills, and from and against all costs and damages which he might sustain in consequence of handing over the bills; and further, that if proceedings were taken against him in respect of the bills, K. & Co. would save him harmless and keep indemnified from all costs and damages by reason of such proceedings, and that if he was ordered in such proceedings to give security, or bring money into court, K. & Co. would procure such security, or provide him with the money to be paid into court, as the case might be. An adverse claimant brought an action against him for the bills, which action K. & Co. defended by their own attorney, until they executed a deed of inspectorship, which was registered under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, and under which deed all creditors might prove who could have proved under an adjudication of bankruptcy of the same date. After this, judgment was recovered in the action against him:—Held, that he was not a creditor who could have proved in bankruptcy under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, s. 153, for that the contract did not contain any warranty of the title of K. & Co. to the bills, nor any undertaking to pay their amount as soon as a valid claim was made against him for them, but only an undertaking that he should not sustain any loss or expense in respect of them, and that as K. & Co. had defended the action up to the date of the deed of inspectorship, the contract had not up to that time been broken. Ib.

Held, also, that the contract was not a contract to pay money upon a contingency, so as to give a right of proof under the Bankruptcy Act, 1849, s. 178. Ib.

—Undertaking to replace Consols.—In January, 1866, a company lent a sum in consols to be deposited by the promoters of a bill then before parliament; and the two plaintiffs, the defendant, and three others entered into an undertaking with the company, that, if the bill was thrown out the consols should be returned, and if it passed, an equal amount of stock should be transferred to the company, and that a sum, in the nature of interest on the value of the consols at the time they were lent, from the end of six months to the date of the transfer, should be paid to the company. In April, 1866, the defendant was adjudged bankrupt; and in July he obtained his order of discharge. In August the bill was passed, but the consols were not transferred to the company till May, 1867, and the plaintiffs were compelled in June, 1867, to pay under the undertaking 500*l.* as the interest. An action having been brought by the plaintiffs to recover contribution from the defendant of one-sixth of the 500*l.*, the defendant pleaded his discharge:—Held, that as the liability under the undertaking depended on an uncertain event, viz., the date at which the consols should be transferred, the amount of liability was not capable of being ascertained; and the claim was therefore not a debt provable under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 178, nor under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 154; and the defendant was therefore not discharged. Cary v. Dawson, 4 L. R., Q. B. 568; 38 L. J., Q. B. 300; 21 L. T. 23; 17 W. R. 916; 10 B. & S. 663.

—Covenant to obtain Transfer of Consols.—A bond for 1,000*l.*, after reciting that the obligor had assigned to the obligee 1,100*l.* consols, to which the obligor's wife was entitled upon the death of her mother, and that the obligor's wife might survive her husband and might refuse to confirm the assignment, or the obligee might, through the obligor's default or otherwise, never realize the benefit of the assignment, was conditioned for avoidance if, within six months after the mother's death, the obligee should obtain the transfer of the consols, or the trustees should transfer the consols to the obligee. The mother died, and more than six months after the obligee sued the obligor on the bond. He pleaded his bankruptcy and discharge under the Act of 1861, obtained before any breach of the condition and before six months after the death of the mother:—Held, that the action was not barred by the bankruptcy and discharge, since the obligee could not have proved under the bankruptcy, either for "a debt payable on a contingency" within the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 177, or for "a liability to pay money on a contingency" within s. 178. Acot v. Thomas, 6 L. R., Ex. 312; 40 L. J., Ex. 186; 24 L. T. 668; 19 W. R. 1148.

—Company Winding up—Successive Holders of Shares.—The plaintiff, a holder of shares in a company, transferred them to the defendant, who transferred them to M. The company was ordered to be wound up, and a call of 40*l.* a share was made on the contributories in class A., being the existing members, amongst whom M. was placed; these, including M., being unable to pay, the plaintiff and the defendant were placed upon the list of contributories in class B. as past members, and the defendant was ordered in March, 1869, to pay a call of 40*l.* per share. The defendant had executed a deed of inspectorship under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, s. 192, which was duly registered in December, 1867. The liquidator of the company proved for the amount of calls against the defendant's estate, but no part was paid; and the plaintiff having paid a sum in compromise of the money remaining due on the shares, sued the defendant for the amount:—Held, that the defendant was liable to indemnify the plaintiff against calls made after the defendant had transferred his interest to M.; and that the claim of the plaintiff was not provable under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, s. 153, and the defendant's deed therefore afforded no defence. Killock v. Enthoven, 9 L. R., Q. B. 241; 43 L. J., Q. B. 90; 22 W. R. 322—Ex. Ch. Affirming, 8 L. R., Q. B. 458; 21 W. R. 944.

A claim by the transferor of shares in a company, to be indemnified out of the estate of his bankrupt transferee against calls made on the transferor after the transfer, is not a debt provable under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, ss. 153 and 154; and a plea of an inspectorship deed under s. 192 is no defence to a creditors' suit in equity to administer the estate of the transferee. Holmes v. Symons, 13 L. R., Eq. 66; 41 L. J., Ch. 59; 25 L. T. 628; 20 W. R. 125. An appeal against this decision was compromised; 20 W. R. 921.

Annuity so long as Annuitant did not carry on Trade near certain Place.]—On the dissolution of a partnership in the business of tailors between J. and R., J., who continued the business, covenanted to pay R. an annuity of 120*l.* for his life, and R. covenanted not to carry on the business of a tailor within 100 miles from the old place of business, and it was agreed that for any breach of this covenant by him the life annuity should thereupon cease and determine, and the covenant to pay it become null and void, as and by way of liquidated damages to J. J. paid the annuity punctually for some years, until he got into difficulties, and he then presented a petition for liquidation by arrangement, and his creditors agreed to accept a composition:—Held, that the claim of R. in respect of his annuity was capable of being fairly estimated and was provable in the liquidation proceedings. Jackson, Ex parte Jackson, In re, 27 L. T. 696; 20 W. R. 1023—L. J.

Bond for Costs and Damages in Admiralty Suit.]—A debtor filed a petition under s. 126 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, to obtain an arrangement, and inserted in his statement the name and address of a creditor, describing a certain sum of money as due to him; the creditor claimed a larger sum, obtained the allowance of it, signed a composition deed (the composition being payable in one month from the registration of the deed), and received the composition agreed to by the creditors. While this arrangement was being made, a suit in the Court of Admiralty was proceeding against the debtor, in which suit the creditor had given a bond, as surety for the debtor, for the payment of any costs and damages found due in that suit. The liability on this bond was in no way referred to in the debtor's statutory statement. After the composition had been completed, and the composition had been paid, the admiralty suit was decided against the debtor, and, on default by the debtor, the creditor was called on to pay the amount secured by the bond:—Held, that, under these circumstances, an action for money paid under the admiralty bond was maintainable against the debtor, no mention of the bond having been made in the statutory statement, and such payment, therefore, not being affected by the provisions of ss. 31 and 126 of the Bankruptcy Act. Breslau v. Brown, 3 App. Cas. 672; 47 L. J., C. P. 729; 39 L. T. 67; 26 W. R. 536. Affirming, nom. Wilson v. Breslau, 2 C. P. D. 314; 46 L. J., C. P. 593; 37 L. T. 24; 25 W. R. 818.

Bankruptcy of Non-trader prior to 1869—Discharge—Contingent Liability.]—Under the bankruptcy law which prevailed in 1862 a contingent liability was not provable in the bankruptcy of a non-trader, and was not therefore affected by the discharge of the bankrupt; consequently, in a case coming under that law, the liability will operate at any time subsequent to the discharge. B., a spinster and a non-trader, by deed made in 1861, assigned by way of mortgage all her life interest in a certain fund, over which she had also an absolute power of appointment by will, and further covenanted with the mortgagee that she would exercise the power in his favour, and would not do, &c., any act whereby her will should be revoked, or in anywise affected. She duly made her will according to the covenant, and subsequently, namely, in 1862, became a bankrupt; and, after obtaining her discharge, made another will revoking the former will, and bequeathing the fund to her executors. She died in 1880, and the last-mentioned will was duly proved:—Held, that since the case must be governed by the law as existing at the bankruptcy, and since the liability on the covenant was not a debt provable, and therefore not released by the discharge under ss. 177, 178 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1849 (which were not repealed by the Bankruptcy Act, 1861), an action would lie against the executors of B. for damages for breach of the covenant. Robinson v. Ommanney, 23 Ch. D. 285; 52 L. J., Ch. 440; 49 L. T. 19; 31 W. R. 525—C.A. Affirming, 21 Ch. D. 780; 51 L. J., Ch. 894; 47 L. T. 78; 30 W. R. 939.

12. COSTS.

In Actions.]—See post, JUDGMENTS.

Costs due to Bankrupt's Solicitor—Signed Bill unnecessary.]—An attorney may prove his bill under a commission of bankruptcy without delivering a signed bill. Eicke v. Nokes, Moo. & M. 303.

Bill of Exchange accepted in Settlement—Taxation.]—Where solicitors had delivered their bill of costs in September, 1850, and after a reduction had been agreed upon, the client accepted a bill of exchange for the amount so reduced:—Held, on the bill being dishonoured and the client becoming bankrupt in May, 1851, that the bill of exchange constituted a provable debt without the bill of costs being taxed. Webb, Ex parte, 4 De G. & Sm. 366.

Taxation of Bill—Registrar.]—A solicitor who tenders a proof in the bankruptcy of his client, in respect of costs due to him by the client, is not entitled to insist on having his bill referred for taxation to the taxing master, but the registrar has jurisdiction to determine the amount due, availing himself, if necessary, of the advice of the taxing master. Dillon, Ex parte, Woods, In re, 13 Ch. D. 318; 42 L. T. 160; 28 W. R. 402—C. A.

13. DAMAGES.

Unliquidated Damages in respect of Contracts—Before 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 153.]—If the damages be contingent and uncertain, they cannot be proved under a commission. Banister v. Scott, 6 T. R. 489. And see Parker v. Norton, 6 T. R. 695.

Sale of Goods—Failure to Accept.]—Damages arising from a breach of contract to accept goods at a certain price on a certain day were not provable. Green v. Bicknell, 3 N. & P. 634; 8 A. & E. 701; 1 W., W. & H. 504.

If a trader agreed to purchase goods, to be delivered on a future day, which had not arrived when the commission issued, the difference between the value of the goods and the purchase-money was not provable. Boorman v. Nash, 9 B. & C. 145.

Where a person who had contracted for a certain quantity of oil, to be delivered to him at a future day at a certain price, became bankrupt before that day arrived, and obtained his certificate:—Held, that he was nevertheless liable to an action for not accepting and paying for the oil, and that the proper measure of damage was the difference between the price which he had contracted to pay for the oil and the market price at the time when the contract was broken. Id.

Charterparty—Failure to provide Cargo.]

—By a charterparty between A., charterer, and B., owner, it was agreed that a ship of 310 tons burden should proceed to Ichaboe, and there take in from A. a full cargo of guano and other merchandize, and therewith laden should return and discharge her cargo, for which A. agreed to pay freight at the rate of 4l. 10s. for every ton delivered, and agreed to provide a full cargo; and A. & B. mutually bound themselves in a penalty of 1,800l. for the performance of the contract. A. having committed a breach by not providing a cargo, and a fiat in bankruptcy having subsequently issued against him:—Held, that any claim which B. might have against A. for such breach of contract was in the nature of unliquidated damages, and was not therefore provable as a debt or demand under the fiat. Woolley v. Smith, 4 D. & L. 469; 3 C. B. 610; 16 L. J., C. P. 81; 11 Jur. 310.

Penalties.]—A bankrupt undertook to supply a creditor who was under pecuniary engagements for him, with five pieces of cloth per week, or to forfeit and pay 10l. per piece as liquidated penalty for every piece deficient. The bankrupt made such frequent default in the regular supply of the cloth that he incurred penalties to the amount of 3,870l., which the creditor claimed to prove, although no specific damage was alleged to have been sustained by the non-performance of the agreement, and the only balance really due to him was 48l. 18s. 6d.:—Held, that this was a claim for unliquidated damages, founded on a penalty, and was therefore not the subject of proof. Maclean, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 564; 6 Jur. 609.

Indemnity.]—If a person undertakes, with A., to settle with certain bankers a balance due to them on an acceptance of A.'s, but he neglects to take up the bill, and he gives to A. a new undertaking to deliver up to him his acceptance within a month, or gives him a bond of indemnity, but does not perform either, and the bankers sue A., and pending a rule for a new trial, the person becomes a bankrupt, the certificate is not a bar to an action by A. Yallop v. Ebers, 1 B. & Ad. 698.

A collateral, independent and express covenant, by the assignee of a lease to indemnify the lessor, was not discharged by the assignee's becoming bankrupt. Mayor v. Steward, 4 Burr, 2439.

Sale of Goods—Covenant of Title.]—Where B. sold a ship to A., with a covenant that he had a good title, though in fact he had none, and B. afterwards became a bankrupt, and A. sustained damage by paying the value of the ship to the true owner:—Held, in an action on the covenant by A. against B., stating the special damage, that B.'s certificate was no bar. Hammond v. Toulmin, 7 T. R. 612.

Under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 153.]—This section is limited to cases where there is a cause of action actually accrued, or a demand enforceable against the bankrupt, at the time of adjudication. Mendel, Ex parte, 1 De G., J. & S. 330; 33 L. J., Bk. 14; 10 Jur., N. S. 189; 9 L. T. 793; 12 W. R. 451.

Therefore a claim in respect of a contract made in July to deliver a quantity of oil at a certain price, in the course of the following month of January, is not one in respect of which a creditor is entitled to prove under a trust-deed, dated the 30th January, for unliquidated damages, inasmuch as, at the date of the deed, and until the end of the month, there had been no breach of the contract. Id.

A declaration was, upon an indenture, made the 16th August, 1861, between Clifton, since deceased, and the defendant, of the one part, and the plaintiff, of the other part, whereby Clifton and the defendant covenanted to pay the premiums upon a policy of assurance upon the life of Clifton, which had been deposited with the plaintiff, until the payment of a bond therein mentioned. The plaintiff alleged that, although the bond had not been paid, both Clifton and the defendant had neglected to pay any of the premiums upon the policy from the date of the indenture. The defendant pleaded a deed of the 21st June, 1869, under the Bankruptcy Amendment Act, 1868, between himself, two inspectors, and the creditors, who would be entitled to prove under an adjudication of bankruptcy against him, founded on a petition filed upon the day of the date of the deed, upon an act of bankruptcy committed upon the day of the date thereof. The plea merely stated that it was agreed by the deed that the provisions therein contained should operate and have the same force and effect as an order of discharge under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, and might be so pleaded in bar of every action commenced by any creditor of defendant, and with the same effect as an order of discharge under that Act, in case the defendant had been adjudicated bankrupt. The plea then averred the performance of all conditions precedent, and that at the time of the execution of the deed the plaintiff was a creditor of the defendant in respect of the claim herein pleaded to within the true intent and meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861:—Held, that the plea was no answer to the action. Solomon v. Isaacs, 27 L. T. 624—Ex. Ch.

— Covenant of Title—Liability Immediate.]

—A liability in respect of a breach of covenants of title, contained in a purchase-deed, arises immediately upon the execution of the deed; therefore, where the bankruptcy of the vendor occurred after the execution of the purchase-deed, but before the amount of damage sustained by the purchaser was ascertained, the latter is entitled to prove for the amount. Elmes, Ex parte, 33 L. J., Bk. 23; 10 L. T. 314; 12 W. R. 778.

A., a solicitor, mortgaged lands to his client, B., for 1,000*l.*, and sent him a parcel of deeds purporting to comprise the deeds of the mortgaged property, but retained those relating to a part. That part he afterwards sold to C. for 600*l.*, and entered into covenants for title. A. absconded, and was afterwards made bankrupt. C. then discovered the prior mortgage, and B. also for the first time discovered that the deeds were missing, and were in C.'s possession. B. filed a bill against C., and obtained a decree that C. should redeem him or be foreclosed. C. appealed, but the decree was affirmed. C. paid off the mortgage, interest, and costs, and tendered a proof in A.'s bankruptcy for the amount:—Held, that he was entitled to prove for the principal and interest, and for the costs of the suit, except those of the rehearing. Id.

— Sale of Cargo—Neglect of Buyer to name Port of Delivery—Damages—Demurrage.]—A. contracted to sell to B. a cargo, deliverable at a port to be named by the buyer on or before the ship's arrival at a port of call; demurrage by neglect of buyer in giving sailing orders to be paid by him. Upon the arrival of the ship at the port of call being notified by A., B. stated that he could not meet his engagements; and three days afterwards B. committed an act of bankruptcy. A. subsequently sold the cargo at a loss, and sought to prove against B.'s estate for the difference:—Held, that the neglect of B. to name a port of delivery, and the statement of his inability to meet his engagements, did not amount to a breach of the contract at the date of the act of bankruptcy, as the time for the performance of the contract to accept the cargo, i.e., the arrival of the ship at her port of delivery, had not then arrived, and proof for damages for breach of contract refused accordingly, but proof for demurrage incurred before the act of bankruptcy was allowed. Halliday, Ex parte, 2 De — Broker—Bankruptcy of Principal—Re-sale—Damages.]—W. & Co., who were iron brokers, contracted to purchase iron on behalf of B. According to the custom of the trade, the names of the brokers only appeared in the contract as the buyers. B. became bankrupt before the day appointed by the contract for the payment of the purchase-money; and the assignees having refused to accept the iron, the broker resold it, and sought to prove against the estate of the bankrupt for the difference between the amount paid for the iron and the sum it realized on the re-sale:—Held, that no proof could be made under the above section, because at the time of the adjudication the bankrupt was not liable for any demand for damages, or in the nature of damages. Kempson, Ex parte, 34 L. J., Bk. 21; 11 Jur., N. S. 165; 11 L. T. 723; 13 W. R. 418.

— Sub-Tenant paying Money to release Goods Distained by superior Landlord.]—The defendant occupied as tenant to P. a warehouse at a yearly rent, and the plaintiff became his sub-tenant of one of the rooms. The defendant's rent being in arrear, P. lawfully distained the goods in the warehouse, including goods of the plaintiff. To obtain the release of his goods the plaintiff paid P. 15*l.* After this the defendant was adjudged a bankrupt on his own petition, and obtained his order of discharge. The plaintiff then sued the defendant for the damage which he had sustained:—Held, that he was not "liable, by reason of any contract or promise, to a demand in the nature of damages" at the suit of the plaintiff, within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 153, and that the plaintiff's claim was therefore not provable under the bankruptcy, and not barred by the order of discharge. Johnson v. Shafte, 4 L. R., Q. B. 700; 38 L. J., Q. B. 318; 20 L. T. 909; 17 W. R. 1098.

— Bankrupt Vendor—Failure to Deliver—Measure of Damages.]—A manufacturer of iron contracted, in May, 1871, to sell to a company 150 tons of iron at a specified price per ton, delivery to be twenty tons per month. The deliveries were not duly made under the contract. In January, 1872, the vendor filed a petition for liquidation by arrangement. At that time a considerable quantity of iron remained to be delivered, and the market price of iron had risen very much. It appeared that in some cases the company had bought iron in the market to supply the deficiency in the monthly deliveries. It did not appear that any actual request had been made by the vendor for the postponement of the deliveries:—Held, that the company could prove in the liquidation only for the differences between the contract price of the iron and the market prices of the days when the respective deficient deliveries were made. Llan-samlet Tin Plate Company, Ex parte, Voss, In re, 16 L. R., Eq. 145.

— Agreement to provide Steam Power—Damages.]—H. entered into a written agreement with S. and A. that he would supply them with steam power for any looms that might be put up in their weaving-shed for a term of twenty-one years from August, 1858, at a fixed annual rent per loom, payable in advance. In 1865, they assigned their weaving-shed and the benefit of the agreement to W. In 1871, H. mortgaged his mill, which contained the steam power; and in 1872 he filed a petition for liquidation by arrangement, under which a trustee was appointed. The mortgagee then took possession of the mill and repudiated the agreement. W. was, in consequence, obliged to obtain steam power for his looms at a much higher cost; and he claimed to prove in the liquidation for the injury which he had sustained:—Held, first, that although the agreement for the supply of steam power might be put an end to at the commencement of any year by the owners of the weaving-shed discontinuing to work any looms, the agreement was not unilateral, and could be sued on at law. Waters, Ex parte, Hoyle, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 562; 28 L. T. 757; 21 W. R. 554.

Held, secondly, that the damages sustained by the owner of the weaving-shed were such as could be fairly estimated, and that W. was entitled to prove for them in the liquidation. Id.

Building Contract—Bankruptcy of Contractor—Penalty.—A contract for the erection of buildings provided that they should be completed by the 25th of December, and that in default thereof the contractors should forfeit to the employer 10l. per week for every week after that date during which the buildings should remain unfinished; also that, if the contractors were prevented by bankruptcy or any other cause from completing, the employer might rescind, and that the moneys then already paid should be considered the full value of the works executed. There were various other stipulations, and a final provision that, in case the contract should not be in all things duly performed by the contractors, they should pay to the employer 1,000l., as and for liquidated damages. Before the 25th of December the contractors filed a liquidation petition. Their trustees carried on the works for a time, and then abandoned the contract. Another builder was employed to complete the works, which were not finished till long after the 25th of December:—Held, that the 1,000l. was in the nature of a penalty, and that the employer was entitled to prove in the liquidation only for the actual damage he had sustained by the delay in the completion of the works. Newman, In re, Capper, Ex parte, 4 Ch. D. 724; 46 L. J., Bk. 57; 35 L. T. 718; 25 W. R. 244—C. A. Reversing, 46 L. J., Bk. 6; 35 L. T. 558; 25 W. R. 100.

— Covenant to Assign after-acquired Chattels.—A debtor by a bill of sale assigned for value to a creditor certain specified chattels at his place of business, "and all other chattels which might be or at any time thereafter be brought thereon in addition to or in substitution thereof." The debtor became bankrupt, and after his order of discharge brought other chattels upon the premises. The creditor did not prove for his debt in the bankruptcy:—Held, that the assignment of the after-acquired chattels, although absolute in form, amounted merely to a contract to assign, for the breach of which the assignor incurred a liability provable in his bankruptcy, and from which he was released by the order of discharge. Whether the same rule applies to a covenant in a marriage settlement to settle future property, quære. Collyer v. Isaacs, 19 Ch. D. 342; 51 L. J., Ch. 14; 45 L. T. 567; 30 W. R. 70—C. A.

When Proof to be made—Second Proof in Absence of Fraud after Release of Trustee.—The lessee of a house and premises, having filed a liquidation petition early in August, 1881, the trustee on the 24th November following disclaimed the lease. The lessor tendered a proof on the 14th December in respect of rent and dilapidations for 117l. 14s. 4d., which was admitted, and also claimed unliquidated damages sustained by reason of the disclaimer, but named no amount. At a meeting of the creditors held on the 6th January, 1882, a dividend of 1s. 6d. in the pound was declared payable on the 20th, and at the same meeting a resolution was passed to release the trustee as from that day. The lessor on the 4th March sent in a second proof for 309l. 7s. 6d., in respect of unliquidated damages, and claimed to be paid the dividend thereon:—Held, that in the absence of fraud the remedy of the lessor was by an action at law outside the bankruptcy, inasmuch as if any default had been made by the trustee, his liability for such default had been discharged by the release, and no fraud was alleged against him. Barnard, Ex parte, Gill, In re, 46 L. T. 824.

Semble, a creditor, who with full knowledge of his rights neglects to assert them until after the estate has been fully administered and the trustee released, comes too late to prove for unliquidated damages and claim a dividend thereon. Id.

Liquidated Damages in respect of Contracts—Covenant to Insure.—Saw-mill proprietors, employed by a timber merchant to saw timber for him, agreed to keep it insured from damage by fire, and to pay him the value of it if it should be burned. A fire having taken place, the timber was burned, and its quantity and quality were not in dispute, but the price had not been agreed upon before the sawyers became bankrupt:—Held, that the value of the timber constituted a provable debt. Bateman, Ex parte, 8 De G., Mac. & G. 263; 25 L. J., Bk. 19; 2 Jur., N. S. 265; S. P., Harrison, Ex parte, 26 L. J., Bk. 30; 3 Jur., N. S. 228—L. J.

Amount Determinable without a Jury.—Where a creditor has a debt which is capable of being ascertained without the intervention of a jury, and the debtor becomes a bankrupt, it may be proved under the commission. Utterson v. Vernon, 3 T. R. 539.

Promissory Notes given to compromise Action of Tort.—Proof was allowed on promissory notes given for liquidated damages by compromise of an action for seduction per quod servitium amisit. Mumford, Ex parte, 15 Ves. 289.

Unliquidated Damages in respect of Torts—Trove or Assumpsit—Election.—Bankruptcy is no bar to an action of trove, though the conversion happened before the bankruptcy; and where a plaintiff has an election to bring trove or assumpsit, he may bring the former, though the bankruptcy would be a bar to the latter. Parker v. Norton, 6 T. R. 695.

Fraud.—In a case of fraud by a bankrupt, a party is not bound to prove his debt under the commission, but he may waive the contract, and sue for the tort. Parker v. Crole, 2 M. & P. 150; 5 Bing. 63.

Misrepresentation.—To a declaration alleging that the defendant had been guilty of a fraudulent misrepresentation, whereby the plaintiff had been induced to advance 2,000*l.*, and thereby sustained loss, and was made bankrupt, and suffered inconvenience, and was injured in character, a plea that the loss was pecuniary, and that the bankruptcy was after the accruing of the cause of action, covers the whole cause of action. Hodgson v. Sidney, 1 L. R., Ex. 313; 35 L. J., Ex. 182; 12 Jur., N. S. 694; 14 L. T. 624; 14 W. R. 923.

Selling contrary to Orders.—Bankruptcy and certificate are no bar to an action in tort against a broker for selling out stock contrary to orders. Ib.

If the owner of bank stock gives to a stock-broker a power of attorney to sell, with orders not to sell without directions, and the broker sells the stock without the knowledge of the owner, and conceals the sale till a commission issues against him, his certificate is not a bar to an action in tort. Ib.

Company—Promoter—Secret Agreement.—Under a secret agreement between the vendors of a mine and G., a financial agent, who was promoting and afterwards formed a company for its purchase, G. received from the vendors part of the purchase-money without the knowledge of the company. In an action by the company to make G. liable for the amount of the secret profit he had so made, a specific sum was found due from him to the company upon that footing. G. then presented a petition for liquidation, and his creditors passed a resolution for liquidation of his affairs by arrangement; a trustee was appointed of his estate, and he obtained his certificate of discharge:—Held, that the company were to be at liberty to go in and prove against G.'s estate as creditors for the sum found due from him in the action, it not being a "demand in the nature of unliquidated damages arising otherwise than by reason of a contract." Emma Silver Mining Company v. Grant, 17 Ch. D. 122; 50 L. J., Ch. 440; 29 W. R. 481.

Held, also, that the debt so due from G. was incurred by "fraud" and also "breach of trust" within s. 49 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and that, accordingly, G. was not released from such debt by his discharge; and he was thereupon ordered personally to pay the debt to the company, or so much thereof as should not be received by the company under the liquidation. Ib.

Infringement of Patent—Account of Profits.—Where a patentee is entitled to recover the amount of profits made by infringing his patent, the amount of those profits is not recoverable in the nature of damages, but as money had and received to his use; and he is therefore not prevented by the 31st section of the Bankruptcy Act of 1869 from proving in the bankruptcy of the infringer for the amount of those profits. Watson v. Holliday, 52 L. J., Ch. 543; 48 L. T.

545; 31 W. R. 536—C. A. Affirming, 20 Ch. D. 780; 51 L. J., Ch. 906; 46 L. T. 878; 30 W. R. 747.

14. GUARANTEES.

Under old Law.—A claim, under a guarantee, for a sum certain when due is provable as a debt, and before it is due it is provable as a debt due on a contingency under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 56. Willis, In re, 4 Ex. 530; 19 L. J., Ex. 30; 13 Jur. 1032.

A. & Co. wrote a letter to B. in the following terms:—"We hereby become bound to guarantee to you all current obligations and engagements in your hands to which C. may be a party, and all his future obligations and engagements that may come into your hands." After the date of this letter, B. discounted bills for C., and A. and Co. became bankrupt:—Held, that under this guarantee B. was entitled to prove against the estate of the bankrupts the debt incurred in respect of discounting the bills. Littlejohn, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 182; 12 L. J., Bk. 31; 7 Jur. 474.

Release of principal Debtor.—A. and B. gave a joint and several promissory note to C., A. being principal and B. surety. A. afterwards executed a deed of assignment for the benefit of his creditors, which deed contained a release by the creditors, without any reservation of their remedies against the sureties. C. executed this deed with the privity and approbation of B. and on the understanding that his remedies against B. were not to be prejudiced. C. and two others, who, with him, were trustees of the deed, were the only creditors who executed it; and A. was soon afterwards adjudged bankrupt, the execution of the deed being the act of bankruptcy. A few days after the execution of the deed, B. committed an act of bankruptcy, and was adjudged bankrupt:—Held, that C. was entitled to prove on the note against the estate of B. Harvey, Ex parte, 4 De G., Mac. & G. 881; 1 Bk. & Ins. R. 220; 23 L. J., Bk. 26.

Bond not Forfeited before Bankruptcy of Surety.—If a bond by a principal and surety has not been forfeited before the bankruptcy of the surety, the debt is not barred by the certificate. Alsop v. Price, 1 Dong. 160.

Bond, when Forfeited.—A bond executed by the defendant, as surety for J., March 1st, 1832, was conditioned for payment of 5*l.* interest on a principal sum of 200*l.*, on the 1st March, 1833; 5*l.* on the 1st March, 1834, and 205*l.* on the 1st March, 1835. The first year's interest was not paid till March 30th, 1833. In June, 1833, the defendant became bankrupt:—Held, that the bond had been forfeited, and was therefore provable under his commission, and consequently that his certificate was a bar to the action. Skinners' Company v. Jones, 3 Bing. N. C. 481; 4 Scott, 271.

A. B. in consideration of one per cent., guaranteed to C. D. & Sons the payment of one half of the price of certain bales of wool purchased by W. & E., who had given their acceptance at eight months for the full amount to C. D. & Sons. W. & E. and A. B. severally became bankrupt. A. B. had not obtained his certificate, and no dividend had been declared when the bill was dishonoured. A proof by C. D. against the estate of A. B. for the amount guaranteed, was allowed. Crook, Ex parte, 17 L. J., Bk. 8; 12 Jur. 411.

A liability as surety in a bastardy bond is not discharged by the surety's bankruptcy and certificate. St. Martin (Overseers) v. Warren, 1 B. & A. 491; 2 Stark. 188.

15. INTEREST ON DEBTS.

Interest Stops at Date of Fiat.]—Interest on a debt stops at the date of the fiat; and a creditor cannot apply his security in the first place in payment of subsequent interest and then prove for his debt, which he otherwise might, namely, his original debt and interest up to the date of the fiat; but must, in the absence of a contract entitling him thereto, apply the security in reduction of the provable debt. Pollard, Ex parte, 4 Jur. 1018.

Bond—Interest up to Amount of Penalty.]—Where proof is in respect of a debt secured by a bond, the rule is, that a specialty creditor cannot have interest beyond the penalty contained in his security, but up to the penalty of the bond he will be entitled to interest at the rate secured by the bond. Day, Ex parte, 9 L. T. 350.

For interest beyond the penalty he may come in with creditors whose debts do not carry interest. Ib.

Purchase-money Chargeable on Property Bought.]—If, upon the sale of an estate, the vendor covenants that on payment of the purchase-money he will grant, sell and convey, and the vendee covenants to pay the purchase-money on or before a day certain, or whenever a good title should be tendered to him; and it is agreed that the vendee, on or before the day named for payment, may require the purchase-money to remain a charge upon the premises, so that, upon the completion of the conveyance by the vendor, the vendee should execute to him a proper mortgage, for securing the purchase-money, with interest; but if the interest should be in arrear for thirty days, the vendee should be considered as a tenant to the vendor, from the date thereof, at a yearly rent, with power to the vendor to distrain as for rent reserved by lease, to the end that the interest and costs should be fully satisfied; and the vendee requires the purchase-money to remain charge, and he is let into possession, and receives the rents; and the vendee becomes bankrupt and, half a year's interest being in arrear for more than thirty days, the vendor distrains on the tenants, and the assignees satisfy the distress; and the vendee obtains his certificate, and the vendor brings an action against the bankrupt, to recover interest accrued subsequently to the certificate; the certificate is a bar, as the claim for interest was provable. Hope v. Booth, 1 B. & Ad. 498.

Equitable Mortgage.]—The language of the orders of the Court of Bankruptcy must be construed with reference to the settled rules of the court; and it being the settled practice of the court, that where a security consists of an equitable mortgage, and the mortgagee after a bankruptcy presents a petition for the realization of the security, he is not entitled to any interest subsequent to the date of the fiat:—Held, that where securities by way of equitable mortgage comprised joint property of bankrupt partners, separate property of one partner, and property of a stranger, and the mortgagees being joint and separate creditors elected to prove against the separate estates, an order made on their petition and directing an account of principal and interest due to them without express limitation of the calculation of the interest to interest due at the date of the fiat, did not entitle them to a calculation of, or to retain out of the proceeds of the securities, interest subsequent to the date of the fiat. Lubbock, Ex parte, Flood, In re, 4 De G., J. & S. 516; 32 L. J., Bk. 58; 9 Jur., N. S. 854; 8 L. T. 474.

Loan Repayable by fixed Sums for both Principal and Interest.]—A loan society advanced 250l. to B. upon terms of his paying to the society 550l. in respect of the loan and interest by monthly instalments. B. having paid several instalments to a considerable amount filed his petition. At the first meeting the society claimed to prove for 313l. 10s. 6d. as the balance due to them:—Held, that the society was entitled to prove for the full amount claimed upon the ground that the original debt was a certain sum of 550l., and consequently did not come within the rule, by which all interest is made to cease at the date of the bankruptcy. Cockburn, Ex parte, Lundy, In re, 39 L. T. 362—C. A.

Mortgage to Building Society—Principal and Interest payable by Monthly Instalments.]—A mortgage to a building society provided that the loan, with a premium and interest on the advance, should be paid in equal monthly instalments during a term of twelve years, and that each monthly instalment, when paid, should be applied (1) in payment of the interest due at the time of payment; (2) in payment of the premium till the whole should be discharged; and (3) in payment of the principal. Two years after the execution of the mortgage, the mortgagor filed a liquidation petition, and the society claimed to prove in the liquidation for the total amount of the monthly instalments which remained due under the deed, less the amount at which they valued their security:—Held, that, as to so much of the sum claimed as represented interest payable subsequently to the filing of the liquidation petition, the proof must be rejected. Bath, Ex parte, Phillips, In re, 22 Ch. D. 450; 48 L. T. 293; 31 W. R. 281—C. A.

Inspectorship Deed under Act of 1861—Appropriation of ascertained Value of Securities.]—A debtor executed an inspectorship deed under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861. A judge in Chancery ascertained the value of the securities held by the secured creditors, which value the creditors were to take in discharge of their debts, and to be allowed to prove for the deficiency:—Held, that the rule in bankruptcy prevailed, and that the value so ascertained must go in reduction of the principal and interest due to the secured creditors at the date of the inspectorship deed, and to be proved for by the creditors, and could not be applied by the creditors in the first place towards payment of interest accrued on their debts since the date of the inspectorship. Sewis, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 760; 42 L. J., Bk. 14; 27 L. T. 466; 20 W. R. 1027.

Proof by Bill Brokers for Interest on Amount paid under Guarantee.]—It being proved to be the common and almost invariable practice of bill brokers in the city of London not to indorse each bill of exchange which they have discounted for a customer when they re-discount it with their bankers, but to give to the bankers a general guarantee for all bills which they re-discount with them :—Held, that when an accommodation bill is drawn and accepted for the purpose of raising money for the drawer and the acceptor, the drawer in discounting the bill with bill brokers in the city of London has an implied authority from the acceptor to deal with them in the ordinary course of their business, and, consequently, that the bill brokers have an implied authority from the acceptor to make themselves liable on the bill under their guarantee to their bankers, and are, in the event of the bankruptcy of the acceptor, entitled to prove against his estate for what they have paid to the bankers in respect of the bill under their guarantee, and are also entitled to prove against the estate of the acceptor for interest upon the amount which they have paid under their guarantee. Bishop, Ex parte, Fox, In re, 15 Ch. D. 400; 50 L. J., Ch. 18; 43 L. T. 165; 29 W. R. 144—C. A.

In Case of Surplus.]—Interest, in case of a surplus, is to be calculated on the whole debt up to the first dividend, then upon the principal money unpaid, after deducting the amount of the dividend, up to the second dividend, and so on. Haynes, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 123.

Effect of Receipt.]—Interest out of a surplus is given to a judgment creditor, from the date of the commission to the time when the principal sums were paid, notwithstanding the securities were at the time delivered up to the assignees, with receipts in full indorsed on them, the creditors apprehending the estates would not produce a surplus, which proved to be a mistake. Day, Ex parte, 2 Rose, 148.

Surety.]—A surety, paying after bankruptcy to a creditor who has proved, can only stand in his place, upon the bankrupt's estate; and, in case of a surplus, can claim no interest which the creditor could not have claimed. Houston, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 36.

Partners.]—A separate creditor is not entitled to interest from the surplus, until joint creditors have been paid in full. Minchin, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 287; S. P., Clarke, Ex parte, 4 Vea. 677.

When there is a surplus upon an estate of three, which is indebted to two, the creditors of the three are entitled to interest before the surplus is carried to the estate of the two. Ogle, Ex parte, 1 Mont. 350.

16. JUDGMENTS, ORDERS, AND DECREES.

Power to impeach Verdict.]—A verdict is only prima facie evidence of a debt, which the creditors or the bankrupt are at liberty to impeach, and into the circumstances of which, if impeached, the commissioners are bound to inquire. Butterfield, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 198.

Power of Court to go behind Judgment.]—The Court of Bankruptcy will go behind a judgment or a compromise, and refuse to admit a proof founded upon it, if it can see that the original claim was not a bona fide one, but was made for purposes of extortion, the claimant knowing that he had no legal claim, but being aware of circumstances affecting the character of the defendant which would prevent the latter from submitting to a cross-examination. Banner, Ex parte, Blyth, In re, 17 Ch. D. 480; 44 L. T. 908; 30 W. R. 24—C. A.

A plaintiff recovered judgment by default, the defendant having at the time an equitable defence to the action, upon which the Court of Chancery, upon an application, would have granted an injunction to restrain the action. The defendant having afterwards become bankrupt :—Held, that the jurisdiction in bankruptcy, being both legal and equitable, the court would not admit a proof tendered by the plaintiff upon the judgment. Mudie, Ex parte, 6 Jur. 1093.

A debtor, in failing circumstances, for his own purposes, caused judgment to be entered up against himself upon a warrant of attorney executed by him in favour of a creditor, who was ignorant both of the execution of the warrant of attorney and of the judgment being entered up until long afterwards. Upon the bankruptcy of the debtor :—Held, that the creditor was not entitled to prove in respect of the judgment for the purpose of avoiding his debts being barred by the Statute of Limitations. Rorie, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 631; 6 Jur. 897.

Value in Detinue.]—When a verdict in an action has been obtained for 100*l.* in default of delivery of a chattel to the plaintiff, he cannot, before issuing execution, be considered as a creditor of the defendant for the 100*l.* Scarth, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 234; 44 L. J., Bk. 29; 31 L. T. 73; 23 W. R. 153.

Damages against Co-Respondent.]—Damages awarded in the Divorce Court by the verdict of a jury against a co-respondent are provable as a debt within the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 31. Langridge, Ex parte, Graham, In re, 19 W. R. 951. See also Muirhead, Ex parte, 2 Ch. D. 22; 45 L. J., Bk. 65; 33 L. T. 303; 24 W. R. 351—C. A.

Alimony.]—A wife may not prove against her husband's estate for arrears of alimony payable to her under an order of the Divorce Court. Rice, Ex parte, 10 L. T. 103; S. P., Dickens v. Dickens, 31 L. J., Mat. Cas. 183.

Interlocutory Costs.]—Interlocutory costs payable under an order of Nisi Prius, by a defendant previous to his bankruptcy, are provable, and therefore the certificate is a discharge from them, although an attachment has been obtained before the certificate is allowed. Jacobs v. Phillips, 2 D. P. C. 716; 1 C., M. & R. 195; 7 Tyr. 652.

Costs—Rule of Courts.]—A defendant compromised an action for libel, by agreeing to apologize, and pay the plaintiff's costs. The apology was made, and a rule of court obtained, ordering the defendant to pay the costs. On default made, an attachment issued, and he was committed. While in custody he became bankrupt, and obtained his certificate :—Held, that the sum named in the rule of court was a debt which might have been proved under the commission, and that the bankrupt was entitled to be discharged out of custody. Riley v. Byrne, 2 B. & Ad. 779.

— Judge's Order.—A plaintiff in an action obtained a judge's order for payment of the debt and costs on a particular day, in default of which he was to be at liberty to sign judgment; but the defendant not being able to pay the debt at the time specified, the plaintiff extended the time of payment, before the expiration of which the defendant became bankrupt, and the costs were not taxed until after his bankruptcy:—Held, that the plaintiff could prove for the amount of the taxed costs, as well as for the principal sum. Ferris, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 746; 6 Jur. 1070.

Judgment before Bankruptcy.—Where a bill of exchange was dishonoured by the acceptor, and actions were brought by the holder against the drawer as well as the acceptor, and the former became bankrupt after judgment signed and a reference to the master to see what was due and to tax costs, and afterwards the acceptor paid the amount due on the bill:—Held, that the holder could prove for the costs. Cocks, Ex parte, De Gex, 466; 11 Jur. 270.

— Unregistered Judgment—Promise not to Register—Nudum pactum.—Two creditors had entered up judgment against a trader on a warrant of attorney, but had not registered it according to 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110. They attended a meeting for investigating the affairs of the trader, and were there informed by a solicitor, who attended on behalf of the general creditors, that he had in his pocket the means of preventing them from obtaining any preference. The solicitor had with him at the time a declaration of insolvency which he had previously obtained from the trader. Having made this statement, he inquired (as he deposed) of the judgment creditors whether they intended to seek any preference by means of their judgment, and received an answer from them in the negative, but he purposely abstained from mentioning registration. On the investigation taking place, it had appeared that the trader had freehold property of considerable value, and the further investigation was adjourned to an appointed day. The solicitor forebore to file the declaration of insolvency, but the judgment creditors registered their judgment a few days after that of the meeting. On the trader becoming bankrupt some months afterwards:—Held, that the judgment creditors had not precluded themselves from registering their judgment, and that the promise made by them (if any) was nudum pactum, and one into which they had been drawn, and not a representation acted upon by another party by which they were equitably bound. Boyle, Ex parte, 3 De G., Mac. & G. 515; 22 L. J., Bk. 78; 17 Jur. 979.

Verdict before and Judgment after Bankruptcy.—A judgment for damages and costs in assumpsit, was a debt contracted within 46 Geo. 3, c. 135, s. 2, and provable, though final judgment was not entered up until after the commission issued. Birch, Ex parte, 7 D. & R. 436; 4 B. & C. 880.

Where in an action upon a contract, the verdict is before, and the judgment after the bankruptcy, the costs are provable. Poucher, Ex parte, 1 Glyn & J. 385.

— Costs in Action for Tort.—But not where, in an action of tort for words of the plaintiff in his trade, the defendant became bankrupt between verdict and judgment. Longford v. Ellis, 1 H. Bl. 29, n.

— Costs.—A creditor who obtains a verdict before commission against a bankrupt, is entitled to prove for his costs, as well as his debt, under the commission, though judgment was not signed till after the commission issued. Aylett v. Harford, 2 W. Bl. 1317.

— Bankruptcy of Plaintiff.—A defendant's costs, where although the verdict is given before, the judgment is not obtained until after the plaintiff has become bankrupt, are not provable under such bankruptcy. Oxlade v. North-Eastern Railway Company, 33 L. J., C. P. 171.

— Judgment after Act of Bankruptcy and before Commission.—Where a verdict is obtained before the act of bankruptcy, and final judgment signed afterwards, but before the issuing of a commission, the debt is provable. Robinson v. Vale, 4 D. & R. 430; 2 B. & C. 762.

— Action of Tort—Award.—In an action for damages for a tort, a verdict was taken, subject to the award of an arbitrator, and the defendant became bankrupt between the verdict and the award:—Held, that execution could not be issued on the judgment, either for the damages or costs; because the plaintiff might, under the commission, have proved the damages recovered by the production of the record. Beeston v. White, 7 Price, 209.

— Award—Costs.—Where a cause and all matters in difference were referred at Nisi Prius to an arbitrator, and he found that a sum of money was due from the plaintiff to the defendant, and ordered that sum to be paid to the latter; and between the time of making the order of reference and taxing costs, and signing judgment, the plaintiff became bankrupt:—Held, that the amount of the taxed costs did not constitute a debt provable under the commission, that he was not discharged as to that debt by his certificate. Haswell v. Thorngood, 7 B. & C. 705.

In an action to recover the balance upon an account current, a verdict for the plaintiff was taken by consent, subject to a reference to an arbitrator, who was empowered to direct that a verdict should be entered for the plaintiff or the defendant, and the costs were to abide the result of the award. After the award, which was in favour of the plaintiff, and before judgment, the defendant committed an act of bankruptcy, of which notice was given to the plaintiff in the action, but judgment was nevertheless entered up upon the award. On the defendant being adjudicated a bankrupt:—Held, that the amount for which judgment was entered up, with interest and costs, constituted a provable debt. Harding, Ex parte, 5 De G., Mac. & G. 367.

A. brought an action against B. for the balance of an account current. A verdict was taken by consent for 100,000*l.*, subject to a reference to an arbitrator, who was to have power to direct a verdict to be entered for either party. After six years the arbitrator made an award in A.'s favour for 11,000*l*. Four days after the award was made, and before judgment had been signed and costs taxed, B. committed an act of bankruptcy, and gave notice of it to A. A. caused judgment to be entered up. B. was adjudged bankrupt, and A. claimed to prove for the sum awarded, with interest and costs:—Held, that A. was entitled to prove for the debt, interest and costs, as a liquidated sum, though judgment had not been signed until after notice of the act of bankruptcy; for that the award must not only be referred to and considered as standing in place of the verdict, but as something more, and therefore as establishing a provable debt, until it was shewn that it could be set aside at law. Thorntwaite, Ex parte, 1 Bank. & Ins. R. 254; 23 L. J., Bk. 22; 18 Jur. 760.

Damages in Actions of Tort.—Damages recovered in an action of tort are not, under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 31, provable in the bankruptcy of the defendant, unless judgment is signed before the adjudication. Newman, In re, Brooke, Ex parte, 3 Ch. D. 494; 25 W. R. 261—C. A.

If judgment is not signed till after the adjudication, even though the verdict was obtained before, the bankrupt is not discharged from the liability. Id.

Nonsuit—Plaintiff Bankrupt.—If a plaintiff becomes a bankrupt after he is nonsuited, and before the taxation of costs, the costs of the nonsuit are a debt provable under the commission. Hurst v. Mead, 5 T. R. 365.

So, if he becomes bankrupt before judgment of nonsuit signed. Watts v. Hart, 1 B. & P. 134.

Costs not Taxed at Date of Adjudication.—A claim for costs is a debt provable under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 31, although the costs may not have been taxed at the date of the adjudication. Peacock, Ex parte, Duffield, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 628; 42 L. J., Bk. 78; 28 L. T. 830; 21 W. R. 755.

Both Verdict and Judgment after Bankruptcy.—If the verdict, as well as the judgment, is after the bankruptcy, the costs are not provable. Pouchier, Ex parte, 1 Glyn & J. 385.

Where a debt arises before bankruptcy, but a verdict is obtained and costs taxed after, the costs are considered as part of the original debt, and the certificate extends to both, because both are provable. Lewis v. Piercy, 1 H. B. 29.

Where a defendant became bankrupt between plea and verdict, in an action on a bail-bond, and obtained his certificate after final judgment:—Held, that the debt should have been proved, and that the certificate was a discharge from both debt and costs. Dimsdale v. Eames, 4 Moore, 350; 2 B. & B. 8.

Ejectment—Action for Mesne Profits.—Where, after a recovery in ejectment, and before an action for mesne profits, the defendant became bankrupt, and the jury did not include the costs of the ejectment in their verdict on executing a writ of inquiry in the action for mesne profits, the court refused to set aside the inquisition, because the plaintiff might have proved the costs as a debt under the defendant's commission of bankruptcy. Gulliver v. Drinkwater, 2 T. R. 261.

Divorce—Wife's Costs of abandoned Suit.—C., having instituted a suit in the Ecclesiastical Court against his wife for a divorce, upon the ground of adultery, subsequently became bankrupt, and abandoned the suit:—Held, that the costs incurred up to the bankruptcy by the wife's proctor constituted a debt provable on C.'s separate estate. Moore, Ex parte, 1 De Gex, 173; 14 L. J., Bk. 19; 9 Jur. 604.

Practice on Proof.—A judgment and execution creditor who abandons his judgment and execution, claiming only to prove as for a simple contract debt, need not produce, for the purposes of proof, an office copy of the judgment. Spiller, Ex parte, 5 Jur. 659.

Where a plaintiff proves after judgment for his debt, under proceedings in bankruptcy against the defendant, it is unnecessary to enter a suggestion of such proof upon the roll. Sainter v. Ferguson, 7 D. & L. 301; 8 C. B. 619.

17. LEASES DISCLAIMED BY TRUSTEE.

By Landlord.—Where the trustee disclaims an onerous agreement to take a lease for a term of years which the bankrupt had entered into, the landlord is entitled to prove against the estate for the present value of the difference between the letting value of the premises and the rent payable under the agreement. Lynri Coal and Iron Company, Ex parte, Hyde, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 28; 41 L. J., Bk. 5; 25 L. T. 609; 20 W. R. 105.

— Damages on Disclaimer of Lease for determinable Term.—A lease of a house for twenty-one years, at a rent of 130*l*. a year, was determinable by the lessee at the end of the first seven or fourteen years of the term on his giving six months' previous notice in writing to the lessor, and paying the rent and performing the covenants up to the day of the term being determined. Near the end of the sixth year of the term the lessee filed a liquidation petition. The trustee in the liquidation disclaimed the lease. There was evidence that the house could only be let at a diminished rent:—Held, that the lessor was entitled to prove in the liquidation for the diminution in the rent up to the end of the seventh year of the term, and the amount necessary to put the house in repair. Blake, Ex parte, McEwan, In re, 11 Ch. D. 572; 40 L. T. 859; 27 W. R. 901—C. A.

— Lease of Partnership Premises to Partners as Joint Tenants—Joint and Several Covenant to pay Rent.—When the trustee in bankruptcy of partners disclaims a lease of premises used by the partners for partnership purposes, but which was granted to the partners as joint tenants, they entering into a joint and several covenant to pay the rent, s. 23 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, gives the lessor a right to prove against the separate estate of each partner for the injury caused to him by the disclaimer. Corbett, Ex parte, Shand, In re, 14 Ch. D. 122; 49 L. J., Bk. 74; 42 L. T. 164; 28 W. R. 569—C. A.

— On Covenants in Lease.—By a covenant in the lease the landlord agreed, at the end or other the sooner determination of the term, to pay and allow to the tenant for (inter alia) the hay and straw grown in the last year, which should be left for the incoming tenant, at a feed price. Certain other farming covenants in the lease had been admittedly broken by the tenant:—Held, that, by reason of the operation of the disclaimer by the trustee, the lease must be considered as at an end for all purposes; and that therefore the landlord must pay for the hay and straw at the market price:—Held, also, that the landlord could not be entitled to damages in respect of breaches of the covenants in the lease. Dyke, Ex parte Morrish, In re, 22 Ch. D. 410; 52 L. J., Ch. 570; 48 L. T. 903; 31 W. R. 278—C. A. Affirming, 47 L. T. 26; 30 W. R. 952.

By Under-Lessee.—If the underlease is made at a rent less than the rent reserved by the original lease, the under-lessee is, after the disclaimer, entitled to prove in the bankruptcy for the value of the difference between the two rents. Walton, Ex parte Levy, In re, 17 Ch. D. 746; 50 L. J., Ch. 657; 45 L. T. 1; 30 W. R. 395—C. A.

18. PAROCHIAL RATES.

One year's parochial rates due at the date of the bankruptcy may be paid in full. Saberton, In re, 9 L. T. 267.

A sum assessed by way of poor rate was a claim or demand provable under a commission of bankruptcy under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 122, s. 7; and a certificate was, therefore, a bar to any subsequent proceedings under 43 Eliz. c. 2, to levy the amount by distress and sale of the bankrupt's goods. Burwash, Ex parte, 1 L. M. & P. 60; 19 L. J. M. C. 115.

19. PERIODICAL PAYMENTS.

Before 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134.—Bankruptcy during the currency of a quarter and subsequent certificate were no bar to an action by a schoolmaster for board and tuition of the bankrupt's son under a quarterly contract, the demand not being a debt not payable at the time of the bankruptcy within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 172, or a liability to pay money upon a contingency, within s. 178. Hopkins v. Thomas, 7 C. B., N. S. 711; 29 L. J., C. P. 187; 6 Jur., N. S. 301; 8 W. R. 262.

School money for the education of a son, payable half-yearly, is not a debt due until the end of the half-year, so as to be provable under a commission against the parent who becomes bankrupt a few days before the end of the half-year, though he had, just before his bankruptcy, taken his son home for the holidays, the contract not being thereby put an end to; and consequently the bankrupt's certificate was no bar to an action for the half-year's education. Parslow v. Dearlove, 4 East, 438; 1 Smith, 281; 3 Esp. 78.

Bankruptcy is not a discharge of a promise to allow a weekly sum for the support of an illegitimate child; but if any arrears accrued before the bankruptcy, the certificate will be a discharge as to such arrears. Millen v. Whittenbury, 1 Camp. 428.

20. PREMIUMS UPON POLICIES OF INSURANCE.

Before 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134.—A trader covenanted by an ante-nuptial settlement to pay the premiums on certain assigned policies on his life; or, if he failed to do so, to repay to the trustees the amount which they should pay in respect of the premiums. On his becoming bankrupt:—Held, that the trustees could not prove for the amount required by the offices to be paid to keep up the policies during the remainder of his life. Whitmore, In re, 3 De G. & S. 565; 13 Jur. 185, n.

A. being indebted to B. assigned to him a policy on his life, and covenanted to pay the annual premiums, and in case he did not, and B. should pay them, he would repay him the amount with interest, on demand. A. afterwards became bankrupt and obtained his certificate. A premium accruing due after the bankruptcy, and being unpaid by A., and B. having paid it, and not being repaid:—Held, that A. was not discharged, by virtue of 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, ss. 178, 200, from liability for the breach of the first of these covenants, but that he was discharged quoad the breach of the second covenant. Yong v. Winter, 16 C. B. 401; 24 L. J., C. P. 214; 1 Jur., N. S. 960; S. P., Toppin v. Field, 4 Q. B. 386; 3 G. & D. 340; 12 L. J., Q. B. 148; 7 Jur. 257.

The defendant, being indebted to the plaintiff, assigned to him, as security, an insurance on the defendant's life, and an insurance on the life of his wife, and covenanted to pay the premiums. The plaintiff sued the defendant on this covenant, assigning as a breach that he had not paid the premiums. The defendant pleaded his bankruptcy and certificate, averring that they had occurred after the execution of the deed, but not that they had occurred after the breach had taken place:—Held, that the plea was no answer to the claim, the claim not being in respect of, nor a liability to pay the money upon, a contingency within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 178. Warburg v. Tucker, El. Bl. & El. 914; 28 L. J. Q. B. 56; 4 Jur., N. S. 1142—Ex. Ch. Affirming, 5 El. & Bl. 384; 24 L. J., Q. B. 317; 1 Jur., N. S. 871. S. P., Mitcalfe v. Hanson, 1 L. R., H. L. Cas. 242; 35 L. J., Q. B. 225.

Principal and Surety.—A surety, who has covenanted to pay premiums due on a policy of insurance in the event of his principal not doing so, cannot maintain an action against his principal for premiums paid after the principal has obtained his certificate under the above section. Saunders v. Best, 17 C. B., N. S. 731; 10 Jur., N. S. 1204; 11 L. T. 421; 13 W. R. 160.

21. RENT.

Under old Law.—Before the statute a certificate discharged a bankrupt from an action on the reddendum in a lease, whether the rent accrued due before or after the bankruptcy. Wadham v. Marlowe, 2 Chit. 600; 4 Dougl. 54; 1 H. Bl. 437, n.; 1 T. R. 91; 8 East, 314, n. And see Gill v. Scrivens, 7 T. R. 27.

But the bankruptcy of the lessee could not be pleaded in bar of an action of covenant for rent. Mills v. Auriol, 1 H. Bl. 433; 4 T. R. 94.

A parol lease was within 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 75.

Hopton, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 347; 5 Jur. 804.

Distress before Bankruptcy—Right to Retain.]

—A landlord levied a distress for rent, and, before he sold, the tenant was adjudicated bankrupt, and then the sale took place under the distress. The commissioner decided that the landlord was only entitled to retain one year's rent; but, on appeal,—Held, that the landlord was, under the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42 (the Statute of Limitations), entitled to six years' rent out of the proceeds of the sale. Bayly, Ex parte, 22 L. J., Bk. 26.

A landlord having distrained and levied for four years' rent on the 11th October, 1861, the tenant, a non-trader, was adjudicated a bankrupt on his own petition on the 17th October, 1861, under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, ss. 86, 87. In March, 1861, he had committed a previous act of bankruptcy, he being then a trader:—Held, that the landlord was entitled to the whole of the rent, and was not limited to one year's rent only by 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 129, for the act of bankruptcy mentioned therein means one to which the title of the assignees could relate, and that their title could not relate to the act of bankruptcy in March. Paull v. Best, 3 B. & S. 537; 32 L. J., Q. B. 96; 7 L. T. 738.

12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 129, does not affect Right to Distrain Goods of a Third Party.]—A.,

being tenant from year to year to B. of a mill, at the rent of 1,400*l.*, payable quarterly, assigned to C. the machinery and effects in the mill, by way of mortgage, to secure 14,900*l.*, with a power of entering and taking possession of the machinery and effects, and of selling the same in default of payment. In July, 1856, C. took possession of the machinery and effects, and afterwards A. became bankrupt. At the time of the bankruptcy 1,948*l.* was due from A. to B. for rent of the mill, including the quarter's rent due on the 16th July, 1856. After A. had become bankrupt, and while the machinery and effects remained in the possession of C., B. gave notice to C. that he intended to distrain for the 1,948*l.*; and C., for the purpose of preventing the distress, paid B. 1,306*l.* (the amount of one year's rent, deducting the property tax). On the 5th September, 1856, an order was made that the assignees of A. should elect to accept or decline the tenancy of the mill, and they declined it; but neither A. nor C., nor the assignees ever offered to surrender the possession of the mill to B., and C. continued in possession of the mill, machinery and effects until the same were sold:—Held, first, that 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 129, by which no distress for rent levied upon the goods or effects of any bankrupt shall be available for more than one year's rent, did not prevent B. from distraining for more than a year's rent due on the 16th July, 1856, as the machinery and effects had ceased to be the goods of the bankrupt, and the object of the section was to protect the property of the creditors. Brocklehurst v. Lowe, 7 El. & Bl. 176; 26 L. J., Q. B. 107; 3 Jur., N. S. 436.

Held, secondly, that the tenancy not having been put an end to on the 16th October, 1856, the machinery and effects were liable to be distrained for the quarter's rent then due. Ib.

Distress after Act of Bankruptcy—Protected Transaction.]—A landlord may distrain for rent after an act of bankruptcy; therefore, money paid to him by a bankrupt tenant to avoid a threatened distress, is a protected payment; and cannot be recovered back by the assignees. Stevenson v. Wood, 5 Esp. 200. And see Maror v. Croome, 8 Moore, 171; 2 Bing. 261.

Replevin—Retorno habendo—Action against Assignees.]—If goods are distrained for rent, and replevied by the tenant, and afterwards (the tenant becoming a bankrupt) they are sold by the assignees, the landlord succeeding in the replevin, and obtaining a retorno habendo, cannot recover the amount of the rent against the assignees as money had and received. Boddyll v. Jones, 4 Doug. 52.

Liability of Assignees.]—When a bankrupt holds under a lease, rendering rent, the assignees are not liable for rent becoming due after the bankruptcy, if they have never taken possession of the premises occupied by the bankrupt. Bowdillon v. Dalton, 1 Esp. 223; Peake, 238.

The assignees of a bankrupt having entered into the possession of land in the middle of a quarter, which the bankrupt had agreed to take upon a building lease, upon the terms of paying the rent half-yearly:—Held, that an action for use and occupation would lie against them for the whole year, though they had not occupied during all the time. Gibson v. Courthope, 1 D. & R. 205.

Paying out Distress on Property.]—A person who has paid off a distress on a bankrupt's property, and made other payments after adjudication whereby the estate is benefited, and the creditors have the advantage thereof, is entitled to be repaid the same before the creditors receive any dividend out of the estate. Kennard, Ex parte, Humphreys, In re, 21 L. T. 684.

22. STOCK CONTRACTS.

The amount due for damages for breach of a covenant to replace stock in a railway company on a given day is provable under the bankruptcy of the covenantor, as a demand within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 165. Beteley v. Stainby, 12 C. B., N. S. 477; 31 L. J., C. P. 307; 9 Jur., N. S. 440; 6 L. T. 893.

So, also, the amount of damages sustained by a breach of a covenant to indemnify against the payment of calls on mining shares assigned as security for the replacement of such stock. Ib.

But the discharge of an insolvent under the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, did not release him from a claim for unpaid damages for not redelivering mining shares, pursuant to a contract for that purpose. Owen v. Routh, 14 C. B. 327; 23 L. J., C. P. 105; 18 Jur. 356.

23. BY AND AGAINST PARTICULAR PERSONS.

a. Against Assignees of a Bankrupt.

Right of Creditor of original Bankrupt.]

—If an assignee who has received effects becomes bankrupt, a creditor under the commission in which he was assignee, but who proved his debt after the bankruptcy of the assignee, is not entitled to any proof under the assignee's commission. Stonehouse, Ex parte, Buck, 531.

At a dividend meeting under a commission against A., a claim was entered on behalf of B., and a sum ordered to be appropriated in the hands of C., the sole assignee, to answer eventually the amount of the several sums proved and claimed; but before the claim of B. was perfected into a proof, C. misapplied the money so placed in his hands, and became bankrupt:—Held, that B. was not entitled to recover from the estate of A. his proportion of the sum appropriated in the hands of C., and misapplied by him. Grant, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Mac. 77.

Co-Assignees of Bankrupt.]—Two of three assignees became bankrupt; the solvent assignee paid a debt due from the three to the estate:—Held, that he was entitled to prove a third of the debt against each of the other assignees' estates. Hunter, Ex parte, Buck, 552.

Two assignees, one solvent, the other a bankrupt with a partnership to which he had advanced money which he had as assignee, the solvent assignee cannot prove this under the joint commission, there being no contract with him. Apsay, Ex parte, 3 Bro. C. C. 265.

Assignee buying Bankrupt's Goods.]—An assignee having purchased goods at a sale under the commission, became bankrupt:—Ordered, that such of the goods that remained in specie should be redelivered, and that what he had resold should be proved as a debt. Spong, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 133.

b. By Bankrupt as Trustee for Others.

Not to receive Dividends.]—A bankrupt trustee allowed to prove, but not to receive trust dividends. Strettell, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Chit. 165.

The court ordered a bankrupt executor to prove against his own estate, and the assignees to pay the dividends into the hands of the accountant-general, to the credit of a cause pending for the administration of assets. Coleman, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & Chit. 584.

A bankrupt cannot be heard on a petition to prove, pro or con; and, if served, must be paid his costs of appearance. Fairman, Ex parte, 4 Mont. & Chit. 125.

An executor bankrupt cannot, without an order of the court, prove under his own commission, in respect of a debt due from him to the testator's estate. Shaw, Ex parte, 1 Glyn & J. 127.

Petition by an executor, who had become bankrupt, for liberty to prove a debt against his own estate, in the character of executor. Snowlton, Ex parte, 12 L. J., Bk. 37.

An executor and trustee having committed a devastavit, is precluded from proving under his bankruptcy. Moody, Ex parte, 2 Rose, 413.

Where a bankrupt is executor, and money of his testator comes to the hands of his assignees, he shall be admitted a creditor for that money; but the dividends shall be paid into the bank, for the use of the creditors of the deceased. Leeks, Ex parte, 2 Bro. C. C. 596.

Where a bankrupt and another are executors of a creditor of the bankrupt, the court will permit the other executor to prove the debt, though there is a suit depending in the ecclesiastical court as to the executorship. Shakeshaft, Ex parte, 3 Bro. C. C. 198.

One of three executors becoming bankrupt, the others may prove against his estate for a debt due to the testator. Brown, Ex parte, 1 Deac. & Chit. 119.

Where a trustee indebted to the trust becomes bankrupt, it is his duty to prove the debt; and if he neglects so to do, he is liable for the loss, notwithstanding his certificate. Orrett v. Corser, 21 Beav. 52.

c. Bankers.

Omission to Transfer from one Account to another—Set-off.]—Bankers stopped payment, being indebted to A., on his separate account, and creditors of A. & B., on their joint account. A. assigned the credit to A. & B., and gave notice to the bankers to transfer it accordingly, which they neglected to do. Afterwards the bankers committed an act of bankruptcy, and were declared bankrupts:—Held, that, in equity, A. and B. were not entitled to set off the two debts. Watts v. Christie, 11 Beav. 546; 18 L. J., Ch. 173; 13 Jur. 244, 845.

Shares lent to Bankers.]—Upon a loan of 28,000*l.* Cuba bonds by a customer to his bankers, the latter engaged to replace them at or within the expiration of three months, if he should require them to do so, and to deposit other securities for the performance of this engagement. After the expiration of the three months, without any requisition on the part of the customer, the customer consented to an exchange of other securities for those deposited by the bankers without any new stipulation as to the period of redemption, and the bankers afterwards became bankrupts:—Held, that the time for replacing the Cuba bonds became indefinite, and that the bankers were not bound to replace them until requested to do so; and that no such request having been made by the customer before their bankruptcy, the customer had no right to prove for the amount of the bonds under the fiat. Eyre, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 12; 1 Ph. 227; 12 L. J., Ch. 266; 7 Jur. 162.

Securities deposited with Bankers—Tortious Act of one Partner.]

—A customer deposited a box containing various securities with his bankers for safe custody, and afterwards granted a loan of a portion of such securities to one of the partners in the banking-house for his own private purposes, upon his depositing in the box railway shares to secure the replacing of the securities thus lent. This partner afterwards, for his own purposes, and without the knowledge of the customer, subtracted the railway shares, and substituted others of less value:—Held, that, as the proceeds of the railway shares were not applied to the use of the partnership, the banking firm was not answerable for this tortious act of their partner for his own benefit, and, consequently, that the customer had no right of proof against the joint estate for the amount of the difference between the value of the shares subtracted and those that were substituted. Id.

Held, also, that the partners were not chargeable with any loss occasioned by this subtraction of the shares, on the ground of negligence; and that even if they were, it would be a claim for unliquidated damages, and, therefore, not provable against the joint estate. Tb.

Payment in Full—Securities given to Banker for Collection.]—A customer, having at the time a balance in his favour at his bankers, indorsed generally a bill of exchange for 50*l.*, which he deposited with them, together with a cheque for 7*l.*, being at the time credited by 57*l.* in his account with the bank. He also sent to them a bank post bill for 48*l.* 9*s.* 10*d.* inclosed in a letter, directing them to place it to his account. Before the bill of exchange became due, a fiat issued against the bankers:—Held, that the customer was entitled to be paid in full the amount of the bill of exchange which had been received by the assignees under the fiat, on the bill becoming due; and that he was also entitled to the bank post bill, or to the amount thereof, if received. Atkins, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 103; 12 L. J., Bk. 28; 7 Jur. 95.

—Dealings between Banks.]—Customers draw cheques on their bankers, with whom their accounts are already overdrawn, and pay away the cheques, which come to the hands of other bankers. The second bankers remit to the first the cheques in a printed circular, desiring the amount of them to be paid to the London correspondents of the second bankers. Notwithstanding this circular, the custom between the bankers is to pay one another's cheques, so far as circumstances permit, by remittances of notes of the bankers sending the cheques directly to those bankers; the understanding being, however, that the cheques should be paid on the day on which they are received, or the day following, either by such remittances, or by remittances according to the directions of the circular. The first bankers give the second credit in their books for the amount of the cheques, but become bankrupt three days after receiving them, and without having made any payment or remittance in respect of them, knowing at the time of receiving the cheques that bankruptcy was inevitable. The assignees obtain payment from the customers of the full amount of the cheques:—Held, that the second bankers were entitled to payment in full of the same amount out of the bankrupt's estate. Cole, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 189.

Bankers or Trustees.]—A trustee permitted the trust fund, as the moneys were from time to time realized, to be paid into the hands of certain bankers, who had knowledge of the trusts. One of the partners, without the assent of the trustee, dealt with a portion of the fund, by investing it on mortgage:—Held, that the bankers were not jointly and separately liable in the character of trustees, but that they only incurred a liability as between banker and customer, and that, on the bankruptcy of the bankers, the trustee could only prove, against their joint estate, for such balance as was in their hands at the time of the bankruptcy. Burton, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 364.

Bankers Members of a Bankrupt Firm—Right to Prove.]—Two of the members of an iron company carried on a distinct trade as bankers, but were not the ordinary bankers of the company. They made advances, at interest, to the company for relieving it when it was in a state of deficiency and pressure, and without taking or asking for any security, and under such circumstances as to lead to the inference that the advances would not have been made had not the bankers been partners in the company. On the company becoming bankrupt, and there being no evidence, except such as was furnished by the transaction itself, that the character of a banking transaction belonged to it:—Held, that the advances, though made in fact by bankers, were not made by them in their character of bankers, and were not consequently dealings between trade and trade, giving a right of proof against the estate of the company, the use of the facilities afforded by a trade not being necessarily a use of them in the trade itself. Williams, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 433.

d. Creditors having Notice of Act of Bankruptcy.

A person having notice of facts from which a court or jury would infer that an act of bankruptcy had been committed, must be considered as having notice that an act of bankruptcy has been committed, notwithstanding his oath that he did not in fact draw the inference. Snowball, Ex parte, Douglas, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 534; 41 L. J., Bk. 49; 26 L. T. 894; 20 W. R. 786.

A creditor who receives notice of his debtor's intention to commit an act of bankruptcy is not bound to inquire whether the act has been committed, but is entitled to avail himself of his remedies just as if he had received no such notice. Wright, In re, Arnold, Ex parte, 3 Ch. D. 707; 45 L. J., Bk. 130; 35 L. T. 21; 24 W. R. 977—C. A.

A firm executed a bill of sale to A. of machinery, and covenanted to insure and keep it insured from loss by fire in some office to be approved of by A. during the continuance of the security, and in default with liberty to him to insure, and charge the premiums on his security. The insurance was effected in the names of the firm, and the machinery was afterwards destroyed by fire. On the day of the fire the firm assigned all their property to trustees for the benefit of their creditors. The assignment, which was intended to operate under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, was executed by the several partners and the trustees, but was destroyed before its execution by any creditor. A. gave notice of his claim to the insurance office, having previously had notice of the deed of assignment and of its destruction. The firm afterwards became bankrupt:—Held, that the benefit of the policy did not pass to A. under the covenant to insure, and that the execution of the assignment was an act of bankruptcy, and A., having had notice, could not claim against the assignees in bankruptcy. Lees v. Whiteley, 2 L. R., Eq. 143; 35 L. J., Ch. 412; 14 L. T. 472; 14 W. R., 534.

B. filed a petition for liquidation on the 19th of October, 1874. A composition was resolved upon, and G. guaranteed the payment of the third instalment. Default was made by B., and G. had to pay the third instalment. On the 14th of October, 1875, B. was adjudicated bankrupt. G. sent in a proof in the bankruptcy for the amount he had paid under his guarantee. The trustee rejected the proof on the ground that G. had had notice of an act of bankruptcy available for adjudication prior to the time when the debt had been contracted; but the registrar admitted the proof :—Held, that the words in s. 31, "notice of an act of bankruptcy available for adjudication," mean notice of an act of bankruptcy available for the making of the adjudication under which the proof was tendered. As the act of bankruptcy had been in this case committed more than six months prior to the adjudication, it was not so available, and the proof must be admitted. Bedell; In re, Crosbie, Ex parte, 7 Ch. D. 123; 47 L. J., Bk. 19; 37 L. T. 583; 26 W. R. 119—C. A.

In s. 31 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, which provides that "no person having notice of any act of bankruptcy available for adjudication against the bankrupt shall prove for any debt or liability contracted by him subsequently to the date of his so having notice," the words "available for adjudication" mean available for adjudication at the date of the order of adjudication. Id.

The words "notice of an act of bankruptcy available for adjudication," in ss. 31, 94, and 95 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, bear the same meaning, viz., notice of an act of bankruptcy available for the making of the adjudication under which the proof is tendered. Bedell, In re, Gilbey, Ex parte, 8 Ch. D. 248; 47 L. J., Bk. 49; 26 W. R. 768—C. A.

e. Infants.

By Infant Partner.—An infant paid, by means of borrowed money, a premium on entering into a partnership, and before he became of age disaffirmed the contract :—Held, that he could not have recovered back the premium had his partners remained solvent, and therefore he could not prove for it under their bankruptcy. Taylor, Ex parte, 8 De G., Mac. & G. 254; 25 L. J., Bk. 35; 2 Jur., N. S. 220.

Against Infant—Fraudulent Representation of Full Age.—Where an infant had obtained a loan on a representation, which he knew to be false, that he was of age :—Held, that a proof for the loan was properly admitted in bankruptcy. Unity Joint Stock Mutual Banking Association, Ex parte, King, In re, 3 De G. & J. 63; 27 L. J., Bk. 33; 4 Jur., N. S. 1257.

Where an ordinary proof had been at first admitted in such case, without the circumstances of the bankrupt's infancy and of the fraudulent representations having been adverted to :—Held, that the question ought not to be brought before the court in the first instance on appeal from an order expunging the proof. Id.

Mode of Proof.—The guardian of an infant may prove on his behalf. Maltby, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 387.

f. Legatees.

A pecuniary legatee is entitled to be paid in full out of a dividend payable on a proof made in respect of a devastavit committed by a bankrupt, who is executor and residuary legatee. Turner, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 613; 6 Jur. 840.

Executors paid the legacies bequeathed to infants to their father, who invested them on colonial securities, and made large profits and became bankrupt :—Held, that the legatees were entitled to have proof made upon the whole amount of the profits. Montefiore, Ex parte, De Gex, 171.

A feme covert, petitioning by her next friend, permitted to prove the value of a legacy of stock bequeathed to her separate use, but transferred into the name of her husband, who sold it out, and became bankrupt, and a trustee appointed to receive the dividends. Wells, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 504.

Where an executor under the will of a creditor of a bankrupt firm, declines to make proof against the estate, on the ground that he is ignorant of the circumstances under which the debt accrued, the court will allow proof by the residuary legatees under the will, subject to a direction for payment of the dividend to the executor. Caldwell, Ex parte, 13 W. R. 952.

g. By and against Partners.

i. Joint Estate and Separate Estate.

Joint.—C. entered into an agreement with R., that R. should buy and sell goods on behalf of C., and that the business should be carried on as R. and Co., R. being paid by a salary and a percentage on profits. The business was managed by R., but C. had bought goods for it. Each became bankrupt :—Held, that the book debts and stock-in-trade of R. and Co. were joint estate of the two. Rowland, In re, 1 L. R., Ch. 421.

Separate.—C. and M., who carried on business as ship chandlers, each applied in his own name for certain shares in a shipowner's company. Each paid the application and allotment money on the shares allotted to him, and the shares were registered in the names of the partners severally. Each partner drew upon the partnership funds for the payment of calls upon the shares, and the amounts so drawn were debited in the books of the firm to the individual partners, and opposite to these entries in the books of the firm each partner signed his initials in red ink. The dividends on the shares were, however, carried to the profit-and-loss account of the firm. The holding of ships or shares in shipowning companies formed no part of the business of the firm, but it appeared that the partners had purchased the shares under the impression that the possession of them would be the means of introducing custom and business to the partnership. C. became bankrupt and M. claimed the shares standing in C.'s name, as joint estate of the firm :—Held, that the entries in the books of the firm amounted to a statement in writing signed by the partners that the shares were to be separate and not joint estate, and that the mode of dealing with the dividends was not contradictory to that statement, inasmuch as the effect of it was the same as if the partners (who each held an equal number of the shares) had been separately credited with the dividends. Bolland, Ex parte, Clint, In re, 29 L. T. 625—L. J.

Joint Property ceasing to be such—Change of Members of Partnership.—A., B. & C. agreed to dissolve partnership, and that A. should receive 550*l.* in discharge of his share in the concern, of which the sum of 50*l.* was agreed to be paid at the date of the agreement, and the remaining 500*l.* by five bills payable at future dates. Separate fiats were subsequently issued against A., B. & C., and the stock and effects, which originally belonged to the firm of the three, were taken possession of and sold by the assignee under the separate fiat against B.:—Held, that the agreement of dissolution of the partnership was executed, and not executory; and that the joint creditors of A., B. & C. had no lien on such stock and effects for the payment of the debts owing to them at the time of A.'s retiring from the partnership. Clarkson, Ex parte, 4 Deac. & Chit. 56.

On a dissolution of partnership, the partnership stock and effects were assigned to the continuing partner on condition of his indemnifying the retiring partner against the debts of the firm. Three years afterwards the continuing partner became bankrupt:—Held, that a creditor on a joint guarantee given by the firm was entitled to prove against the separate estate of the bankrupt, the evidence adduced by the assignees of the existence of joint assets of the firm not being considered sufficiently clear. Burdakin, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 704; 6 Jur. 977.

A consignment was made by one firm to another through a third, who made an advance to the first on an agreement for a lien upon the return proceeds. The proceeds were accordingly remitted to them, but before their arrival the consignors had dissolved partnership, and separate fiats had issued against each of them. By the dissolution deed it was agreed, that a portion of the partnership credits should belong to and a portion of the partnership debts should be paid by one of the partners, to whom, in pursuance of this agreement, the assignee of the other partner transferred all his interest in the return proceeds:—Held, that this interest constituted a separate and not a joint estate. Birley, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 354.

Three partners, A., B. & C., dissolved their partnership, when C. executed a regular assignment of the partnership effects to A. & B., and notice of the dissolution appeared in the Gazette. A. & B. continued the business in the same firm until their bankruptcy, which was more than a twelvemonth after the dissolution and assignment:—Held, that a joint creditor of A. B. & C. could not prove against the estate of A. & B. Gurney, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 541; 13 L. J., Bk. 17; 6 Jur. 630.

A covenant by two continuing partners with a third, who had retired, to pay the debts of the partnership, gives no right of proof to the creditors of that partnership in competition with the creditors of the two, nor entitles them to any lien upon the partnership effects assigned to the two in consideration of such covenant. Id.

A. and B. agreed to dissolve their partnership from a particular day, and published a notice to that effect in the Gazette, stating that the debts due to and by the firm would be received and paid by A. No assignment was executed of the partnership effects, but they were left in the possession of A., who continued to carry on the business in the partnership firm. Four months after the dissolution, a joint fiat issued against A. and B.:—Held, that the partnership property was not converted into the separate property of A., but was distributable among the joint creditors of A. and B. Cooper, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 358; 5 Jur. 10.

Upon the dissolution of partnership between two persons, the former, who was the retiring partner, assigned all his interest in the partnership estate and effects to the latter, who, on his part, covenanted with the former to pay all the debts and liabilities of the partnership within twenty-four months from the time of the dissolution. Separate fiats having afterwards issued against them:—Held, that certain debts incurred to them, when in partnership, and which were outstanding at the time the fiats were issued, were the joint estate of the partnership, and as such distributable amongst their joint creditors. Hawtrey, Ex parte, 7 Jur. 71.

Soon after the commencement of a partnership between H. and W. it was discovered that H. had drawn a large sum from the account of the partnership at the bankers' and applied the money to his own purposes. Thereupon the partnership was dissolved, and H. assigned his share of the assets to W., in order that the money misappropriated might in the first place be restored, and the assets realized for the benefit of the two, according to their respective interests. After the dissolution both W. and H. became bankrupts:—Held, that the assignment by H. converted his former joint estate into the separate estate of W. Walker, Ex parte, 31 L. J., Bk. 29; 6 L. T. 631; 10 W. R. 655.

By a partnership deed it was stipulated that A. and B. should be partners in the profits of the business, the capital of which belonged to A.; and that on the death of A. the partnership should be dissolved, and B.'s share of profits should thenceforth belong to A.'s representatives, and that his representatives should thenceforth carry on the business, and that B. should receive from them his share of the profits up to A.'s death. A. died during the partnership, having appointed B. his executor. B. carried on the trade for fourteen months, and then filed a petition for liquidation. Part of the stock-in-trade which existed at A.'s death still remained in specie, but the greater part had been disposed of by B. in the course of the business, and fresh stock-in-trade bought by him:—Held, that the partnership deed had not the effect of converting the stock-in-trade into separate estate of A., but that so much of the present assets as had been in existence at A.'s death was applicable as joint estate to pay the joint creditors of the firm, and so much as had been bought since A.'s death was applicable as separate estate of B. Morley, Ex parte, White, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 1026; 43 L. J., Bk. 28; 29 L. T. 442; 21 W. R. 940.

D. carried on business in partnership for a term with W. and W. jun., under articles providing that D. should be a partner in the profits, but not in the capital, and should not be required to bring in any capital. After allowing interest at 5l. per cent. on the capital, which belonged solely to W., the net profits were to be divided half-yearly in certain shares. At the expiration of the term D.'s interest in the concern was to cease. If D. died during the term his representatives were to receive nothing more than a proportionate part of his share of the profits of the current half-year for the period up to his death, such proportionate part to be ascertained, not by a fresh stock-taking, but according to the average of the last two preceding half-yearly stock-takings. D. died. Afterwards W. died, and the business was carried on by W. jun., who was also executor of W., and who afterwards went into liquidation. There were at this time assets existing in specie which belonged to the business during the partnership between the three:—Held, that D.'s right to be indemnified out of the assets against the debts of the firm had not been taken away; that the assets remaining in specie were therefore primarily applicable to payment of the joint debts of D., W., and W. jun., and that those joint creditors, therefore, could not come against the separate estate of W. jun., till his separate creditors had been paid in full. Dear, Ex parte, White, In re, 1 Ch. D. 514; 45 L. J., Bk. 22; 34 L. T. 631; 24 W. R. 525—C. A.

Four brothers were in business together as cotton spinners. By articles of partnership it was agreed that accounts and balance-sheets should be taken half-yearly, and that in case of death of either of the partners the capital of the deceased partner should not be withdrawn from the business, but that the amount should be ascertained at the succeeding half-yearly stock taking, and should remain secured by promissory notes at interest in the business, half for three and the other half for five years from his death. Two of the partners died within a few months of each other, and within a year from the death of the one who last died, the two surviving partners filed a petition for liquidation. Part of the assets consisted of machinery which had belonged to all four partners. On a question raised on a special case to decide whether the machinery belonged to the creditors of the four in priority to the other creditors:—Held, that the creditors of the four had no priority, but that the assets must be distributed amongst all the creditors rateably. Furness, Ex parte, Simpson, In re, 43 L. J., Bk. 43; 30 L. T. 134; 22 W. R. 439. Affirmed, 43 L. J., Bk. 147; 30 L. T. 448. S. C., nom. Satterthwaite, Ex parte, 9 L. R., Ch. 572; 22 W. R. 697.

Separate Property becoming Joint.]—A. carried on the business of a grocer separately, and also that of an iron founder in partnership with B.; after thus trading for four years, he sold off the stock of the grocery business, and retired wholly from that trade, investing the proceeds in the iron foundry business, which, with the exception of a small sum brought in by B., constituted the whole capital of the partnership. A joint fiat was issued against A. and B., sixteen months after A. had retired from his separate grocery trade:—Held, that the creditors of A. in the grocery trade could not prove against the joint estate of A. and B. Graham, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 781.

A wine merchant carrying on business under the firm of J. R. & Co., announced by a circular that he had taken his nephew into partnership. The business was thenceforth carried on under the style of J. R. sen. & Co.; but, as between the uncle and nephew, the latter received a salary only, and did not participate in the capital, profits or losses of the concern. On both becoming bankrupt:—Held, that a creditor who supplied goods to the firm might prove against the separate estate of the uncle. Arbouin, Ex parte, 1 De Gex, 359.

P., having dissolved a former partnership with H. and C., continued the business alone under the style of P., Son and Co., his own name alone being placed over the shop front. He employed his son to assist him in the management of the business, and authorized him to sign cheques and to order goods in the name of the firm, his intention being to take his son into partnership if the business prospered; but no partnership was in fact entered into between the father and the son. Ultimately P. and his son were jointly adjudicated bankrupts as ostensible partners. Of fifty-seven creditors who proved in the bankruptcy two deposed that the son had been held out to them as a partner by the father, and eight others deposed that they had always believed the son to be a partner:—Held, that there had been a sufficient holding out of the son as a partner to convert the assets of the business, which were originally the separate estate of the father, into joint estate of him and his son, so far as the creditors were concerned. Hayman, Ex parte, Palsford, In re, 8 Ch. D. 11; 47 L. J., Bk. 54; 38 L. T. 238; 26 W. R. 597—C. A.

Held, also, that the doctrine of reputed ownership applied, and that the assets were distributable among the creditors of the firm as being in the apparent possession and reputed ownership of the firm with the consent of the true owner. Id.

ii. Character of Debts.

Joint and Several.]—A creditor of one partner on bond for money which came to the use of the partnership, may prove against the joint or separate fund. Cloues, Ex parte, 2 Bro. C. C. 595.

The partner in business of a trustee, having actual notice of the trusts, concurred with the trustee in unauthorized dealings with the trust fund, the object and effect of such dealings being to give him a joint possession of the fund:—Held, that the amount of the fund was thereby rendered not only a joint debt of the two, but also the separate debt of each. Poulson, Ex parte, 9 Jur. 262.

A creditor without notice of a dormant partner has an option to consider himself a joint or separate creditor. Hodgkinson, Ex parte, 19 Ves. 294.

The creditors of an old firm, who had notice that a dormant partner had been admitted, are entitled to prove their debts pari passu with the other creditors of the old firm. Chuck, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Bligh. 457; 8 Bing. 469; 1 M. & Scott, 615.

A. employed B. & C. as his stock-brokers, and, for the more convenient transfer, allowed stock belonging to him to stand in the name of B. alone; B., without the consent or knowledge of A., sold his stock, and paid the produce into the partnership funds of B. & C. B. & C. afterwards having become bankrupts:—Held, that A. was entitled to prove against the separate estate of B., or against the joint estate, as he should think proper. Turner, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Mac. 255.

— Guarantee by Firm and individual Members.]—A firm of S. & Co. consisted of three partners, F., R. and N., and carried on business in London. Another firm of N. & Co. consisted of five partners, F., R., N., H. and M., and carried on business in India. In September, 1872, N. & Co., applied by letter to a bank for a credit, agreeing to deliver to the bank as security "the personal obligation of this firm and individual partners, and a guarantee by S. & Co." The bank granted the credit, and under it N. & Co. received large advances. In February, 1874, a letter was addressed to the bank, signed by S. & Co. and also by F., R. and N., saying, "We hereby guarantee you payment of all sums which are or may at any time become due to you by N. & Co., under the credit applied for in September, 1872, and granted by you." This letter and the signature of S. & Co. to it, were written by F., and he had negotiated the original transaction with the bank. S. & Co. filed a liquidation petition, and N. & Co. stopped payment, a large sum being due to the bank under the credit:—Held, that the letter of February, 1874, pledged to the bank the joint liability of the firm of S. & Co., and also the separate liability of each of the three partners who signed it, and that the bank were entitled to prove against the separate estate of F. for the amount due to them by N. & Co. under the credit. Harding, Ex parte, Smith, In re, 12 Ch. D. 557; 48 L. J., Bk. 115; 41 L. T. 517; 28 W. R. 158—C. A.

Where a partnership debt has been incurred by means of a fraud on the part of the partners, the defrauded creditor has a right to prove at his election against either the joint estate of the firm or the separate estates of the partners, even though no judgment has been recovered by him against the partners. Adamson, Ex parte, Collie, In re, 8 Ch. D. 807; 47 L. J., Bk. 103; 38 L. T. 917; 26 W. R. 890—C. A.

Held, by Bramwell, L. J., that in such a case, judgment not having been recovered against the partners, there is no right to prove against the separate estates. Id.

Where two partners in New South Wales, where the general law of bankruptcy is that which obtained in England before the Bankruptcy Act of 1849, had joined with third parties as sureties for the debt of another, not a member, of the firm, in a bond which rendered them and each of them and any two, three, or four of them jointly and severally liable:—Held, the firm being bankrupt, that the bond creditors were entitled to prove against the partnership estate pari passu with the partnership creditors. Hoare v. Oriental Bank Corporation, 2 App. Cas. 589; 37 L. T. 173; 12 W. R. 757—P. C.

Joint.]—Commissioners under a lighting act, being authorized to appoint a treasurer by writing under their hands and seals, instead of appointing one in the form prescribed by the act, merely nominated F. as treasurer, who was a partner in a banking-house; F. did not receive or pay any moneys as treasurer, but the collector received all the moneys, and paid the amount into the banking-house by authority of the commissioners, who drew cheques upon F. individually as treasurer, which were not presented to him but to the bankers. The account in the pass-book was kept between the bankers and the commissioners, and this account was from time to time signed and allowed by them. The bankers became bankrupt, having a large sum in their hands belonging to the commissioners:—Held, that the commissioners could not prove for the amount against the separate estate of F., but could only come in as creditors against the joint estate of the firm. Dobinson, Ex parte, 2 Deac. 341.

Where two of a firm of bankers had drawn out a balance standing to the account of customers in the character of executors, and had invested it in the names of themselves and two trustees, upon an unauthorized security:—Held, on the bankruptcy of the bankers, not to be a case for double proof against the joint estate and the separate estates of the two parties. Barnewell, Ex parte, 6 De G., Mac. & G. 795.

The treasurer of a union lodged the union moneys to his account as treasurer at a bank in which he was a partner. The partners assigned their property to trustees, to be administered as in bankruptcy. The guardians of the union called on his sureties to pay the balance due from him, and they paid it. The sureties then received a dividend, on a proof made in the treasurer's name, against the joint estate. After this they claimed to prove against his separate estate:—Held, that the claim must be rejected, without prejudice to any application to expunge the joint proof, and substitute a proof against the separate estate. Carne, Ex parte, 3 L. R., Ch. 463.

Where parties are indebted jointly, and enter into a covenant by which they promise on demand, jointly, and severally, to pay, no demand is necessary in order to entitle the creditor to proceed severally against the parties; but where it was expressly stipulated by three partners, that, until a demand was made, an existing debt should remain a joint debt, and no demand was made previously to the bankruptcy, the debt is provable against the joint estate, but not against the separate estates of the three. Fairlie, Ex parte, 1 Mont. 17.

A note was issued by a bank in this form:—"I promise to pay the bearer, on demand, 5l., for A., B., C., and D. Signed A." A., B., C., and D. being partners in the bank:—Held, that the holder had not a right of separate action against A., and that on the bankruptcy of the firm he had not a right of proof against the separate estate of A. Buckley, Ex parte, 1 Ph. 562; 15 L. J., Bk. 3; 9 Jur. 931; 14 M. & W. 469; Hall v. Smith, 1 B. & C. 407, overruled.

R. M., who carried on business in partnership with J. C., J. P. and T. S., as bankers, signed one of the notes of the bank in this form:—"I promise to pay, &c., for J. C., R. M., J. P. and T. S. —R. M." On the firm becoming bankrupt:—Held, that the holders could not prove on this note against the separate estate of R. M. Clarke, In re, 1 Ph. 562; 9 Jur. 931; De Gex, 153; 3 Mont., D. & D. 736; S. C., 14 M. & W. 469; 8 Jur. 919.

A. & B., who were partners, and C., as their surety, gave a joint and several promissory note to D., by which they jointly and severally promised to pay to D. the amount of a partnership debt due from A. & B. The note was signed by A. and B., not as individuals, but in their partnership firm, and by C. the surety:—Held, that this note could not be treated as the several note of each one of the three, but as the several note only of the surety, and the joint note of A. & B.; and that, on the bankruptcy of A., who had survived his partner, B., the holder of the note, could only rank as creditor against the joint estate. Wilson, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 57.

Two of six partners, who had given a confidential clerk a general authority in writing to sign bills and notes on behalf of the firm, directed the clerk to sign four promissory notes in the name of the firm, payable respectively to one or the other of the two partners, who claimed to be creditors of the aggregate firm, in respect of an excess of capital advanced by them for the purposes of the partnership. The two partners afterwards indorsed the notes to a separate creditor for a private debt of one of the two:—Held, that although, as between these two partners and the other members of the firm, the notes were un-justifiably created and possessed by the two, yet, in the absence of all fraud or connivance in the transaction by the party to whom the notes were indorsed, the firm of the six was liable for the amount; and that, on the bankruptcy of the firm, the holder of the notes had a right to prove the amount of them against the joint estate. Bushell, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 615; 8 Jur. 937.

One partner borrowed money for partnership purposes upon shares which he engaged to assign as security, but did not; a bill for the amount borrowed was accepted by the firm:—Held, that a proof on the bill by the drawers could be made against the firm only, though the partner might be liable to an action of damages for non-fulfilment of his engagement. Raleigh, Ex parte, 3 Deac. 160; 3 Mont. & Ayr. 670.

One of two partners accepted bills for a previous partnership liability, after his copartner had committed an act of bankruptcy:—Held, that these bills were, in the hands of a bona fide holder, provable against the joint estate under a subsequent commission issued against both partners. Robinson, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & Chit. 376.

Severals.—If a creditor draws a bill upon a firm for his separate debt due from one partner, which is accepted by that partner in the name of the firm, the creditor cannot prove against the joint estate without shewing the assent of the other partner to the firm being liable. Thorpe, Ex parte, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 716.

K., a partner in the firm of R., K., and M., fraudulently concocted bills of exchange, to which he affixed the name of the firm as drawers and indorsees, followed by his own individual name. The bills were, at his instance, discounted by his private bankers, and the money applied to his own use:—Held, on the bankruptcy of the firm, that the bank had no right of proof against the joint estate. Darlington and Stockton Banking Company, Ex parte, 34 L. J., Bk. 10; 11 Jur., N. S. 122; 11 L. T., 661; 13 W. R. 353.

Although a partner may have full authority to deal with the partnership assets, and to draw, accept and indorse bills of exchange, it is the duty of persons having dealings with him, when they have reason to believe that a particular act is being done in the partnership name for the private benefit of the partner, to ascertain the extent of his authority, otherwise the persons so dealing with him must depend on the right and title of the partner, or on circumstances sufficient to repel the presumption of fraud. Id.

A. & B. were in partnership, B. being a secret partner, and A. on the partnership account drew bills in his own name on B., which were accepted by him:—Held, on the bankruptcy of A. & B., that the holder of these bills, who was ignorant of this partnership, was not entitled to prove them against the joint estate of A. & B., and the separate estate of B., but that he was entitled to prove them against the separate estates of A. & B.:—Held, too, that the holder, having proved against the joint estate, might, after a declaration of dividend on the joint estate, retire from that proof, and prove against the separate estates. Husband, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 4; 5 Mad. 419.

A. & B. were partners. B. to obtain capital for the business, borrowed money, and for security entered into a bond, in which C. and D. became his sureties for the repayment of the money and interest, and also effected and deposited with the lenders a policy of insurance on his life. One of the conditions of the bond was, that the money should be repayable on either B., C., or D. becoming bankrupt. The two partners entered into a deed of covenant to indemnify C. and D., the sureties, from all loss by reason of their entering into the bond. A. and B. became bankrupt, and C. and D. were called on for payment of the whole money, which C. paid, together with interest and expenses:—Held, that C. was not entitled to prove for the money as a creditor on the joint estate. Meyer, Ex parte, 12 Jur. 447.

A. & B., as joint executors, carried on their testator's trade in co-partnership, for the benefit of his family; and it was arranged between them, that A. should alone draw and accept bills, and manage the cash transactions. A. having refused to accept any more bills drawn by H. and D. B., unknown to A., authorized her son to accept them; and A. and B. afterwards became bankrupt:—Held, that the holders of these bills could not prove them against the joint estate. Holdsworth, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 475.

A. survived B., his partner, and continued the business in the same firm of A. & B. At the time of B.'s death, a large balance was owing by them to their bankers, to whom A., some time after B.'s death, indorsed several bills in the partnership firm of A. & B.:—Held, that it could not be inferred from this circumstance alone that the bills were so indorsed upon a partnership transaction of A. & B., and that the bankers might prove the amount of the bills against the separate estate of A. Wilson, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 57.

— Lease of Partnership Premises to Partners as Joint Tenants—Joint and Several Covenant to pay Rent—Disclaimer of Lease by Trustee.—When the trustee in bankruptcy of partners disclaims a lease of premises used by the partners for partnership purposes, but which was granted to the partners as joint tenants, they entering into a joint and several covenant to pay the rent, s. 23 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, gives the lessor a right to prove against the separate estate of each partner for the injury caused to him by the disclaimer. Corbett, Ex parte, Shand, In re, 14 Ch. D. 122; 49 L. J., Bk. 74; 42 L. T. 164; 28 W. R. 569—C. A.

Whether a right is given to prove also against the joint estate of the partners, quære. Id.

iii. Change of Character of Debts.

Joint and Several into Joint—Judgment.—B. and C., being indebted to A., gave a joint and several bond; A. took as part of the same security a joint warrant of attorney, and entered up a joint judgment; B. and C. became bankrupts:—Held, that the bond was merged in the judgment, and that A. could only prove against the joint estate of B. and C. Christie, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & Chit. 155; 1 Mont. & Bligh, 352; S. P., Gallie, In re, 9 Ir. Ch. Rep. 188.

— Taking joint Security.—A debt on a joint and several bond is not changed into a joint debt by the creditor taking a joint security. Hay, Ex parte, 15 Ves. 4.

Joint and Several into Several—Composition

Deed.—A. and B., who carried on business in copartnership, assigned their partnership property upon trust for the benefit of their creditors, and it was by such assignment provided that it should not prejudice or affect the rights of the creditors against the separate estates of A. and B. Prior to the date of the assignment A. and B. had given their joint and several promissory note to C. for 1,500*l.*, and C. signed the deed of assignment in respect of a sum of 2,755*l.*, which included the 1,500*l.* A. was afterwards adjudged bankrupt:—Held, that C. was entitled to prove against the separate estate of A. for the amount due on the promissory note. Thornton, Ex parte, 3 De G. & J. 454; 28 L. J., Bk. 4; 5 Jur., N. S. 212; 32 L. T., O. S. 1537; 7 W. R. 70—L. J.

Joint into Separate.—Judgment of outlawry against two of three joint debtors does not make the debt a separate one, as against the third debtor, and it cannot be proved under his separate commission. Dunlop, Ex parte, Buck, 253.

Judgment.—Two partners acting by one of them bought goods, and afterwards the vendor, with notice of the partnership, brought an action, and recovered judgment against the one partner alone, and issued execution, which was however defeated by an adjudication against him, followed by an adjudication against his partner:—Held, that the original debt was merged in the judgment, and that there could be no proof upon it against the joint estate. Higgins, Ex parte, 3 De G. & J. 33; 27 L. J., Bk. 27; 4 Jur., N. S. 595.

Dissolution of Partnership.—A. and B. dissolved their partnership, when B. assigned all the joint property to A., among which were debts due to the firm to the amount of 60*l.*, but no notice of assignment was given to the debtors. A. and B. severally became bankrupt:—Held, that a joint creditor, who had proved under the separate fiat against A., was entitled to receive dividends on his proof. Taylor, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 753.

By deed, the stock and effects of a partnership were assigned to the continuing partner, who covenanted to pay the joint debts. The partners became bankrupts:—Held, that the joint creditors not having, previous to the bankruptcy, accepted the continuing partner as their sole debtor, had not an election to prove against the separate estate of the continuing partner. Freeman, Ex parte, Buck, 471.

Taking separate Security.—A. and B. being jointly indebted to C., B. became bankrupt; but the joint effects, not being more than equal to the payment of the partnership debts, were left in the possession of A., who afterwards made an arrangement with C. for the payment of his debt by instalments, and, as a further security, handed over the deeds of some leasehold property to which he was separately entitled, for the purpose of preparing an assignment. A. paid only some of the instalments, and a separate fiat afterwards issued against him:—Held, that this was no evidence of the conversion of the joint debt of A. and B. into the separate debt of A., and that C. could therefore only prove against the joint estate. Smith, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 165.

Separate into Joint.—A parol agreement is sufficient to convert a separate into a joint debt, such an agreement not being a promise to answer the debt of another within the Statute of Frauds, but the creation of a new debt in consideration of the former being extinguished. Lane, Ex parte, De Gex, 300; 16 L. J., Bk. 4; 10 Jur. 382.

Positive Agreement—Money applied to Partnership Purposes.—In order to entitle a creditor to prove on the joint estate of a partnership firm, for a debt which was originally the separate debt of one of the partners, there must be either a positive agreement to adopt the debt as that of the firm, or facts from which the court will be justified in deducing an agreement or consent to the adoption. It is not sufficient that the money lent to one partner has been ultimately applied to the purposes of the firm. Ferrar, In re, 2 Ir. Ch. Rep. 11.

On Consolidation of Estates.—A. was copartner with B., C. and D. as bankers, and was partner in another banking firm, with B. and C. A. died, and E. was admitted a partner in the first bank alone. The two firms became bankrupt, and under an order of the court the estates of the two firms were consolidated. A creditor of the first bank in A.'s lifetime received a dividend out of the consolidated estate:—Held, that A.'s estate was not thereby released. Harris v. Farwell, 13 Beav. 403; 15 L. J., Ch. 185.

Taking joint Security.—A joint note of A. and B. is given for goods sold to A. only, and a receipt given as for money paid. A joint commission issued against A. and B. The seller may still prove his debt for goods sold against the separate estate of A. Seddon, Ex parte, 2 Cox, 49.

Trader taking a Partner.—A New York house accepted bills for the accommodation of a Virginia house on an agreement for reimbursement entered into by a London merchant, the correspondent of the Virginia house. Afterwards the London merchant entered into partnership, and by letter desired the New York house to consider all credits, advices and instructions then in force from him as extending to the new firm, and to transfer any balances due to or from him to the new firm. The New York house replied that they would make up and transfer to the new firm the open accounts in joint exchange transactions, but that they hoped to have the account current made up before they carried the old account to the new firm. They afterwards paid the accommodation bills and drew on the new firm for the amount. The new firm became bankrupt:—Held, that, under the circumstances, these separate liability was discharged, and that the New York house were only joint creditors. Jackson, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 146.

A sole trader, indebted by bond, took in a nominal partner, but without fraud, and two years after the partnership failed; a separate debt was not permitted to be proved under the joint commission, unless there was something, as payment of interest by both, to make the partnership liable, for which very little would be sufficient. Jackson, Ex parte, 1 Ves. jun. 131.

A trader, being indebted to a lunatic in the amount of the purchase-money of a business, and the machinery and stock-in-trade, after carrying on the business alone for some time, entered into partnership under an agreement, by which the stock-in-trade and property of the sole business were to belong to the firm, which was to take upon itself the liabilities of the sole business. The firm rendered an annual account in its own name in respect of the debt to the committee of the lunatic, who made no objection to this form of the account:—Held, on the firm becoming bankrupt, that the committee was not entitled to prove against the joint estate. Parker, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 511; 6 Jur. 541.

T. & Co. had been in the habit of sending cotton yarn to N. as N. & Co. upon the terms, not in writing, that N. should subject the material to such process as he chose, and sell the improved product to whatever customers at whatever credit he chose. A list of prices accompanied the goods so sent, and at the end of one month N. rendered an account of the quantity of yarn which he had sold, and at the end of another month he had to pay T. & Co. for the quantity so reported the previous month, according to the price list above mentioned. This payment was sometimes made by bills drawn by N.'s customers, and on such bills T. & Co. charged discount. These relations still continuing to subsist between N. and T. & Co., N. entered into partnership with J. as N., J. & Co. N. kept no separate banking account, but paid all moneys received in respect of cotton transactions into the firm banking account, and when cheques were given by N. in payment to T. & Co., they were signed N., J. & Co. A deed of arrangement having been entered into by N., J. & Co. with their creditors, T. & Co. sought to prove against the joint estate for the balance standing to the credit of N. in the firm account of N., J. & Co. as being derived from the sale of cotton supplied by them to N. as above, and added by him to the partnership fund, with full notice of the facts on the part of the rest of the firm:—Held, that such proof was not admissible against the joint estate, the relation between T. & Co. and N. being that of vendors and purchaser, and not that of principal and agent, so as to impress upon the moneys any trust in favour of T. & Co. Towle v. White, 29 L. T. 78; 21 W. R. 465—H. L.

Release of Debts—Ostensible Partner.—In consideration that the Halifax Bank would open a banking account with A. and B., and make advances to them, B. guaranteed the payment of the balance, which upon the closing of such account should be due to the bank from A. and B. individually or in partnership to the extent of 1,000*l.* No partnership at any time existed between A. & B., but when the guarantee was given, B. represented to the bank that he was a partner with A., but did not wish his name to be disclosed. A. traded under the name of A. & Co. for about two years, and then became bankrupt. The bank proved against A.'s estate for the whole amount due upon the balance of account. Subsequently B. paid the bank 1,000*l.* under his guarantee and received a receipt "in discharge of all claims against him in reference to the guarantee, or in connexion with A. & Co." The trustee of A.'s estate having rejected the proof by the bank upon the ground that the release to B. operated also to release A.:—Held, that B. must be taken to have been an actual partner with A., but that the receipt did not operate to release B., so as to preclude the bank from maintaining a proof against A.'s estate. Good, Ex parte, Armitage, In re, 5 Ch. D. 46; 46 L. J., Bk. 65; 36 L. T. 338; 25 W. R. 422—C. A.

Release by Will of Debts.—A testator bequeathed to B., his executors, administrators and assigns, all debts due to him at the time of his death, and directed his trustees to deliver up to B. all securities held by him for such debts, and also, when required by B., to execute a release to him from all such debts. At the testator's death, B. owed him a debt of 50*l.*, and B. and his partner G. owed him 2,600*l.* secured, as to 2,300*l.*, by their joint and several promissory notes, and as to 300*l.* by their joint promissory note. On B. and G. filing a liquidation petition:—Held, that the release in the will did not operate so as to release the partnership debt, and that the executors were entitled to prove in the liquidation for the 2,600*l.* against the joint estate, and for the 2,300*l.* against the separate estate of B. Bennett & Glave, In re, Kirk, Ex parte, 5 Ch. D. 800; 46 L. J., Bk. 101; 36 L. T. 431; 25 W. R. 598—C. A.

Change of Members of Firm—Novation.—Slight circumstances are sufficient to prove a contract between creditors of a dissolved firm and the continuing partners, that the debt due from the dissolved firm shall become debts due from the new firm. Chaninell, Ex parte, 3 De G., F. & J. 752.

Therefore, when a new firm, consisting of two of the partners of a dissolved firm of three, sent a circular to the creditors of the three, stating that the debts of the three would be paid by the two, and creditors of the three sent to the two accounts debiting them with debts due from the three:—Held, that the creditors were entitled to prove not only these, but the other debts of the three against the two. Id.

R. F. and R., partners in business, and dealing with F., S. & Co., took T. and S., clerks in their employment, into partnership with them. The partnership was constituted by deed to continue for three years, and a balance-sheet, shewing the liabilities and assets of the existing firm, was drawn up, and admitted by all the partners. The new firm continued to trade, up to the period of its insolvency, upon the same footing and with the same books as the old firm, no distinction being made in their payments or balances, or between the debts or assets of the new, or what was the old firm. F., S. & Co. continued to deal with the new as they had done with the old firm. R., F. and R. having become insolvent, F., S. & Co., creditors to a large amount, proved against the estate of the new firm. R. and B., also creditors of the new firm, proved against their estate, and sought to expunge the proof of F., S. & Co., on the ground that their debt, having accrued previously to the new partners being taken in, was due from the old, and not from the new, firm:—Held, that there was sufficient proof in the dealings and transactions of the several parties to shew that the new firm, on its formation, adopted the liabilities of the old firm, and that F., S. & Co. had consented to accept the liability of the new firm, and to discharge the old firm, their original debtors. Bank of Australasia v. Flower, 1 L. R., P. C. 27; 35 L. J., P. C. 13; 12 Jur., N. S. 345; 14 L. T. 144; 14 W. R. 467.

Previously to 1872, A. and B. were partners as bankers. In that year they took in two new partners. Very shortly after the partners were taken in A. died. In 1874 B. died. In 1875 the bank went into liquidation. The bank was in the habit of issuing deposit receipts to customers who left money with them. When the account on deposit was altered the note was changed. The depositors at the time of the bankruptcy all proved against the estate of the two surviving partners for the amount of their claims, but those who had deposits prior to the admission of the new partners desired to prove against the estate of A. Three test cases were taken : one in which the deposit receipt had not been changed since the new partners had been admitted. Another where the note had been changed and the account increased. Another where the note had been changed and the account diminished. All the depositors had received interest from the new partners :—Held, that in all three cases there had been complete novation, and that therefore the depositors were not entitled to prove against A.'s estate. Bilborough v. Holmes, 5 Ch. D. 255; 46 L. J., Ch. 446; 35 L. T. 75; 25 W. R. 297.

iv. Against what Estate.

Generally.—Separate estate is to be distributed amongst separate creditors, and joint estate amongst joint creditors. Where there is a surplus after payment of joint debts, separate creditors are permitted to prove against such surplus for the amount of their separate debts. Day, Ex parte, 9 L. T. 350.

A partnership debt may be proved under a separate commission. Hodgson, Ex parte, 2 Bro. C. C. 5. But see next case.

Joint Creditors.—Joint creditors are not permitted to prove against the separate estate, where there is a joint property, however trifling in amount. Peake, Ex parte, 2 Rose, 54.

Where there was a joint estate to the amount of 13*l.* :—Held, that the joint creditors could not receive dividends from the separate estate until all the separate creditors were paid in full, although it did not appear that after payment of costs any part of the 13*l.* would remain for distribution. Kennedy, Ex parte, 2 De G., Mac. & G. 228.

On a dissolution of partnership, the retiring partner sold the concern, with the partnership property, to the other, but some of the partnership property remained in the partnership names, and in the order and disposition of both. They afterwards became bankrupts, and separate commissions issued against them. There being property outstanding in the partnership names, the joint creditors could not prove under the separate commission against the retiring partner. Harris, Ex parte, 1 Madd. 583.

Where one of two partners died and the other soon afterwards became bankrupt, the joint estate being administered in bankruptcy, and the separate of the solvent partner in chancery :—Held, that the joint creditors who were part paid in bankruptcy were not entitled to prove against the separate estate of the solvent partner pari passu with the creditors of the solvent partner. Lodge v. Pritchard, 4 Giff. 295; 9 Jur., N. S. 932; 8 L. T. 722; 11 W. R. 1086. Affirmed, 32 L. J., Ch. 775; 9 L. T. 107—L. J.

— No joint Estate.—Joint creditors admitted to prove their debts on the separate estate of one partner, there being no joint estate. Hayden, Ex parte, 1 Bro. C. C. 454; S. P., Machell, Ex parte, 2 Ves. & B. 216.

A joint creditor can prove against the separate estate where there is no joint estate and no solvent partner, notwithstanding the estate of a deceased partner may be solvent. Bannerman, Ex parte, 3 Deac. 476; 1 Mont. & Chit. 573.

— Joint Debtors not Partners.—A. and B., not being partners, gave a joint note for securing the debt of B. B. afterwards became bankrupt. The creditor may prove for the joint debt, notwithstanding the solvency of A. The rule that a joint debt cannot be proved against the separate estate of one debtor, while the co-debtor remains solvent, only applies to the case where the co-debtors are partners. Buckingham, Ex parte, 4 Jur. 612.

— Co-contractors.—The rule, that a joint debt cannot be proved against the estate of a bankrupt partner, as long as there is a solvent partner, applies to co-contractors. Field, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 95; 12 L. J., Bk. 27; 7 Jur. 382.

— Suing out a separate Fiat.—The rule, that a joint creditor suing out a separate fiat should receive dividends on his joint debt out of the separate estate pari passu with the separate creditors, applies to a case where, besides the joint debt, there is due to the joint creditor from the bankrupt a separate debt of sufficient amount to support a fiat. Burnett v. Blake, 2 Mont., D. & D. 357; 6 Jur. 331.

— Suing out Commission against Surviving Partner—Co-nominee.—Where a joint creditor sues out a commission against A., as surviving partner of B., he can claim only against the joint estate. Barned and Mosley, Ex parte, 1 Glyn & J. 309.

— Partnership comprising minor Partnership.—A., B. & C. carried on trade in partnership, and A. & B. were partners in a distinct trade, and became bankrupt; D. being a creditor of the three for goods sold and delivered, could not prove his debt against the joint estate of the two, but was admitted to prove against the separate estate of each. Clegg, Ex parte, 2 Cox, 372.

A., B. and C., who were in partnership, were joint owners of a ship with D., the managing owner, who contracted a debt with E. for goods supplied for the use of the ship. A., B. and C. became bankrupts :—Held, that E. could not prove against their joint estate, but only against the separate estate of each of the bankrupts. Benson, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 750.

— Right to Surplus of Separate Estate.—Joint creditors are entitled to the surplus estate of individual partners after payment of their separate debts. Grant, Ex parte, 10 L. T. 276; 12 W. R. 690.

Joint creditors are entitled to priority of payment out of the surplus of the separate estate, which surplus is divisible amongst that class of creditors before the bankrupt is entitled to his allowance. Id.

Upon a joint bankruptcy or insolvency, the joint estate is the fund primarily liable, and the separate estate is only brought in in case of a surplus remaining after the separate creditors have been satisfied out of it. Bank of Australasia v. Flower, 1 L. R., P. C. 27; 35 L. J., P. C. 13; 12 Jur., N. S. 345; 14 L. T. 144; 14 W. R. 467.

— Before Interest paid to Separate Creditors.—Joint creditors who have proved under a separate fiat, are entitled to receive a dividend on their proofs out of the surplus of the separate estate, before the separate creditors are paid interest on their debts. Wood, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 283; 5 Jur. 1115.

A creditor whose proof is admitted against both the separate estates of two bankrupts who have been partners is not entitled to receive any dividend in respect of interest accrued on his debt subsequently to the date of the adjudication, until the joint creditors have been paid the principal of their debts in full. Findlay, Ex parte, Collie, In re, 17 Ch. D. 334; 50 L. J., Ch. 696; 45 L. T. 61; 29 W. R. 857—C. A.

— When Proof allowed against Separate Estate for Purposes of Voting.—A testator indebted on bond devised his real estate to the bankrupt and two other trustees, for payment of his debts. The bond creditor, after the testator's death, brought an action against the bankrupt and the other devisees, and recovered a joint judgment against them:—Held, that he could not prove under the separate commission against the bankrupt, even for the purpose of voting in the choice of assignees. Pearse, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & Chit. 451.

There is no difference between a banking company under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, and an ordinary partnership, as regards the effect of 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 62; and a creditor of the company may prove against the separate estate of an individual member, for the purpose of the latter section. Marston, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Chit. 576; 3 Jur. 1079; 4 Deac. 191.

A banking company, under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, though individual members become bankrupt, is still a subsisting partnership for the purposes of 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 62. Ib.

Where a debt of 27,620*l.* 19*s.* 10*d.* was due from the bankrupts at the bankruptcy to their bankers on a balance of account, and such balance was covered by joint promissory notes of the bankrupts to the extent of 18,000*l.*, and also by mortgage of some property belonging to one of the bankrupts, with joint and several covenants from each of them for the payment of the whole balance; and part of the debt to the amount of 17,000*l.* had been permitted to be proved by the bankers against the joint estate, on their petition, for the purpose of their commanding the choice of assignees:—Held, that the bankers were entitled to a proof of the 18,000*l.* against the joint estate, and to prove the residue against the separate estate of one of the bankrupts. Ladbroke, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 81.

rate debts. The two partners filed a joint liquidation petition, and the partner, whose separate estate was mortgaged, also filed a separate liquidation petition. The security having been realized:—Held, that the creditor was entitled to apportion the produce of the realization between his joint and separate debts in whatever way was most for his advantage, and that, to enable him to exercise this option, he was entitled to apply to the court, under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 104, to have a dividend on the joint estate declared before the declaration of a dividend on the separate estate. Dickin, Ex parte, Foster, In re, 20 L. R., Eq. 767; 44 L. J., Bk. 113; 32 L. T. 37; 24 W. R. 221.

A firm consisting of two partners entered into a joint and several covenant for the payment of the balance of their current account with a bank, and one of the partners deposited with the bank, as a collateral security for the account, a sum of 8,750*l.*, arising from the sale of part of his separate estate. That amount was deposited upon condition that it should not be applied in payment of the current account of the firm with the bank until after the expiration of twelve months' notice of demand for payment, and subject thereto it was to remain the separate property of the depositor. The firm became bankrupt upon the 18th of April, 1882, and the bank gave notice of demand on the 19th of May. Upon the 17th of October, the bank tendered a proof for 17,093*l.* 19*s.*, the total amount due from the firm upon their current account, without deducting the sum of 8,750*l.* deposited with them:—Held, that there was no such mutual dealing between the bank and the depositor as to give rise to any right of set-off under the 39th section of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and that consequently the bank were entitled to prove against the joint estate, and for the full amount due upon the current account. Caldicott, Ex parte, Hart, In re, 48 L. T. 910.

Shares in Bank belonging to two in Name of one Partner.—By the articles of association of a bank it was provided that the shares of every shareholder should be always subject to a lien thereon in favour of the bank for all moneys from time to time due from him to the bank in respect of any call, or as a debt or liability to the bank from him alone, or jointly with any other person. At the commencement of the bankruptcy of two partners some shares in the bank stood in the name of A., one of the two. The shares were in fact partnership property, though the bank did not know that any one but A. was interested in them. The partners owed the bank a large debt for moneys advanced to them. The whole of this debt had been contracted since the shares (which were originally the property of A. alone) had become partnership property:—Held, that the bank's security was on the joint estate, and that they could only prove against that estate for the balance of their debt, after deducting the value of the shares. Collie, In re. Manchester and County Bank, Ex parte, 3 Ch. D. 481; 45 L. J., Bk. 149; 35 L. T. 23; 24 W. R. 1035—C. A.

See further, post, SECURED CREDITORS.

Trader settling Portion of Profits on Wife.—A trader at Brighton married a widow who was entitled to three-fourths of the profits of a London business. He afterwards bought the remaining one-fourth of the London business, and covenanted with a trustee that three-fourths of the profits of the London business should be for the separate use of the wife. A resolution was duly made for liquidation of the affairs of the trader:—Held, that the assets of the London business were first to be applied in payment of the creditors of the London business, and that only the surplus would go to the general creditors. Childs, In re, New, Ex parte, 9 L. R., Ch. 508; 43 L. J., Bk. 89; 30 L. T. 447.

A liquidating debtor, at the date of filing his petition, was carrying on a trade at Brighton in his own name, and a completely distinct trade under another name in London. Three-fourths of the profits of the London business were settled upon his wife for her separate use, free from his debts. The other fourth of the profits belonged to him. The Brighton business was hopelessly insolvent:—Held, that the assets of the two businesses constituted distinct estates, the one the separate estate of the debtor, the other the joint estate of him and the trustee of the settlement, and that accordingly the ordinary rule in bankruptcy for the payment of the joint and separate creditors out of the debtor's joint and separate estates respectively would apply, and the London creditors were entitled to be paid the full amount of their debts out of the assets of the London business before the separate creditors of the debtor received anything out of that estate. Ib.

v. Election by Creditors.

Joint and several Creditors must Elect.—If A. and B., joint traders, become bankrupt, and there are joint and separate commissions taken out against them, and A. and B., before the bankruptcy, become jointly and severally bound to C., C. may choose under which commission he will come, but he cannot come under both. Rowlandson, Ex parte, 3 P. Wms. 405.

A creditor by a joint and several bond must elect whether he will go against the joint or separate estate; but is not bound by taking a joint security. Hay, Ex parte, 15 Ves. 4.

Right after Proving against one only.—A petitioning creditor under a first commission, which was separate against one of three partners, being a joint creditor, was entitled to his election under a second commission, which was joint against two of the firm, to prove against the joint or separate estate. Smith, Ex parte, 1 Glyn & J. 256.

Right after Judgment against one.—A creditor brought an action against one of three joint debtors, two of whom were out of the jurisdiction, and obtained judgment. The creditor afterwards issued a fiat against the debtor against whom he had so recovered. Distinct accounts were directed to be kept of the joint estate of the three debtors. The creditor endeavoured to transfer his proof from the separate to the joint estate, but was refused permission by the commissioner. Upon an appeal, the creditor agreeing to abandon or withdraw the proof made against the separate estate, the court declared he was entitled to make such proof as he would be entitled to make if the action had not been brought and the judgment had not been obtained. Jones, Ex parte, 20 L. J., Bk. 35; 15 Jur. 214.

When to be made.—A creditor under a joint and several bond may prove against both the joint and separate estate, but must make his election before a dividend. Bentley, Ex parte, 2 Cox, 288.

A creditor who has a right to elect between a joint and separate estate, must make his election before a dividend is declared of the estate against which he has proved. His election is gone if he does any act in the character in which he has proved. Husband, Ex parte, 5 Madd. 419; 2 Glyn & J. 4.

Right to alter Proof after Election.—Creditors having proved under a joint commission, upon a joint and several obligation, but not having received a dividend, were permitted to waive their proof and to prove against the separate estate, not disturbing any dividend previously made. Bielby, Ex parte, 13 Ves. 70.

A., carrying on business on his separate account, and also in partnership with B., gave a bill of exchange, drawn by himself, to the order of A. and B., and indorsed by them. A separate commission issued against A., B. died, and the holder of the bill proved it under A.'s commission; having afterwards learnt that distinct accounts were to be kept of the estates of A. and B., he applied to be at liberty to prove against the joint estates of A. and B., in addition to his proof against the separate estate of A.:—Ordered, that he should be at liberty either to retain his present proof, or to withdraw it, and prove against the joint estate. Masson, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 159.

A joint and separate creditor who has proved against the joint estate is not permitted without special grounds to retire from his proof, and prove against the separate estate. Dixon, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 312.

A creditor holding bills of A. and B., secretly partners, using the one his name as drawer, and the other as acceptor, proved them first against the separate estate of A. under a separate fiat, then also against the joint estate of A. and B.; then he received a dividend out of the separate estate, it being at that time intimated to him that one proof must be expunged. Subsequently one proof was expunged accordingly:—Held, that by receiving the dividend he had not made his election to abide by his separate proof; but on refunding the dividend, he might elect to come in under the joint fiat. Law, Ex parte, 3 Deac. 541; 1 Mont. & Chit. 111.

A joint creditor sued out two separate commissions; under one he proved against the joint estate and received a dividend, at which time he was ignorant of his right to prove against the separate estate of the other:—Held, that he had not conclusively elected to prove as a joint creditor, but that, refunding the dividend with interest, he might prove as a separate creditor. Bolton, Ex parte, Buck, 7; 2 Rose, 389.

When a creditor has such a right of election he does not lose it merely because he has proved and received dividend. But he may change his election on refunding the dividend which he has received, with interest at 4 per cent., though he cannot disturb any dividend already paid. Adamson, Ex parte, Collicie, In re, 8 Ch. D. 807;

Upon a joint bankruptcy or insolvency, the joint estate is the fund primarily liable, and the separate estate is only brought in in case of a surplus remaining after the separate creditors have been satisfied out of it. Bank of Australasia v. Flower, 1 L. R., P. C. 27; 35 L. J., P. C. 13; 12 Jur., N. S. 345; 14 L. T. 144; 14 W. R. 467.

— Before Interest paid to Separate Creditors.—Joint creditors who have proved under a separate fiat, are entitled to receive a dividend on their proofs out of the surplus of the separate estate, before the separate creditors are paid interest on their debts. Wood, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 283; 5 Jur. 1115.

A creditor whose proof is admitted against both the separate estates of two bankrupts who have been partners is not entitled to receive any dividend in respect of interest accrued on his debt subsequently to the date of the adjudication, until the joint creditors have been paid the principal of their debts in full. Findlay, Ex parte, Collie, In re, 17 Ch. D. 334; 50 L. J., Ch. 696; 45 L. T. 61; 29 W. R. 857—C. A.

— When Proof allowed against Separate Estate for Purposes of Voting.—A testator indebted on bond devised his real estate to the bankrupt and two other trustees, for payment of his debts. The bond creditor, after the testator's death, brought an action against the bankrupt and the other devisees, and recovered a joint judgment against them:—Held, that he could not prove under the separate commission against the bankrupt, even for the purpose of voting in the choice of assignees. Pearse, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & Chit. 451.

There is no difference between a banking company under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, and an ordinary partnership, as regards the effect of 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 62; and a creditor of the company may prove against the separate estate of an individual member, for the purpose of the latter section. Marston, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Chit. 576; 3 Jur. 1079; 4 Deac. 191.

A banking company, under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, though individual members become bankrupt, is still a subsisting partnership for the purposes of 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 62. Id.

Where a debt of 27,620*l.* 1*9s.* 10*d.* was due from the bankrupts at the bankruptcy to their bankers on a balance of account, and such balance was covered by joint promissory notes of the bankrupts to the extent of 18,000*l.*, and also by mortgage of some property belonging to one of the bankrupts, with joint and several covenants from each of them for the payment of the whole balance; and part of the debt to the amount of 17,000*l.* had been permitted to be proved by the bankers against the joint estate, on their petition, for the purpose of their commanding the choice of assignees:—Held, that the bankers were entitled to a proof of the 18,000*l.* against the joint estate, and to prove the residue against the separate estate of one of the bankrupts. Ladbroke, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 81.

rate debts. The two partners filed a joint liquidation petition, and the partner, whose separate estate was mortgaged, also filed a separate liquidation petition. The security having been realized:—Held, that the creditor was entitled to apportion the produce of the realization between his joint and separate debts in whatever way was most for his advantage, and that, to enable him to exercise this option, he was entitled to apply to the court, under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 104, to have a dividend on the joint estate declared before the declaration of a dividend on the separate estate. Dickin, Ex parte, Foster, In re, 20 L. R., Eq. 767; 44 L. J., Bk. 113; 32 L. T. 37; 24 W. R. 221.

A firm consisting of two partners entered into a joint and several covenant for the payment of the balance of their current account with a bank, and one of the partners deposited with the bank, as a collateral security for the account, a sum of 8,750*l.*, arising from the sale of part of his separate estate. That amount was deposited upon condition that it should not be applied in payment of the current account of the firm with the bank until after the expiration of twelve months' notice of demand for payment, and subject thereto it was to remain the separate property of the depositor. The firm became bankrupt upon the 18th of April, 1882, and the bank gave notice of demand on the 19th of May. Upon the 17th of October, the bank tendered a proof for 17,093*l.* 1*9s.*, the total amount due from the firm upon their current account, without deducting the sum of 8,750*l.* deposited with them:—Held, that there was no such mutual dealing between the bank and the depositor as to give rise to any right of set-off under the 39th section of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and that consequently the bank were entitled to prove against the joint estate, and for the full amount due upon the current account. Caldicott, Ex parte, Hart, In re, 48 L. T. 910.

Shares in Bank belonging to two in Name of one Partner.—By the articles of association of a bank it was provided that the shares of every shareholder should be always subject to a lien thereon in favour of the bank for all moneys from time to time due from him to the bank in respect of any call, or as a debt or liability to the bank from him alone, or jointly with any other person. Trader settling Portion of Profits on Wife.—A trader at Brighton married a widow who was

A liquidating debtor, at the date of filing his petition, was carrying on a trade at Brighton in his own name, and a completely distinct trade under another name in London. Three-fourths of the profits of the London business were settled upon his wife for her separate use, free from his debts. The other fourth of the profits belonged to him. #### v. Election by Creditors.

Joint and several Creditors must Elect.]—If A. and B., joint traders, become bankrupt, and there are joint and separate commissions taken out against them, and A. and B., before the bankruptcy, become jointly and severally bound to C., C. may choose under which commission he will come, but he cannot come under both. Rowlandson, Ex parte, 3 P. Wms. 405.

A creditor by a joint and several bond must elect whether he will go against the joint or separate estate; but is not bound by taking a joint security. Hay, Ex parte, 15 Ves. 4.

Right after Proving against one only.]—A petitioning creditor under a first commission, which was separate against one of three partners, being a joint creditor, was entitled to his election under a second commission, which was joint against two of the firm, to prove against the joint or separate estate. Smith, Ex parte, 1 Glyn & J. 256.

Right after Judgment against one.]—A creditor brought an action against one of three joint debtors, two of whom were out of the jurisdiction, and obtained judgment. The creditor afterwards issued a fiat against the debtor against whom he had so recovered. Distinct accounts were directed to be kept of the joint estate of the three debtors. The creditor endeavoured to transfer his proof from the separate to the joint estate, but was refused permission by the commissioner. Upon an appeal, the creditor agreeing to abandon or withdraw the proof made against the separate estate, the court declared he was entitled to make such proof as he would be entitled to make if the action had not been brought

and the judgment had not been obtained. Jones, Ex parte, 20 L. J., Bk. 35; 15 Jur. 214.

When to be made.]—A creditor under a joint and several bond may prove against both the joint and separate estate, but must make his election before a dividend. Bentley, Ex parte, 2 Cox, 288.

A creditor who has a right to elect between a joint and separate estate, must make his election before a dividend is declared of the estate against which he has proved. His election is gone if he does any act in the character in which he has proved. Husband, Ex parte, 5 Madd. 419; 2 Glyn & J. 4.

Right to alter Proof after Election.]—Creditors having proved under a joint commission, upon a joint and several obligation, but not having received a dividend, were permitted to waive their proof and to prove against the separate estate, not disturbing any dividend previously made. Bielby, Ex parte, 13 Ves. 70.

A., carrying on business on his separate account, and also in partnership with B., gave a bill of exchange, drawn by himself, to the order of A. and B., and indorsed by them. A separate commission issued against A., B. died, and the holder of the bill proved it under A.'s commission; having afterwards learnt that distinct accounts were to be kept of the estates of A. and B., he applied to be at liberty to prove against the joint estates of A. and B., in addition to his proof against the separate estate of A.:—Ordered, that he should be at liberty either to retain his present proof, or to withdraw it, and prove against the joint estate. Masson, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 159.

A joint and separate creditor who has proved against the joint estate is not permitted without special grounds to retire from his proof, and prove against the separate estate. Dixon, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 312.

A creditor holding bills of A. and B., secretly partners, using the one his name as drawer, and the other as acceptor, proved them first against the separate estate of A. under a separate fiat, then also against the joint estate of A. and B.; then he received a dividend out of the separate estate, it being at that time intimated to him that one proof must be expunged. Subsequently one proof was expunged accordingly:—Held, that by receiving the dividend he had not made his election to abide by his separate proof; but on refunding the dividend, he might elect to come in under the joint fiat. Law, Ex parte, 3 Deac. 541; 1 Mont. & Chit. 111.

A joint creditor sued out two separate commissions; under one he proved against the joint estate and received a dividend, at which time he was ignorant of his right to prove against the separate estate of the other:—Held, that he had not conclusively elected to prove as a joint creditor, but that, refunding the dividend with interest, he might prove as a separate creditor. Bolton, Ex parte, Buck, 7; 2 Rose, 389.

When a creditor has such a right of election he does not lose it merely because he has proved and received dividend. But he may change his election on refunding the dividend which he has received, with interest at 4 per cent., though he cannot disturb any dividend already paid. Adamson, Ex parte, Collie, In re, 8 Ch. D. 807; respect of the excess of capital advanced by him. On the widow dying, and the surviving partners becoming bankrupt :—Held, that there could be no right of proof on behalf of the testator's estate against the joint estate of the surviving partners, in respect of this debt. Thompson, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 761.

A testator directed that it should be lawful for his wife to retain in her hands, and employ, any sum not exceeding 6,000*l.*, in carrying on the trades in which he might be engaged at his decease, and he appointed his wife and son executrix and executor. The widow carried on the testator's trade, taking the son into partnership, and the moneys received were placed with the bankers to their joint account :—Held, on their bankruptcy, that the employment of 6,000*l.* of the assets in the trade so carried on was authorized by the will, and gave no right of proof in competition with the other creditors, and that the circumstance of the son being taken into partnership made no difference. Butterfield, Ex parte, De Gex, 570 ; 17 L. J., Bk. 10 ; 11 Jur. 955.

Share retained in Business without Authority.—Three persons carried on business in partnership without any articles of partnership. The profits were divided between them in equal shares. After the death of one of them, the survivors continued to carry on the business, retaining in it, without any authority, the deceased partner's share of the capital, and dividing the profits of the business between themselves equally. They afterwards filed a liquidation petition. There were still some joint debts of the partnership of the three remaining unpaid :—Held, that the administratrix of the deceased partner could not prove in the liquidation in competition with his creditors in respect of his share of the capital. Blythe, Ex parte, Blythe, In re, 16 Ch. D. 620 ; 29 W. R. 900.

If an executor, who is directed to carry on his testator's partnership trade, exceeds his authority, by employing the assets in his trade to an extent not warranted by the will, and the surviving partner and the executor become bankrupt, the excess of the assets so employed may be proved by the executor under their commission. Richardson, Ex parte, Buck, 202, 421 ; 3 Madd. 138.

Rule not to be Narrowed.—The rule which prevents a partner from proving against the joint estate of the partnership for a private debt while there are joint debts unpaid, is a rule of general application, and such application is not to be narrowed by considerations as to what would be its precise effect in individual instances. Nanson v. Gordon, 1 App. Cas. 195 ; 45 L. J., Bk. 89 ; 34 L. T. 401 ; 24 W. R. 740—H. L.

The rule applies in a case where the partner had died before the bankruptcy, his share had been taken by the other partners under the provisions of the partnership deed, and the money due in respect of it had not been paid to his executors at the time of the bankruptcy. Ib.

Five persons carried on a partnership business under articles whereby it was agreed that any partner might retire upon twelve months' notice to the others, and that upon the retirement or death of any partner, his share should be taken at a valuation by the surviving partners, who should pay for it by instalments. One partner died, one afterwards retired, and the remaining three filed a petition for liquidation. There were debts of the partnership which were contracted during the lifetime of the deceased partner. The separate estate of such partner was alleged to be solvent, both as regarded these debts and the claims of several creditors. The executors of the deceased partner claimed to prove in the liquidation for the unpaid instalments of the value of his share, with interest :—Held, that the proof was inadmissible, as being in competition with the joint creditors. Ib.

Partner taking up Notes of Firm.—A partner who, after getting his certificate, had taken up the notes of the firm, was permitted to prove against the joint estate. Atkins, Ex parte, Buck, 479.

viii. By one Partner against another.

Not until Joint Debts paid.—A partner cannot prove or claim until the joint debts are paid. Ellis, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 312 ; S. P., Carter, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 233.

A solvent partner cannot prove against the estate of his co-partner, so long as there are joint creditors unpaid, although the joint estate is ample to pay the joint creditors. Bass, Ex parte, 36 L. J., Bk. 39.

Distinct Firms.—Partners constituting distinct firms may prove against each other ; but in a partnership of two, one carrying on business separately, as they are both liable to the same joint debts, the solvent partner is not entitled to prove, under the bankruptcy of his co-partner, a debt for goods sold by his distinct house to the firm, until the joint creditors have been satisfied. Adams, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 305.

On indemnifying Joint Estate.—A solvent partner is entitled to prove against the estate of a bankrupt co-partner the amount of the balance due to him upon the partnership account, first satisfying the partnership debts, or indemnifying the bankrupt's estate against them. Taylor, Ex parte, 2 Rose, 175.

A partner cannot prove against his co-partner upon indemnifying the joint estate. Moore, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 166.

Money given to be applied in Payment of Joint Debts.—Money paid by one partner to another, before the bankruptcy of the latter, for the purpose of being paid over as his liquidated share of a debt to their joint creditor, and not in fact so applied, is provable by the solvent partner as a debt under the commission, although the solvent partner was not called upon to repay the debt until after the bankruptcy. Wright v. Hunter, 1 East, 20 ; 5 Ves. 792.

Agreement to Share Profits.—An agreement to share the profits of a member of a firm constitutes a debt provable against the member for the share. Dodson, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Mac. 445.

Amount Provable against Co-partners.—If a solvent partner pays all the joint debts, his proof against the separate estates of his partners will be limited to the amount of their respective shares of the joint debts so paid; and if their estates are not sufficient to pay 20s. in the pound, the solvent partner will not be allowed to prove for the deficiency of each estate against the estate of the other. Watson, Ex parte, Buck, 449; 4 Madd. 477.

If a commission issues against three, and the joint estate is insufficient, and one partner pays the deficiency from his private estate, and there is a surplus on the separate estate of each of the others, the partner who paid the deficiency is entitled to such surplus before interest is paid to the separate creditors. Riz, Ex parte, 1 Mont. 237.

Under a separate commission against one of two partners, the bankrupt, having paid 20s. in the pound to all his creditors, obtained an order for the payment of the surplus to him, and the same was accordingly paid to him:—Held, that his partner was entitled to apply by petition for an account of such surplus, and for payment of his proportion of it, and that the court had jurisdiction to make the order required. Lanfear, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 442.

Under a separate commission, the joint property is administered as if both partners were bankrupts, viz., in satisfaction of the joint debts, in the first instance, in order to ascertain the surplus, which alone constitutes the separate interest. Everett v. Backhouse, 10 Ves. 98.

A joint commission issued against A. & B., A. being a dormant partner; the joint creditors resorted to the separate estate of B., thereby diminishing that separate estate, and exonerating the joint estate of A. & B., so as to produce a surplus of it:—Held, that the separate creditors of B. had a lien upon that surplus to the extent which their funds had been diminished by the resort of the joint creditors. Reid, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 84.

Where a man is a partner in separate firms, each of which becomes bankrupt, the surplus of his separate estate will be applied in discharging the joint debts of the firms, in proportion to the whole amount of debts proved against each firm respectively. Franklyn, Ex parte, Buck, 332.

Object of Rule—When relaxed.—The court refused to relax the rule in bankruptcy, that on the bankruptcy of a firm there cannot be a proof on behalf of the estate of one partner against the estate of another, until all the joint debts are paid, although, in the circumstances of the case, and having regard to the amounts of the estates, the result of relaxing the rule would have been to increase the proving estate to such an extent that it would have yielded a larger surplus to the joint estate than would arise from the estate sought to be proved against if the rule were observed and the proof excluded. Collinge, Ex parte, Holdsworth, In re, 4 De G., J. & S. 533.

The rule in question enures for the benefit of the separate creditors as well as of the joint creditors. Id.

A firm of two became bankrupt, one partner being indebted to the other. The debt arose from a contract apart from the co-partnership, and was in existence at the time of the adjudication. It was admitted that there could not be any surplus of the debtor-partner's estate for the joint creditors, whether the debt was allowed to be proved against that estate by the creditor-partner or not:—Held, to be a proper case for relaxing the general rule, and that the creditor-partner might prove against the debtor-partner's estate, and it was so ordered, with a declaration that the proof must be subject to be expunged, and the dividend refunded, if any surplus of the debtor-partner's should arise for the benefit of the joint creditors. Topping, Ex parte, Levy, In re, 4 De G., J. & S. 551; 34 L. J., Bk. 13; 11 Jur., N. S. 210; 12 L. T. 3; 13 W. R. 445.

Executor of Deceased sole Partner—Appropriation of Partnership Funds.—H., a banker, took into partnership K., a country gentleman unacquainted with banking, who was not bound to bring in any capital or to attend to the business. K. did not acquaint himself with the accounts, though he occasionally came to the bank. H. from time to time fraudulently drew large sums out of the bank, and employed them in losing speculations on the Stock Exchange, concealing the overdrawings by means of fictitious entries in the books of the bank. K. never drew out anything. On the death of H. the bank was found utterly insolvent, and K. was adjudicated bankrupt. A decree was made for the administration of the estate of H., under which the trustee in bankruptcy of K. claimed to prove for what was due from H. for moneys thus fraudulently drawn out:—Held, that he was entitled to prove. Lacey v. Hill, Lacey v. Hill, 4 Ch. D. 537—C. A. Affirmed, sub nom. Read v. Bailey, 3 App. Cas. 94; 47 L. J., Ch. 161; 37 L. T. 510; 26 W. R. 223.

A father and his son carried on business in partnership. The whole capital belonged to the father, the son having only an interest in the profits. The father died, and thereupon under the provisions of the partnership deed the partnership was dissolved, and all the profits became the property of the father. The father appointed the son his executor, and the son in that character received moneys belonging to the father's separate estate and employed them without any authority in the business. A suit was afterwards instituted to administer the father's estate, and the son filed a liquidation petition:—Held, that the receiver appointed in the suit could prove in the son's liquidation for the moneys thus received by the son as executor and misapplied. Westcott, Ex parte, White, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 626; 43 L. J., Bk. 119; 30 L. T. 739; 22 W. R. 813.

By Person held out as Partner.—A trader was alleged to have represented to some few of his creditors, but not to the main body of them, with the tacit acquiescence of C., that C. was in partnership with him. On his bankruptcy, C. claimed to prove against the estate:—Held, that there was no representation sufficient to constitute an ostensible partnership, and that the proof must be allowed. Wright, In re, Sheen, Ex parte, 6 Ch. D. 235; 37 L. T. 451; 26 W. R. 195—C. A.

Retired Partner.—A retired partner, with a covenant of indemnity against the debts, in consideration of assigning his share of the property, was admitted, under a commission against the remaining partner, to prove a joint debt paid by him, indemnifying the joint estate. Ogilby, Ex parte, 3 Ves. & B. 133; 2 Rose, 177.

Upon the death of one of three partners his executors carried on the business with the survivor for a year, and then dissolved, the two continuing partners giving them a bond for the balance due to them; and more than six years afterwards the two became bankrupt:—Held, that the executors might prove the amount of the bond against the joint estate. Hall, Ex parte, 3 Deac. 125.

In 1818, A., B., C., and D. dissolved partnership as bankers, by deed, by which it was agreed that A. and B. should retire, and the business be carried on in future by C. and D.; C. and D. covenanted to indemnify A. and B. against all outstanding demands. In 1825, C. died, and a commission issued against D. A. having been obliged to pay certain partnership debts which C. and D. had undertaken to indemnify him against:—Held, that he might prove under the commission for the amount so paid, although he knew the firm to have been insolvent at the time of the dissolution in 1818. Carpenter, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Mac. 1.

On the dissolution of the partnership of A. and B., the former, in consideration of the joint bond of B. and his brother, transferred and released to B. all his estate and interest in the partnership. B. became bankrupt. A. sought to prove for the amount of the bond against the separate estate for the benefit of the joint creditors of the late firm:—Held, that the proof could not be admitted, as its admission would be contrary to the rule, that so long as there are joint debts, and a possibility of those joint debts being brought upon the separate estate, a partner who is liable for those joint debts cannot make any claim against the separate estate, because by possibility he may come into competition with his own joint creditors. Cullinge, Ex parte, 33 L. J., Bk. 9; 9 Jur., N. S. 1212; 9 L. T. 309; 12 W. R. 30.

Loans to Trader under 28 & 29 Vict. c. 86.]—By an agreement in writing, M. agreed to advance to T., for the purposes of his business, an amount not exceeding 1,000*l.* upon the terms that he should receive 40 per cent. of the net profits of his business, and it was provided that M. should be at liberty to cancel the agreement and withdraw his capital at any time by drawing bills on T. for the amount. The agreement was cancelled by mutual consent, and M. drew bills on T., which the latter accepted for the amount due under the agreement, but before the bills were paid T. became bankrupt. Both before and after the cancellation of the written agreement M. made other advances to T. on a verbal agreement that 10 per cent. interest should be paid thereon by T.:—Held, that M. was not entitled to prove against T.'s estate for the amount of the bills till all the other creditors of the bankrupt had been satisfied. Mills, Ex parte, Tew, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 569; 28 L. T. 606; 21 W. R. 557.

Held, also, that the Partnership Law Amendment Act, 1865 (28 & 29 Vict. c. 86), did not apply to the other advances made by M. to T. at 10 per cent. interest, and that he was entitled to prove for them against T.'s estate. Ib.

The effect of s. 5 of Bovill's Act is to prevent the lender of money to a trader, on the terms of receiving a share of the profits of his business, from proving for the loan in the bankruptcy of the borrower in competition with any of his creditors—not merely those creditors whose debts were contracted in relation to the business in respect of which the loan was made, or while that business was being carried on, but any of the creditors who are entitled to prove in the bankruptcy. Till all the other creditors have been paid in full, such a lender is not entitled to prove for any purpose whatever. Taylor, Ex parte, Grason, In re, 12 Ch. D. 366; 41 L. T. 6; 28 W. R. 205—C. A.

In 1871 a loan was made to a trader, on the terms of the lender receiving half the profits of the business. In 1872, the trader being then insolvent, assigned all his property to a trustee, on trust for sale, and out of the proceeds of sale to pay the lender a small sum, then to pay his creditors (other than the lender) in full, and afterwards to pay the lender the balance of his loan, with interest at 10 per cent. The lender was a party to this deed. The trustee realized the property, and paid the creditors (other than the lender) a dividend of 6*s.* in the pound. This exhausted the proceeds of sale, and the lender received nothing beyond the small payment made to him in the first instance. In 1875 all the creditors released the trustee, but they expressly reserved their rights against the trader. In 1879 the trader filed a liquidation petition:—Held, that the arrangement of 1872 did not, under the circumstances, amount to a repayment of the loan and a relending of the money on new terms, and that, consequently, the lender could not prove in the liquidation in competition with the other creditors. Ib.

—Mortgage given as Security.]—The lender of money to a trader at the rate of interest varying with profits, who also takes a mortgage to secure his loan, is not, in the event of the bankruptcy of the borrower, deprived by 28 & 29 Vict. c. 86, Partnership Law Amendment Act, 1865 (Bovill's Act), of any of his ordinary rights as a mortgagee. Shiel, Ex parte, Lonergan, In re, 4 Ch. D. 789; 46 L. J., Bk. 62; 36 L. T. 270; 25 W. R. 420—C. A.

A sum of 2,000*l.* was lent to a trader on the security of a mortgage of his business premises and of the goodwill of the business. The mortgage deed provided that, in lieu of interest on the loan, the borrower should pay to the lender half-yearly, during the continuance of the loan, such a sum as should be equal to half the net profits of the business during the preceding half-year. Three years after receiving the loan the trader filed a petition for liquidation of his affairs by arrangement. The whole of the 2000*l.* remained due. The trustee in the liquidation claimed to be entitled under s. 5 of the 28 & 29 Vict. c. 86, to sell the mortgaged property free from the mortgage, and applied to the Court of Bankruptcy for an order that the lender should concur in assigning the property to a purchaser free from the mortgage:—Held, that s. 5 only prevented the lender from recovering his debt in competition with the other creditors, and did not prevent him from retaining the benefit of his mortgage. Ib.

ix. Inspectors.

One member of a firm was adjudicated bankrupt under the Act of 1861, the others being out of the jurisdiction, and there was no joint adjudication. The joint creditors proved debts to many times the amount of the separate debts, and appointed as assignees one joint creditor and the nominee of another. Separate estate was got in to an amount sufficient for payment of a dividend on the separate debts; but no joint estate had been got in. A separate creditor, with the assent of nearly all the other separate creditors, applied for an order that a meeting of separate creditors might be held for appointing an inspector to protect their interests:—Held, that the acts of 1849 and 1861 had not taken away the power of appointing such an inspector, and that the separate creditors ought to be at liberty to appoint one; but that he must not take any step without the sanction of the registrar. Melbourn, Ex parte, 6 L. R., Ch. 835; 40 L. J., Bk. 56; 25 L. T. 368; 19 W. R. 1073.

h. Secured Creditors.

i. Generally.

Appropriation of Securities to Particular Debts.—The general doctrine is, that a creditor holding a security is entitled to apply it in discharge of whatever liability of a bankrupt debtor he may think fit. Johnson, Ex parte, 3 De G., Mac. & G. 218; 22 L. J., Bk. 65.

A creditor holding securities not specifically appropriated to any particular debts may apply them in discharge of whatever liabilities of the bankrupt he may think fit, and prove in respect of any debts for which he has no security; but he can neither prove nor vote in respect of any secured debt, unless he has first realized his security and it has proved deficient, or unless he has put a value upon it; and, until proof is made in respect of such debts, he cannot participate in any intermediate dividend that may be made of the bankrupt's estate. Greer, In re, 11 Ir. R., Eq. 502.

Where bankers, with the knowledge of an act of bankruptcy committed by their customer, took a guarantee from a surety on his behalf, to secure to a given amount all sums then or thereafter to become due from the customer, but the surety had no notice of the act of bankruptcy, and afterwards paid to the bankers the full sum for which he was guarantee, without specifying to which portion of the bankers' debt the payment was to be applied:—Held, that such payment was to go in reduction of that portion of the bankers' debt which was provable under the fiat, and not of that which was not provable. Sharp, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 490; 8 Jur. 1012.

Debt not Provable before Valuation or Realization of Security—Declaration of Dividend—Reservation of Dividend by Trustee.—Until a secured creditor of a bankrupt or liquidating debtor has valued or realized his security he has no debt provable in respect of which the trustee is bound to make any reserve on declaring a dividend. Good, Ex parte, Lee, In re, 14 Ch. D. 82; 49 L. J., Bk. 49; 42 L. T. 450; 28 W. R. 553—C. A. Reversing 41 L. T. 660; 28 W. R. 278.

If, by reason of any special circumstances, a secured creditor is prevented from realizing his security before a dividend is declared by the trustee, the court has power under s. 72 to give such directions as may be proper to prevent any injustice being done. Id.

Per Cotton, L. J.: Rule 136 applies only to the case of a secured creditor who desires to value instead of realizing his security, and even then it only gives the trustee, if he is dissatisfied with the value stated by the creditor, a power indirectly to compel the realization of the security, by refusing to admit the creditor's proof till he has realized his security. Id.

Sect. 31 does not enable the trustee to make an estimate of the ultimate balance which may be due to a secured creditor who has not valued or realized his security. Id.

Security taken on eve of Petition being Filed.]

—A debt assigned on the eve of filing a petition, to creditors who know the debtor's position, to secure a present advance, can only be held by the assignees as security for the amount actually advanced. Winter, Ex parte, Softley, In re, 20 L. R., Eq. 746; 44 L. J., Bk. 107; 32 L. T. 62; 24 W. R. 68.

Security by Bills and Hypothecation of Debts—

Bills must be taken up by Creditor.—A loan was secured by bills of exchange drawn by the lender upon the borrower, and accepted by him, and also by the hypothecation to the lender of debts due to the borrower, notice of the hypothecation being given to the debtors. The lender discounted the bills with his bankers. Afterwards the borrower filed a liquidation petition, and the bankers proved in the liquidation for the full amount of the bills. By an arrangement between the trustee and the lender (made without prejudice to his rights), the trustee collected the hypothecated debts, but refused to pay them over to the lender unless he would take up the bills:—Held (without deciding in the absence of the bankers whether their proof ought to be reduced by the amount of the hypothecated debts), that the lender was not entitled to receive the amount of the hypothecated debts unless he took up the bills, but that the amount should be applied in discharging the lender's liability upon the bills. Mann, Ex parte, Kattengell, In re, 5 Ch. D. 367; 46 L. J., Bk. 107; 36 L. T. 840—C. A.

Composition—Right to rely on Securities.]

In the case of a composition with creditors, nothing short of a clear and express contract to give up his securities can preclude a creditor relying on them. Pim, In re, 7 L. R., Ir. 458.

Cost of Mortgagee's Unsuccessful Defence on Title to part of Mortgaged Property.]

—A bankrupt had, before his bankruptcy, obtained advances from a bank on the security of the deposit with them of the dock warrants of a quantity of tobacco, which he represented to be his own property. After the adjudication it was discovered that fifty bales of the tobacco did not belong to him, but that he had sold them and had received the purchase-money; the purchaser having left the dock warrants relating to them with him to enable him to clear them as the purchaser should require them. After the adjudication the purchaser of the fifty bales sued the bank, and recovered from them as damages the sum which he had paid for the fifty bales, together with his costs of the action, and the judgment was affirmed by the Court of Appeal. The bank afterwards tendered a proof in the bankruptcy for the balance of their debt beyond the value of their security:—Held, that, in estimating their value, they were entitled to bring into account the costs (their own as well as the plaintiffs) of the action, but not the costs of the appeal. Carr, Ex parte, Hofmann, In re, 11 Ch. D. 62; 48

L. J., Bk. 69; 40 L. T. 299; 27 W. R. 435—C. A.

Proof for Balance of Debt.—After the decision of the appeal, the bank sold the fifty bales for less than the purchaser had paid the bankrupt for them:—Held, that there being no evidence that this loss had arisen from any default on the part of the bank, they were entitled to bring that loss into account in estimating the value of their security. Id.

Excess Realized over Assessed Value.—A secured creditor who, after the first meeting under a liquidation, proves for the balance of his debt less the assessed value of his security, is bound to pay over to the trustee any excess realized from the security beyond the assessed value; and this although the trustee does not object to the assessment or offer to redeem. King, Ex parte, Palethorpe. In re, 20 L. R., Eq. 273; 44 L. J., Bk. 92; 32 L. T. 505; 23 W. R. 681.

Under a liquidation a secured creditor valued his security, a policy of assurance for 1,200*l.* upon the life of the debtor, at 200*l.*, the then surrender value of the policy, and proved for the balance of his debt for the purpose of receiving a dividend. The trustee accepted the valuation and admitted the proof, and the policy, which the trustee had no intention of redeeming, was retained by the creditor. The debtor died before the close of the liquidation and the assurance company paid to the creditor the amount secured by the policy, which was insufficient to satisfy all the moneys due to him from the debtor:—Held, that the trustee was entitled to the balance of the money received by the creditor after deducting the amount at which he had valued his security and the premiums paid by him to keep it on foot. Id.

Partners.—A security for a separate demand does not extend to a joint demand. Frean & Morrice, Ex parte. 2 Glyn & J. 246.

— Valuation of Proof for Joint Debt—Close of Composition—Action for Redemption of Security—Claim to Retain separate Security.—B. & Co. were creditors of a partnership for 200,400*l.*, for which they held a security comprising joint property of the firm and also separate property of one of the partners. The firm being in difficulties, the joint creditors agreed to accept a composition, and B. & Co. valued their security at 800*l.*, and proved and received the composition upon the balance. Subsequently they received from their security more than 800*l.* and interest from the date of valuation. Four years after the close of the composition the debtors brought an action to redeem their security. B. & Co. claimed to retain the security on the separate property until they had received payment in full of their claim, on the ground that they need not have deducted the separate property:—Held, by Jessel, M. R., that B. & Co. having received 800*l.* from the security and accepted the composition on the balance, their whole debt was discharged, and they could not retain the separate security. This decision was affirmed on appeal, on the ground that although B. & Co. need not have deducted the value of the separate security, yet, inasmuch as the composition had been fixed, and the whole proceeding in the composition had been taken and completed upon the footing of the valuation of the compound security at 800*l.*, it was too late to upset the transaction. Couldery v. Bartrum, 19 Ch. D. 394; 51 L. J., Ch. 265; 45 L. T. 689; 30 W. R. 141—C. A.

Held, that leave to amend the proof could not now be given, whatever might have been the case had a proper application for that purpose been made during the pendency of the composition proceedings. Id.

Failure of Security.—B. became insolvent in 1827. His mother held a security on a contingent interest of his expectant on her death, which interest would fail if he died in her lifetime. She did not prove in the insolvency, but retained her security, and the assignee sold the equity of redemption, which was purchased by a trustee for persons of whom the mother was one. In 1857 B. died in his mother's lifetime, so that the security failed. The mother died in 1864, and in 1866, further assets having unexpectedly come in, the personal representative of the mother claimed to prove, and the proof was admitted by the commissioner:—Held, that the proof had been rightly admitted. Peake, Ex parte, Brodie. In re, 2 L. R., Ch. 453; 15 W. R. 702; 16 L. T. 511.

ii. Who are Secured Creditors.

Judgment Creditors—Garnishees.—A judgment creditor, H., having by leave of a judge proceeded against a garnishee, who was an auctioneer. P. had sent him goods for sale for ready money, not to be removed until payment. The auctioneer sold them on those terms, stated in the conditions of sale, and received part of the price from some of the purchasers; but H., who had purchased part, took them away without payment, and without the consent of the auctioneer or of P. H. refused to pay, offering to set off a debt due to him from P.; this was declined. H., having obtained judgment against P., obtained an order to attach the price of the goods remaining in the auctioneer's hands, under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 61, which was served on the garnishee. On the same day, but after the service, P. became bankrupt. His assignees claimed the money from the garnishee, and also demanded payment from H. of the price of the goods taken away by him:—Held, that the service of the order bound the debt, so as to render the judgment creditor a creditor having security for his debt, within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 184, but did not give a lien, so as to bring him within the exception in that section: and, consequently, that the judgment creditor could not prevail against the assignees. Holmes v. Tutton, 5 El. & Bl. 65; 24 L. J., Q. B. 346; 1 Jur., N. S. 975.

A garnishee was ordered, under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 63, to pay a plaintiff's judgment-debt forthwith, or execution to issue. The order was served and payment demanded, but subsequently, and before payment or execution, the judgment debtor became bankrupt:—Held, that the plaintiff was only a creditor having security for his debt within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 184, that such security was not such a lien as was protected by the exception in that section, and that he was not entitled to the amount of his judgment debt in the garnishee's hands as against the assignees in bankruptcy of the judgment debtor. Tilbury v. Brown, 6 Jur., N. S. 1151; 3 L. T. 380; 9 W. R. 147.

—Sequestration of Benefice.—A sequestration, issued by a judgment creditor of a beneficed clergyman who becomes bankrupt, is entitled to priority over a subsequent sequestration issued by his assignees under the bankruptcy, notwithstanding that the first of such sequestrations was not published until after the commission of the act of bankruptcy. Hopkins v. Clark, 4 B. & S. 836; 33 L. J., Q. B. 93; 10 Jur., N. S. 439; 12 W. R. 370. Affirmed, 5 B. & S. 753; 33 L. J., Q. B. 334; 10 Jur., N. S. 1071; 12 W. R. 1029—Ex. Ch.

The judgment creditor in such case is not a creditor having security for his debt, within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 184. Id.

—Foreign Attachments.—Property attached in Jersey, being by the laws of that island vested in the creditor attaching, upon confirmation by the court of the island, in case of a bankruptcy:—Held, that the creditors attaching were entitled to hold the property attached, and to prove for the residue, where the act of bankruptcy was subsequent to the completion of the judicial act, whether on the same or any other day. D'Obree, Ex parte, 8 Ves. 82.

A creditor in England, and subject to the bankrupt laws, having attached the bankrupt's estate abroad, must restore it. Benfield v. Solomons, 9 Ves. 80.

—Mayor's Court.—A creditor who has served a writ of foreign attachment in an action in the Mayor's Court, but has not obtained judgment in the action before the commencement of the bankruptcy or liquidation of his debtor, is not "a creditor holding security on the property of the debtor" within the meaning of s. 12 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. Lery v. Lovell, 14 Ch. D. 234; 49 L. J., Ch. 305; 42 L. T. 242; 28 W. R. 602—C. A.

—Tolzey Court of Bristol.—An attachment of the goods of the defendant in an action of debt in the Tolzey Court of Bristol is only a process to compel the appearance of the defendant, and does not make the plaintiff a secured creditor within the meaning of sect. 16, sub-s. 5, of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. The effect of an attachment in the Tolzey Court being the same as that of a foreign attachment under the custom of the Mayor's Court of London. Sear, Ex parte, Price, In re, 17 Ch. D. 74; 44 L. T. 887—C. A.

—Conditional Acceptance of Bill of Exchange.—R. & Co. consigned goods to H. for sale, drew bills on him which they indorsed to B., to whom they handed the bills of lading as a security, and wrote to H. asking him to accept the bills as against the goods. H. gave an acceptance: "Accepted payable at the I. Bank on the delivery up of the bills of lading." At the time when the bills became payable the affairs of H. were in course of liquidation by arrangement:—Held, that the conditional acceptance made the security of B. virtually a security on the property of H., and that B. could not prove against the estate of H. without deducting the value of the security. Brett, Ex parte, Howe, In re, 6 L. R., Ch. 838; 40 L. J., Bk. 54; 25 L. T. 252; 19 W. R. 1101.

—Mortgage of Bills of Exchange.—A Bombay firm drew bills upon a London firm, who accepted them against certain consignments. The Bombay firm pledged the bills and shipping documents with a bank under a letter of hypothecation to which the London firm was not a party. The Bombay and London firms both became bankrupt. The bank thereupon sold the goods, and sought to prove against the estate of the London firm for the balance due after deducting the proceeds of sale less one-half per cent. broker's commission, and two and a-half per cent. merchant's commission:—Held, that the London firm was not bound by the terms of the letter of hypothecation, that the bank was in the position of a mortgagee or pledgee of the goods, and was entitled only to deduct from the purchase-money the bare expense of realization, namely the broker's commission, and to prove for the balance of the bills after deducting the proceeds of the goods, less the broker's commission. Oriental Bank Corporation, Ex parte, Haumann, In re, 30 L. T. 803—L. J.

iii. When Value of Security must be Deducted.

A bankrupt's property pledged must be sold, and the excess proved as a debt. Twoood, Ex parte, 19 Ves. 231.

A creditor, who has obtained goods of his debtor just before bankruptcy, cannot prove for the residue without accounting for the goods so obtained. Smith, Ex parte, 3 Bro. C. C. 46.

A claim or proof cannot be resisted because the creditor has property belonging to the estate in his possession; that is only a ground to restrain payment of the dividends. Dobson, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 666; 4 Deac. & Chit. 69.

The mere circumstance of a creditor coming in under the commission to prove or claim a debt, only gives the court jurisdiction as to the proof or claim, and not over any property in his possession of which he claims the legal ownership. Id.

A vendor of teas who retains them in his hands, a deposit in part payment being made, and the residue to be paid on a prompt day, will, upon default in payment upon the prompt day, be entitled to resell such portions as remain in his hands, and to prove against the estate of the former purchaser for the difference, if he has in the meantime become bankrupt. Moffatt, Ex parte, 4 Jur. 659; 1 Mont., D. & D. 282.

A composition creditor, who receives an assignment of a debt as a security for the composition, is not, when the old debt revives, entitled to retain the debt on a question of proof. Ellis, Ex parte, 2 Mont. & Ayr. 370.

A creditor, to whom a bankrupt has made an assignment to secure a debt, with interest, cannot, without giving up the security, prove upon a promissory note, part of the consideration for which consists of arrears of interest upon the secured debt. Clark, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 622.

A security given by the bankrupt to a creditor on an expectancy, as next of kin, in the event of a person dying intestate, must be noticed by the creditor in his proof. M'Turk, Ex parte, 2 Deac. 58; 3 Mont. & Ayr. 1.

If a creditor, who has an additional security for his debt, takes the bankrupt's acceptances, it is his duty, when he proves the debt, to state that fact; and where a creditor had not done so, the proof was ordered to be expunged, with liberty for him to go again before the commissioners and tender his proof. Hossack, Ex parte, Buck, 390.

When on the bankruptcy or liquidation of a mortgagor, a first mortgagee elects to give up his security altogether, and to prove for the whole of his mortgage debt, the security so given up does not merge in the equity of redemption for the benefit of a second mortgagee, but is available in the hands of the trustee in the bankruptcy or liquidation for the benefit of the general creditors. Cracknall v. Janson, 6 Ch. D. 735; 46 L. J., Ch. 652; 37 L. T. 118; 25 W. R. 904.

A mortgagee having given up his mortgage, and proved under a commission against the mortgagor, is not allowed to retract. Downes, Ex parte, 18 Ves. 290; 1 Rose, 96.

A creditor who proves his whole debt, and exhibits a mortgage for part, and receives a dividend, forfeits the mortgage. Eddington, Ex parte, 1 Mont. 72.

A debt cannot be expunged because a creditor holds a security not disclosed on proving; so doing is an election to abandon his lien thereon. Rolfe, Ex parte, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 305.

Lease to Bankrupt and former Partner.—The rule as to what securities a secured creditor of a bankrupt is bound to value and deduct on proving against the bankrupt's estate, explained. Two partners, who were interested in equal shares in the business of the partnership, dissolved partnership. They had carried on business at some mills, of which they held a lease, granted to them, their executors, administrators and assigns. On the dissolution, the partnership assets, other than the lease and the fixtures, were divided equally between the two partners. It was agreed that one of them should be entitled to carry on the business for seven years on his own account, and that he should pay the debts of the firm and indemnify the retiring partner against them. The retiring partner lent the other the value of his moiety of the partnership assets (other than the lease and fixtures) and granted him a lease for seven years of his moiety of the mills and fixtures. The original lease was deposited by the continuing and the retiring partners with the bankers of the former, as security for the balance which might for the time being be due from him to them, it being expressly provided that the retiring partner should be liable to the bankers only as a surety for the other. The continuing partner, before the end of the seven years, filed a liquidation petition:—Held, that, as to a moiety of the lease and fixtures, the bankers' security was upon the separate estate of the liquidating debtor, and that, before proving in the liquidation for the balance due to them by him, they must deduct a moiety of the value of the lease and fixtures. West Riding Union Banking Company, Ex parte, Turner, In re, 19 Ch. D. 105; 45 L. T. 546; 30 W. R. 239—C. A.

Bills of Exchange.—C., a factor, accepted bills drawn by A. and B., his principals, under an agreement that the proceeds of goods sent to him as factor should be security for payment of the bills: such bills were paid by A. and B. to their bankers, who knew of the agreement; A. and B., and C. became bankrupt, and the bills were dishonoured:—Held, that the bankers might have the proceeds of the goods applied in payment of the bills, and prove for the balance remaining due against both estates. Having proved the full debt makes no difference; it must be expunged pro tanto. Hobhouse, Ex parte, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 269.

Shares in Company—Partners.—Where shares in a company stood in the separate names of two partners, and the company's deed provided that no shares should be held jointly, but the partners agreed that the shares should be partnership property, the company cannot prove a joint debt against the partners without deducting the amount of such shares as they hold as security. Connell, Ex parte, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 581; 3 Deac. 201.

Proof without deducting Security—Effect.—A secured creditor who proves his debt under a liquidation petition, without deducting the value of his security, cannot, after a composition has been accepted, be allowed to set up his security. Balbinnie, In re, Jameson. Ex parte, 3 Ch. D. 488; 35 L. T. 533—C. A.

A judgment creditor delivered a fi. fa. to the sheriff before the debtor filed a liquidation petition, but no seizure was made until after the creditors had resolved to accept a composition, the resolutions had been registered, and the debtor had paid the amount of the composition to a trustee appointed by the creditors:—Held, that the execution creditor was not a creditor holding a security at the time when the composition became binding, and that he could not enforce his writ against the debtor's goods afterwards. Id.

Election.—A plaintiff recovered judgment in an action of detainee. The defendant became bankrupt, and the plaintiff, his judgment being still unsatisfied, carried in a claim for the full amount of the judgment debt, but his claim was neither admitted nor rejected, and he never voted at any meeting of the creditors:—Held, that he had not by this elected to give up his property in the subject-matter of the action of detainee. Ware, In re, Drake, Ex parte, 5 Ch. D. 866; 46 L. J., Bk. 105; 36 L. T. 677; 25 W. R. 641—C. A.

Omitting Security by Mistake.—Semble, that a secured creditor, who by mistake has omitted from his proof of debt a part of his security, will not necessarily be held to have forfeited that part, but may be allowed to rectify his proof. Bagshaw, Ex parte, Ker, In re, 13 Ch. D. 304; 41 L. T. 743; 28 W. R. 403—C. A.

Where parties have proved their debts on the footing of holding no security, they will not generally be permitted to withdraw their proof and set up a security; but ignorance of the existence of a security may be ground for granting relief to a party who has so proved. Grugeon v. Gerrard, 4 Y. & C. 119.

A creditor who had proved a debt, and voted in respect of it, subsequently discovered that he had omitted to state and value a certain mortgage security. He obtained leave to withdraw his proof and file an amended one upon certain conditions. Having appealed against the order, and the appeal having been dismissed, no further steps were taken by the creditor. The trustees in the bankruptcy obtained an order declaring that they were entitled to the proceeds of the mortgage security which had been omitted from the original proof:—Held (reversing the decision of the court below), that the matter was not res judicata, and that as there had been a bona fide mistake on the part of the proving creditor in the omission of his mortgage security, he was entitled to have it rectified and to amend his proof. Whitton, Ex parte, Graves, In re, 43 L. T. 480.

Proof of Debt without Valuing the Security—Whether Surety Discharged.—The defendant became surety for the payment of a debt of 400*l.*, owing from P. to the plaintiff; and by agreement between the parties, P. handed over a policy of insurance on his life to the plaintiff as collateral security. P. afterwards became bankrupt, and at that time two of the premiums on the policy remained unpaid, and the policy had lapsed. The plaintiff proved in B.'s bankruptcy for the full amount of her debt, stating in her proof that she held the policy as collateral security, but putting no value on it. The policy was afterwards given up to the trustee in bankruptcy for the benefit of the creditors, and the insurance company agreed to reinstate it. The plaintiff sued the defendant, as surety, for the amount of P.'s debt, and at the trial the plaintiff's counsel agreed to credit the defendant with 32*l.*, being the admitted value of the policy when reinstated:—Held (affirming the judgment of Field, J.), that the defendant's position as a surety was not altered so as to discharge him from liability, by reason of the course the plaintiff had pursued in the bankruptcy, as the policy was valueless when she sent in her proof. Rainbow v. Juggins, 5 Q. B. D. 422; 49 L. J., Q. B. 718; 43 L. T. 346; 29 W. R. 130—C. A. Affirming 5 Q. B. D. 138; 49 L. J., Q. B. 353; 42 L. T. 88; 28 W. R. 428.

Held, also, that, if the policy was of value when the plaintiff proved in the bankruptcy, and if she exercised her option, under the bankruptcy law, of handing over her security to the trustee, and proving for the whole amount of her debt, the defendant was not thereby wholly discharged from liability as a surety, but only to the extent of the value of the policy. Id.

Creditor not bound by Debtor's Estimate of Security.—A secured creditor is in no way bound by a compounding debtor's estimate of the value of his security. Hodgkinson, Ex parte, Bestwick, In re, 1 Ch. D. 702; 45 L. J., Bk. 78; 34 L. T. 73. Affirmed, 2 Ch. D. 485; 45 L. J., Bk. 148; 34 L. T. 784; 24 W. R. 938—C. A.

He is entitled to abstain from proving his debt, or taking any part in the composition proceedings, and, when he has realised his security, he may claim from the debtor payment of the composition upon the balance which may then remain unsatisfied of the debt. Id.

iv. When Value of Security need not be Deducted.

Security given by Third Persons.—The deduction of a security is never made in bankruptcy, except when it is the property of the bankrupt. Parr, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 76; 18 Ves. 65.

Security is not to go in reduction of proof, unless the property of the estate against which the proof is ordered. Adams, Ex parte, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 265.

Creditors having securities of third persons to a greater amount than the debt, may prove and receive dividends upon the full amount of the securities, to the extent of 20*s.* in the pound upon the actual debt. Bloxham, Ex parte, 6 Ves. 449, 800.

A creditor has a right to prove, and avail himself of all collateral securities from third persons, to the extent of 20*s.* in the pound; therefore, where bills are drawn and accepted by the same persons as constituting distinct firms, proof may be made against the acceptor, without deducting the value of a security from the drawer. Parr, Ex parte, 18 Ves. 65; 1 Rose, 76.

A bankrupt, previously to the commission against him, procured persons to assign an interest in copyhold premises, as a security to a creditor of his. The creditor may prove under the commission, without delivering up such security. Goodman, Ex parte, 3 Madd. 373.

Security by Bankrupt and Wife.—Where a bankrupt and his wife executed a power of appointment of the wife's estate to a creditor as a security for a debt due from the bankrupt:—Held, that the creditor might prove for the whole debt without giving up the security, it being incumbent on him to recover what he could from the bankrupt's estate before he resorted to the property of the wife. Hedderley, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 487.

Partners—Separate Security.—W. and T., partners, being indebted to A. in 10,000*l.* on bills, T. alone assigned to A. certain securities to secure the 10,000*l.*, under which 8,414*l.* was received. On the bankruptcy of W. and T.:—Held, that A. might prove for 10,000*l.*, without deducting the 8,414*l.* from the proof. Adams, Ex parte, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 157.

A creditor, having a joint and several security for his debt, is not entitled to double proof against the joint and separate estates, although his debt is secured by two independent instruments. Hill, Ex parte, 2 Deac. 249.

A joint creditor, having separate security from one of his co-debtors, was admitted to prove his debt against the joint estate, without surrender or sale of his security. Peacock, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 27.

An equitable mortgagee of one partner for a debt due from the other, may prove his whole debt against the separate estate of that partner, and retain his security against the first. Rogers, Ex parte, 1 Deac. & Chit. 38.

A joint creditor took an equitable mortgage from one of two partners, as a security for his debt; after which that partner died, and the other became bankrupt:—Held, that the creditor might prove the amount of his debt without the previous sale of his security. Bowden, Ex parte, 1 Deac. & Chit. 135.

A. and B., co-partners, executed a mortgage upon their joint property, for securing payment of a sum of money due by them to C; and by the mortgage deed they entered into a joint and several covenant for payment of the debt to C. Upon the bankruptcy of A. and B.:—Held, that C. was entitled to prove his debt against the separate estates of A. and B. respectively, without giving up his joint security. Sheppard, Ex parte, 3 Jur. 1147; 2 Mont., D. & D. 204.

A creditor, whose debt was secured by the joint and several covenants of two partners in trade, and also by a mortgage on part of the joint property, admitted to prove his debt against the separate estate of each without surrendering or realizing his mortgage security. Plummer, In re, 1 Ph. 56.

One of three partners deposited with a joint creditor a bond belonging to himself, to secure the partnership debt:—Held, on the bankruptcy of the partners, that the creditor could prove the amount of his debt against the joint estate, without giving up the bond. Halifax, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 544.

Property belonging to a member of a firm was charged by him in favour of a bank for securing his own private debts to the bank, and also those of the firm. Each partner in the firm having gone into liquidation, the bank realized the security, deducted the private debt of the owner out of the proceeds of sale, and carried over the residue to a suspense account:—Held, that the bank was not prevented from proving for their whole debt against the joint estate. Watson, Ex parte, Walker, In re, 42 L. T. 516; 28 W. R. 632.

Parties to Bill of Exchange.—A depository has a right to avail himself of his pledge to its utmost extent in point of proof, and to his fullest and most complete indemnity at the time of proving. Thus, a creditor, with whom a bill of exchange had been deposited as a security, first proved his debt against the estate of the drawee, his principal debtor, and thereby and by other means reduced his debt to 14*l*. Subsequently to that, the acceptor became bankrupt; under his commission he was entitled to prove, not only the 14*l*., but all the interest upon his debt at the time of making that proof to the complete liquidation of the account in respect of which he held the bill as a security. Martin, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 87.

When a bill of exchange, accepted for the accommodation of the drawer, is deposited by him as security for a debt less than the amount of the bill, the holder is entitled to prove in the bankruptcy of the acceptor for the full amount of the bill, though he cannot receive dividends in excess of the debt due to him by the drawer. Newton, Ex parte, Griffin, Ex parte, Bunyard, In re, 16 Ch. D. 330; 50 L. J., Ch. 484; 44 L. T. 232; 29 W. R. 407—C. A.

A. owed B. 227*l*., and to secure the amount deposited with him bills to the amount of 1,158*l*., drawn by A. and accepted by C. A. and C. both became bankrupt:—Held, that B. might prove the full amount of the bills under the fiat against C., but not to receive dividends beyond 227*l*. Phillips, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 232.

A firm in Charleston applied to a firm in Liverpool to raise the necessary funds for the purchase of cotton in America for sale in England, at the risk of certain speculators for whom they acted, and the Liverpool firm applied to an English bank for an advance for that purpose. An arrangement was accordingly made, under which the Charleston firm drew upon an American branch of the bank for the amount required, purchased the cotton, consigned it to the Liverpool firm, drew bills upon that firm, and indorsed them to the bank. At the same time the cotton was consigned to the Liverpool firm, who accepted the bills drawn upon them by the Charleston firm, and the bills of lading were endorsed by the Charleston firm to the bank as security for their advance. Afterwards the Liverpool and Charleston firms became insolvent. The value of the cotton was insufficient to cover the acceptances of the Liverpool firm:—Held, that the transaction was a joint adventure of the Charleston and Liverpool firms, and that they were jointly interested in the cotton, and consequently that the bank could prove against the estate of the Liverpool firm for the sum advanced without giving up their security. English and American Bank, Ex parte, 4 L. R., Ch. 49; 19 L. T. 302.

Bills of Exchange held by Banker pending Discount.—Bills of exchange indorsed by a customer to his banker in order that they may be discounted and held by the banker "pending discount," i.e., pending enquiries as to the solvency of the acceptors, the banker meanwhile making some advances to the customer on the credit of the bills, are not securities, which the banker, in proving in the customer's bankruptcy for the amount due to him by the customer, is bound to value. The banker is entitled to prove for the full amount due to him, and also to recover what he can from the other parties to the bills, provided that he does not receive in the whole more than 20*s*. in the pound. Schafeld, Ex parte, Firth, In re, 12 Ch. D. 337; 48 L. J., Bk. 122; 40 L. T. 823; 27 W. R. 925—C. A.

Equitable Mortgage.—An equitable mortgagee of an estate of which a bankrupt is legally the owner may prove, without giving up his security, if the estate which is subject to the mortgage is so encumbered, that the bankrupt would have no beneficial interest in it if the mortgage was removed. Turner, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 576.

A partnership, consisting of a father and son, was dissolved. The father equitably mortgaged an estate of his own to secure a debt due from the son separately, and afterwards died indebted, jointly with his son, to an amount more than sufficient to exhaust his assets, including the mortgaged estate, even if the mortgage were removed. The estate descended to the son, who became bankrupt:—Held, that the mortgagee might prove and keep his security. Id.

Cross Securities.—When a man had borrowed money upon the guarantee of a surety, and the surety held a security from the borrower, on the bankruptcy of the borrower the principal creditor was allowed to prove his debt without regard to the security. Yewdall, In re, Braithwaite, Ex parte, 46 L. J., Bk. 87; 36 L. T. 520; 25 W. R. 635. Affirmed, 46 L. J., Bk. 109; 36 L. T. 841; 25 W. R. 741—C. A.

A bank, carrying on business in Bombay and London, sold to C. & Sons, of Bombay, their acceptances for 25,000*l*., payable in London three and four months after sight. In payment, C. & Sons gave the bank bills 20,000*l*., drawn on C. & Co., payable six months after sight, and 5,000*l*. in cash, together with a further sum, by way of discount, in respect of the difference of times when the bills became due. C. & Co. accepted the bills drawn on them, and C. & Sons indorsed to C. & Co. the bank's acceptances for 25,000*l*. The bank being unable to meet some of their acceptances, gave C. & Co. a security for payment. Subsequently the bank became insolvent, and was ordered to be wound up. Both C. & Co. and C. & Sons executed assignments for benefit of their creditors. All the acceptances of C. & Co. had been dealt with by the bank, and were in the hands of third parties, but C. & Co. were the holders of the bank's acceptances to the extent of 19,000*l*. The representatives of C. & Co., acting on the erroneous assumption that the bank held their acceptances for 20,000*l*., sent in a claim in the winding-up of the bank for 5,000*l*. only. Subsequently, upon discovering the fact that the bank had parted with all their acceptances, they claimed to be admitted to prove to the full amount of 19,000*l*. They had in the meantime realized their security:—Held, that the representatives of C. & Co., as indorsees for value, were entitled to prove against the bank in respect of the acceptances held by them; and that since the claim for 5,000*l*. had been made on an assumption of facts shewn to be erroneous by the affidavit made in support of it, the case should be treated as if the claim for the whole 19,000*l*. had been made at the time when the original claim for 5,000*l*. was carried in, and that being before C. & Co. had realized their security, they were entitled to retain the amount so realized as well as to prove for the whole amount in the winding-up. London, Bombay and Mediterranean Bank, In re, Cama, Ex parte, 9 L. R., Ch. 686; 43 L. J., Ch. 683; 31 L. T. 234; 22 W. R. 809.

Guarantees.—A banker permitted a customer to overdraw his account upon having a limited guarantee from a surety, which provided that all dividends, compositions, and payments received on account of the customer should be applied as payments in gross, and that the guarantee should apply to and secure any ultimate balance that should remain due to the bank. The customer, when indebted to the bank more than the amount of the guarantee, compounded with his creditors, and the surety paid the amount of his guarantee:—Held, that the bank was entitled to receive dividends upon the full amount of their debt until by means of such dividends and the amount received under the guarantee they should have been paid the whole sum due. Midland Banking Company v. Chambers, 7 L. R., Eq. 179; 19 L. T. 548; 17 W. R. 156. Affirmed, 4 L. R., Ch. 398; 38 L. J., Ch. 478; 20 L. T. 346; 17 W. R. 598.

A bank held the guarantee of B. for their debtor's account, whereby it was provided that "the guarantee should extend to the repayment of all moneys which should at any time be due from the debtor to the bank, and should be a continuing guarantee to the extent of 800*l*. . . " and "that the guarantee should not be considered as wholly or partially satisfied by the payment or liquidation at any time or times thereafter of any sums for the time being due, but should extend to and be a security for every and all future sum or sums of money at any time due to the bank thereon notwithstanding any such payment or liquidation;" and "that all dividends, compositions, and payments should be taken or applied as payments in gross, and that the guarantee should apply to secure any ultimate balance due to the bank." The debtor having filed a petition for liquidation, B. paid 800*l*., the amount of his guarantee, to the bank. Upon a question whether the bank, or B., was entitled to prove for the 800*l*. :—Held, that B. having by the guarantee contracted himself out of his original right, in favour of the bank, the latter was entitled to prove for the whole amount of their debt, including the 800*l*. paid by B. Midland Banking Company, Ex parte, Sellers, In re, 38 L. T. 395.

Agreement between Surety and Creditor that Receipt of Dividends in Bankruptcy shall not diminish Liability of Surety to pay in Full.]

—A customer gave to his bankers, as a security for the balance which might from time to time be due from him to them, the joint and several bond for 1,000*l*. of himself and a surety, the liability of the surety being expressly limited to 500*l*. There was a proviso in the bond that any dividends received by the bankers in the bankruptcy of the customer should not, so far as concerned the surety, go in discharge of his liability; but the bankers should notwithstanding be entitled to recover on the bond against the surety to the full extent of 500*l*., or so much thereof as should, together with the dividends, amount to 20*s*. in the pound on the debt due by the customer to the bankers. The customer filed a liquidation petition, and the bankers proved for the debt due to them. Afterwards the surety paid the bankers 500*l*., and he then proved in the liquidation for 500*l*.—Held, by Bacon, C. J., that the proof of the bankers must be reduced by 500*l*., but that this reduction would not prejudice any right of the bankers against the surety. But held, by the Court of Appeal, that the bankers were entitled to retain their proof for the full amount. National Provincial Bank of England, Ex parte, Rees, In re, 17 Ch. D. 98; 44 L. T. 325; 29 W. R. 796. Reversing 44 L. T. 159.

v. Sale of Security by Order of the Court.

Mortgage—Conditional Power of Sale.—A bankrupt executed a mortgage with a power of sale, subject to a proviso that the power was not to be exercised for five years, if the interest was regularly paid:—Held, that the mortgagee might have the common order for sale, with liberty to prove for the residue. Bignold, Ex parte, 3 Deac. 151; 3 Mont. & Ayr. 477.

Unpaid Vendor of Real Property.—An application by a vendor, who had not conveyed, for a sale of the premises, in discharge of his lien for the unpaid purchase-money, and to prove for any deficiency, granted. Glyde, Ex parte, 1 Glyn & J. 323.

Unpaid Vendor of Personality.—Where a bankrupt contracted to buy some shares in the United States Bank, the certificates of which were left in the hands of the vendor as a security for the payment of the greatest portion of the purchase-money:—Held, that the vendor was entitled, as in the case of an equitable mortgage, to an order for the sale of the shares in satisfaction of the unpaid purchase-money, with liberty to prove for the difference. Sheppard, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 481.

Deposit without written Memorandum.—Where, in June, 1837, the bankrupt verbally deposited a bundle of deeds to secure a debt, which the petitioner believed were all the deeds relating to the property; and in August, 1843, only two days before the fiat, the bankrupt deposited two other material deeds relating to the property; and there was no affidavit on the part of the assignee, or the bankrupt, impeaching the validity of the latter deposit; the court would not impute to it the character of a fraudulent preference, and made the common order as in the case of a verbal deposit. Gillett, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 488.

The last deposit was accompanied with the following memorandum:—"The deeds are placed in the hands of F. G.:"—Held, that this did not entitle the petitioner to an order as on a deposit accompanied with a memorandum in writing. Id.

A trader deposited policies of assurance with his bankers to secure the floating balance due from him, and signed a memorandum of the object of the deposit, of which notice was given to the insurance office. Afterwards he took a partner, and the policies remained and were treated as a security for the floating balance due from the firm, but of this change in the object of the security no memorandum was signed, nor was any notice given to the office on the firm becoming bankrupt:—Held, that the bankers were entitled to the usual order as in the case of an equitable mortgage without a written memorandum. Barnett, Ex parte, 1 De Gex, 194.

— Insufficient Memorandum. — Where a written memorandum does not specify the purpose for which deeds are deposited, the party will only be entitled to an order, as on a deposit without any memorandum in writing. Smith, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 165.

— Leases Substituted for Agreements. — A loan was made on a deposit of agreements for building leases, with a written memorandum; afterwards the leases were obtained and deposited in lieu of the agreements, but without any fresh memorandum:—Held, that on the usual petition of the equitable mortgagee in bankruptcy, the order ought to be made as in cases of no written memorandum. Anderson, Ex parte, 3 De G. & S. 600.

— Conflict as to Terms of Deposit. — The court will order a sale of property comprised in deposited deeds, although there is conflicting evidence upon the question whether they were deposited as a security or not. Barnes, Ex parte, 6 Jur. 652.

Partners. — Where a partner gives a separate security for a joint debt and becomes bankrupt, the other partners remaining solvent, the creditor may have, under the separate fiat, the usual order for sale, but can only have liberty to prove for the deficiency against the joint estate. Leicestershire Banking Company, Ex parte, 1 De Gex, 292.

One of two partners deposited the deeds of his own estate by way of equitable mortgage to secure a partnership debt, and afterwards became bankrupt, the other partner being solvent:—Held, that an order might be made for the sale of the equitable mortgage; but no proof allowed against the bankrupt partner for the purpose of receiving dividends. Lloyd, Ex parte, 3 Deac. 305; 3 Mont. & Ayr. 601.

Bankrupt, the Purchaser of Equity of Redemption. — A mortgagee cannot have the usual order where the bankrupt is not the mortgagor, but a purchaser of the equity of redemption, although the vendors of the equity of redemption, with whom the bankrupt has covenanted to pay the debt, join in the petition, and pray to be at liberty, after paying the deficiency, to prove for the amount. Keightley, Ex parte, 3 De G. & S. 583.

Freehold and Leasehold in one Order. — Both freehold and leasehold may be included in an order of sale. Leathes, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & Chit. 112.

Sale of Part. — The court will, at the instance of a legal mortgagee, order the sale of a part only of his security, where the remainder, from its being the subject of litigation in a chancery suit, is at the time unsaleable. Wace, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 730; 6 Jur. 1069.

Order cannot be Abandoned. — A creditor who has obtained an order for sale of a security, with liberty to prove for the deficiency, cannot afterwards abandon that order, and claim to prove for his whole debt, retaining his security; although the order may not have been acted on, and he was not aware of his rights when the order was obtained. Davenport, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 313.

Mortgagee's Right to Rent and Crops. — A legal mortgagee obtained the usual order for sale of the property, previous to which it was arranged between himself and the assignees in bankruptcy that he should be placed in the same situation as if he had given notice to the tenants:—Held, that the mortgagee was, under these circumstances, entitled to the crops growing on the estate at the time of the order of the sale. Barnes, Ex parte, 3 Deac. 223; 3 Mont. & Ayr. 497; 2 Jur. 329.

And to the rents due since the bankruptcy, and to the crops. Id.

If a legal mortgage is ordered to be sold the assignees are entitled to the rents to the time of sale, unless the mortgagee makes an actual entry, or gives notice to the tenants to pay the rents to him. Living, Ex parte, 2 Mont. & Ayr. 223; 1 Deac. 1.

Incumbrancers on a bankrupt's property, under an agreement for security, had enforced their lien against the assignees in a chancery suit, in which the subject of the security had been sold, and the proceeds applied in reduction of the debt:—Held, that in proving for the residue, the mortgagees were entitled to set off the income of the property accruing due after the bankruptcy against the interest upon the debt since the same period. Penfold, Ex parte, 4 De G. & S. 282.

Where there has been an order for the sale of mortgaged property, and the sale is afterwards deferred, the mortgagee is entitled to apply the rents and profits in reduction of the interest accruing subsequently to the order of sale, and up to the time of taking the account. Ramsbottom, Ex parte, 4 Deac. & Chit. 198; 2 Mont. & Ayr. 79.

Liability for Rent. — An equitable mortgagee of leasehold property must satisfy a distress for rent out of the proceeds of the sale, and can only prove for the deficiency. Cocks, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & Chit. 8.

In general, an equitable mortgagee is not entitled to his rents prior to the date of the order for sale. But where, prior to the bankruptcy, the mortgagor absconded, and the equitable mortgagee of part of the property took possession of that part from an agent, and a fiat issued against the mortgagor, and then the solicitor to the commission, on behalf of the creditors and the equitable mortgagee jointly, appointed the same agent to manage the whole property, which agent was subsequently adopted by the assignees:—Held, that the mortgagee, though he was also petitioning creditor, was entitled to the rents from the time of his first taking possession. Bignold, Ex parte, 4 Deac. & Chit. 259; 2 Mont. & Ayr. 16.

Equitable mortgagees, having received rents before an order for sale, are entitled to retain the same as against the assignees, and are not bound to refund, as a condition for obtaining the order. Williams, Ex parte, 13 W. R. 564; 12 L. T. 180.

Sale of Security at Instance of Secured Creditor—Jurisdiction.—Where the trustee of a liquidating debtor had with the sanction of the creditors accepted a composition under s. 28 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869:—Held, on appeal, reversing the decision of the court below, that the Court of Bankruptcy had no jurisdiction upon the application of a secured creditor, who had not proved in the liquidation, to order the sale of his security. His proper course was to realize his security as a mortgage in the usual manner in the High Court and then prove for any deficiency that might ensue in the Court of Bankruptcy. Holmes, In re, Woods or Holmes, Ex parte, 43 L. T. 447; 29 W. R. 124.

When an equitable mortgagee is allowed to conduct the sale, and wishes to bid and become the purchaser of the premises comprised in his mortgage, the court will, before giving leave, ascertain the value of the premises, and fix a reserved bidding. Commercial Bank of London, Ex parte, 9 L. T. 782.

Costs of Sale.—Where a legal mortgagee petitions for leave to bid and not for sale, it is not the practice to give him costs. Smith, Ex parte, 13 Jur. 1044; S. P., Martelli, Ex parte, 6 Jur. 52.

An order was made, with the consent of the mortgagee of an estate of the bankrupt with a power of sale, that it should be sold in the bankruptcy. A petition was presented by the mortgagee for liberty to bid at the sale, and for payment of the costs of the application out of the purchase-money, to which the assignees assented:—Held, that he was not entitled to such costs, unless the assignees would state that the petition was presented at their request. Danks, Ex parte, 12 L. J., Bk. 45.

Where the mortgagee of a bankrupt's estate called on the commissioners to direct a sale, under Lord Loughborough's order of March, 1794, and became the purchaser at such sale:—Held, in an action for money paid, brought by the solicitors to the assignees, that he was liable to reimburse them the expenses of advertisements, and the commissioners' fees for their attendance to perfect such sale, although the estate sold was insufficient to cover the sum originally advanced by such mortgagee. Bowles v. Perring, 5 Moore, 290; 2 B. & B. 457.

Where a party, having an equitable mortgage by deposit of title deeds, with a written memorandum, has lost the memorandum, he will, on his presenting a petition for the usual order for sale, have to pay any costs occasioned by such loss. Rogers, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 297; 7 Jur. 406.

The costs of an application of a mortgagee for leave to bid at the sale will not be allowed out of the proceeds, unless the assignees consent. Anon., Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 339.

Practice as to costs of equitable mortgagee's petition for sale. Barclay, Ex parte, 5 De G., Mac. & G. 403.

Equitable mortgagee, by deposit of shares in a public company without written memorandum, is entitled to his costs on evidence of custom not to give a written memorandum. Moss, Ex parte, 3 De G. & S. 299; 18 L. J., Bk. 17; 13 Jur. 866.

A letter written after the deposit, and referring in general terms to it, and to a bond in which the purpose of the deposit was stated, is a sufficient memorandum to entitle to costs. Bisdee, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 333.

A letter noticing that certain deeds had been deposited to secure a particular debt, together with a subsequent letter requesting further accommodation, on the ground that the depositary held ample security for the amount of the depositor's account, constitute together a sufficiently definite memorandum in writing of an equitable mortgage for the whole amount due, so as to entitle the depositary to his costs. Chrellt, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 689; 5 Jur. 555.

Where there was a sufficient part performance to take a parol contract for sale out of the Statute of Frauds, and the purchaser became bankrupt:—Held, that the vendor, seeking to have effect given to his lien for unpaid purchase-money, was entitled to have his costs out of the estate sold. Cooper, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 717.

i. Sureties.

Who are Sureties.—In 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 8, the words "person liable" comprehend all persons rendering themselves responsible for the debt of another. Yonge, Ex parte, 2 Rose, 40; 2 Ves. & B. 31.

Accommodation Parties to Bills of Exchange.—The acceptor of an accommodation bill is a surety, and must prove his debt under a commission against the drawer. Van Sandau v. Corabie, 3 B. & A. 13; 1 Chit. 16.

So an accommodation indorser is a person liable to pay the bill for the party accommodated; against whom therefore if he becomes bankrupt, such indorser, though not called on to pay the bill till after the bankruptcy, may prove the amount. Bassett v. Dodgin, 9 Bing. 653; 2 M. & Scott, 777.

The plaintiff having accepted a bill payable at a future day for the accommodation of the defendant, the latter afterwards, and before the bill became due, committed an act of bankruptcy, followed by a commission, which was afterwards superseded, and time was given to the bankrupt by his creditors; and the plaintiff thereupon accepted another bill for the same debt, with the addition of the interest and stamp:—Held, that this was a continuation of the suretyship by the plaintiff for the defendant, which existed before the act of bankruptcy and the first commission: and a second effectual commission having afterwards issued upon the same act of bankruptcy, before the plaintiff's second acceptance became duc. which was paid when due :—Held, that the amount was provable as a debt under such commission. Nedman v. Martinant, 13 East, 427 ; 12 East, 664 ; 1 Rose, 106.

Right to Sue.—Where A. became surety for B. for a debt due to C., and, after a commission of bankruptcy issued against B., paid part of the debt to C., and obtained from him an indemnity against personal liability for the remainder, the whole of the debt having been proved under the commission by C. :—Held, that A. might maintain an action against B. for the money so paid, as having been paid to his use, notwithstanding the 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 8. Soutten v. Soutten, 1 D. & R. 521 ; 5 B. & A. 352.

Surety on Faith of Person joining as Co-Surety.—A., as surety to a firm, signed a joint and several bill of exchange, on the faith that B. would join as co-surety ; B. never signed it, but A. was afterwards compelled to pay it, by proceedings at law, at the suit of an indorsee. One of the firm died, and the others became bankrupt :—Held, first, that the firm was not entitled to avail itself of the bill, and was liable to repay the amount, and the costs of proceedings both at law and equity ; and secondly, that the claim was of such a nature as not to be provable under the bankruptcy, and therefore not barred by the certificate. Rice v. Gordon, 11 Beav. 265.

Co-Sureties.—If A. and B. give a joint and several promissory note for the debt of C. and B. becomes bankrupt, and A. pays the amount, he cannot prove against B. as a surety. Porter, Ex parte, 2 Mont. & Ayr. 281.

Contribution.—The plaintiff, the defendant and another party, were co-sureties for A., by a joint and several promissory note payable on demand. The defendant afterwards became bankrupt, at which time the plaintiff had not paid his share of the debt, but subsequently he had paid more than his proportion :—Held, in an action for contribution, that the bankruptcy of the defendant was no answer, as the case was not within 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 52, the plaintiff not being a person liable for the bankrupt's debt within the meaning of that section. Wallis v. Swinburne, 1 Ex. 203 ; 17 L. J., Ex. 169 ; 11 Jur. 781.

A., surety with B., for C., was compelled to pay the debt after the bankruptcy of B. The certificate of B. is no answer to the action of A. for contribution. Clements v. Langley, 2 N. & M. 269 ; 5 B. & Ad. 372.

Bills Accepted to take up old Bills—Indemnity.—The plaintiff accepted two bills drawn upon him by the defendant for value ; before they arrived at maturity, the plaintiff being unable to meet them, it was agreed that he should accept other two bills in lieu of them, in consideration of which the defendant undertook to provide for the first two, which he had negotiated. The defendant, however, failed to perform his engagement, and the plaintiff was ultimately compelled to pay all the bills. The two first-mentioned bills became due before, but were not taken up by the plaintiff until after, the fiat against the defendant. In an action against him for breach of the indemnity :—Held, that the bills constituted a debt of the bankrupt, for which the plaintiff was liable at the time the fiat issued, within the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 52, and consequently that the certificate was a bar. Filbey v. Lawford, 4 Scott, N. R. 208 ; 3 M. & G. 468.

Counter Security by Principal Debtor and his Partner.—A., and B. his surety, entered into a bond for payment, by instalments, of a debt of A., and also of interest and premiums on a policy. As part of the same arrangement, A. and C. (his partner), entered into a counter security to B., by way of joint covenant of indemnity. A. and C. became bankrupt, and the condition of the bond having been fulfilled up to the date of the fiat, was afterwards broken :—Held, that B., who paid the amount, could not prove against the joint estate of A. and C., on the counter security Meyer, Ex parte, 6 De G., Mac. & G. 775 ; 12 Jur. 447.

Bond to the King.—Where A., B., and C. entered into a bond to the king, the condition of which was, that A. as sub-distributor of stamps, should truly account for all stamped vellum which he should receive, and should pay to the commissioners the duties payable for the same, and also the price of such vellum, together with all moneys which he should receive on account of the duties on personal legacies and stage coaches ; and A., being indebted to the king in a certain sum, became bankrupt, and afterwards obtained his certificate ; and a scire facias having afterwards issued on the bond, B., one of the sureties, paid a sum of money to compromise the suit, and a certain other sum in defending the same :—Held, in an action by the surety to recover these sums from the bankrupt, that B. was a person surety for or liable for a debt of the bankrupt, within the 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 8, and consequently that the latter was protected by his certificate. Westcott v. Hodges, 5 B. & A. 12.

Principal Creditor failing to Prove.—Action for money paid. Plea, the defendant's certificate under a fiat, that the money was paid for a debt of the defendant due before his bankruptcy, for which the plaintiff was surety, and that the plaintiff paid the money without request from the defendant, except the request supposed to arise by law. Replication, that, before the payment, the defendant had obtained his certificate, and that a final dividend had been made of his estate, and that there was not any debt in respect of the payment of which the plaintiff could have proved, or for which he could have received any dividend :—Held, that the certificate was a discharge from the claim, as the principal creditor might have proved, and if he had, the plaintiff would have been entitled to the benefit of that proof, either in reduction of his liability to the creditor, if the creditor received the dividends, or by receiving the dividends himself, if he paid the whole debt to the creditor ; or the plaintiff might have paid the debt at once to the creditor, and have himself proved before any dividend was declared ; or, if the creditor would not take the debt, the plaintiff might have compelled him to prove for the plaintiff's benefit. Jackson v. Magee, 3 Q. B. 48 ; 2 G. & D. 402 ; 6 Jur. 1107.

Payment by Surety of Rent due after Bankruptcy.—Where the plaintiff, who was surety for the defendant for the payment of an annual rent, sued the defendant for money paid, and stated in the replication that he had paid it for rent due by the defendant after the bankruptcy:—Held, that he could recover, as he was not a surety within the statute. McDougal v. Paton, 2 Moore, 644; 8 Taunt. 580.

Lessee and Sub-Lessee—Indemnity.—A declaration alleged that the defendant occupied premises of W. at a certain rent; and in consideration that the plaintiff, at the request of the defendant, had become tenant to him at a certain rent, the defendant promised the plaintiff to indemnify him against the rent payable to W., and against any distress or action, costs, charges, damages, or expenses, by reason of non-payment, alleging as a breach that the defendant did not indemnify the plaintiff, by reason whereof a distress was made by W. on his goods for rent in arrear by the defendant, and that they were sold to satisfy that rent, and the costs of the distress. The defendant pleaded that, before distress, he petitioned the Court of Bankruptcy, was adjudged bankrupt, and obtained his certificate, and that the rent distrained for was due at the time of filing the petition, and that the plaintiff was the tenant of the defendant, and by reason of that tenancy was liable to W. for the rent due from the defendant:—Held, that the plea was bad, as the facts therein stated did not render the plaintiff a surety, or liable for the debt of the defendant; within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 173. Hoare v. White, 3 Jur., N. S. 445.

Limited Guarantee—Proviso as to Dividends.—In a continuing limited guarantee there was a proviso, that if the creditors received a dividend from any estate of the principal debtors, it should not be taken in discharge of the guarantee, but that the creditors should be entitled to recover on the guarantee to the full extent of the limit. On the bankruptcy of the principal debtors the creditors proved, and, before receiving any dividend, obtained payment from the guarantors to the full extent of the limit:—Held, that the guarantors were not entitled to stand in the place of the creditors as to so much of the proof as was equal to their payment. Miles, Ex parte, 1 De Gex, 623.

To a count for money paid, the defendant pleaded his bankruptcy and certificate, and that the money was paid after the fiat on account of a debt due from the defendant to a banking company, and for which the plaintiff was liable. Replication, that the liability arose from the plaintiff's (before the fiat) signing a guarantee for the defendant, whereby, in consideration of the company making advances to the defendant on account, the plaintiff guaranteed the sum advanced, so that his liability did not exceed 250*l.*, and that in the event of the defendant's bankruptcy, and the debt to the company exceeding 250*l.*, the company might elect which part of the account might be secured by the guarantee, and might prove the whole of the money due on any securities against the defendant's estate, and apply all the dividends in consideration of the debt beyond the 250*l.*; and that the plaintiff should only be entitled to the benefit of any proof or dividend after the company should have received the full amount owing to them, and that the company might recover the full amount guaranteed from the plaintiff; that advances were made by the company, and that they proved the whole sums due to them, and forced the plaintiff to pay the 250*l.* for which he was surety to the bankers for the bankrupt:—Held, that the plaintiff's debt was barred by 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, ss. 52 and 121. Earle v. Oliver, 2 Ex. 71.

Assignees of Lease—Indemnity.—Where one of two assignees of a lease gave a bond to the lessee, by whom the assignment was made, conditioned for the payment of the rent to the lessor and the performance of the other covenants in the lease, and for indemnifying the lessee against the non-performance of the covenants, both the assignees of the lease having become bankrupt, and the bond having been forfeited before the bankruptcy:—Held, that the lessee could not prove for the damages which had accrued previously to the bankruptcy, not having paid them to the lessor. Taylor v. Young (in error), 3 B. & A. 521; 2 Moore, 326; 8 Taunt. 315.

Co-sureties—Counter Bond.—If A. is bound with B. as a surety for the payment of a sum certain, and takes an absolute bond from B. payable the day before the original bond will become due, and B. becomes a bankrupt before the day of payment, A. may prove this debt under the commission, and B.'s certificate will be a bar to an action by A. on the counter bond, though A. does not pay the original bond till after B. has committed an act of bankruptcy. Martin v. Court, 2 T. R. 640. And see Touissant v. Martinant, 2 T. R. 100.

Surety—Indemnity.—X. became bound as a surety in a bond with Y. to A. on the 10th of August, 1778, conditioned for payment in six months; on the 1st of March, 1780, he became bound with Y. to B., conditioned for payment in six months; on the 4th of March, 1780, Y. became bound to X. also in a bond conditioned for payment of the two former bonds, and likewise to indemnify X. against those two bonds; the money secured by the second bond not being paid on the day when it became due:—Held, that the last bond was thereby forfeited, though X. was not called on to pay the money in the second bond until afterwards, and that X. might prove it as a debt under the commission of bankruptcy that issued against Y. after the forfeiture, and before payment. Hodgson v. Bell, 7 T. R. 97.

In 1855 R., and H. as his surety, gave to G. a bond for 2,000*l.* R. gave to H. by way of indemnity a warrant of attorney. In 1858, G., without the knowledge of R., gave up the bond to H., and received in satisfaction for it a promissory note of H. for the sum remaining due; R. at the same time assigned all his property to H. in satisfaction of the liabilities under which H. had come for him. Afterwards R. became bankrupt, and the warrant of attorney and the assignment became void as against the assignees in bankruptcy:—Held, that the dealings between H. and G. had not taken away the rights of H. against R., and that H. having paid the debt was entitled to prove against R.'s estate. Allen, Ex parte, 3 De G. & J. 447.

Appropriation of Payments or Dividends.—Bankers made an advance to a customer on the security of a joint promissory note of himself and a surety. The customer afterwards paid into the bank generally sums exceeding the amount of the advance, but also drew out a still larger amount, and became bankrupt :—Held, that the surety was not entitled to have the payments appropriated in discharge of the sums secured by the note. Whitworth, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 164.

A. entered into a guarantee for the payment of a debt due from the bankrupt to B., upon which occasion the bankrupt deposited with A. a lease, by way of equitable mortgage, for his indemnity. B. proved for the whole amount of his debt; and then A. applied, as equitable mortgagee, for the sale of the leasehold property :—Held, that before any part of the proceeds of the sale could be appropriated, either in payment to B. or for the indemnity of A., so much of B.'s proof must be expunged. Sherrington, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 195.

A bond was entered into by a principal and three sureties. The principal and one of the sureties compounded with their creditors, and the other two sureties became bankrupt. The obligee proved the full amount of his debt against the separate estates of the two bankrupts, and claimed under the compositions, and by these means received 20s. in the pound, but the estate of the compounding surety paid more than its contributive share :—Held, that the estate was entitled to the benefit of the proof made by the obligee against the bankrupt's surety, and to receive dividends to the extent of the bankrupt surety's contributive share. Stokes, Ex parte, 1 De Gex, 618; 12 Jur. 891.

A. being indebted to C., B. agreed to become surety for A.'s debt to the amount of 10,000l.; and it was agreed between C. and B., with the privity of A., that if A. should become bankrupt, and be then indebted to C. beyond the 10,000l., all such dividends as C. or B. should receive under the bankruptcy in respect of the whole or any part of C.'s debt should be applied, in the first place, in satisfaction of so much of such debt as should exceed in amount 10,000l., without B.'s being entitled to the benefit of such dividends until the whole of such excess should be discharged. A. subsequently became bankrupt, and, being indebted to C. in an amount exceeding 10,000l., the whole debt was proved by C. under the fiat. C. afterwards received from B. full payment of that portion of the debt for which he (B.) was responsible. B., having taken a mortgage for his indemnity from A., obtained also after the bankruptcy, by means of that mortgage, payment from the bankrupt's estate in full. C. had no notice of B.'s mortgage. C. did not receive 20s. in the pound on his whole debt :—Held, that A.'s assignees were not entitled, as against C., to receive the dividends on that part of his proof which represented the amount paid by B. Hope, Ex parte, 8 Jur. 1128.

j. By and against Trustees.

Who are Trustees—Persons dealing with Trust Funds.—A trustee under a will permitted the trust fund, as the moneys were from time to time realized, to be paid into the hands of bankers, who had knowledge of the trusts. One of the partners, without the assent of the trustee, dealt with a portion of the fund, by investing it on mortgage :—Held, that the bankers were not jointly and separately liable in the character of trustees, but that they only incurred a liability as between banker and customer; and that, on the bankruptcy of the bankers, the trustees could only prove against their joint estate for such balance as was in their hands at the time of the bankruptcy. Burton, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 364.

By a marriage settlement a sum of money was to be received by the trustees, and invested in government or real securities, and the interest was to be paid to the wife for life for her separate use, without a power of anticipation, with remainder to the children. One of the trustees received the money, and advanced it to a partnership of merchants, without taking any security. He received the interest from the partnership, and paid it over to the wife regularly up to the time of his death; afterwards the partnership paid the interest to the wife directly, and without the intervention of the surviving trustee. In the partnership books the accounts relating to the whole transaction were entered, as between the wife and the partnership only. Upon the partnership becoming bankrupt :—Held, that the partners had constituted themselves directly trustees, and that the proofs on behalf of the trust estate might be made either against the joint estate or the separate estates. Woodin, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 399.

Executors had a balance in that character with bankers, who (with the executors' consent) invested part of it on securities, not of a proper description for an investment by executors. The bankers made no inquiry as to the power of the executors to make the investment, but if they had made the inquiry, all the information which they would probably have been able to obtain, would have shewn that the executors were residuary legatees, and that the balance was a part of the clear residue. The fact, however, was, that the investment was a breach of trust, there being a codicil which the executors had kept back, but afterwards proved, constituting them trustees only :—Held, on the bankers becoming bankrupt, that they had not so participated in the breach of trust as to entitle the cestuis que trustent to prove against their separate estates. Barnewall, Ex parte, 6 De G., Mac. & G. 801.

— Purchaser or Agent.—T. consigned goods to N. at an invoice price. N. dealt with the goods as an owner, and sold them at such prices and in such manner as he thought fit. He sent regular monthly statements of the goods sold, and every month paid the invoice price of the goods comprised in the previous monthly statement. N. was partner in a firm of N., J. & Co. and, by arrangement with his partners, used the partnership as his bankers in reference to the above business which he carried on for his separate benefit, and an account of the moneys paid in and drawn out was regularly kept. N., J. & Co. having executed a deed of arrangement with their creditors, at a time when the account of N. shewed a balance of 2,035l. 1s. 2d. in his favour, the account of N. with T. at that time shewed a balance in favour of T. of 2,052l. 11s. 8d. T. sought to prove against the partnership for the amount of this balance, as being trust moneys held by N. as his trustee :—Held, that the proof could not be admitted, as the nature of the business carried on between T. and N. was that of vendor and purchaser, and not principal and agent, and therefore there was no trust. White, Ex parte, Nevill, In re, 6 L. R., Ch. 397; 40 L. J., Bk. 73; 24 L. T. 45; 19 W. R. 488.

— Loan to Trader, as Trustee, to be employed in Business.—A trader in 1857 went through the ceremony of marriage with M., a sister of his deceased wife, and thenceforth lived with her as his wife. In 1858, 2,000*l.* which came to her under the will of her father, was by her direction paid to the trader, to be employed by him in his business, it being at the same time agreed that the trader should be a trustee of the 2,000*l.* for M., and that a settlement should be executed to carry out the agreement. In 1876 the trader filed a liquidation petition. No settlement of the 2,000*l.* had been executed:—Held, that M. was not entitled to prove in the liquidation for the 2,000*l.*, in competition with the creditors of the business. Beale, In re, Corbridge, Ex parte, 4 Ch. D. 246; 46 L. J., Bk. 17; 35 L. T. 768; 25 W. R. 324.

Debentures—Set-off of Debt due from Trustee personally.—A father, who had been in pecuniary difficulties, and was largely indebted to his son, effected a policy on his own life in the names of the son and another person, as trustees for daughters of the father, and paid the premiums. The son accepted the trust, and on the father's death, some years afterwards, he, with the sanction of his co-trustee, received the policy moneys, and purchased with them debentures of a banking company, of which he was a director, and to which he was largely indebted. The banking company was wound up, and the son became bankrupt. The same person was appointed official manager of the company, and assignee under the son's bankruptcy. On the daughters claiming to be creditors of the company to the amount of the debentures:—Held, first, that notwithstanding the state of the accounts between the father and son, the trust for the daughters ought to be assumed for the purposes of the application to have been well created. Boyd, Ex parte, 1 De G. & J. 223; 3 Jur., N. S. 897.

Held, secondly, that the trust was not determined by the receipt of the money and the investment on the debentures. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the right of the daughters to the debentures was not affected by the state of the accounts between the bankrupt and the banking company. Ib.

Trustee adopting Breach of Trust.—Trustees of a settlement only authorizing investments in government or real securities, advanced part of the trust moneys to a banking firm, in which one of the trustees was a partner, on the security of a mortgage of bonds, in which some of the bankers were obligees. Afterwards another partner in the bank was appointed a new trustee of the settlement. The trust moneys were not called in. On the bankers becoming bankrupt:—Held, that there was a breach of trust on the part of the new trustee, constituting a provable debt against his separate estate. Geaves, Ex parte, 8 De G., Mac. & G. 291; 25 L. J., Bk. 53; 2 Jur., N. S. 651.

The new trustee did not inquire whether the old trustees had received further trust moneys, under a covenant in the settlement to settle future property:—Held, that this was not sufficient ground for charging him for wilful default in respect of sums which ought to have been got in by the old trustees, or in respect of sums received by the covenantor, after the appointment of the new trustee, and not settled, there having been nothing to lead to a suspicion that any default had been made by the old trustees or the covenantor in those respects. Ib.

Co-Trustees.—Three trustees were ordered to pay into court, in an administration suit, money found due from them. One became bankrupt and another died. An application by the third trustee for leave to prove under the bankruptcy for such sum of money as the bankrupt was indebted to the trust estate, including such sums as the bankrupt was bound to pay as between himself and his co-trustees, was refused; but, on appeal, the Lord Chancellor gave leave to the trustee to go in and prove for such debt as he might establish, but directed that any dividend which might be realized should be dealt with by the court in which the administration suit was pending. Bromley, Ex parte, 34 L. J., Bk. 33.

One of the residuary legatees under a will was the surviving trustee of it. The other was subsequently appointed a new trustee under a power, the trust estate then consisting of 9,000*l.* due from the continuing trustee, and of shares in a company, valued at 6,000*l.*, which were transferred into the names of the two. After the death of certain cestuis que trustent who were entitled for life, and when the trust estate constituted a clear fund belonging in moieties to the two residuary legatees, subject only to the payment of legacies, which amounted to 4,000*l.*, the continuing trustee became bankrupt, still owing the 9,000*l.* to the trust estate:—Held, that the new trustee was not entitled to prove for this amount, and retain the dividends till he should be paid his share in full, but could only prove to the extent of his beneficial interest immediately before the bankruptcy; and that, as the bankrupt could then have settled with him by paying 3,500*l.*, that was the amount provable. Turner, Ex parte, 2 De G., Mac. & G. 927.

Against Trustee — Improper Investment — Amount of Proof.—A partner in a bank drew out part of a balance standing to the account of trustees of a will, under which he was interested, without the authority of the trustees, and invested it upon a canal mortgage, which was an unauthorized security:—Held, on the bankruptcy of the bankers, that the cestuis que trustent were entitled to prove for the whole of the balance, without giving up the canal mortgage. Biddulph, Ex parte, 3 De G. & S. 587.

Where a bankrupt trustee has sold out stock forming the trust fund, and converted the proceeds to his own use, proof may be made against his estate, either for the amount of the produce of the stock, or for the value of the stock at the time of his bankruptcy, as should appear most for the benefit of the cestui que trust. Gurner, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 497.

Duty of Bankrupt Trustee.—Where a trustee indebted to the trust becomes bankrupt, it is his duty to prove the debt; and if he neglects so to do, he is liable for the loss, notwithstanding his certificate. Orrett v. Corser, 21 Beav. 52.

Claim against Bankrupt Trustee without pre-

Judice to Suit for an Account.—Where a bankrupt and his co-trustees had been guilty of a breach of trust, and a bill in chancery had been filed against them by the cestuis que trustent for an account, which suit was pending at the time of the bankruptcy, the cestuis que trustent were permitted to enter a claim for the amount due to them, without prejudice to the chancery suit; and all dividends in respect of the claim were ordered to be transferred by the accountant in bankruptcy to the credit of the bankrupt and of the suit. Stutley, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 643.

Bankrupt interested in Trust Fund—Set-off.—When a proof is made by the trustee of a settlement under which a bankrupt is himself interested, his interest cannot be made available to the estate by way of set-off, but proof must be allowed for the whole amount. Stone, Ex parte, Welch, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 914; 42 L. J., Bk. 73.

Policy of Insurance Settled—Covenant by the Settlor to pay Premiums—Proof by Trustees—Death of Settlor.—By a marriage settlement a fund was impressed with a trust to pay such premiums upon policies of assurance on the husband's life, assigned by the husband to the trustees, as he should fail to pay; and the husband covenanted with the trustees to pay the premiums. In 1871 the husband filed a liquidation petition, after which the trustees paid the premiums out of the wife's life estate. The husband's covenant was valued at 2,052l. 8s., and a claim for that amount was taken in by the settlement trustees, and in December, 1875, was admitted as a proof. In April, 1876, a dividend of 10s. was declared, but before the amount reached the hands of the settlement trustees, the husband, on the 13th of May, 1876, died. At that time the sums which had been disbursed by the settlement trustees amounted to 766l. 5s. Held, that the settlement trustees were not entitled to receive the whole dividend which had been declared, but only the amount of their payments for premiums, with such interest as the dividend had been actually making. Miller, In re, Wardley, Ex parte, 6 Ch. D. 790; 37 L. T. 38; 25 W. R. 881.

k. Wife of Bankrupt.

Bankrupt's wife admitted to prove as cestui que trust under a settlement of which bankrupt was trustee. Thring, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Chit. 75.

Money Lent by Wife.—A bankrupt's wife may prove as a creditor against his estate for money lent by her to him out of her separate estate, under the statutes of Massachusetts, if the evidence clearly shows that the transaction was a loan and not a gift. Blandin, In re, 5 National Bankruptcy Register (N. Y.), 39.

Settlement in Batavia—Deed not Registered as required by Dutch Law.—An Englishman, domiciled in Batavia, in contemplation of marriage, executed, according to the forms of the Dutch Indian Civil Law which prevails there, a notarial deed, whereby he in effect settled a sum of money on his wife to her separate use. The deed was not registered in Batavia; it was proved that such a contract was valid by the law of Batavia as between the husband and wife, but that it would not have any effect with regard to third parties but from the day on which it was registered. The husband afterwards became bankrupt in England, and the wife claimed to prove against his estate. Held, that the non-registration in Batavia did not affect the validity of the contract there, but only postponed any claim the wife might have against her husband's estate to the claims of all other creditors; that the question of the priorities of creditors inter se was governed by the law of the country where the bankruptcy took place; and, therefore, that the wife was entitled to prove pari passu with the other creditors against her husband's estate. Melbourn, Ex parte, 6 L. R., Ch. 64; 40 L. J., Bk. 25; 23 L. T. 578; 19 W. R. 83.

l. Person appointed by Court of Chancery in Administration Suit.

A creditor of a bankrupt died before the commencement of the bankruptcy and his estate was administered in chancery in a suit instituted by a creditor against the administratrix. The Court of Chancery appointed a person who was not the administratrix to prove the debt against the bankrupt's estate. Held, that the person appointed by the court had a right to prove the debt, and also to vote for the appointment of a trustee at the meeting of creditors. Hare, Ex parte, England, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 218; 44 L. J., Bk. 50; 32 L. T. 291; 23 W. R. 412.

24. MODE OF PROOF.

By Agent under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 146.—A merchant who swears that he is the sole London agent of the creditor seeking to prove, and is perfectly conversant with all the circumstances attending the contracting of the debt with certainty and precision, the transaction having passed through his hands, is an agent within this section, and, being duly authorized, may prove for his principal. Barrington, Ex parte, 10 L. T. 103.

By One on behalf of Several.—A proof cannot be made by one person on behalf of several creditors entitled to prove, unless from necessity, or by consent. Bank of England, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 363.

Under a fiat against a banker, one person was allowed to prove on behalf of a large number of holders of l. notes; not interfering as to the assignees of the certificate. Gordon, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 222.

By Partners.—One partner may act for all in proving debts. Hodgkinson, Ex parte, 19 Ves. 293; 2 Rose, 172; Coop. C. C. 99; S. P., Mitchell, Ex parte, 14 Ves. 597.

By Trustees.—A trustee cannot prove a debt alone; the cestui que trust must join in the proof. Dubois, Ex parte, 1 Cox, 310.

By Infants.—The guardian of an infant may prove on his behalf. Maltby, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 387.

By Lunatics.]—The mother of a creditor of weak intellect was permitted, on her application ex parte, to prove on his behalf. Ostoby, Ex parte, 1 De Gex, 453.

Costs.]—Petition praying for liberty to prove a debt against the estate of a bankrupt, on behalf of a person of unsound mind:—Held, that, the assignees were not entitled to get their costs of the petition from the petitioner. Bucknall, Ex parte, 12 L. J., Bk. 42.

By a Bankrupt Creditor.]—Where a creditor becomes bankrupt, he must join with his assignee in an affidavit in proof of the debt. The affidavit of the assignee alone is not sufficient. Robson, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 65.

By Assignee of Creditor.]—Where a creditor, after the issuing of the fiat, assigns his debt, this does not give the assignee a right to prove it, but merely a right to call on the assignor to prove the debt, as a trustee for the assignee. Dickenson, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & Chit. 520.

By Banking and other Corporations.]—Under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, and 1 & 2 Vict. c. 96, if a shareholder in a joint-stock banking company, who is also a private customer of the bank, becomes bankrupt, the company is entitled, by means of its registered officer, to prove the balance of the bankrupt's private account under the commission, without reference to what may be due to the bankrupt's estate in respect of his interest as a shareholder in the banking concern. Davidson, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 368; 6 Jur. 116.

Corporations may prove debts by the affidavit of a person authorized by a general power of attorney: and vote in the choice of assignees, by a person authorized by a special power of attorney, under their common seals. Bank of England, Ex parte, 1 Swans. 10; 1 Rose, 142; 1 Wils. C. C. 295.

The Bank of England was admitted to prove by its clerk, without a power of attorney. Ib.; overruling Bank of England, Ex parte, 18 Ves. 229.

An agent for a public company abroad may, to the prejudice of the bankrupt, prove, with the consent of the assignees, on behalf of the company, on bills of exchange. Cotenworth, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Bligh. 92; 1 Deac. & Chit. 281.

25. PRACTICE ON PROOF.

Defective Affidavit.]—If a defective affidavit is produced, the commissioner should not reject, but adjourn the proof. Maberley, Ex parte, 2 Mont. & Ayr. 23.

An affidavit in support of a deposition of proof on a bill of exchange must state the consideration. Ib.

Order for Payment.]—In proving for costs ordered to be paid in a divorce suit, the order for payment must be set out in the proof or exhibited. Collard, Ex parte, 10 L. T. 792.

Judgment Debt.]—Commissioners may inquire into the consideration of a judgment debt. Marson, Ex parte, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 155; 2 Deac. 245; S. P., 3 Deac. 79; 3 Mont. & Ayr. 444.

Delay in Proving.]—If a creditor, through accident, omits to prove at the final dividend, he may be permitted to prove, without disturbing any payment made by the assignees, and placing the creditors not paid in the same situation as if he had originally proved. Day, Ex parte, 1 Mont. 212.

Where a creditor has omitted to prove his debt, until after a dividend has been declared and is in course of payment, the court will not permit him to prove, so as to interfere with the amount of the dividend payable on the proofs of the other creditors. M'Cheane, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 329.

Where a creditor has been guilty of gross negligence in omitting to prove his debt, or to enter a claim upon the proceedings, the court will not stay the payment of a dividend to enable him to prove, although he is a trustee. Payment of a dividend is stayed only where the creditor has been prevented from proving by fraud, accident, or mistake. Todd, Ex parte, 2 Deac. 416.

Petition to Prove.]—A petition by many creditors to prove is not multifarious if they have a common object. Bousfield, Ex parte, 1 Mont. 128.

Nor is a petition to prove and remove assignees. Howell, Ex parte, 1 Mont. 129.

The petition of three creditors for an order to prove three distinct debts is multifarious. The court will not permit the claims of different persons to be united in the same petition. Sacr, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Mac. 280.

The proof of a debt must be absolutely rejected by the commissioner, to warrant a petition for an order to prove it. Marson, Ex parte, 2 Deac. 245.

A petition to be admitted to prove a debt which the commissioners have rejected, should state the ground of their rejection. Curtis, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 274; Schmalding, Ex parte, Buck, 93; Wilson, Ex parte, 1 Cox, 308; Baker, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Chit. 156.

Production of Security.]—A creditor who holds a bill of exchange as security cannot prove his debt at the first meeting of creditors without producing the bill. Jacobs, Ex parte, Carter, In re, 17 L. R., Eq. 575; 43 L. J., Bk. 46; 30 L. T. 133; 22 W. R. 439.

C., under a building agreement, agreed to execute to D., the builder, leases of certain houses to be constructed by D. as they should be completed. Leases of two houses were afterwards granted to D., who deposited the agreement and the leases with Messrs. B. and T., his solicitors, to secure advances. D. also executed to them a legal mortgage of certain freeholds to secure other sums. C. also made advances to D. Upon the bankruptcy of D., C. proved for 1,155*l.* 13*s.* 10*d.* Messrs. B. and T. also tendered a proof for 1,959*l.*, and valued their securities at 1,500*l.*, leaving a balance due to them of 459*l.* At the first meeting they did not produce their securities, but at an adjourned meeting they produced the building agreement and the mortgage deed. The other title deeds were not produced, inasmuch as Messrs. B. and T. acknowledged that they had deposited them with their bankers, but they offered to produce them at a day's notice. The registrar trustee, however, refused to admit the proof upon the ground that the title deeds were deposited with the bankers, and were not produced. After the rejection of Messrs. B. and T.'s proof, a trustee was appointed by the creditors whose proofs had been admitted, the bankers not voting. The county court judge afterwards allowed the proof and removed the trustee:—Held, that the debt was properly proved and ought to have been admitted, but that the trustee should not have been removed, there being no imputation upon his conduct. Carr, Ex parte, Dunkley, In re, 45 L. T. 560.

Amendment of Proof.]—A creditor having reason to suppose that the goods which he had sold to one of two partners were purchased on the partnership account, proved against the joint estate, and did not discover till seven months afterwards, that they were bought on the separate account of one of the partners:—Held, that he might transfer his proof from the joint to the separate estate. Vining, Ex parte, 1 Deac. 555.

A party is not estopped from amending his deposition of proof, by making a second deposition contradictory to the first: the only question is, which is the most worthy of belief. Britten, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & Chit. 35.

On Ground of Mistake after Lapse of Time.]—The valuation of his security by a secured creditor proving in a liquidation forms part of the general circumstances upon which any subsequent composition is based; and he will not, therefore, four years after the close of the liquidation proceedings, be allowed to amend his proof on the ground of having made a mistake, whether as to value, or as to the actual property included in his valuation. Couldery v. Bartrum, 19 Ch. D. 394; 51 L. J., Ch. 265; 45 L. T. 689; 30 W. R. 141—C. A.

B. & Co., creditors for 2,400l. of T. and W. (who were partners), held in respect of their debts—(1) a security upon the joint estate of T. and W.; (2) a security upon the separate estate of T.; both securities being created by one and the same deed. T. and W. having gone into liquidation, B. & Co. valued both securities at a total amount of 800l., and proved for the balance; a composition of ten shillings in the pound was then agreed to and carried out. Four years later, T. and W. brought an action against B. & Co. to redeem the whole of the property included in the securities, separate as well as joint, upon payment of 800l. and interest. The property had, in the meantime, turned out to be more valuable than it was thought to be at the date of the proof:—Held, that though B. & Co. need not, in the first instance, have included in their proof the joint security given by T., they could not now be allowed to amend such proof, and that T. and W. were, therefore, entitled to the relief claimed. Ib.

In the case of an evident mistake, an amendment of a proof will be allowed after the creditor has voted in the choice of a trustee. Schafeld, Ex parte, Firth, In re, 12 Ch. D. 337; 48 L. J., Bk. 122; 40 L. T. 823; 27 W. R. 925—C. A.

Right of Bankrupt to Examine Creditor on Proof.]—A compromise or arrangement having been made under s. 27, sub-s. 3, of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, with a person claiming to be a creditor, that he should be admitted to prove, but so that, as to the first 18s. in the pound, his dividends should be postponed to those of the other creditors:—Held, that the bankrupt had such a peculiar interest as to be entitled to examine the creditor on his proof. Austin, Ex parte, 4 Ch. D. 13; 46 L. J., Bk. 1; 35 L. T. 529; 25 W. R. 51—C. A.

Rejection of Proof.]—When a trustee in a liquidation by arrangement allows two years to elapse without giving notice of rejection of a creditor's proof, he will be taken to have admitted the proof. Kemp, Ex parte, Russell, In re, 42 L. J., Bk. 26; 28 L. T. 487; 21 W. R. 459.

But when there appeared to be a substantial objection to the proof, the order to which, under such circumstances, the creditor was entitled for payment of a dividend to him, was suspended for a week, to enable the trustee to apply to expunge the proof. Ib.

If a creditor who proves his debt by declaration, files a statement of account which is not full, true, and complete, his proof ought to be rejected. Barnett, Ex parte, 4 L. R., Ch. 68; 19 L. T. 406; 17 W. R. 88.

Delay.]—The lapse of three months after a proof has been sent in does not deprive a trustee of his right to reject it. De Boos, Ex parte, Shallow, In re, 40 L. T. 659.

A proof was sent to the trustee in December, 1872. In December, 1875, he gave notice of rejection:—Held, that it was too late for the trustee to proceed in that way, but that the proper course would have been to apply to the court to have the proof expunged. Good, Ex parte, Armitage, In re, 5 Ch. D. 46; 46 L. J., Bk. 65; 35 L. T. 554.

Discretion of Registrar as to Disputed Proofs.]

—The admission, or refusal to admit, a disputed proof at the first meeting of creditors, is an exercise of the judicial discretion of the registrar, even though the appointment of a trustee will be affected by the admission or refusal, and the registrar is not bound to adjourn the consideration of the proof merely because it is objected to. Mark, Ex parte, Amor, In re, 49 L. T. 356; 31 W. R. 101—C. A.

Taking Proof off the File.]—A creditor tendered a proof of a debt, and voted at the first meeting in favour of a composition. At the second meeting, being advised that his proof might prejudice a security which he held, he desired to withdraw it. The composition fell through, and therefore the vote at the first meeting had no effect. The registrar declined to allow the proof to be taken off the file:—Held, that under the circumstances the proof might be taken off the file. Williams, Ex parte, Williams, In re, 18 L. R., Eq. 373; 43 L. J., Bk. 105; 29 L. T. 404; 22 W. R. 570.

Costs of Proof.]—The general rule is, that costs of proof are to be paid by the creditor seeking to establish the claim. Day, Ex parte, 9 L. T. 350.

Where a creditor petitions to prove a debt which is not in its nature provable, the petition will be dismissed with costs, notwithstanding the commissioners rejected the proof for an insufficient reason. Worthington, Ex parte, 1 Deac. & Chit. 288.

No costs given upon petition by joint creditors to prove against the separate estate, there being no joint effects or solvent partner. Bradshaw, Ex parte, 1 Glyn & J. 99.

Where the commissioners have exercised their judgment with respect to the proof of a debt, and have refused to admit it, the successful petitioner against their decision is not entitled to costs; it being a general rule that costs cannot be given when commissioners exercise their jurisdiction. Millington, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 114.

A creditor tendered a proof for 3,500*l.*, which the commissioners rejected in toto; and after presenting a petition against their decision, an order was made, by consent, that he should prove for 500*l.* The court would not grant him costs out of the estate; but ordered each party to pay his own costs. Waterhouse, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & Chit. 108.

The commissioners having improperly rejected a proof because the claim was merged in a felony, the petitioner was allowed costs out of the estate. Hirke, Ex parte, 2 Mont. & Ayr. 208, n.

The costs of a petition to prove must be paid by the creditor, if he adduces new evidence. Price, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 51.

26. AMOUNT OF PROOF.

Present Debt payable in futuro.—The amount of a proof, on a debitum in presenti, solvendum in futuro is not subject to any deduction in respect of rebate, which only applies upon payment of a dividend. Hill, Ex parte, 2 Deac. 249.

Bill of Exchange—Indorsee—Part Payment by Indorser.—A, being an indorsee of B, C. & Co.'s acceptances for 1,364*l.*, sued out a separate commission against B. At the time of suing out the commission, D., the person for whom A. had discounted the acceptances, had, by payments on account, reduced the debt to 420*l.* A. is entitled to prove for the whole amount, and for all that is received above 420*l.* will be a trustee for D. De Tastet, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 10.

Discount.—Upon a sale of goods to be paid for at the end of the year in which they were purchased, but if paid for before the end of the year, 20*l.* per cent. discount to be allowed, which were not paid for within the year:—Held, on the bankruptcy of the purchaser, that proof could not be made of the whole debt, without deduction for discount. Pigou, Ex parte, 3 Madd. 136.

Wholesale traders supplied goods to a retail dealer on the terms that he was to be allowed a discount of 20 per cent. from the invoice prices on payment in cash within a month:—Held, that cash payments not having been made, proof must be admitted in the bankruptcy of the retail dealer for the full amount of the invoice prices of the goods. Cumberland, In re, Worthington, Ex parte, 3 Ch. D. 803; 45 L. J., Bk. 136; 34 L. T. 951.

Upon a consignment with authority to sell to reimburse advances on the consignment, the deficiency to be made good, and the surplus, if any, restored. Where part of the goods was sold to the consignees, proof under their bankruptcy was limited to the balance of the original advance. Thompson, Ex parte, 18 Ves. 134; 1 Rose, 165.

Deduction of Amounts arising from Security.]

—A contingent interest was assigned to secure in part a debt exceeding the value of the interest, the assignee insured against the contingency, and upon its taking effect received the sum insured:—Held, upon the bankruptcy of his debtor, that the sum so recovered, minus the premium and expenses, must be deducted from his proof. Andrews, Ex parte, 2 Rose, 410; 1 Madd. 573.

—Affidavit.—A creditor on a bill of exchange made affidavit of a debt due of 2,500*l.*, which proof was admitted for only 1,200*l.*; the residue was claimed. Afterwards the creditor was entitled to prove the whole against the bankrupt, but in the meantime he had received 500*l.* from some other party to the bill. The former affidavit cannot be received as a proof of the remainder of the debt, but a new proof must be made; and 500*l.* having been actually paid to the creditor, he can only prove the residue after deducting the 500*l.* Worrall, Ex parte, 1 Cox, 309.

Delivery Warrants.—A wharfinger was induced by the consignees of goods to sign and give them delivery warrants for goods which were stopped in transitu before they came into his possession. The consignees deposited the warrant with a bank as security for an advance. The wharfinger afterwards compounded with his creditors:—Held, that the bank was not entitled to prove against the wharfinger's estate for the value of the goods described in the warrants, but only for the sum actually advanced. Moore, In re, Moore, Ex parte, 31 L. T. 812; 23 W. R. 154—L.J.J.

Landlord and Tenant—Disclaimer of Lease.—A bankrupt was the lessee of premises for a term of ten years, at an annual rent of 500*l.* The trustee disclaimed the lease. The landlord was unable to re-let the premises at so high a rent:—Held, that the landlord was entitled to prove in the bankruptcy for the difference between the present value of the 500*l.* per annum agreed to be paid by the bankrupt for the residue of the term, and the present value for the same period of the letting value of the premises. Llynvi Coal and Iron Company, Ex parte, Hyde, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 28; 41 L. J., Bk. 5; 25 L. T. 609; 20 W. R. 105.

27. EFFECT OF PROOF.

Relinquishment of Legal Remedies.—Where a defendant has become bankrupt, the plaintiff cannot discontinue upon the terms of the statute unless he has either proved his debt, or has had his claim entered on the proceedings under the fiat. Augarde v. Thompson, 5 D. P. C. 762; 2 M. & W. 617; M. & H. 105; 1 Jur. 632.

Where a defendant in an action for the recovery of a debt has become bankrupt, and the plaintiff has tendered his claim for proof of the debt under the bankruptcy, and the claim is not allowed, but adjourned, the defendant is not entitled to a stay of proceedings in the action. Ball v. Bowden, 22 L. J., Ex. 249.

To entitle him to such stay of proceedings the debt must be proved under the bankruptcy, or the claim entered upon the proceedings. Ib.

— Action for Costs.—Where a defendant had become bankrupt, after verdict and before judgment, and the plaintiff had proved for the debt, but had not been permitted to prove for the costs, the court, upon summary application, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 59, stayed proceedings in the action for the recovery of the costs. Woodward v. Meredith, 2 D. & L. 136; 13 L. J., Q. B. 322; 8 Jur. 1136.

— Assignee of a proved Debt.—A creditor accepting an assignment of a debt proved, is substantially a creditor proving a debt, and thereby relinquishes an action brought by him against the bankrupt. Taylor, Ex parte, 1 Glyn & J. 399.

— Restraint of Execution.—A creditor who has proved will, upon petition by the assignees, be restrained from issuing execution against the property of the bankrupt in the possession of the assignees. Bernasconi, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 381.

— No Dividend.—A creditor who proves under a fiat, thereby makes his election of the remedy for the recovery of his debt. Flower, Ex parte, De Gex, 503; 16 L. J., Bk. 9; 11 Jur. 482.

A creditor who had proved was accordingly restrained from proceeding for the same demand in a county court, although there was no dividend. Ib.

— Release of Sureties.—On the 1st February the plaintiffs commenced an action against G. and G. to recover a bill of exchange for 468*l.* 1*s.* 9*d.*, and a sum for goods sold and delivered, money paid, and money due upon an account stated. They afterwards filed an affidavit in the Court of Bankruptcy, under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 8, alleging G. and G. to be indebted to them in 468*l.* 1*s.* 9*d.*; for which sum G. and G., on the 11th February, gave a bond, with sureties, pursuant to the statute. On the 21st March, the plaintiffs signed judgment against G. and G. (against whom a fiat in bankruptcy had issued) for 1,322*l.* 19*s.* 6*d.* which included the 468*l.* 1*s.* 9*d.* On the 5th April the plaintiffs proved their debt under the fiat, excluding the amount of the bill of exchange, in respect of which the bond had been entered into. On the 12th April they lodged a ca. sa. against G. and G., and afterwards commenced actions against the sureties upon the bond:—Held, that the proof under the fiat was an election to relinquish the action against G. and G.; and that, the principal debtors being thus entitled to be discharged if rendered pursuant to the conditions of the bond, the sureties were entitled to summary relief on motion. Geikie v. Hewson, 5 Scott, N. R. 484; 4 M. & G. 618.

— Entry of Suggestion.—Where a plaintiff, in an action against a bankrupt, makes his election to proceed under the commission, the defendant is entitled to have some entry or suggestion, recording the election, put on the record. Kemp v. Potter, 6 Taunt, 549.

— Fleeing.—Proof of a debt cannot be pleaded in bar as an equitable defence to an action for the debt. Spencer v. Demett, 1 L. R., Ex. 123; 35 L. J., Ex. 73; 12 Jur., N. S. 194; 13 L. T. 677; 14 W. R. 310; 4 H. & C. 127.

A defendant covenanted to pay a sum of money, with interest, by instalments, and also to pay the annual premiums which might become due on a policy of insurance effected on the life of B., so that his life might be continually insured in 1,000*l.*, and, on request, to produce and shew to the plaintiff the receipt for the premium for the current year. In an action on this covenant, the declaration alleged two breaches—non-payment of the premiums and non-production of the receipt for the premium for the current year. The defendant pleaded in bar a certificate of conformity under an adjudication of bankruptcy. The plaintiff new assigned that the action was brought for the non-payment of a premium which became due after the filing of the declaration of insolvency, and after the allowance of the certificate, and for the non-production of the receipt for that premium. The defendant pleaded to the new assignment an equitable plea, that after the filing of the petition for adjudication the plaintiff proved a great part of the debt under the petition, and elected to take the benefit of the petition with respect to the whole debt:—Held, that the plea to the new assignment was a good equitable answer. Elder v. Beaumont, 8 El. & Bl. 353; 27 L. J., Q. B. 25; 4 Jur., N. S. 26.

Held, also, that the mere fact of the plaintiff's proof for a part of the debt was not sufficient evidence to support the plea. Ib.

— Indictment—Costs—Attachment.—A defendant having been convicted on an indictment for a nuisance, which had been removed by certiorari, upon his and two sureties entering into recognizances, judgment was rescripted by a rule of court, drawn up by consent, by which it was referred to the master to tax the costs. In February, 1852, the costs were taxed at 227*l.* 16*s.* 11*d.* In May, the defendant became bankrupt, and the prosecutor proved for that amount. The defendant was afterwards brought up for judgment; a side-bar rule for the taxation of costs was drawn up; the costs were taxed under 5 & 6 W. & M. c. 11, s. 3, at 243*l.*; and the side-bar rule and allocatur were served upon the bail. A rule having been obtained for an attachment against the defendant for non-payment of that sum, and against him and his bail for estreating the recognizances, the court discharged the rule as against the defendant, but made it absolute against the bail. Reg. v. Hills, 2 El. & Bl. 176; 22 L. J., Q. B. 322; 17 Jur. 714.

— Mortgages—Proof by Inadvertence.—A mortgagee having elected to prove, and having proved his debt under an assignment executed by the mortgagor for the benefit of his creditors, is not entitled afterwards to have his proof expunged as having been made through inadvertence, and to claim the balance of the purchase-money of the mortgaged property in the hands of the trustees under the deed in liquidation of his mortgage debt, and receive the dividends under the deed upon the balance. Spicer, Ex parte, 12 L. T. 55.

— Distinct Debts.—By 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 14, a person having two debts could not come in under the commission for the one, and proceed at law for the other. Hardenburgh, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 204.

Where a creditor proved one of several bills accepted in payment of the same debt, and afterwards declared against the bankrupt on the others:—Held, that the election of the creditor to take the benefit of the commission was confined by 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 14, to the debt actually proved, and did not extend to distinct debts ejusdem generis due at the same time. Harley v. Greenwood, 5 B. & A. 95.

Two parcels of goods were sold at different times, and paid for by bills; the vendee afterwards becoming bankrupt, the vendors proved under the commission, for the amount of the first parcel, they then holding the bill given in payment for the same; the bill for the other parcel having been negotiated by them prior to the bankruptcy, and being then outstanding was afterwards dishonoured:—Held, that the vendors were not precluded by 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 14, from suing the bankrupt for the amount of the last parcel of goods. Watson v. Meder, 1 B. & A. 121.

So held on the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 59. Edwards, Ex parte, 4 Mont. & Mac. 116.

Where a party has clear separate demands on a bankrupt, he may sue for one, and come under the commission for the other, but not if they are only different securities for the same debt. Crinsoz, Ex parte, 1 Bro. C. C. 270.

If a creditor proves one debt under a commission, he is not thereby precluded from suing upon another, although it was due at the time of his proving the first. Bridget v. Mills, 12 Moore, 92; 4 Bing. 18.

A creditor cannot proceed at law upon one of two bills for goods sold, which became due and was dishonoured before proof of the other, but returned after the proof. Schlesinger, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 392.

A creditor for goods sold may prove on a bill for part of a debt, and proceed at law on a bill for the remainder, which he has negotiated before the bankruptcy and taken up after the proof. Sly, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 163.

A person to whom several debts were due from a bankrupt, arising out of separate sales of goods, proved some of the debts under the commission; another person, who was suggested to be a trustee for him, sued upon a note which the bankrupt had given for other part of the goods sold. The court refused to interfere in a summary way to stay proceedings on the bail bond in this action. Hovell v. Gollledge, 5 Taunt. 174; 2 Rose, 130.

A creditor may prove on a bill for part of his debt, and proceed at law on a bill for the remainder, which he has negotiated before and taken up after such proof, the bill proved and the bill taken up constituting distinct debts, although they were originally taken in settlement of the same account. Newton, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 422; 6 Jur. 68.

A., being bonâ fide holder of two bills, accepted by the bankrupt, for the payment of which he also held a security, transferred the security to B., who proved for the amount:—Held, that such proof did not prevent the right of A. to prove also on the bills; though it might be a question for future consideration whether he would be entitled to receive dividends on such proof. Barham, In re, 1 Mont., D. & D. 179.

A. and B. having dissolved partnership, an award was made, by which B. was directed to pay A. a certain sum, and to pay several partnership debts. B. gave a warrant of attorney for securing the money awarded, with a stipulation in the defeazance, that, if A. should be called upon to pay any of the partnership debts, he should be at liberty to enter up judgment. B. became bankrupt, and A. proved his private debt under the commission, and received a dividend thereon. A. was afterwards sued for a partnership debt, and entered into an arrangement with the creditor to pay it by instalments, and then entered up judgment, and took out execution on the warrant of attorney, before B. had obtained his certificate:—Held, that A. was not deprived of his remedy by 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, ss. 8 and 14. Dally v. Wolferston, 3 D. & R. 269.

Different Parties Partners.]—The 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 14, did not extend to prevent a creditor who proved a joint debt under a commission against one partner from suing the others. Young v. Glass, 16 East, 252; S. P., Heath v. Hall, 4 Taunt. 326; 2 Rose, 271.

Nor did it prevent a creditor who was suing two partners from proving his debt under a separate commission issued against one. Blannin v. Tayler, Gow, 199.

On a separate commission against one of a firm, a joint and separate creditor, who, in respect of his joint debt, has taken a warrant of attorney, and sued out a separate execution against the bankrupt, is entitled to prove his separate debt, without giving up his execution. Stanborough, Ex parte, 5 Madd. 89.

Principal and Surety.]—The proving against the principal is not an election not to proceed against the surety. Hughes, Ex parte, 5 B. & A. 482.

Where an attorney, in order to get possession of papers belonging to A., in the hands of A.'s former attorney, who had a lien upon them for the amount of his bill then in dispute, undertook that A. should enter a reference:—Held, that A. having subsequently become bankrupt for the second time, and without paying fifteen shillings in the pound, the proof of the debt under the commission was not an election by the former attorney, so as to dispense with the reference. Id.

Parties to Bill of Exchange.]—The drawer of a bill of exchange, who has paid the amount to the holder after a commission against the acceptor, may sue the acceptor before he has obtained his certificate, and notwithstanding the holder has proved the bill under the commission. Mead v. Braham, 3 M. & S. 91; 2 Rose, 289.

The drawer of a bill who has paid the amount to an indorsee after a fiat issued against the acceptor, may sue the latter upon the bill before he has obtained his certificate, notwithstanding the indorsee has proved under the fiat. Walker v. Pilbeam, 4 C. B. 229.

Discharge of Lien.]—Proof is equivalent to payment; therefore, where solicitors obtained an order to have their bill taxed, and to prove for the amount:—Held, that they had relinquished their lien upon the papers in their hands belonging to the bankrupt. Hornby, Ex parte, Buck, 351.

By Executor against Legatee—Right to Retain.—A bankrupt was indebted to the estate of a testator, and was also entitled as one of the residuary legatees of the testator, and also to distributive shares as next of kin of three other residuary legatees. The executor proved the debts under the bankruptcy, and received a dividend on the proof:—Held, that he had thereby abandoned the right to retain the debt out of the direct or derivative shares of the bankrupt in the residuary estate. Stammers v. Elliott, 3 L. R., Ch. 195; 37 L. J., Ch. 353; 18 L. T. 1; 16 W. R. 489.

A bankrupt was indebted to an estate of a deceased party, and was also entitled to a legacy from, and was one of the residuary legatees under, the same estate. A receiver appointed in a suit for the administration of the estate proved the debt, and was paid a dividend:—Held, that the right to retain the debt out of the legacies to which the bankrupt was entitled was thereby lost. Armstrong v. Armstrong, 12 L. R., Eq. 614; 25 L. T. 199; 19 W. R. 971.

Admiralty Action for Wages.—A master of a ship having sued for his wages at law and recovered judgment, which judgment remained unsatisfied in consequence of the owner's bankruptcy, and having proved his debt under the owner's bankruptcy, is entitled to sue the ship in the Admiralty Court, notwithstanding the ship has changed hands. The Bengal, Swabey, 468.

Proof by Foreign Creditor—Jurisdiction.—A foreign creditor, residing out of the jurisdiction of the Court of Bankruptcy, by proving a debt in a bankruptcy or liquidation, brings himself within the general jurisdiction of the court as to the administration of the estate, just as if he were residing within it. An order can therefore be made on him to restore property of the bankrupt or debtor improperly in his possession. Robertson, Ex parte, Morton, In re, 20 L. R., Eq. 733; 44 L. J., Bk. 99; 32 L. T. 697; 23 W. R. 906.

Declining to Prove.—A creditor took the body of the bankrupt in execution previously to the bankruptcy, held it until the bankrupt's discharge by his certificate, and declined to go in and prove until after the certificate was granted:—Held, that he had made his election to rely on his legal remedy, and could not be permitted to seek relief also under the fiat. Mudie, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 66; 12 L. J., Bk. 25; 7 Jur. 201.

28. EXPUNGING OR REDUCING PROOF.

Mere Claim.—A mere claim cannot be expunged. Dobson, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 670; 4 Deac. & Chit. 69.

Grounds for Expunging.—The commissioners can only expunge a proof on the ground that the debt is not due; and it is irregular for them to state as a ground for expunging, that the bankrupt's liability has been discharged. Whitworth, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 164.

The 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 183, empowering the commissioner to expunge proof, was not confined to cases where new evidence was adduced. Thornton, Ex parte, 3 De G. & J. 454.

Want of Stamp.—A proof will not be ordered to be expunged merely because the instrument on which the proof was made required a stamp. Byrom, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 53; S. P., Christie, Ex parte, 8 Jur. 919.

Entries in Debtor's Books.—Where a bankrupt had absconded to America, and the commissioners had expunged the proof of a debt, relying chiefly on the evidence afforded by the entries in his books, the proof was ordered to be restored, as evidence of this description ought not to have countervailed the oath of the creditor. Boler, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 602.

Deed of Release for Purpose of annulling Adjudication.—Certain creditors executed a deed of release to their debtor, who had been adjudicated a bankrupt, for the purpose of enabling him to petition to annul the adjudication. The proceedings, however, became abortive, by reason of all the creditors not having joined in the release. Sometime afterwards he applied to expunge the proof of the creditors who had executed the release:—Held, that as the release was given for a particular purpose, it could not be used for an object not contemplated at the time of its execution. Cusnean, Ex parte, 9 Jur., N. S. 655; 8 L. T. 11.

The release of the debt of a bankrupt after the debt has been proved, and which release merely expressed that he should be discharged from all demands of the creditors, would not annul the creditor's right to the benefit of his proof. Id.

Partners—Wrongful Proof against Joint Estate.—Where what is in law only a separate debt has been proved on a joint estate, and a dividend received, the court will order the proof to be expunged. Ferrer, In re, 10 Ir. Ch. Rep. 554.

Lapse of Time—Death of Creditor.—A surety had paid a debt of a bankrupt after the bankruptcy, with interest down to the payment and proved for the whole amount paid, including interest subsequently to the fiat, but no dividend had been declared. An application to reduce the proof after seven years had elapsed, and after the death of the surety, was too late. Sanderson, Ex parte, 8 De G., Mac. & G. 849; 26 L. J., Bk. 26; 2 Jur., N. S. 1217.

Consequence of Order to Expunge.—It is not a necessary consequence of an order to expunge a proof, that the party must refund any dividends received upon it. Wilson, Ex parte, 1 Mont., D. & D. 586.

Application by Trustee to expunge Proof—Lapse of Time.—Under r. 73 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1870, as under the previous practice, a trustee in bankruptcy who has admitted a proof against the estate is entitled at any time afterwards to apply to the court to expunge the proof, on the ground that it was originally wrongly admitted. Mere lapse of time is no objection to the application, but, though the proof is expunged, the creditor will be entitled to retain any dividend which he may have previously received. Harper, Ex parte, Tait, In re, 21 Ch. D. 537; 52 L. J., Ch. 117; 47 L. T. 421; 31 W. R. 152—C. A.

Grounds for reducing—Bill of Exchange.]—

Where a creditor proved in respect of several bills of exchange drawn by the bankrupt and discounted by the creditor, and one of those bills was subsequently wholly paid:—Held, that so much of the proof as related to that bill must be expunged. Barrett, Ex parte, 1 Glyn & J. 327.

A customer pays in bills of exchange to his bankers, and becomes bankrupt. The banker proves for the whole balance due from him, and afterwards some of the bills of exchange paid in are paid in full by other parties liable, some before and some after the dividend is declared:—Held, that the proof ought to be reduced by the amount of the paid bills, and the dividends refunded. Hornby, Ex parte, De Gex, 69.

Where a creditor holding bills of exchange proves the amount of his debt, with a statement that he holds the bills as security, and any of the bills are subsequently paid by the other parties to them, the amount so paid must be deducted from the proof and the dividends; or, if the dividends have been paid upon the whole of the proof without such deduction, the assignees are not thereby concluded, for the court will order them to be refunded; it makes no difference whether the bills have been deposited without indorsement, or have been indorsed by the bankrupt to the creditor. Burn, Ex parte, 2 Rose, 55.

When an indorser of a bill of exchange becomes bankrupt, and the holder proves his bill under the commission, and afterwards compounds it, and discharges the acceptor without notice to the assignees of the indorser, he also discharges the indorser's estate, and the proof of his debt must be expunged. Smith, Ex parte, 3 Bro. C. C. 1.

— Goods Sold—Excessive Price.]—A bankrupt, who was a tavern-keeper, had bought of petitioners large quantities of wines lying in the docks, which were sold to him by sample, for stipulated prices, and at long credit, and for which the petitioners delivered to him the usual transfer warrants. The assignees sold the wines by auction at a considerable loss, in consequence of which the commissioner made a reduction in the proof, on the ground that the prices charged for the wines were too high:—Held, that he was not justified in making the reduction. Reay, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & Chit. 175.

Acceptance of Composition under 33 & 33 Vict. c. 71, s. 23—Locus Standi of Bankrupt to apply to reduce Proof of a Creditor.]—After the creditors of a bankrupt have resolved, under s. 28 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, to accept a composition offered by the bankrupt, the bankrupt, though undischarged, has a locus standi to apply to the court to reduce the amount of the proof of a creditor, and the mere fact that the proof has been upon the file of the proceedings in the bankruptcy for upwards of a year does not estop the bankrupt from making the application. Bacon or Bond, Ex parte, Bond, In re, 17 Ch. D. 447; 44 L. T. 834; 29 W. R. 574—C. A. Affirming, 43 L. T. 798; 29 W. R. 292.

29. PROOF AGAINST SEVERAL ESTATES.

Bills and Notes.]—A creditor by bill or note may prove against all the parties to his security; but if, previously to his proof against A., dividends have been declared upon his proof against B. or C., such dividends must be deducted from his proof against A. Bank of Scotland, Ex parte, 2 Rose, 197; 19 Ves. 310.

Proof is allowed against each person whether as principal or surety liable upon a bill or bond, if nothing is received before the bankruptcy, until 20s. in the pound are received. Rushforth, Ex parte, 10 Ves. 416.

A joint and several promissory note was signed by two members of a firm, by the firm, and by several other persons. The firm having become bankrupt, the holder of the note carried in proofs against the joint estate of the firm, and against the separate estates of the two partners who had signed the note:—Held, that the holder was entitled to prove against, and receive dividends from both the joint estate of the firm and the separate estates of the partners who had signed the note. Honey, Ex parte, Jeffery, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 178; 41 L. J., Bk. 9; 25 L. T. 728; 20 W. R. 223.

Principal and Surety.]—If bills amounting to 1,320l. are delivered by the drawer to a creditor as collateral security for a debt of 4,000l., and the drawer and acceptor become bankrupt, but the estate of the acceptor proves solvent, the creditor is entitled to receive 20s. in the pound on the bills against the estate of the acceptor, and also prove the debt of 4,000l. and receive dividends in liquidation of the remaining portion of his debt under the commission against the drawer. Sammon, Ex parte, 1 Deac. & Chit. 564.

— Right of Surety to Prove against Principal.]—A trader made a promissory note as a surety for a debt due to one of the creditors of a firm. The firm and the trader became bankrupt, and the creditor proved against the estate of the trader on the note, and against the separate estate of a partner in the firm on the debt. A dividend was declared and paid on the former proof, but not on the latter:—Held, that the assignees of the trader were not entitled to an order to prove against the joint estate of the firm for the amount of the dividend which they had paid on the note. Brown, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 718; 6 Jur. 1021.

Against Debtor and his Bankers.]—A., being indebted to B., gave him a cheque upon his bankers to pay him in a bill at three months. The bankers drew a bill for the amount upon their correspondents in London, who accepted it, the drawers and acceptors became bankrupt, and B. proved and received a dividend under both commissions:—Held, that B. was entitled to prove his debt also under A.'s commission. Rathbone, Ex parte, Buck, 215.

Firms composed in Whole or in Part of same Individuals before 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 153.]—Where there are two firms, one consisting of two individuals, and the other of the same two individuals and of a third, and they have mutual dealings, and draw bills on each other: if a bankruptcy occurs, the holders of their bills will not be allowed to prove under both bankruptcies. Goldsmid v. Cazenove, 7 H. L. Cas. 785; 29 L. J., Bk. 17; 5 Jur., N. S. 1230; 34 L. T. 35. Affirming, S. C., Goldsmid, Ex parte, 2 De G. & J. 67; 25 L. J., Bk. 25; 2 Jur., N. S. 1106.

This rule applied to cases where one of the firm carries on business in England, and the other abroad, and to cases where the firm consists of more than one person. Ib.

— Sale of Goods—Proof against Agent and Vendee.—The firm of J. F. & Sons, as agents of the plaintiffs, supplied goods to the firm of S. & W., upon the footing of the latter becoming debtors to the plaintiffs. They also supplied the same firm with other goods on their own behalf. They made no distinction in their accounts between the goods supplied by them as agents of the plaintiffs and those which they supplied on their own behalf. E. F. was a partner in both firms. Under a deed of inspection, by which it was agreed that the several estates of the two firms should be administered upon the principles and according to the rules and practice of the bankruptcy law, and as if acts of bankruptcy had been committed by the members of such firms respectively:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to prove for the debts of S. & W., both against that firm and against the firm of J. F. & Sons. Wickham v. Wickham, 2 Kay & J. 478.

Held, also, this right was not affected by the circumstance that E. F. had survived the last of his partners in the firm of S. & W. upwards of two months, at the time when the act of bankruptcy was taken to have been committed. Ib.

— Bill of Exchange—Ignorance of Holder.—A holder of a bill of exchange drawn by a firm upon some of their members, constituting a distinct firm, has a right to prove it against all the parties according to their liabilities upon the bill, provided he was ignorant of their partnership. Adam, Ex parte, 2 Rose, 36; 1 Ves. & B. 493.

Three partners of a firm of six carried on a distinct trade in partnership, and indorsed a promissory note made by the six, which was discounted by a person who believed at the time, from general reputation that the three were partners in the aggregate firm, but that the firms were distinct:—Held, not a case for double proof. Hinton, Ex parte, De Gex, 550.

The holder of a bill, without notice that the indorser and acceptors were members of the same firm, is not entitled to a double proof. Moult, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 28; 2 Deac. & Chit. 419.

In bankruptcy among partners concerned also in other trades, the paper of one firm being given to the creditors of another, proof was allowed upon both estates. Bonbons, Ex parte, 8 Ves. 546.

Where joint debts were paid by a bill drawn by one of the debtors, and accepted by another, each carrying on distinct trades, proof was allowed under their separate commissions upon the bill. Wensley, Ex parte, 2 Ves. & B. 254; 1 Rose, 441.

— Indorsement of one Member of a Firm.—A creditor who, knowing the partnership of the parties, took a bill drawn by all and indorsed by one, is not entitled to double proof, upon the ground that previously to taking the bill he required and had the indorsement of the one, and thereby raised a contract for double security. Bank of England, Ex parte, 2 Rose, 82.

— Firm Abroad—Partner in England.—A firm abroad drew bills on one of its own partners, trading on his own account in England, payable to an agent of the foreign government. The bills were not paid. Process of insolvency issued against the foreign firm, and a commission against the English partner:—Held, that the agent might prove under the commission, but would be restrained from receiving dividends, unless he elected not to prove under the insolvency abroad. Chevalier, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 345.

— Under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134.—Two firms, one composed of A. and B., and the other of A., B., and C., carried on business at Liverpool and Pernambuco respectively. An English adjudication was made against A. and B., and the holder of a bill of exchange drawn by A., B., and C. on A. and B., proved under it and received a dividend. Afterwards A., B., and C. failed in Pernambuco, and the same creditor proved and received dividends on his bill under that liquidation:—Held, that he ought not to receive any further English dividend without refunding the Brazilian dividends; but he could not be ordered to refund the English dividend already received. Mellor, Ex parte, 3 De G., F. & J. 760.

D. carried on business in England under the style of D. & Co., and in Brazil under that of D., L. & Co. Bills for 1,900*l.* were drawn by D., L. & Co. upon and accepted by D. & Co. in favour of B. & Co. D. & Co. executed and registered a deed of assignment under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861. D., L. & Co.'s assets in Brazil were administered there according to the laws of Brazil, and B. & Co. received part payment of the 1,900*l.* there. B. & Co., notwithstanding the part payment, carried in their claim to prove and receive dividends for the whole 1,900*l.* under the deed of assignment:—Held, that although they might be admitted to prove for the amount, they were not to receive any dividend until after the other creditors had received a dividend equal to that received by B. & Co. in Brazil. Wilson, Ex parte, Douglas, In re, 7 L. R. Ch. 490; 41 L. J., Bk. 46; 26 L. T. 489; 20 W. R. 564.

The 152nd section of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, did not apply, there being only one estate, that of D., to be wound up in bankruptcy, and not two distinct estates, within the meaning of that section. Ib.

A firm consisting of two persons, D. and Y., carrying on business as D., Y. & Co., at Liverpool, and another consisting of three persons, D., Y. & Y., carrying on business in Pernambuco, were adjudicated bankrupts, in 1854, at Liverpool. A creditor of both firms proved for a debt under this bankruptcy, and received a dividend, after which receipt the house at Pernambuco also became bankrupt, and the creditor proved the same debt against the estate there, and received a dividend in respect of it. In 1861 an order was made by the commissioner in England, that the proof in this country should be expunged, unless the creditor paid to the assignees the dividend received by him at Pernambuco. This order was varied by the Lords Justices, who declared that the creditor was not entitled to any dividend in England, except the first which he had received, but without prejudice to any question as to that dividend, or as to any question under the foreign bankruptcy. The assignees presented a petition that the creditor might be ordered to refund such first dividend:—Held, that in the absence of all evidence to shew that the law of Brazil would not have given the creditor the right to receive the dividend there, he was under no obligation as to that which he received here; but that, as he had rightfully received, he was entitled to retain it. Smith, Ex parte, 31 L. J., Bk. 60; 6 L. T. 268; 10 W. R. 276.

— Under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 71. ]—In order that double proof may be admitted under s. 37 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, it is necessary (just as it was under s. 152 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861) that there should be distinct estates to be wound up in bankruptcy. Banco de Portugal, Ex parte, Hooper, In re, 11 Ch. D. 317; 48 L. J., Bk. 73; 40 L. T. 406; 27 W. R. 856—C. A. Affirmed, sub nom. Banco de Portugal v. Waddell, 5 App. Cas. 161; 49 L. J., Bk. 33; 42 L. T. 698; 28 W. R. 477—H. L. (R.)

Two firms, consisting of the same members, which carried on business, the one in London and the other at Oporto, became bankrupt. The Portuguese firm had drawn bills of exchange on the London firm, which the latter had accepted:—Held, that the holders of the bills, who had received a dividend under the Portuguese liquidation, could not prove in respect of the bills in the London liquidation without giving credit for what they had received in Portugal. Id.

The Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 37, allowing a double proof where a person is liable as a sole contractor, and also as member of a firm, applies in the case of a joint and several covenant, though the joint covenant was not expressed to be made by the covenantors as partners, the covenant being, as a matter of fact, to secure an advance made for partnership purposes. Stone, Ex parte, Welch, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 914; 42 L. J., Bk. 73.

Per Cotton, L. J.: Sect. 37 applies only to proofs arising out of contracts, it does not apply to proofs made in pursuance of s. 23. Corbett, Ex parte, Shand, In re, 14 Ch. D. 122; 49 L. J., Bk. 74; 42 L. T. 164; 28 W. R. 569—C. A.

— Identically the same Individuals. ]—Where traders possess two properties, one situated abroad and the other situated in this country, and there has been a petition for adjudication here, followed immediately, in point of date, by proceedings in insolvency abroad, and the foreign court takes possession of the foreign property, as under a cessio bonorum, and employs it in paying the foreign creditors a dividend, such creditors cannot afterwards prove under the English adjudication, except on the condition of first accounting for what they had received abroad. Banco de Portugal v. Waddell, 5 App. Cas. 161; 49 L. J., Bk. 33; 42 L. T. 698; 28 W. R. 477.

The Statutes of Bankruptcy, 1861 and 1869, have no application to a case of two bankruptcies, either in the same country or in different countries, against identically the same individuals. Id.

Two persons of the name of H. carried on trade in Portugal as wine exporters, under the style of H. Brothers, and the same two persons carried on trade in London as wine merchants, under the style of H. & Sons. The practice of the business was for H. Brothers to draw bills on H. & Sons. These bills were accepted in London and paid in Portugal. The traders fell into difficulties, and in December, 1877, presented a petition for adjudication under the English Bankruptcy Act. Proceedings in insolvency were taken in Portugal, after the date of the petition but before that of the adjudication, and the Portuguese court took possession of the property there, and the Portuguese creditors received a dividend of about 8s. in the pound. These creditors then sought to prove under the English adjudication. This was refused otherwise than as a claim, until they had accounted for what they had received under the Portuguese insolvency:—Held, that this conditional admission of their claim to prove was correct. Id.

— Sole Trader trading in Ireland and Scotland. ]—P. carried on business at Cork, as a sole trader, under the style of D. Brothers, and at Glasgow (in partnership with M.), under the style of S. & Co. On the 3rd June, 1878, P., both as trading as D. Brothers, and in his individual capacity, gave a continuing guarantee by deed to the W. bank, carrying on business in Scotland, for all advances made or to be made by them to S. & Co., and the bank afterwards made advances to S. & Co. on such guarantee. On the 31st March, 1879, the partnership between P. and M. was dissolved, and notice of the dissolution was advertised in the Edinburgh Gazette on the 4th of April, 1879. By deed of the 3rd of April, 1879, M. transferred his estate and interest in the partnership property and business to P. P. was on the 12th August, 1879, adjudicated a bankrupt in Ireland, on his own petition. On the 23rd of August, 1879, the W. bank filed a petition in Scotland to sequester the estates of S. & Co., and of M., on foot of their original debt; and on the 22nd of February, 1880, a sequestration of both estates was ordered by the Court of Appeal in Scotland. The W. bank also claimed to be admitted to prove, unconditionally, in the Irish bankruptcy for the amount of the guarantee:—Held, that P. at the time of the Irish bankruptcy was a sole trader, trading in Ireland as D. Brothers, and in Scotland as S. & Co.; that consequently there was but one estate to be administered under the Irish adjudication; that the 48th section of the Bankruptcy (Ireland) Amendment Act, 1872, did not apply; and that the W. bank could not, therefore, be allowed to prove, except upon the condition of giving credit for so much of the Scotch estate of the bankrupt as they had received or might receive under the sequestration. Pim, In re, 7 L. R., Ir. 458.

Joint Adventures. ]—Where different firms are engaged in a joint adventure, and there is no joint property, the creditors of the adventure may prove against the joint estates of the minor partnerships. Nolte, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 295.

Where several firms are engaged in a joint adventure, the creditors of the adventure, in the event of bankruptcy, and there being no joint property, must prove against the estates of the individuals, not of the firms. Wylie, Ex parte, 2 Rose, 393.

Where A., a sole trader, B. & C., partners, and D., also a trader, engaged in a joint adventure for a joint purchase of goods by them, and the vendor, with a knowledge of their joint interest, received in payment a bill drawn by A. on and accepted by B. & C., the vendor was entitled to prove the bill against both their estates. Wensley, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 441; 2 Ves. & B. 254.

A. and B., trading under the firm of A. & Co., agreed with C. to purchase coffee on a joint account, A. & Co. to have the management of it; A. & Co. purchased the coffee, and C. paid them for his share; A. & Co., without the consent of C., deposited the coffee with D., who advanced money on it, and ignorant that C. was concerned in it, debited A. & Co. with the advances. The coffee was sold at a loss, a commission issued against A. & B., and another against C.: D. was entitled to prove his balance beyond the proceeds against the estate of C., as well as against the estate of A. & B. Gellar, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 297.

Adjustment between Estates.]—A., B., & C. were in partnership, and A. & B. were also concerned as partners in a distinct house. Commissions issued against both firms. The estate of the two cannot claim anything against the estate of the three, until the joint creditors of the three are fully satisfied. Hargreaves, Ex parte, 1 Cox, 440.

Where part of an account between two mercantile houses consists, on both sides, of bills, which may be proved against both estates, the cash balance as between the houses is provable, excluding the bills outstanding on both sides; but, in the event of a surplus, the bills on both sides are to be included in the amount. Laforest, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 363; 2 Deac. & Chit. 199.

If two proofs are made on a joint and several bond, against two separate estates, a subsequent consolidation of the estates does not affect the double proof. Fuller, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 222; 3 Deac. & Chit. 520.

A., B. & C. being partners, A. & B. borrowed 10,000*l.* for the firm, on mortgages of their separate estates; the firm became bankrupt; C. was wholly insolvent, and A.'s mortgaged estate paid more than his share of the debt. A.'s estate has a claim to contribution from B.'s for the difference between what B.'s estate sells for, and half the debt of 10,000*l.* Plowden, Ex parte, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 402.

Joint creditors, under an order to prove against separate estates, proving against one or more of them exclusively of the rest, the estate so burdened is entitled to reimbursement from the others. Willock, Ex parte, 2 Rose, 292.

Under a joint commission, the separate estate of one partner has a lien on the other's share of the surplus of the joint estate, in respect of a debt proved under bills drawn in the name of the firm for a separate debt; and may come in with the other separate creditors for the deficiency. King, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 212; 17 Ves. 115.

Under a separate commission, the separate estate is entitled to be reimbursed, out of the joint estate, expenses incurred in recovering property for the benefit of the joint creditors. Rutherford, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 201.

XII. MUTUAL CREDITS, DEBTS AND DEALINGS.

1. GENERALLY.

Effect of 33 & 35 Vict. c. 71, s. 39.]—The Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 39, enacting that where there have been mutual credits, mutual debts, or other mutual dealings between the bankrupt and any other person claiming to prove under the bankruptcy, the sum due from one party shall be set off against any sum due from the other party and the balance only shall be claimed or paid, establishes an absolute statutory rule, and the fact that one party holds a lien or security for his debt will not affect the operation of the rule. Barnett, Ex parte, Dewce, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 293; 43 L. J., Bk. 87; 29 L. T. 858; 22 W. R. 283.

B. & Co. had business transactions with a trader who became bankrupt, and at the time of the bankruptcy he owed B. & Co. 3,010*l.* and B. & Co. owed him 88*l.*; but he held goods of B. & Co. upon which he had a lien for that amount. The trustee in the bankruptcy insisted that B. & Co. should pay the debt of 88*l.* before the goods were delivered up to them, and that they should prove for the whole sum of 3,010*l.* against the bankrupt's estate.—Held, that B. & Co. were entitled to have 88*l.* set off against their claim, so as to free the goods from the lien and to prove for the balance against the bankrupt's estate. Id.

— At what date Mutual Account should Stop.]—The object of s. 39 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, is that where there are mutual accounts, a secret act of bankruptcy should not stop the currency of those accounts; the existence of mutual dealings and accounts protects the credits and debts on each side from the operation of the act of bankruptcy until notice of it. The exact date at which a mutual account is to stop must depend on the circumstances of the case and the nature of the credits, but may and ought to be taken at least up to the date when the person claiming the benefit of s. 39 has notice of an act of bankruptcy. Elliot v. Turquand, 7 App. Cas. 79; 51 L. J., P. C. 1; 45 L. T. 771; 30 W. R. 477—P. C.

— Cannot be got rid of by Agreement.]—The law of set-off enacted by s. 39 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, is an absolute statutory rule, which overrides any agreement to the contrary that may be existing between the bankrupt and his creditors at the commencement of the bankruptcy. Jackson, Ex parte, or Fletcher, Ex parte, Vaughan, In re, 36 L. T. 711; 25 W. R. 561. Affirmed, 6 Ch. D. 350; 37 L. T. 282; 25 W. R. 870—C. A.

The law of Scotland on the subject of compensation and retention in bankruptcy is very nearly, if not precisely, the same as the law of England as to mutual credit. M'Kinnon v. Armstrong, 2 App. Cas. 531; 36 L. T. 482—Per Lord Blackburn.

Bankrupt Contributory to Company.]—A shareholder of a company in course of winding up, being also a creditor of the company, assigned his estate and effects to trustees for his creditors:—Held, that inasmuch as a set-off of mutual credits was allowed by the Bankruptcy Law Act of 1849, though not allowed in respect of calls by the Companies Act of 1862, the court of Chancery, sitting as the court of appeal in bankruptcy, was bound to allow the claim upon the company to be set off against the calls. Duckworth, In re, Cooper, Ex parte, 2 L. R., Ch. 578; 36 L. J., Bk. 28; 16 L. T. 580; 15 W. R. 858.

Proof of Set-off.—In an action by assignees, it is not sufficient proof of a set-off that the commissioners permitted the defendant to prove the debt proposed to be set off. Pirie v. Menett, 3 Camp. 279; 1 Rose, 359.

When Court will restrain Action.—Where there are cross acceptances, and the right of set-off is clear, the Court of Bankruptcy will restrain the assignees from bringing an action. Clegg, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 91; 3 Deac. & Chit. 505.

2. MUTUAL CREDITS.

Must tend to Terminate in a Debt.—In order to constitute a mutual credit it must be confined to pecuniary demands on such credits as in their nature will terminate in a debt. Rose v. Hart, 2 Moore, 547; 8 Taunt. 499.

Guarantee.—Therefore a guarantee, being merely a contract to indemnify against contingent damages, cannot form the subject of a mutual credit. Sampson v. Burton, 4 Moore, 515; 2 B. & B. 89.

Contract to Indorse Bill of Exchange.—A., having given the defendant his acceptance for 20l., the defendant, in consideration thereof, undertook that he would indorse to A. a bill drawn by him (the defendant) on E., payable to the defendant's order. He gave the bill, but would not indorse it. On an action by the assignees of A., who had become bankrupt, and whose acceptance was dishonoured:—Held, that the contract to indorse was not a subject of mutual credit within 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 50, and could not have been set off by the assignees against the 20l. due from A. to the defendant. Rose v. Sims, 1 B. & Ad. 521.

A defendant may set off a debt due to him from a bankrupt for money lent against a claim by the bankrupt's assignees on him for not accepting, pursuant to agreement, a bill of exchange by way of part payment for goods sold and delivered by the bankrupt to himself. Gibson v. Bell, 1 Scott, 712; 1 Bing. N. C. 743; 1 Hodges, 136.

Contingent Debts.—An underwriter cannot set off, as a mutual credit, against a loss accruing after the bankruptcy of the assured, premiums of the same and other policies due before the bankruptcy from the assured, who was himself his own insurance broker in effecting those policies. Glennie v. Edmunds, 4 Taunt. 775.

Neither can he set off returns of premium upon voyages not complete before the bankruptcy, although the underwriter must, upon the conclusion of the adventure, necessarily become debtor to the assured either for a loss or a return of premium. Ib.

Debts Payable in futuro.—The defendants, who were bankers, had, previously to the 24th

October, 1842, discounted bills to a large amount for certain customers, who became bankrupts on that day, at which time the defendants had in their hands a balance of 179l. 19s. 11d. belonging to them. The bills were indorsed by the bankrupts in blank, and two of them were paid by the acceptors before the bankruptcy: the others, far exceeding in amount the 179l. 19s. 11d., did not become due until the 16th November, and on other subsequent days. The action, which was for money lent, was commenced on the 2nd November, 1842; and on the 8th of the same month, the defendants proved against the bankrupts' estate the whole of the bills, except the two which had been paid, deducting the balance of 179l. 19s. 11d.:—Held, that the defendants, as indorsees of the bills, were entitled to set them off in the action. Alsager v. Currie, 12 M. & W. 761; 13 L. J., Ex. 203.

A. first purchased one and afterwards another parcel of goods of B., each at six months' credit; when the first sum became due, A. lodged in B.'s hands a bill of exchange for a larger amount than the value of the goods, in order to pay for them, B. engaging to return to A. the overplus when the bill should be paid; B. received the amount of the bill, and then A. became a bankrupt, not having paid for the second parcel of goods:—Held, in an action by A.'s assignees for the surplus of the bill, that B. might retain it to satisfy his demand on A. for the second parcel of goods. Atkinson v. Elliott, 7 T. R. 378.

Acceptances not due till after the bankruptcy of the acceptor may be set off. Wagstaff, Ex parte, 13 Ves. 65.

Notes issued by Bankers.—To an action by assignees for a debt due to the bankrupt's estate, the defendant may set off notes in his possession issued by the bankrupt before the bankruptcy. Moore v. Wright, 2 Rose, 470; 2 Marsh. 209; 6 Taunt. 517.

Person taking Bill of Exchange gives Credit to Acceptor.—Action by the assignees of R., a bankrupt, on a note drawn by the defendant, payable to G. or order, and by him indorsed to the bankrupt, before the bankruptcy. In October, 1825, G. applied to the bankrupt to discount the note, and took as part payment the proceeds of a bill accepted by the bankrupt, payable to G.'s order. G. indorsed this bill for value to the defendant, and he got it discounted by H., who was the holder when it became due. A commission of bankruptcy issued against R. on the 23rd December, and the bill became due on the 24th, when it was presented and dishonoured. On the 26th, H. received the amount from the defendant, and returned the bill to him:—Held, that he had a right to set off the bill against the demand of the assignees on the note. Collins v. Jones, 10 B. & C. 777.

Defendant kept cash with M. & W., bankers, and accepted a bill drawn by one of the partners in the house, and indorsed by that partner to the house, who discounted and afterwards indorsed it for value to S. Before the bill became due, M. & W. were bankrupts, having funds in the hands of S. more than sufficient to pay the bill, and having in their hands money belonging to the defendant. When the bill became due, S. presented it for payment to the defendant, who having refused payment, S. paid himself out of the funds of M. & W. remaining in his hands, and delivered the bill to their assignees :—Held, in an action by the assignees against the defendant as acceptor of the bill, that there had been before the bankruptcy a mutual credit between the bankrupts and defendant, and that the latter was entitled to set off against the sum due to the bankrupts on the bill the debt due from him to M. & W. at the time of their bankruptcy. Boland v. Nash, 8 B. & C. 105 ; 2 M. & R. 189.

The indorser of a bill of exchange, who has been compelled by the bankruptcy of the acceptor to take it up at maturity, may set off the amount of such bill against a debt to the estate of the acceptor, without being compelled to have recourse to a prior indorser, or being affected by any collateral security which such prior indorser may have. M'Kinnon v. Armstrong, 2 App. Cas. 531 ; 36 L. T. 482—H. L.

An Accommodation Acceptance is a Credit.]—

Action by the assignees of S., a bankrupt, for money had and received to the use of the assignees since the bankruptcy. Plea, that before the bankruptcy, and before notice of any act of bankruptcy, the defendant gave credit to the bankrupt to the amount of 50*l.*, by indorsing for his accommodation, and without consideration, a bill of exchange for that amount, drawn by him and payable to the bankrupt's order, and that such credit was of a nature extremely likely to end in a debt. The plea then alleged, that the amount of the bill was paid by the defendant on its dishonour after the bankruptcy, but before the commencement of the action ; and the bankrupt thereupon became indebted to the defendant : that before the bankruptcy, S. drew a bill of exchange on the Chesterfield bank, and delivered it to the defendant by way of loan, that he might raise the amount, and thereby give credit to the defendant to that amount ; and that afterwards, before the bankruptcy, the defendant obtained the amount of the bill from the Chesterfield bank, and that he was ready and willing to set off the two sums against each other :—Held, that the plea showed such a giving of credit to the bankrupt within the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 50, as might be the subject of a set-off in an action brought by his assignees. Hulme v. Muggleston, 3 M. & W. 31 ; 6 D. P. C. 112 ; M. & H. 344.

Where a defendant lent his acceptance to the bankrupt on a bill which did not become due till after the act of bankruptcy, and was then outstanding in the hands of third persons, yet the defendant having paid the amount after the commission issued, and before the action brought by the assignees, is entitled to set off the same under the words "mutual credit" in 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 28. Smith v. Hodson, 4 T. R. 211.

To a declaration by assignees for goods sold and delivered by the bankrupt, the defendant pleaded that, before notice of any act of bankruptcy, and before the issuing of the fiat, and before action, the defendant gave credit to the bankrupt, by accepting bills of exchange for his accommodation, without any consideration or value, which bills were, before notice of the bankruptcy, negotiated by the bankrupt for his own use and benefit ; that the credits so given were likely to end in debts from the bankrupt to the defendant ; and that afterwards, and before action, the defendant paid the bills :—Held, a good set-off, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 50, on the ground that a mutual credit was shewn. Russell v. Bell, 8 M. & W. 277 ; 1 D., N. S. 107.

Action by assignees of A., a bankrupt, for money had and received by the defendant to the use of the assignees. Plea, that before action, and before the defendant had notice of any act of bankruptcy committed by A., and before any fiat against him, the defendant gave credit to A. in 148*l.* 10*s.*, by accepting, for his accommodation, and without consideration, a bill of exchange for that sum, which bill A., afterwards and before notice to the defendant of A.'s bankruptcy, indorsed and negotiated for value, for his own use ; that the credit so given by the defendant to A. was a credit of a nature extremely likely to end in a debt from A. to the defendant ; that, afterwards and before action, the defendant was obliged to pay the bill to the holders, and thereby A. became indebted to the defendant in 148*l.* 10*s.* ; that, before the defendant had notice of any act of bankruptcy committed by A., and before any fiat against him, A. delivered to the defendant bills of exchange for 100*l.* and 20*l.*, for the purpose and in order that the defendant might receive the amounts thereof for the use of A. ; that the defendant afterwards received such amounts, and was ready and willing to set off the one debt against the other :—Held, that the acceptance of the bill for the accommodation of A. was a credit given to A., and that the delivery of the two bills by A. to the defendant for the purpose in the plea mentioned, was a credit given by A. to the defendant. Bittleston v. Timmis, 1 C. B. 389 ; 2 D. & L. 817.

Held, also, that such mutual credits resulted in debts, which might be set off against each other, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 50. Ib.

Where Goods or Bills of Debtor have been Deposited with Creditor.]—

Where D. and another purchased goods of two London houses, and shipped them upon speculation to a foreign port in the name of C., and not wishing to appear as principals in the transaction, represented to the London houses, and to the consignees abroad, that C. was the principal, and that they acted merely as his agents ; and after the shipment, the London houses made advances to D. and his partner, as the agents of C., on account of the goods, the proceeds of which remained in the hands of the consignees abroad ; and C. also advanced money to D. and his partner, who afterwards became bankrupts, and at the date of the commission were indebted to C. for such advances :—Held, in an action by the assignees for money had and received, that C. had a right to retain the proceeds of the goods as a set off for money advanced to the bankrupts, it being a case of mutual credit. Easum v. Cato, 1 D. & R. 530 ; 5 B. & A. 361.

The defendants accepted two bills of exchange drawn by J. & Co., who undertook to provide funds before maturity, and as collateral security deposited with the defendants cotton, coffee, and certain bills of exchange. The defendants discounted away the bills so deposited, and obtained the assent of J. & Co. to their selling the goods and receiving the proceeds, and acted thereon. But after the cotton was sold, and before the coffee was sold, J. & Co. became bankrupts. The proceeds of the deposited bills and goods left a balance in the hands of the defendants after payment of the two bills accepted by them, but a larger balance was owing by J. & Co. to the defendants on other matters. The assignees in bankruptcy of J. & Co. brought an action to recover the balance of the proceeds of the deposited bills and goods :—Held, that they were not entitled to succeed, inasmuch as the only question was whether, at the time of the bankruptcy of J. & Co., there was such a mutual credit between them and the defendants as to entitle the latter to retain the proceeds of the coffee against the larger balance owing to them, and that after the arrangement authorizing the sale of the cotton and coffee there was such a mutual credit. Astley v. Gurney, 4 L. R., C. P. 714; 38 L. J., C. P. 357; 18 W. R. 44—Ex. Ch.

Where A., before executing a deed of inspection, which was afterwards registered, deposited bills of exchange with a bank for collection when due, and the authority to collect and receive the money on the bills remained unrevoked up to the execution of such deed :—Held, that there was a credit given by A. to the bank within the meaning of the mutual credit clause of the Bankrupt Law Act, 1849, s. 171; and that the bank, therefore, was entitled to set off the amount collected on such bills against a debt due from A. to the bank. Naorji v. Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China, 3 L. R., C. P. 444; 37 L. J., C. P. 221; 18 L. T. 358; 16 W. R. 791.

If a person intrusted with value trust his creditor with that which may become productive of value, the first becoming bankrupt, the second may retain his debt out of the proceeds of the things intrusted to him, and only pay the balance. A., a merchant, employed B., a broker, to effect policies, and sell goods, and trusted him with the possession of the policies; A. being indebted to B. for premiums of insurance, and having obtained an advance of money upon a pledge of goods placed in B.'s hands for sale, but not on those goods, to the exclusion of A.'s general creditors, became bankrupt; afterwards a loss happened, and B. received it from the underwriters :—Held, that this was a mutual credit within the 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 28, and that B. might retain the sum received for the loss, in liquidation of his advances, as well as of the balance due for premiums. Olive v. Smith, 5 Taunt. 56; 2 Rose, 122.

— For Special Purpose.—A. deposited policies of insurance belonging to him as a security for a debt of 800*l.* at his bankers, who were in advance to him; B. (a creditor) knowing the circumstance, afterwards, at the request of A., expressly undertook to take the policies and settle with the underwriters, and pay in the amount which he might receive, at A.'s bankers, to his account. On this undertaking the policies were given up to him, and he received 949*l.* on them. A. becoming a bankrupt, and being indebted to B. in a larger sum than that received, he refused to pay over the money, and claimed to set off his own debt against the proceeds of the policies :—Held, that the assignees of A. could not (even with the assent of the bankers) maintain an action against B. for the breach of his undertaking. Chalmer v. Page, 3 B. & A. 697.

A. & Co., merchants at Liverpool, remitted a bill to B. & Co. in London, with directions to get it discounted, and apply the proceeds in a particular way; B. & Co. did not get the bill discounted, but received the money when it became due. Before that time, A. & Co. had stopped payment, and desired to have the bill returned to them. A commission of bankruptcy having been issued against them before the money was received on the bill by B. & Co. :—Held, that the latter was liable to be sued for the amount by the assignees of A. & Co. for money received to their use; and that B. & Co. could not set off a debt due to them from A. & Co. Buchanan v. Findley, 9 B. & C. 738; 4 M. & R. 593.

A creditor of a partnership having made further advances on the security of a bill deposited with him for that purpose by the partners, and having undertaken to receive the amount when due and return the surplus, the bill having been dishonoured, and remaining in his hands unpaid, is not entitled, on the bankruptcy of the partners, to set off his prior advances against a demand by the assignees for the bill. Flint, Ex parte, 1 Swans. 30.

P. & Co., having borrowed a large sum of the bank of Bengal, deposited company's paper with the bank to a greater amount, as a collateral security, accompanied with a written agreement authorizing the bank, in default of non-payment by a given day, "to sell the company's paper for the reimbursement of the bank, rendering to P. & Co. any surplus." Before default, P. & Co. were declared insolvents, under the Indian Insolvent Act, 9 Geo. 4, c. 73, which declared that where there had been a mutual credit given by the insolvents and any other person, one debt or demand might be set off against the other; and that all such debts as might be proved under a commission of bankruptcy in England might be proved in the same manner under the Indian Insolvent Act. At the time of the adjudication of insolvency the bank were holders of two promissory notes of P. & Co., which they had discounted for them before the loan. The time for repayment having expired, the bank sold the company's paper, the proceeds of which, after satisfying the principal and interest, produced a considerable surplus. In an action by the assignees of P. & Co. against the bank, to recover the surplus :—Held, that the bank could not set off the two promissory notes, and that the case did not come within the clause of mutual credit in the Bankrupt Act. Young v. Bank of Bengal, 1 Moore, P. C. C. 150; 1 Deac. 622.

— In Fraud of Debtor's Creditors.—If a bankrupt, on the eve of his bankruptcy, fraudulently delivers goods to one of his creditors, the assignees may disaffirm the contract, and recover the value of the goods in trover; but if they bring assumpsit, they affirm the contract, and then the creditor may set off his debt. Smith v. Hodson, 4 T. R. 211.

Money advanced by Defendant on Speculation by Debtor and Himself.—The defendant and C. purchased a string of pearls with money advanced by the defendant, and agreed that the profit and loss thereon should be equally divided, C. paying his share of interest till the pearls were sold. C. became bankrupt, being indebted at that time to the defendant. The pearls were afterwards sold, and the money received by the defendant. In an action by the assignees of C. for his share of the money received :—Held, that the defendant was entitled to set off the debt due from C. to himself, this being a case of mutual credit within the 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 28. French v. Fenn, 3 Dougl. 257.

What Mutual Credit will destroy Lien.—A tradesman undertook to do work upon an article delivered to him, for a person to whom he was indebted, and it was agreed that the work should be paid for in ready money. He afterwards became bankrupt.—Held, that the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 60, did not render the assignees liable in trover for refusing to deliver such article to the creditor on his offering to set off the price of the work against his own demand. Clarke v. Fell, 4 B. & Ad. 404; 1 N. & M. 244.

Set-off by Person standing in Place of Creditor.]

—A., at Hamburg, had dealings with B. & Co., in London, and previously to their bankruptcy drew a bill on them for 400*l.*, which they accepted. No debt was then due from them to A., but they were afterwards indebted to him in 236*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.*, when they drew on him for 163*l.* 8*s.* 9*d.*, being the balance due from A. in case the bill for 400*l.* had been paid. This bill was drawn on the 16th February, and on the same day sold by them to the defendants for its full value, to be paid for on the 20th of the same month, on which day B. & Co. committed an act of bankruptcy, and requested the defendant to keep the bill at the disposal of A., by whom the bill for 400*l.* was drawn. On the 23rd February, A. accepted the bill without knowledge of the bankruptcy, and paid the amount of it, when it became due, to the defendant, on an agreement that the defendant should resist the claims of the assignees. At that time the bill for 400*l.* was over due and unpaid in the hands of A., and B. & Co. were indebted to him upon it in more than the amount of the bill in question:—Held, that the assignees could not recover against the defendant, as he stood in the place of A., who was a creditor to the estate of B. & Co., and that this, therefore, was a case of mutual credit between him and the bankrupts before the bankruptcy. Sheldon v. Rothschild, 2 Moore, 43.

3. MUTUAL DEALINGS.

A policy-holder in a life assurance company borrowed money from the company on his policy. Before the death of the assured the company was wound up, and an estimated value was put upon the policy. Afterwards the policy-holder filed a petition for liquidation, and a trustee was appointed. The official liquidators of the company proved against the estate of the policy-holder for the amount advanced to him, and the trustee claimed to set off the estimated value of the policy:—Held, that there were no mutual debts or mutual dealings within the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 39, and that no set-off could be allowed. Price, Ex parte, Lancaster, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 648; 33 L. T. 113; 23 W. R. 844.

One of the terms of an engineering contract was that the plant brought by the contractor on to the works should be deemed the property of the employers for the time being, and should not be removed during the progress of the work without the written order of the engineer, and that in case of suspension of the works by the engineer for any act or default of the contractor, the same should be subject to be used in and about the completion of the works. The works were suspended by the engineer, the contractor went into liquidation, and the works having been completed by the employers, the plant was by consent sold:—Held, that the plant did not become the property of the employers, and that the user of the materials by the employers after the suspension of the works was not such a dealing within s. 39 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, as that the employers were entitled to set off the value of the plant against the sum due to them from the contractor for breach of the contract. Winter, In re, Bolland, Ex parte, 8 Ch. D. 225; 47 L. J., Bk. 52; 38 L. T. 362; 26 W. R. 512.

For twenty years the defendants settled yearly the balance between the goods supplied to them by a firm and the goods supplied by them to the members of the firm. The firm having gone into liquidation, the defendants sought to set off the amounts due for goods supplied to separate members against the goods received from the firm:—Held, that there could be no mutual dealings within s. 39 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, in the absence of an agreement to make the firm liable for the debts of the separate members. Tyso v. Pettit, 40 L. T. 132.

4. TIME WHEN CREDIT GIVEN OR DEBT ACCRUED.

Debtor of Bankrupt becoming Creditor.]

Banker's notes bought by a debtor after the banker has stopped payment, and before an act of bankruptcy is committed, may be set off in an action by the assignees. Hawkins v. Whitten, 10 B. & C. 217; 5 M. & R. 219.

A party has a right to set off notes of a firm of bankers, taken by him after he knew that they had stopped payment, but before he knew that either of the partners had committed an act of bankruptcy; but he is not entitled to set off notes of such bankers taken by him after he knew that either of the partners of the bank had committed an act of bankruptcy. Dixon v. Cass, 1 B. & Ad. 343.

— In General must be before Bankruptcy.]

—In trover by assignees to recover a policy of insurance, the defendant pleaded a custom for insurance brokers to have a general lien upon policies of insurance in their possession for their general balance; that mutual dealings and accounts existed between the bankrupt and the defendant; and that at the time of the conversion the bankrupt was indebted to the defendant in 200*l.* Replication, that the 200*l.* was the price of goods sold to the bankrupt upon twelve months' credit; and that a bill of exchange was drawn and accepted in payment, which bill was not due at the time of the conversion:—Held, that if the plea of mutual credits was set up, then it could not succeed, because it did not appear that the balance was due at the time of the bankruptcy. Hurison v. Guthrie, 2 Hodges, 51; 2 Bing. N. C. 755; 3 Scott, 298.

— Assignee disclaiming Lease—Claim for Improvements.]

—An agreement for a lease of a mill provided that the machinery on the mill at the commencement and expiration of the tenancy should be valued, and the increase or diminution in value paid by the lessor or lessee, as the case might be. The lessee became bankrupt, having improved the machinery. The assignees elected not to continue the tenancy, and the value of the improvements was ascertained:—Held, that against this amount the landlord might set off the rent, and also a demand for goods sold and delivered. Hanson, Ex parte, 3 De G. & J. 92 ; 27 L. J., Bk. 40 ; 4 Jur., N. S. 164.

In 1840, A., being lessee of a warehouse and cellar under a demise from B., and being also lessee under C. of a vault, D. became tenant, from year to year, to A. of the warehouse and cellar and vault, under an annual rental of 185*l.*, made up of 140*l.* for the warehouse and cellar, and 45*l.* for the vault. On the 27th October, 1845, A. became bankrupt, 92*l.* 10*s.* being at that time due as rent from D. to A. Assignees, upon being appointed, elected to take the property held under B., and on the 26th February, 1846, elected not to take the property held under C. At Christmas, 1845, rent to the amount of 114*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* became due from A. to C., for which amount C. distrained upon the goods in the vault held by D., who, to relieve himself from this distress, paid that sum to C. An action having been subsequently brought by the assignees of A. against D. to recover the 92*l.* 10*s.*, and also 35*l.*, being one quarter's rent of the warehouse and cellar due at Christmas, 1845 :—Held, that D. was not entitled, in such action, to avail himself of the payment of 114*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* made by him to C. Graham v. Allsopp, 3 Ex. 186 ; 18 L. J., Ex. 85.

— After Bankruptcy — when Good. ] —

Though in general after bankruptcy an assignment cannot be taken of a debt of the bankrupt, in order to set it off against a debt due to the bankrupt, yet, if such assignment is taken in consequence of any arrangement for that purpose made before the bankruptcy, or by reason of any equity to have such assignment arising from matters which have occurred before the bankruptcy, then a set-off will be allowed in respect of the debt so assigned. So a surety before bankruptcy, paying off the debt of the principal after a bankruptcy, and taking an assignment of securities, among which is a security of the bankrupt, is entitled to set it off against a debt due from him to the bankrupt. Barrett, Ex parte, 34 L. J., Bk. 41 ; 13 W. R. 559.

Where authority had been given previous to an act of bankruptcy by the bankrupts to the defendant in the course of mutual dealings to receive the purchase-money of their estate, and to place it to their account, and such authority had been acted upon before notice of an act of bankruptcy :—Held, that such authority was not revoked by the act of bankruptcy ; that the payment thereof to the defendant was a rightful payment ; that being so received it became a debt and an item in the account between him and the bankrupts before notice of any act of bankruptcy, and that the defendant was entitled to set off against it, in an action brought by the trustee in bankruptcy, the debt due from the bankrupts to him. Elliott v. Turquand, 7 App. Cas. 79 ; 51 L. J., P. C. 1 ; 45 L. T. 771 ; 30 W. R. 477—P. C.

Creditor of Bankrupt becoming Debtor. ] —

Where, after a bankruptcy, a creditor in the bankruptcy becomes a debtor to the bankrupt estate, there is no right of set-off between the two debts. Young, Ex parte, Day, In re, 41 L. T. 40 ; 27 W. R. 942.

If bankers receive any pay-money on account of a bankrupt, after notice of an act of bankruptcy, all the sums received are to the use of the estate ; and they cannot set off the payments made, or be allowed to come in as creditors, and claim dividends on debts paid, which were owing before the act of bankruptcy. Hankey v. Verum, 3 Bro. C. C. 313.

A debtor assigned his property to trustees by a deed registered under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, by which it was provided that the property should be applied as if he had been "at the date hereof" adjudged bankrupt. At the date of the deed and of its registration R. held a bill of exchange accepted by the debtor, which had not yet arrived at maturity. After the execution of the deed, but before its registration, R. accepted a bill of exchange drawn upon him by the debtor :—Held, that R. had no right to set off the two bills against each other, for that the date of the deed, and not the time of registration, was to be looked to, and at the former time there was no mutual credit. Ryder, Ex parte, Douglas, In re, 6 L. R., Ch. 413 ; 40 L. J., Bk. 63 ; 24 L. T. 80 ; 19 W. R. 554.

To a count by assignees of a bankrupt for money had and received by the defendant to the use of the assignees (not stating whether received before or since the bankruptcy), the defendant pleaded a set-off for money due to him on an account stated with the bankrupt before the bankruptcy :—Held, that the plea was bad, for that it did not shew that the debts were mutual. Groom v. Mealey, 2 Scott, 171 ; 2 Bing. N. C. 138 ; 1 Hodges, 212. See Wood v. Smith, 4 M. & W. 522.

When a bankrupt has not obtained an order of discharge, a creditor who has proved in the bankruptcy, and who is being sued by the bankrupt, or by his executor, after his death, for a debt due to the bankrupt on a contract entered into after the commencement of the bankruptcy, cannot, during the period of three years from the close of the bankruptcy, set off the unpaid balance of his proved debt against the sum claimed in the action. Smith, In re, Green v. Smith (No. 1), 22 Ch. D. 586 ; 52 L. J., Ch. 411 ; 48 L. T. 154 ; 31 W. R. 413.

— Creditor leaving Legacy to his Debtor. ] —

T., being indebted to his sister C., became a bankrupt ; shortly afterwards C. made her will, and thereby gave certain sums to her trustees and executors, as pecuniary provisions for the benefit of T., in a form apparently intended to exclude the claims of creditors. She never proved her debt against the bankrupt's estate, and died before he obtained his certificate. On a bill in equity by the assignee against the executors of C. for payment of the money bequeathed for the use of the bankrupt :—Held, that the executors were not entitled to set off the amount of the unproved debt against the demand of the assignee. Cherry v. Boulton, 4 Mylne & C. 422.

A week before the death of a testatrix, a debtor to her, who was one of the residuary legatees under her will, dated several years previously, became bankrupt. The debt was never proved by the testatrix in her lifetime or by her executors after her death, nor had any dividend been declared in the bankruptcy :—Held, that the executors were not entitled to set off or retain the amount of the debt due to the testatrix against the share of the bankrupt ; nor, under the circumstances, any amount in respect of dividend on such debt. Hodgson, In re,

Hodgson v. Fox, 9 Ch. D. 673; 48 L. J., Ch. 52; 27 W. R. 38.

—Trustee not disclaiming Lease of Farm—Claim to be Paid for Tillage by Custom of Country.—The trustee of a bankrupt lessee of a farm did not disclaim the lease, but carried on the farm for a year, when the lease terminated by due notice from the trustee to the landlord. The custom of the country required the landlord, at the expiration of the lease, to pay the tenant a valuation for tillage, sowing, and cultivation:—Held, that the landlord was not entitled to set off against the sum claimed by the trustee for tillage, &c., the rent due from the bankrupt lessee at the time of the bankruptcy. Alloway v. Steere, 10 Q. B. D. 22; 52 L. J., Q. B. 38; 47 L. T. 333; 31 W. R. 290; 47 J. P. 55.

In respect of breaches of covenant committed by the tenant during his occupation, the only remedy of the landlord is to prove for damages in the liquidation, and the landlord has no right of set-off as against moneys due by him to the trustee for severed crops. Dyke, Ex parte, Morrish, In re, 22 Ch. D. 410; 52 L. J., Ch. 570; 48 L. T. 303; 31 W. R. 278—C. A. Affirming, 47 L. T. 26; 30 W. R. 952.

5. RIGHT OF SET-OFF DEPENDS UPON BENEFICIAL INTEREST.

Indorsement of Promissory Note for Purpose of Set off.—Third persons holding the acceptance of a trader who was known to be in bad circumstances, agreed with the defendants, as a mode of covering the amount of the bill, that it should be indorsed to them, and that they should purchase goods of the trader, which were to be paid for by a bill at three months' date, or made equal to cash in three months (before which time the trader's acceptance would be due), but without communicating to the trader that they were the holders of his acceptance:—Held, that the trader having become bankrupt, and his assignees having brought an action to recover the value of the goods sold and delivered to the defendants, the latter could not set off the bankrupt's acceptance, which they did not hold in their own right, but in effect for such other persons. Fair v. M'Iver, 16 East, 130.

To an action by assignees of a bankrupt for 48*l.*, the price of a phaeton which the defendant had purchased from the bankrupt for cash on delivery, the defendant pleaded that, before and at the time of the delivery of the phaeton and of the bankruptcy, the bankrupt was indebted to the defendant in 48*l.*, upon a bill of exchange drawn by Elves upon and accepted by the bankrupt, payable to Harland, and by Harland indorsed to the defendant: the plaintiffs replied that the bankrupt had accepted the bill for a debt due from him to Harland, and that after the bill became due and was dishonoured, Harland indorsed it to the defendant without consideration, in order that the defendant might purchase the phaeton, setting off the amount of the bill, and then hand over the phaeton to Harland:—Held, that the replication was a good answer to the claim of set-off. Lackington v. Combes, 8 Scott, 312; 6 Bing. N. C. 71.

When previously to the date of the winding up of a bank it has indorsed for value certain acceptances of a firm to which it was liable, the bank cannot subsequently restore the right of set-off by a conditional agreement under which the indorsees re-indorsed the bills to the bank for the purpose of establishing the right, the bank and such indorsees to share in the benefit to be obtained by the set-off. London, Bombay and Mediterranean Bank v. Narraway, 15 L. R., Eq. 93; 42 L. J., Ch. 329; 27 L. T. 572; 21 W. R. 318.

Holders of Notes issued by Bank.—The defendants being indebted for money lent to them by their bankers, who afterwards became bankrupt, received from their customers, on the day of the bankers' stopping payment, but without notice of an act of bankruptcy, certain 5*l.* notes of the bankrupts, in part payment of antecedent debts, on condition of debiting themselves with so much only as they should receive from the assignees upon the notes. They also received, from other parties, other 5*l.* notes of the bankrupts, for which they were to pay so much only as they should receive from the assignees for such notes. An action for money lent having been brought by the assignees of the bankrupts against the defendants:—Held, that the defendants had a beneficial interest in the first description of notes, and might, therefore, set them off; but that they could not set off the second description of notes, as they held them merely as trustees for others. Forster v. Wilson, 12 M. & W. 191; 13 L. J., Ex. 209.

Dishonoured Bill returned by Drawer to Holder for Purpose of Set off.—The defendants were the holders of a bill of exchange, accepted by M., for 760*l.*, which was indorsed to them by the commercial bank of Scotland, and they were also the acceptors of a bill drawn by the commercial bank in favour of M. The former bill became due on the 6th of January, and was dishonoured, M. having stopped payment. On the 7th, the defendants debited the commercial bank in their account with the 760*l.*, and wrote a receipt on the back of the bill, and returned it protested to the commercial bank. The latter, hearing of the failure of M., on the 6th, wrote to the defendants, requesting them to keep the 760*l.* bill, and set off the amount against the 1,000*l.*, their acceptance, which would become due on the 12th. In an action by the assignees of M. (who afterwards became bankrupt) against the defendants, as acceptors of the 1,000*l.* bill:—Held, that they were not entitled to set off the 760*l.* Belcher v. Lloyd, 3 M. & Scott, 822.

Regimental Agent—Money received from Paymaster-General—Set-off by Colonel.—Where a regimental agent had received moneys from the paymaster-general of the forces, under the authority of a warrant of attorney from the colonel, and then became bankrupt:—Held, in an action by the assignees for goods sold and delivered by the agent for the use of the regiment, that the colonel might set off the money which the agent had received from the paymaster-general remaining unaccounted for, in reduction of the demand. Knowles v. Maitland, 6 D. & R. 312; 4 B. & C. 178.

Where Plaintiff's Interest not a beneficial one.—The assured had subsequently to the date of a policy of insurance on goods, executed a deed of inspectorship under the Bankruptcy Act (24 & 25 Vict. c. 134), s. 192, and was suing on behalf of third persons who had made advances upon the shipping documents:—Held, that he was entitled to recover, and that the underwriters were not entitled to set off the amount of a debt due from the assured to them under the mutual credit clause of 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 171. De Mattos v. Saunders, 7 L. R., C. P. 570; 27 L. T. 120; 20 W. R. 801.

The plaintiffs and defendants being, by agreement between them, jointly entitled to the benefits of a charterparty, the plaintiffs assigned their interest in it, by indorsement, to D., their creditor, at the same time giving the defendants notice of the assignment, and afterwards became bankrupts. The assignees of the charterparty having sued upon it in the names of the plaintiffs, the defendants pleaded the bankruptcy of the plaintiffs, by which the right to their choses in action vested in their assignees. Replication, setting forth the assignment by the plaintiffs of their interest in the charterparty to D., and notice to the defendants of that assignment given by them before the bankruptcy of the plaintiffs, and that the plaintiffs sued on account of D. Rejoinder setting up the previous agreement between the plaintiffs and defendants, that they should share the benefits of the charterparty, by way of a mutual credit between the parties, on which an account should be stated, and one demand set off against the other, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 50:—Held, had in substance, for at the time of the bankruptcy no mutual credit existed between the plaintiffs and defendants. Boyd v. Mangles, 16 M. & W. 337.

Bill pledged by Bankrupt—Acceptor's Right of Set-off.—A., B. & Co., bankers, advanced to C. 500*l.* on his promissory note, and subsequently, without notice to him, deposited his note, with other securities, with W. & Co. as security for a debt. A., B. & Co. having become bankrupts, W. & Co. compelled C. to pay to them the amount due on his note. Prior to the bankruptcy, C. had obtained possession of bank and interest notes of A., B. & Co., to an amount more than sufficient to have paid the amount due on his promissory note. Credit was given to the assignees of A., B. & Co. by W. & Co. for the amount paid to them by C., and the assignees having paid them the balance of their debt, they delivered over to them the securities then in their hands, which were more than sufficient to secure to them the repayment of their debt:—Held, that C. was entitled to set off against the amount due on his note a sufficient portion of bank and interest notes of A., B. & Co. in his hands, and to prove for the balance due on such note. Staddon, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 256; 12 L. J., Bk. 39; 7 Jur. 358.

Del Credere Insurance Broker has beneficial Interest in Insurances effected.—Where a bankrupt has underwritten a policy to a broker acting under a del credere commission, and a loss upon the policy happens before, but is not adjusted till after the bankruptcy, the broker may deduct the amount of the loss from the debt which he owes to the bankrupt's estate. Bize v. Dickason, 1 T. R. 285.

Where insurance brokers effected several policies of insurance, some in the name and on account of their own firm, others in the name of their own firm, but on account of their principals, and others in the name and on account of their principals, for which principals they acted under a del credere commission, without the knowledge of the underwriters:—Held, that in an action against them for premiums, by the assignees of one of the underwriters upon those policies, who had become bankrupt, the brokers might set off losses and returns due on all such of those policies as were effected in the name of their own firm, but not on such as were effected in the names of their principals, such losses and returns having become due on those policies before the time when the bankrupt stopped payment, though they had not been adjusted by the bankrupt, but only by the other underwriters between the time of his stopping payment and committing the act of bankruptcy, on which adjustment the brokers had given their principals credit for the amount. Koster v. Eason, 2 M. & S. 112.

In an action by assignees of a bankrupt underwriter against insurance brokers for premiums due to the bankrupt the brokers are entitled to set off, by reason of mutual credit, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 171, a loss which occurred before the bankruptcy upon a policy underwritten by the bankrupt and effected by the brokers in their own name for a principal for whom they were acting on a del credere commission. Lee v. Bullen, 27 L. J., Q. B. 161; 4 Jur., N. S. 557; 8 El. & Bl. 692, n.

So where Insurance Broker has a Lien on the Policy.—Where brokers effected policies on goods on account of their principals, in their own names, and accepted bills on account of the goods which were consigned to them and lost before arrival:—Held, that they might set off such losses in an action by the assignees of the underwriter for premiums, although they had not any del credere commission, and the losses were not adjusted. Parker v. Beasley, 2 M. & S. 423.

But not in other Cases.—A broker, who is indebted to assignees for premiums due to them upon policies subscribed by the bankrupt before his bankruptcy is not entitled to set off returns of premium due upon the arrival of ships which have arrived since the bankruptcy. Goldschmidt v. Lyon, 4 Taunt. 534.

An insurance broker who is indebted to the assignees of a bankrupt underwriter for premiums cannot, without an especial authority, set off against that debt sums due from the underwriter for returns of premium, whether the returns became due before the bankruptcy or after the bankruptcy. Minett v. Forrester, 4 Taunt. 541.

6. PARTIES MUST BE DEBTORS AND CREDITORS IN THE SAME RIGHT.

Partners—Joint Debt security for Separate.—Set-off was allowed of a separate debt due from the estate against a joint debt due to it, and liberty given to prove the balance where joint debt was a security for the separate debt. Hanson, Ex parte, 12 Ves. 346.

Joint Debtors—One Bankrupt.—The provisions of the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 171, do not apply to cases in which one of several joint debtors becomes bankrupt. New Quebrada Company v. Carr, 4 L. R., C. P. 651; 38 L. J., C. P. 283; 17 W. R. 859.

A. sued B., C. and D. on a joint debt. They pleaded a set-off. A. replied that before plea D. had become bankrupt:—Held, a good replication. Id.

Partners—Joint and Separate Debts.]—A debtor by bond to the separate estate of a deceased partner is not allowed in equity to set off his bond debt in respect of acceptances for which he had become liable to the partnership estate, and which were proved by him under a joint commission of bankruptcy. Addis v. Knight, 2 Mer. 117.

Three partners, A., B. and C., delivered bills to D. for a special purpose. A. and B. became bankrupts. In an action by their assignees against D. for the proceeds of the bill:—Held, that C. not having been made bankrupt, this was not a case of mutual credit within 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 28, so as to entitle the defendant to set off the bills against a debt due to him from A., B. and C. Staniforth v. Fellows, 1 Marsh. 184; 2 Rose, 151.

Part owners of a ship cannot set off their proportions of a debt due to the bankrupt on that account against the debts due by the bankrupt to them severally. Christie, Ex parte. 10 Ves. 105.

Under a separate commission, relief in the nature of a set-off was refused against a separate creditor of the bankrupt indebted to the partnership to a greater amount. Twogood, Ex parte, 11 Ves. 517.

—Collateral Security.]—A firm consisting of two partners entered into a joint and several covenant for the payment of the balance of their current account with a bank, and one of the partners deposited with the bank, as a collateral security for the account, a sum of 8,750*l.* arising from the sale of part of his separate estate. That amount was deposited upon condition that it should not be applied in payment of the current account of the firm with the bank until after the expiration of twelve months' notice of demand for payment, and subject thereto it was to remain the separate property of the depositor. The firm became bankrupt upon the 18th of April, 1882, and the bank gave notice of demand on the 19th of May. Upon the 17th of October, the bank tendered a proof for 17,093*l.* 19*s.*, the total amount due from the firm upon their current account, without deducting the sum of 8,750*l.* deposited with them:—Held, that there was no such mutual dealing between the bank and the depositor as to give rise to any right of set-off under the 39th section of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and that consequently the bank were entitled to prove against the joint estate, and for the full amount due upon the current account. Caldicott, Ex parte, Hart, In re, 48 L. T. 910.

—Debt due from retiring Partner to Firm.]

—A., B. and C., traders in partnership, were indebted to H. in 51,891*l.* 12*s.* Upon a dissolution of the partnership, it was found that C., the retiring partner, was indebted to the firm in 6,817*l.* 9*s.* 8*d.*, supposing all the debts of the firm (including that of H.) to be paid; whereupon it was agreed between them that C. should pay to A. and B. the 6,817*l.* 9*s.* 8*d.*, and should assign to them all the assets and effects of the firm, they undertaking to pay the partnership debts. A. and B., subsequently becoming bankrupts, leaving unpaid of the debt due to H. a balance of 47,000*l.*:—Held, that C.'s liability to H. did not constitute a debt or mutual credit, which could be set off under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 50, in an action by the assignees of A. and B. against him for the recovery of the 6,817*l.* 9*s.* 8*d.* due from him to the firm. Abbott v. Hicks, 7 Scott, 715; 5 Bing. N. C. 578; 3 Jur. 871.

Bankers—Setting off Claim of Customers against Debt due from Customers.]—A. entering into partnership with B., applied to his bankers for a loan to constitute his capital; they consented, upon condition that B. joined in a security for the repayment of the loan, which was complied with. The partnership opened an account with the bankers, who also continued the private bankers of A. On the bankruptcy of the bankers, the balance on the joint account, arising from this loan, was against A. and B., but A.'s private account was in his favour. A. & B. were allowed to set off this private balance against the joint debt, it being but a security for the separate debt. A. and B., soon after the partnership commenced, took in another partner, but it was understood that the account with the bankers was to continue as before. This partner drew cheques in the partnership name, and paid them into his private accounts. The assignees were held not entitled to charge the cheques so transferred against the partnership account. Hanson, Ex parte, 18 Ves. 233; 1 Rose, 156.

A building society borrowed a sum of money from its bankers upon a joint and several promissory note of two of its trustees and a director. The bankers at the time of their bankruptcy held the note, and there was also a balance in their hands to the credit of the society upon a current account:—Held, that the society was entitled to set off the amount of its balance against the sum due upon the note. Clennell, Ex parte, 9 W. R. 380. S. C., nom. Penfold, In re, 4 L. T. 6.

—Customer with two Accounts, one as Executor, he being also Residuary Legatee.]—The trustee under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, of K. & Co., bankers, sued the defendant for money lent, the balance due on his private account. The defendant had another account with the bank as executor of A., and at the time of the bankruptcy the balance on this account was in his favour. Under the will of A. the defendant was both executor and residuary legatee, and at the time of the bankruptcy he had assets in his hands exclusive of the balance in the bank, more than sufficient to provide for all bequests which remained unpaid, and to leave a balance due to him as residuary legatee:—Held, that he was entitled to set off the balance due to him on the executorship account, since the bank might have sued him in his own name if he had overdrawn the account due to him as executor, and the only effect of opening the account as executor was to give notice that there might be equitable rights as against the person opening the account, though in the present case there was no suggestion of any equity against the defendant. Bailey v. Finch, 7 L. R., Q. B. 34 ; 41 L. J., Q. B. 83 ; 25 L. T. 871 ; 20 W. R. 294.

A. and B., executors under a will, under which A. was also residuary legatee, kept an executorship account with a bank, at which A. kept also a private separate account. The bankers stopped payment, and filed a liquidation petition, and a trustee was appointed. Previously to the stoppage the executors had paid all the debts, and funeral and testamentary expenses, and set apart securities to answer the annuities bequeathed by the will, but the executors were jointly liable for two small sums for rates and taxes, and their solicitor's bill of costs in relation to the estate. At the date of the stoppage a sum of 1,400*l.* was due from the bank on the executorship account, while a sum of 1,200*l.* was owing by A. on his separate account. A. claimed to prove in the liquidation for the difference between the two sums, as having a right to set off, as against the debt due from him, the money owing from the bank on the executorship account, on the ground that the money on that account constituted in fact a clear net residue in which he was absolutely interested :—Held, that the one account could not be set-off against the other, the rules of equitable set-off or mutual credit not applying, unless A. was so much the person solely beneficially interested in the balance of the joint account that a court of equity would, without any terms or further inquiry, have obliged B. to transfer the account into the name of A. alone. Morier, Ex parte, Willis, In re, 12 Ch. D. 491 ; 49 L. J., Bk. 9 ; 40 L. T. 792 ; 28 W. R. 235—C. A.

7. SET-OFF OF CLAIMS FOR UNLIQUIDATED DAMAGES.

Before 32 & 33 Vict. c. 71.—A plea of mutual credit, by way of set-off, cannot be pleaded to a declaration by assignees charging the defendant with having received a sum of money from the bankrupt for the purpose of meeting an acceptance, and neglecting so to apply it, whereby the bankrupt's estate sustained damage, the claim being for unliquidated damages. Bell v. Curey, 8 C. B. 887 ; 19 L. J., C. P. 103.

In an action by assignees of a bankrupt to recover the price of machinery supplied by the bankrupt, the court allowed the defendant to plead an equitable plea of set-off for unliquidated damages arising out of the same contract. Makeham v. Crow, 16 C. B., N. S. 847.

— What are Unliquidated Damages.—A declaration by assignees, that, in consideration that R., before his bankruptcy, would sell goods to the defendant, the defendant agreed to pay for them prompt two months, or by an acceptance; containing an averment of delivery of the goods, and of the defendant's refusal to pay by an acceptance or otherwise, whereby R., before he became a bankrupt, was deprived of the use and benefit of the acceptance, and of the benefit which would have resulted from discounting the acceptance, and was put to great loss and inconvenience, and his estate applicable to the discharge of his just debts was, by reason of the non-payment for the goods, much diminished in value—does not sound in unliquidated damages so as to deprive the defendant of his right of set-off. Groom v. West, 1 P. & D. 19 ; 8 A. & E. 758 ; 8 L. J., Q. B. 25 ; 2 Jur. 940.

VOL. I.

Under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 71.—Under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 39, the right of set-off in cases of mutual credits, mutual debts and other mutual dealings, extends to unliquidated damages. The word "liability," as defined by s. 31 of the same act, includes rents. Booth v. Hutchinson, 15 L. R., Eq. 30 ; 42 L. J., Ch. 492 ; 27 L. T. 600 ; 21 W. R. 116.

At the date of a creditors' deed, the bankrupt was under a liability for unascertained damages to B. in respect of a breach of covenant, and B. was indebted to him 40*l.* for rent. After the date of the deed, but before complete distribution of the estate, B. brought his action, and the amount of the damages was fixed at 50*l.*:—Held, that these were mutual dealings between the bankrupt and B. within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 39, so as to entitle B. to set off the damages recovered by him in the action, although unliquidated at the date of the deed, against all rent due from him not only at the date of the deed, but down to the close of the bankruptcy, i.e., to the analogous period of the complete distribution of the estate under the creditors' deed. Id.

To an action for damages for not accepting goods to arrive by a particular ship, an equitable plea, that the contract was made with an agent of and intrusted by the plaintiff with the possession of the goods, as apparent owner ; that the agent, with the consent of the plaintiff, contracted in his own name, and that the defendant believed him to be the owner, and did not know that he was an agent only, or that the plaintiff was the owner of, or interested in the goods ; that the agent was afterwards adjudicated a bankrupt ; that, before the bankruptcy, mutual credit had been given by the defendant and the agent in respect of the sale of the goods under the contract, and in respect of money payable by him to the defendant upon accounts stated, before the bankruptcy and before the defendant had notice that he was acting as agent, and claiming a set-off is a bad plea,—the action being for unliquidated damages, and the set-off not within the rule in George v. Clagett (7 T. R. 359). Turner v. Thomas, 6 L. R., C. P. 610 ; 40 L. J., C. P. 271 ; 24 L. T. 879 ; 19 W. R. 1170.

The right of set-off under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, extends to unliquidated damages. Such set-off may be pleaded by the defendant to an action by the trustee without recourse to a court of bankruptcy. H., who had contracted to deliver iron to the defendants by successive monthly deliveries, sued for the price, and went into liquidation. The plaintiff, who had been appointed trustee, continued the action. The defendants counter-claimed for damages for non-delivery of part of the iron :—Held, that these unliquidated damages could be pleaded as a set-off to the plaintiff's claim. Peat v. Jones, 8 Q. B. D. 147 ; 51 L. J., Q. B. 128 ; 30 W. R. 433—C. A.

— Fraudulent Representation on Sale of a Chattel.—A claim for unliquidated damages for a fraudulent representation made by a bankrupt on the sale of a chattel is within the mutual credit clause (s. 29) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and consequently may be set off in an action brought by the trustee for the unpaid price ; such fraudulent representation not being a mere personal tort, but a breach of the obligation arising out of the contract of sale. Jack v.

XIII. DIVIDENDS.

1. DIVIDEND LISTS UNDER 24 & 25 VICT. c. 134, s. 178.

The official assignee is bound to ascertain that the dividend lists are correct. Hall, Ex parte, 1 De Gex, 555; 16 L. J., Bk. 10; 11 Jur. 639.

2. WHO ENTITLED TO DIVIDEND.

Creditor must have Proved before Dividend declared.—A creditor cannot petition for payment of a dividend, unless the dividend was declared subsequently to the proof of his debt. Lee, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 780.

Evidence of Proof dispensed with—Lapse of Time.—In 1783, O. proved a debt under a bankruptcy, and in 1790 received the first dividend upon it. In 1798, the executor of O. assigned the debt and the proof of it to S. in trust for G., with a power of attorney to receive the dividends. In 1820 and 1824, two further dividends were paid to G.'s representative. In 1835, a fourth dividend, and subsequently other dividends, making up 20s. in the pound, were declared but not paid, owing to a want of representation, to the trustee's estate. The administrator of G. applied for the dividend warrants, but produced neither the assignments nor the other securities, and gave no evidence that the debt was due and unpaid:—Held, that having regard to the remoteness of the transaction, and the absence of any evidence that the debt was satisfied, the production of the proofs might be waived. Graham, Ex parte, 33 L. J., Bk. 1; 10 Jur., N. S. 1; 9 L. T. 278; 12 W. R. 1.

Dividend Paid on Sum less than Proved Debt—Laches.—A creditor, admitted in May, 1861, to prove against a bankrupt's estate, in June, 1861, received four dividends which had been previously declared, but such dividends were, by mistake, calculated upon a less sum than that for which he had been admitted to prove. Upon a fifth dividend, which exhausted the whole estate, being declared in June, 1864, the creditor received such dividend calculated rightly upon the whole sum for which he had been admitted to prove, and in November, 1864, for the first time he moved the court to order the official assignee to pay to him the deficiencies in the first four dividends:—Held, that the creditor was disentitled to relief in the Court of Bankruptcy, on the ground of his having, with full knowledge of the facts, abstained from making any application from 1861 until 1864, and until all that remained of the estate was swept away. Deane, In re, 12 L. T. 479.

3. RECOVERY OF DIVIDEND.

Creditor need not tender Receipt.—Assignees compelled to pay dividends on the application of the person entitled to receive the same, although no receipt was tendered to them. Moody, In re, 12 L. J., Ch. 145.

Omission to pay Dividend on proved Debt—Liability of Assignee.—Where a proof had been made and a dividend declared, and, by mistake in the list of proofs and dividend, one creditor had been excluded, and the whole fund divided among the other creditors; on petition by the creditor who had been excluded, it was declared that the official assignee must pay him the dividend to which he would have been entitled if the debt had been included in the calculation of the dividend, and also all his costs. Hall, Ex parte, 1 De Gex, 555; 16 L. J., Bk. 10; 11 Jur. 639.

Refusal—Assignee not complying with Request of Creditor.—After a dividend had been declared, a party entitled in respect of a proof requested the assignees by letter to send him the amount of his dividend in a post-office order, promising to send a receipt by return of post. The assignees sent no answer:—Held, that this was such a refusal to pay the dividend as entitled the creditor to an order upon petition, at the costs of the assignees personally. Jackson, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 1.

Secured Creditor—Production of Security.—An official assignee, though he may decline to pay a creditor his dividend until he produces the security which he holds for his debt, is not justified in refusing to pay it on the production of such security. Saunders, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 529.

Lost Instruments.—Where a creditor who had proved a bonded debt had subsequently lost the bond, the court ordered that he might receive the dividends on his debt, upon affidavit of the facts, and indemnifying the assignees. Robins, Ex parte, 1 Deac. 587.

Where a bill of exchange exhibited by a creditor at the time of his proof is lost before a dividend is declared, the commissioner should on the application of the creditor, give special directions to the official assignee to pay the dividend, without requiring the production of the bill. Wallis, Ex parte, 1 Deac. 496.

Where bills of exchange proved under a fiat have been lost by the creditor, and he therefore cannot produce them for the purpose of receiving his dividends, and an application to the court becomes necessary to receive them, the creditor must pay the costs of the application. Trust, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & Chit. 750.

A settlement having been lost, which declared the trusts of dividends, they were paid over to the parties without a reference, the fund being too small to bear the expense. Harrison, Ex parte, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 392.

4. STAYING PAYMENT.

After Omission to prove during Eleven Years.—Dividend stayed, to give opportunity of proving to creditors who had delayed proving for eleven years, no dividend having been declared for upwards of ten years after the fiat issued. Sturton, Ex parte, De Gex, 341.

Creditor must pay Costs of Application.—Where a creditor of a bankrupt, after attending to prove, and being prevented from doing so by the other business in court, became insolvent, and the title of his assignee was not complete in time to enable the assignee to prove:—Held, that he must, nevertheless, pay the costs of his petition to stay the dividend, and of the requisite sitting to receive his proof, and retain them out of the insolvent's estate. Hughes, Ex parte. De Gex, 387.

No Stay on Ground of pending Action where Question already Litigated.]—The court will not suspend the payment of a dividend, on the ground of a pending action against the creditor, in which it was sought to charge him as a partner with the bankrupt, after the very same question has been litigated and decided. Turquand, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 345.

5. OPENING A DIVIDEND.

Opening a dividend at the instance of one creditor lets in others to prove. Bowyer, Ex parte. De Gex, 343.

6. FINAL DIVIDEND.

Where a final dividend had been declared, a creditor, who by inadvertence had omitted to prove his debt, was permitted to prove, he making good to the creditors who had been paid the difference of their dividend, and placing the creditors who had not been paid in the same situation as if he had originally proved. Dilworth, Ex parte, 3 Mont., D. & D. 63; 7 Jur. 95.

7. EFFECT OF PAYMENT.

Payment of a dividend in bankruptcy is not payment of the debt except as against the debtor himself, and confers no right on the bankrupt or his assignee to call upon the creditor to surrender any collateral securities. Ewart v. Latta, 4 Macq. H. L. Cas. 983.

8. UNCLAIMED DIVIDENDS.

Interest on Unclaimed Dividends does not belong to Bankrupt.]—Assignees had at their bankers' two accounts, one a general and the other a separate account. To the latter account, sums of a corresponding amount to that required for payment of dividends declared on the bankrupt's estate were paid. Dividends on the amount of the debts proved had been declared to the extent of 20s. in the pound. Interest accumulated on the amount standing in the separate account for unclaimed dividends:—Held, that such interest belonged to the creditors entitled to the dividends, and not to the bankrupt. Woodford, Ex parte, 3 De G. & S. 666; 19 L. J., Bk. 8; 14 Jur. 948.

Distribution of Unclaimed Dividends—Further Assets—Apportionment.]—After an order was made for the distribution of unclaimed dividends, fresh assets came to the hands of the assignees, which enabled them to make a further dividend:—Held, that this dividend ought to be declared on the debts of all the creditors, including those who had not claimed the former dividends, unless in the interim any of the non-claimants had renewed their proofs, in which case they must be placed pari passu with the other creditors. But the commissioners ought not, out of the further assets, to lay aside a sum equivalent to the dividends already unclaimed, as a fund in reserve to meet any future renewal of the proofs. Mow- bray, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 300; 3 Deac. & Chit. 552.

Unappropriated Moneys may be paid to Unclaimed Dividend Account.]—Sums of money which cannot be appropriated to any particular bankruptcy, may be paid to the unclaimed dividend account. Graham, In re, 1 L. R., Ch. 175.

9. UNDER COMPOSITION DEED.

See XIX. COMPOSITION DEEDS.

10. UNDER LIQUIDATION PROCEEDINGS.

See XVII. LIQUIDATION BY ARRANGEMENT UNDER THE BANKRUPTCY ACT, 1869.

11. UNDER COMPOSITION PROCEEDINGS.

See XVIII. COMPOSITION UNDER THE BANKRUPTCY ACT, 1869.

XIV. THE ORDER OF DISCHARGE AND ITS EFFECT.

1. PROCEEDINGS ON GRANTING ORDER.

Presence of Bankrupt.]—Where a certificate is in question, the bankrupt ought himself to be present in court. Turner, Ex parte, 27 L. J., Bk. 30; 4 Jur., N. S. 470—L. J.

Opposition by Creditors.]—A creditor who held a bankrupt in execution, and refused to discharge him from custody, could not be heard against the certificate. Norton, Ex parte, De Gex, 504; 11 Jur. 699.

Notice of Appeal.]—When two creditors only opposed the certificate:—Held, that these creditors should be served with a petition of appeal against its suspension. Johnson, Ex parte, 4 De G. & S. 25; 20 L. J., Bk. 6; 15 Jur. 185.

Appeal by Creditors.]—A creditor who has failed to prove his debt prior to the granting of an order of discharge, cannot qualify himself to appeal against such order, by proving his debt pending the thirty days allowed for appealing. Greenwood, Ex parte, and Burgess, Ex parte 33 L. J., Bk. 51; 10 Jur., N. S. 981; 10 L. T. 634; 12 W. R. 924.

To entitle a creditor to appeal against an order of discharge, it is not, however, necessary that he should have attended before the commissioner to oppose such order. Id.

In Case of Surprise.]—A creditor who intended to oppose the discharge of a bankrupt was misinformed as to the case being not to come on before a particular commissioner, and did not therefore attend. The bankrupt was discharged by another commissioner, and, on appeal, the case was remitted back as being a surprise on the creditors, and a proper subject for appeal. Johnson, Ex parte, 31 L. J., Bk. 66; 6 L. T. 234—L. J.

Examination insufficient.]—Where the examination of a bankrupt had been stopped by a county court judge, and he had been declared entitled to his order of discharge, upon an affidavit filed (under direction of the court) by the solicitor of the opposing creditors, stating his belief that if he had been permitted to continue the examination, he should have been enabled to prove that the bankrupt (a commission agent) had been in the habit of receiving moneys due from customers of the creditors not for the purpose of paying them over to them, but for payments in respect of gambling and betting transactions, the court ordered the opposing creditors to be at liberty to continue the examination on any matters which would be a statutory ground of objection to his receiving an order of discharge, and that their solicitor was to lay before the judge a clear and definite statement of the nature of the charges to which the examination was to be directed. Urwick, Ex parte, 10 L. T. 81.

Pending Appeal of Partners.]—The pendency of an appeal of two partners from a joint adjudication on bankruptcy against four was not a sufficient ground for adjourning the allowance of the certificates of the other two. Braggiotti, Ex parte, 2 De G., Mac. & G. 964; 22 L. J., Bk. 76, 77.

Power of Registrar to Grant.]—A registrar acting as the deputy of a commissioner, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 27, has power to grant orders of discharge in unopposed cases; and this power is not taken away by implication by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 52, or by s. 159. The order of discharge in such a case ought to be signed by the registrar, and not by the commissioner. Lees, Ex parte, 33 L. J., Bk. 25; 12 W. R. 697.

Form of Certificate.]—A certificate of conformity under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 122, was invalid, although allowed by the Lord Chancellor, unless the commissioners certified that there did not appear to them any reason to doubt the truth as well as the fulness of the discovery of the bankrupt's estate. Wagner v. Imbrie, 2 L., M. & P. 510; 6 Ex. 882; 20 L. J., Ex. 416; 15 Jur. 803.

Jurisdiction of Court of Bankruptcy to Suspend.]—The Court of Bankruptcy has power to review an order refusing the discharge of a bankrupt, although it has no power to review an order granting or suspending the discharge. Atherton, Ex parte, 3 L. R., Ch. 142; 37 L. J., Bk. 6; 17 L. T. 485; 16 W. R. 294.

Where Bankruptcy Suspended.]—A bankrupt, the proceedings in whose bankruptcy have been suspended by a resolution, is entitled to apply for an order of discharge, but the bankrupt is not exempt from such reasonable examination as to conduct as may be had in other cases. Petrie, In re, 3 L. R., Ch. 610; 37 L. J., Bk. 20; 16 W. R. 817.

It is not the course of the Court of Bankruptcy to suspend proceedings before itself, because a proceeding which may give information as to the bankrupt's estate is pending in another court. Lee, Ex parte, 3 L. R., Ch. 150.

Where a bankrupt has not committed any of the offences specified in s. 159 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, the court has no discretion as to granting him an order of discharge, but is bound to give him an unconditional order of discharge. Clayton, Ex parte, 21 L. T. 342; 18 W. R. 55.

Liquidation—Refusal of Trustee to Certify—Power of Court.]—Resolutions were passed in a liquidation that the debtor should have his discharge on the trustee certifying that he had satisfied himself that the debtor had rendered all the assistance in his power in realizing his estate. The trustee, without sufficient reason, refused so to certify, and procure the debtor's discharge. Held, that the court had no power to compel the trustee to sign such certificate, but that it would order the debtor to be discharged, as if the certificate had been given. Scholes, In re, Royle, Ex parte, 47 L. J., Bk. 28; 37 L. T. 832; 26 W. R. 216.

The creditors of a liquidating debtor resolved that his discharge should be granted "on the certificate of the committee of inspection that he is entitled thereto." When the estate had been realized the committee refused to give the certificate. They alleged that the debtor had paid 5*l.* to induce a person not to bid at a sale of his book debts by auction. The debtor did not deny this statement. Held, that the court had no jurisdiction to order the registrar to sign a certificate of his discharge. Cheesney, Ex parte, Dempster, In re, 9 Ch. D. 701; 47 L. J., Bk. 117; 38 L. T. 887; 26 W. R. 633.

Creditors cannot delegate Power to grant Discharge.]—Creditors cannot delegate to anyone their statutory power of granting the debtor his discharge. A resolution doing this is ultra vires. But the registrar of the court can strike it out and direct the other resolutions to be registered without it. Hope, Ex parte, 9 Ch. D. 398; 47 L. J., Bk. 78; 38 L. T. 762; 27 W. R. 7—C. A.

Agreement by Creditors to grant Discharge—Injunction.]—Creditors agreed to dispose of the whole of a debtor's estate to a purchaser in consideration of a sum agreed to be paid by the purchaser by instalments, the debtor himself agreeing to pay a small part of such sum out of his future earnings. The debtor's business was then continued by the purchaser and himself. All the instalments were duly paid, but the creditors having become hostile to the debtor, refused to grant him his order of discharge, and attempted to possess themselves of the profits he had acquired in his business since the agreement. Held, that it would be inequitable to allow the creditors to claim the profits of the business merely because the order of discharge had not been formally granted, and an injunction was accordingly awarded to restrain the creditors from interfering with the profits of the business. Tinker, Ex parte, France, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 716; 43 L. J., Bk. 147; 30 L. T. 846. Affirming, 43 L. J., Bk. 91; 30 L. T. 615; 22 W. R. 794.

Close of Liquidation—Debtor not Party to Agreement.]—The creditors of a liquidating debtor in 1877 passed a special resolution authorizing the sale of his estate to the trustee at such a price as would pay a dividend of 5*s.* in the pound to the creditors, and also the costs of the liquidation. The resolution was sanctioned by the court, and was carried out by the trustee. The debtor was not a party to the arrangement, and did not know of it for some time afterwards. The creditors did not pass any formal resolution fixing the close of the liquidation, or granting the debtor a discharge, but he commenced another business. In 1881 this came to the knowledge of the trustee, and he thereupon took possession of the debtor's stock-in-trade, claiming it on behalf of the creditors under the liquidation:—Held, that the resolution did not amount in substance to a close of the liquidation or a discharge of the debtor, and that consequently the trustee was entitled to the debtor's after-acquired property for the benefit of the creditors. Tinker, Ex parte (9 L. R., Ch. 716), distinguished; Wainwright, or Greener, Ex parte, Wainwright, In re, 19 Ch. D. 140; 51 L. J., Ch. 67; 45 L. T. 562; 30 W. R. 125—C. A. Affirming, 30 W. R. 62.

But held, that, under the circumstances, the costs might properly be the subject of appeal, and that the debtor's costs must be paid out of the estate, and that the trustee's costs must also be allowed out of the estate. Id.

Close of Bankruptcy—Where Bankrupt without Assets.—The court has power, under s. 47, of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, to make an order closing a bankruptcy in a case where it does not appear that the bankrupt has any assets. Pitt, Ex parte, Gosling, In re, 20 Ch. D. 308; 51 L. J., Ch. 733; 47 L. T. 263; 30 W. R. 763—C. A.

Power of Court to re-open Proceedings.—After an order has been made closing a bankruptcy, the court has, under s. 71, power to re-open it. Id.

Rights of new Creditors.—But such an order ought not to be made without notice to the creditors of the bankrupt (if any) whose debts have been contracted after the adjudication, nor without letting them in to prove as creditors against any property of the bankrupt acquired by him after the date of the order to close the bankruptcy. Id.

2. GROUNDS FOR REFUSING, SUSPENDING, OR QUALIFYING DISCHARGE.

a. Generally.

Under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 159.—There is no discretionary power vested in the commissioner to refuse or suspend an order of discharge, unless the bankrupt has been guilty of a misdemeanour, or one of the offences specified in the above section. Undall, Ex parte, 31 L. J., Bk. 87; 8 Jur., N. S. 980; 6 L. T. 732; 10 W. R. 799. See Glass, Ex parte, 31 L. J., Bk. 73; 6 L. T. 407; 10 W. R. 533.

The above section is not retrospective, and an offence created by that clause must, in order to justify the refusal of suspension of the order of discharge, have been committed subsequently to the passing of the act. White, Ex parte, 33 L. J., Bk. 22; 10 Jur., N. S. 189; 9 L. T. 702; 12 W. R. 390.

The Court of Bankruptcy has no power under the above enactment to award two distinct punishments for the same offence. Marks, Ex parte, 1 L. R., Ch. 334; 35 L. J., Bk. 16.

Conditional Discharge.—Where the court had attached conditions to an order of discharge, in consequence of the bankrupt's misconduct, and it appeared that the court had not confined their consideration to the acts specified in 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 159, the court granted a rehearing. Drinkwater, In re, 7 L. T. 300; 11 W. R. 14.

An uncertificated colonial insolvent petitioned the court. His discharge was suspended, with protection, for twelve months, in order to enable the colonial creditors to come in and prove their debts, and was then made conditional upon his future property being made available for his creditors. Gibson, Ex parte, 34 L. J., Bk. 31; 11 Jur., N. S. 273; 12 L. T. 101; 13 W. R. 530.

Under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 71, s. 48.—Where a special resolution of creditors under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 48, has been properly passed, stating that in their opinion the bankrupt cannot justly be held liable for his failure to pay 10s. in the pound, and desiring his discharge, and the terms of the section are in other respects strictly complied with, the court has no discretionary power to refuse the bankrupt's application for discharge. Hamilton, In re, Hamilton, Ex parte, 9 Ch. D. 694; 38 L. T. 620; 26 W. R. 697.

b. Trading by Means of fictitious Capital.

Discounting Accommodation Bills.—When a trader raised money by discounting accommodation bills, but did not negotiate the bills in the course of his trade, this was not trading by means of fictitious capital, within s. 159 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861. Harrison, Ex parte, Baillie, In re, 2 L. R., Ch. 195.

c. Contracting Debts without Reasonable Expectation of Ability to Pay.

Exceeding fixed Income.—The mere fact that a man who had a fixed income had exceeded it, and so incurred debts, was not sufficient to shew that he could not have had at the time when any of his debts were contracted any reasonable or probable ground of expectation of being able to pay the same. Brundritt, Ex parte, Caldwell, In re, 3 L. R., Ch. 26; 16 W. R. 66.

Overdrawing Banker's Account.—Overdrawing an account current at a banker's by a person in insolvent circumstances, did not in itself amount to contracting a debt without reasonable or probable ground of expectation of being able to pay the same. Harrison, Ex parte, Baillie, In re, 2 L. R., Ch. 195.

Accepting Accommodation Bills.—A bankrupt accepted accommodation bills without consideration, to an amount far beyond his means or expectations, for a firm in large business, to whom he was under considerable obligations, and whom he believed to be perfectly solvent:—Held, that his conduct amounted to a contracting of debts without reasonable or probable ground of expectation of being able to pay the same, and his order of discharge was absolutely refused. Barker, Ex parte, 33 L. J., Bk. 13; 9 L. T. 672; 12 W. R. 321.

Where a bankrupt had been in the habit of accepting accommodation bills for a Scotch firm, which failed, receiving a commission of one per cent. on such acceptances:—Held, that a suspension of the certificate for two years was not too severe a sentence. White, Ex parte, 3 De G. & J. 75.

Accommodation bill transactions are not regarded with favour; and a bankrupt who has engaged in such dealings must expect them to be subjected to a rigid investigation; but where a bankrupt had not been shewn to have been guilty of dishonesty, or to have represented that the bills were accommodation bills, the court considered such transactions not sufficient ground for suspending his certificate for two years, without protection, as regarded liability in respect of the bills. Hammond, Ex parte, 6 De G., Mac. & G. 699; 24 L. J., Bk. 2. See Mortimore, Ex parte, 7 Jur., N. S. 320; 3 L. T. 828; 9 W. R. 423.

The acceptance of accommodation bills is a contracting of debts, and if done without reasonable or probable ground of expectation of being able to pay the same, was an offence within s. 159 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861. Mee, Ex parte, 1 L. R., Ch. 337; 35 L. J., Bk. 41; 14 L. T. 318.

Obtaining Goods on Credit—Sale below Cost Price.—A bankrupt was not considered to have contracted a debt without any reasonable or probable ground of being able to pay the same, though he obtained goods on credit whilst insolvent, and soon afterwards sold them for less than the cost price. Marks, In re, 1 L. R., Ch. 334; 35 L. J., Bk. 16.

A certificate was altogether refused if it appeared that the bankrupt had systematically bought on credit to sell at less than at cost price. Holthouse, Ex parte, 1 De G., Mac. & G. 237; 21 L. J., Bk. 3; S. P., Coleman, Ex parte, 3 De G. & J. 43.

—Pledging.—Where a case is established of a trader having bought goods on credit, with the intent of raising money by pledging them, the court will visit such conduct with the utmost severity; and the circumstance of goods which had been purchased on credit having been pledged the next day by the bankrupt is one open to suspicion. Where, however, that circumstance was explained by uncontradicted evidence shewing that the goods had been purchased in the ordinary course of business, and had been pledged by reason of a sudden pressure requiring money to be raised forthwith, the court allowed the certificate. Martyn, Ex parte, 2 De G., Mac. & G. 225; 21 L. J., Bk. 46.

Where the usual course of dealing carried on by the bankrupt, who had traded without capital, had been to purchase goods, and immediately afterwards to raise money by pledging them, and it appeared that this was done, not for a purpose merely dishonest, but in accordance with the custom in his trade, and with the bona fide expectation of being able afterwards, on a rise in the market price of the goods, to redeem the goods and sell them at a profit:—Held, that this was not equivalent to the offence of contracting debts "by any manner of fraud, or by means of false pretences," within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 256. Manico, Ex parte, 3 De G., Mac. & G. 502; 22 L. J., Bk. 41; 17 Jur. 359.

Fresh Loans in Excess of Repayments.—A bankrupt who pays to his relations from time to time a portion of the debts due to them with interest thereon, and during the same period receives from them in advance more than he pays, whilst his indebtedness to his other creditors is constantly increasing, is not guilty of contracting debts without a reasonable or probable ground of expectation of being able to pay them. Ryley, In re, 14 L. T. 107.

Continuing to Trade after heavy Losses.—Two young men took to a family business of calico printing which was at the time insolvent. They carried it on upon a large scale from November, 1864, to June, 1867, without taking stock. At the end of that time they took stock, and found that the result of their business was a loss of 10,000*l.* for the whole period. Upon this they called their creditors together and became bankrupt. Up to that time they deposed that they had believed they were carrying on business at a profit. One of them, however, admitted that in January, 1867, he had believed the firm insolvent. From January to June the excess of liabilities over assets had increased by 4,000*l.*, and many debts contracted during that period, chiefly for drugs employed in the printing, remained unpaid. The commissioner considered that the bankrupts had contracted these debts without reasonable expectation of being able to pay them, and suspended the order of discharge for three months, with protection:—Held, by Lord Cairns, L. J., that they ought to have stopped trading sooner, but that this was not a punishable offence, and that there was not sufficient ground for holding that they had contracted debts without reasonable expectation of being able to pay them. Bayley, Ex parte, Ainsworth, In re, 3 L. R., Ch. 244; 16 W. R. 291.

Where bankers continued to trade for two years after they were hopelessly insolvent:—Held, that their certificates had been properly refused. Rufford, Ex parte, 2 De G., Mac. & G. 234; 21 L. J., Bk. 32.

If bankers continue to receive deposits, knowing that if the business was wound up they could not pay 5*s.* in the pound, that is a trading which is utterly unjustifiable. Id.

The facts of a trader having been, for more than three years before his bankruptcy, in such a condition that all his assets, if realized, would be less than the amount of his debts, and nevertheless continuing to trade, are not decisive against the allowance of his certificate, but render it incumbent on him to shew a justification, or some fair and reasonable excuse for such conduct, at least if any creditor under the bankruptcy has suffered by it. Dornford, Ex parte, 4 De G. & S. 29; 20 L. J., Bk. 7; 15 Jur. 278.

Damages and Costs are not Debts—Co-Respondent.—After an order nisi had been made in a divorce suit, dissolving the marriage, and ordering the co-respondent to pay damages and costs, the co-respondent made away with his property, and when the order became absolute he was utterly without means to pay them, and immediately afterwards was made bankrupt on his own application. He owed only one other debt of trifling amount for money borrowed some years before:—Held, that the damages and costs were not a debt contracted by him within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, s. 159, and that he could not be dealt with as having contracted any of his debts without reasonable expectation of being able to pay them. Clayton, Ex parte, Clayton, In re, 5 L. R., Ch. 13; 21 L. T. 342; 18 W. R. 55. S. P. Griffiths, Ex parte, 33 L. J., Bk. 44; 10 Jur., N. S. 785; 10 L. T. 705.

— Patent Action.—In order that an order of discharge might be refused under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, s. 159, on the ground that the bankrupt could not have had, when any of his debts were contracted, any reasonable or probable ground of expectation of being able to pay them, it was necessary that the debts should be strictly debts arising out of a contract. It was not enough that they were debts provable in the bankruptcy. Goodier, Ex parte, 22 L. T. 426.

The costs payable by an unsuccessful defendant in a patent suit, though provable on his bankruptcy, are not a debt arising out of a contract. Id.

d. Falsifying Books.

Fictitious Entries.—Where a bankrupt who stopped payment on a Monday, had on the previous Saturday made purchases of goods:—Held, that upon his application for his certificate, it was incumbent upon him satisfactorily to explain the circumstance; and, upon his giving an explanation which was incredible, and on its appearing from an inquiry into his previous career that he had twice before compounded with his creditors, and on this occasion wished to effect a third composition for 11s. in the pound, his assets being sufficient to pay 12s. in the pound, and upon its further appearing that he had made fictitious entries in his books:—Held, that his certificate had been properly refused. Curtis, Ex parte, 2 De G., Mac. & G. 225; 21 L. J., Bk. 53. S. P., Hulingsworth, Ex parte, 4 De G. & S. 44; 20 L. J., Bk. 13; 15 Jur. 914.

— In Order to deceive Partner.—A bankrupt partner falsified the books of the firm, not with the view of any pecuniary advantage to himself, but in order to conceal from his partners a state of embarrassment in which the partnership affairs were involved, but which was conceived by him to be temporary only, he believing at the time that the concern would ultimately turn out a profitable one, but that his partners, if they had known the true state of its affairs, would have abandoned it:—Held, that his certificate had been properly refused, but, under the circumstances, the court made an order for protection, so far as it might be available. Nicholson, Ex parte, 1 De G., F. & J. 270; 29 L. J., Bk. 1; S. P., Knight, Ex parte, 26 L. J., Bk. 57; Stephanoff, Ex parte, 26 L. J., Bk. 88; 3 Jur., N. S. 967.

— By one of two Partners—Laches of Innocent Partner.—One of two partners, who were agents to a banking company, made false returns to them of the notes in the agents' possession, but without the knowledge of the other partner. On the partners becoming bankrupt:—Held, that the last-mentioned partner ought to have seen to the accuracy of the returns, and had been guilty of negligence, imprudence and over confidence, but that it was not a case for the total refusal of his certificate. Dance, Ex parte, 1 De G., F. & J. 286; 29 L. J., Bk. 16.

e. Rash and Hazardous Speculation.

Banker—Accepting Bills without Security.]

—A country banker accepted, to a large amount, bills drawn upon him by a person who failed to remit other good bills, according to his agreement, without any security whatever. He afterwards became bankrupt:—Held, that his insolvency was attributable to rash and hazardous speculation, and that his order of discharge was properly made conditional on the setting aside part of his subsequent earnings for the benefit of his creditors. Braginton, Ex parte, 14 L. T. 276; 14 W. R. 593.

Buying for the Rise.—A merchant, at the end of 1865, held invoices for 800 bales of cotton, of the value of 29,000*l.*, for which he had accepted bills. At that time he knew himself to be, if not insolvent, at all events in a critical position, having nothing but the cotton to meet the bills. He stopped payment in June, 1866, and became bankrupt, having in the meantime given or confirmed orders for 1,100 more bales of cotton, of the value of 35,000*l.* He had scarcely any assets besides his cotton, which was pledged beyond its value, and his unsecured debts were 58,000*l.*:—Held, that although dealing in cotton was within the limits of legitimate commerce, still, as such dealing was notoriously hazardous, the bankrupt, having regard to the state of his affairs at the end of 1865, was bound to exercise the greatest caution as to extending his liabilities for cotton, and that the subsequent orders for the 1,100 bales, which appeared not to have been requisite for keeping his business together, must be considered as having been given in order to take the chance of a rise in price, with a certainty that the loss, in case of a fall, would have to be borne by his creditors, and that this was rash and hazardous speculation. Heyn, Ex parte, 2 L. R., Ch. 650; 17 L. T. 91; 15 W. R. 1185.

Stockbroker—Time Bargains.—The bankruptcy of a sharebroker, who has met with losses on time bargains, is to be attributed to rash and hazardous speculation, and by increasing the balances against him at two banks shortly before his failure, he is guilty of contracting debts without reasonable expectation of being able to pay them. Wilson, In re, 14 L. T. 492.

Promoting Company.—Where a bankrupt had entered into contracts from which he was to derive pecuniary advantages, on the formation of a company of which he was the promoter, but which company became defunct, by reason of the necessary capital not having been subscribed:—Held, that he had not been guilty of embarking in a rash and hazardous speculation. Douman, Ex parte, 32 L. J., Bk. 49; 9 Jur., N. S. 811; 8 L. T. 225; 11 W. R. 577.

Sending Abroad Goods bought for Home Trade.—During a period of unquestionable solvency, but shortly before bankruptcy, a trader purchased goods for, as he alleged to the seller, home trade. The goods were very soon after consigned to a relative in America, and when sold, were disposed of at very great loss. After his bankruptcy he applied for his discharge, but was opposed on the ground of having made misrepresentations, and that the consignment of the goods to America was a rash and hazardous speculation, within the meaning of par. 3:—Held, that this paragraph was not applicable, the bankrupt at the time of the venture being possessed of property beyond the amount of his liabilities, and the representations, though erroneous, not being fraudulent. Evans, Ex parte, 31 L. J., Bk. 63; 6 L. T. 519—L. J.

Debtor engaged in several Trades.—Where a bankrupt had engaged in reckless trading, and speculations of a desperate character, the court would not grant him a certificate; but where a cotton spinner had engaged in several other trades, and undertakings of different kinds, and it was not shewn that he was at the time insolvent:—Held, that the number and variety of these undertakings did not constitute a case of reckless trading. Wakefield, Ex parte, 4 De G. & S. 18; 15 Jur. 961.

f. Unjustifiable Extravagance in Living.

A father, a solicitor in practice, took his son, aged twenty-four, into partnership; the son never investigated the affairs of the firm, but though he lived with and was maintained by the father, he drew out of the concern annually 300*l.* for his own purposes. The father became bankrupt, and subsequently also the son. On the latter applying for his discharge, the commissioner suspended it for twelve months, three months to be without protection. On appeal, the court mitigated the sentence by a suspension for three months only, with protection. Holden, Ex parte, 31 L. J., Bk. 86; 6 L. T. 673.

Damages in Divorce Suit.—Damages in a suit for divorce awarded against a bankrupt will not justify the suspension of an order of discharge, with imprisonment, either on the ground of unjustifiable extravagance in living, or that the damages were incurred without any reasonable or probable ground of expectation of being able to pay them. Griffiths, Ex parte, 33 L. J., Bk. 44; 10 Jur., N. S. 785; 10 L. T. 705.

g. Frivolous or Vexatious Defence to Actions.

Defence in Order to gain Time for Arrangement with Creditors.—A trader is not bound to leave off trading merely because he is in difficulties; the question in each case being, whether he has continued trading after there ceased to be any reasonable prospect of his retrieving himself. Thus, a trader, when in difficulties, and when sued, placed himself in the hands of the bulk of his creditors, who defended the action in his name, and in order to gain time for an arrangement, pleaded twenty pleas without any substantial defence:—Held, that he was not disentitled to his certificate for having vexatiously defended the action. Johnson, Ex parte, 4 De G. & S. 25; 20 L. J., Bk. 6; 15 Jur. 185.

Action for Tort.—An action founded on tort is not an action to recover any debt or money due, and a vexatious defence to such an action is therefore no ground for refusing an order of discharge. Crabtree, Ex parte, 33 L. J., Bk. 33; 10 Jur., N. S. 529; 10 L. T. 361; 12 W. R. 768.

A claim for damages in an action pending at the date of the adjudication, and subsequently converted into a debt by the verdict of the jury, does not constitute a debt or money due from the bankrupt. Boswell, In re, 6 L. T. 28.

h. Concealing Property.

The certificate of a bankrupt who concealed any part of his property with intent to defraud his creditors was void by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 122, s. 38, even though he voluntarily gave it up before the granting of the certificate. Courtice v. Mennier, 6 Ex. 74; 20 L. J., Ex. 104; 15 Jur. 275.

Attempted concealment by a bankrupt of property, although of small intrinsic value, and prized by him for the sake of family recollections and associations, was a sufficient ground for refusing to disturb, in his favour, a suspension of his certificate for eighteen months, without protection. Warwick, Ex parte, 6 De G., Mac. & G. 749; 24 L. J., Bk. 23.

It is the duty of a commissioner when applied to by a bankrupt for his discharge under the circumstances mentioned in 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 110, to be judicially satisfied, before granting it, that the bankrupt has made a full discovery of his estate. Jones, Ex parte, 33 L. J., Bk. 11.

Where proceedings have been suspended under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 110, and a bankrupt has not made a full discovery of his estate, it is doubtful whether he is entitled, as of right, to an order of discharge, or only entitled to apply for the order which may be granted or withheld on consideration of his general conduct. Delamere, In re, 31 L. J., Bk. 67; 6 L. T. 274—L. J.

Where proceedings have been suspended, a bankrupt, having made a full discovery of his estate, is not entitled to his discharge as a matter of right, and his application for a discharge will be dealt with according to the rules laid down in s. 159. McKerrow, Ex parte, 34 L. J., Bk. 37; 11 Jur., N. S. 830; 12 L. T. 753; 13 W. R. 1002.

It was no objection to the allowance of the certificate that the bankrupt had received money since his bankruptcy as a surveyor for valuing tithes, which he had not accounted for to his assignees, such money being considered as the fruits of his personal labour. Walters, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 635.

i. Gaming or Wagering.

Under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 201.—Railway stock was within the section. Matheson, Ex parte, 1 De G., Mac. & G. 448; 21 L. J., Bk. 18; 16 Jur. 769; Copeland, Ex parte, 2 De G., Mac. & G. 914; 22 L. J., Bk. 17; 17 Jur. 121.

A trader, who became bankrupt, had had dealings in consols and in scrip, by which he had purchased for the account, no intention existing on his part that either stock should be transferred to him. On the account-day he paid the differences, and so carried the transactions forward to the next account. He had thus several times lost more than 20*l.* in one day. The commissioner decided that this was gaming or wagering within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 201, and refused him his certificate:—Held, upon appeal, that it was not so, though it might be taken into consideration with other conduct, on the question of certificate. Ryder, Ex parte, 1 De G. & S. 317; 26 L. J., Bk. 69; 3 Jur., N. S. 1159.

Where a bankrupt had lost 200*l.* on contracts for the purchase of railway shares, the court refused to disturb a suspended certificate with protection, although the assignees opposed and appealed from the order. Turner, Ex parte, 3 De G. & J. 44; 27 L. J., Bk. 470; 6 Jur., N. S. 470.

j. Frauds by Solicitors.

A solicitor removed by certiorari an action brought against him by a client in a county court, to a duchy court of common pleas, and it appeared that he had no good defence; on judgment being recovered against him, he was adjudicated bankrupt on his brother's petition:—Held, that his certificate was properly suspended for twelve months. Blackhurst, Ex parte, 3 De G. & J. 39; 27 L. J., Bk. 24; 4 Jur., N. S. 1065.

A solicitor, who subsequently became bankrupt, had deposited a mortgage deed under circumstances which the commissioner thought fraudulent, and in consequence of which he had refused to grant him any certificate. On appeal, the court was of opinion that the deposit, although irregular and censurable on the part of a solicitor, did not amount to an act of wilful fraud, and granted him a second-class certificate, with a suspension for two years from adjudication, but with protection in the meantime, as he had already undergone an imprisonment of nearly three months. Freston, In re, 31 L. J., Bk. 1; 7 Jur., N. S. 1173; 5 L. T. 267; 10 W. R. 25—L. J.

T. S. & G. S. were partners as solicitors. G. S. received from H. 4,000*l.* for the purpose of being invested on good mortgage security. T. S. was mortgagee of the reversion of a large sum of stock, of which he was one of the trustees, and upon which he had lent 4,000*l.* The 4,000*l.* belonging to H. was lent by the firm to T. S., upon the security of a transfer of his mortgage, and applied to the purposes of the partnership business. With the consent of the tenant for life, the stock was sold upon the death of the reversioner, and the proceeds were applied in payment of the reversioner's debts, and among them the 4,000*l.*, and the balance was placed to the credit of T. S. in the books of the firm. No fresh security was ever given to H. for his 4,000*l.*, but for twenty years the firm and T. S. paid him interest as if on the original security, and represented that it was so. In 1850, H. discovered the fraud; but for four years he continued to receive his interest, when T. S. became bankrupt, and the 4,000*l.* was lost. The commissioner refused to grant T. S. any certificate; and, upon appeal, his decision was affirmed, the court holding that the transaction was a gross breach of duty by T. S., as a solicitor, towards his client, and one which the interests of society required should be severely visited; and that the acquiescence of the client in receiving interest after the discovery of the misconduct could not be looked upon as a condonation, by reason that the interests of society were involved. Selby, Ex parte, 25 L. J., Bk. 13; 2 Jur., N. S. 29—L. J.

k. Other Cases of Fraud.

Fraud to be distinguished from Recklessness.]

—On questions of bankrupts' certificates, cases tainted with fraud or dishonesty were to be carefully distinguished from those which were affected merely by extravagance, carelessness or wildness of speculation. Brown, Ex parte, 3 De G. & J. 369.

But where a bankrupt had contracted liabilities when hopelessly insolvent, and had dealt largely in accommodation bills, and had obtained a bill of exchange under circumstances amounting to an engagement not to negotiate it, which he had nevertheless done; and had, moreover, after a meeting of his creditors, at which it was understood that he was not to deal with his estate, given to one of them a security without the privity of the others:—Held, that the adjudication suspending the certificate for three years without protection could not be mitigated further than by giving protection after an imprisonment of two months. Id.

Where a bankrupt had been negligent, careless, rash, improvident or lavish, there might be differences of opinion as to granting him a certificate, as to its class or as to the conditions (if any) which should be annexed to it. But where there had been wilful falsehood and dishonesty, the Court of Appeal refused to allow the certificate. Dobson, Ex parte, 6 De G., Mac. & G. 781; 25 L. J., Bk. 13; 2 Jur., N. S. 29.

Misrepresentation—Getting Bills Discounted.]

—The court, in the interests of the public, deals severely with cases in which bankrupts have been guilty of fraud, or of false and fraudulent misrepresentation. Laurence, Ex parte, 30 L. J., Bk. 33; 7 Jur., N. S. 1218; 5 L. T. 105; 10 W. R. 22—L. J.

Where, therefore, a trader had procured bills to large amount, drawn in some instances on insolvent houses, and in others for his own accommodation, to be discounted by representing them, in answer to inquiries on the subject, to be ordinary trading bills, and subsequently became bankrupt, the court dismissed an appeal from the decision of a commissioner refusing the bankrupt his certificate. Id.

—As to being a Trader.]—L., not being in trade, obtained a loan on the representation that he was in trade, had been so for five years, and wanted the money for the extension of his business. He afterwards entered into trade, and became bankrupt, the loan constituting one of the debts provable:—Held, that whether s. 198, or s. 256 of the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, applied to conduct before entering trade or not, the certificate must be refused: for that the bankrupt having, in the transaction in question, represented himself to be in trade, could not be heard to say that he was not in trade at the time. Leslie, Ex parte, 25 L. J., Ch. 37; 2 Jur., N. S. 822—L. J.

Allowing Uncertificated Bankrupt to Trade in Debtor's Name.]

—W., a chemist, allowed S., who was an uncertificated bankrupt, to carry on business as a jeweller, in the name of W., but for his own benefit, W. making himself liable for the debts. Some persons to whom S. applied for goods, asked W. whose the business was, to which he replied that it was his, and that S. was carrying it on for him. S. absconded, carrying away all the goods belonging to that business, and W. shortly afterwards became bankrupt, almost all his debts being debts contracted by S. in the jewellery business:—Held, that the representation by W. that the business was his, was not a fraud disentitling him to a certificate. Wildbore, Ex parte, 2 De G., F. & J. 621.

— As to Property—Borrowing Money.—A bankrupt had, shortly before his bankruptcy, represented to his bankers, that he was owner of three ships in the course of building abroad. Afterwards his account with them being largely overdrawn, they prepared an agreement for him to sign, whereby he agreed to mortgage the ships to them for the floating balance. He had, previously, however, sold the ships to his brother, subject to an agreement for the payment to himself of any profit on a resale. He signed the proposed memorandum without mentioning the fact of the sale:—Held, that although the bankers made no further advance on the security of the memorandum, the bankrupt had been guilty of a suppression which could not be overlooked on the question of his certificate, and that it had been rightly suspended for three years without protection. Holderness, Ex parte, 1 De G., F. & J. 260; 28 L. J., Bk. 20; 5 Jur., N. S. 904.

— As to Amount of Invoice.—A trader purchased goods of a manufacturer, and after the invoice had been made out, he added to the invoice an amount more than double that of the sum charged by the manufacturer as the cost price of the goods, and upon the invoice so added to, or fabricated, he procured a loan of money to two-thirds of the fabricated price. The custom of the trade was to "salt" invoices to the extent of 5l. per cent. on the amount charged as cost price, to meet the incidental expenses of shipment, and the trader represented to the lender that this invoice had only been so "salted." The goods were shipped to Australia, and sold for an amount less than the true cost price. The trader became bankrupt, and for this and other acts of misconduct the commissioner refused him his certificate, and, on appeal, the court affirmed the decision. Johnson, Ex parte, 30 L. J., Bk. 38; 5 L. T. 228—L. J.

— Representation implied—Custom of Trade.—A trader bought foreign bills on 'change, on Tuesday, and on the Saturday following filed a declaration of insolvency, and became bankrupt on the Monday following, the bills not having been paid for. It appeared that, by the custom of merchants, there is an implied representation by the purchaser of foreign bills, that he has ready money to pay for them, and that they are to be paid for in cash, three days' grace being allowed. No satisfactory reason being given for such a representation having been made:—Held, that the bills were to be looked upon as procured by misrepresentation, and that the transaction furnished a ground for refusal of the certificate. Simond, Ex parte, 26 L. J., Bk. 49; 3 Jur., N. S. 424—L. J.

Illegal Pledging.—A banker who had pledged a short bill of a customer was excluded from a certificate. Sturt, Ex parte, 4 De G. & S. 49.

Fraud by Stockbroker and Director.—A broker, who was director of and broker to a company, received, at a time when he was insolvent, an order from a customer directed to him, and to a partner whom he knew or believed to be dead, to buy foreign stock. The broker contracted with L. for the stock, and received the price from the customer, as for himself and his deceased partner. He did not pay L. for the stock, but allowed him interest for three months, and applied the money to his own purposes. Immediately before the adjudication, he sold a debenture of the company to A. for the amount due upon it, without requiring any money for the four years' interest, which was also due, and with the money paid L. part of the price of the stock, and gave him a bill for the remainder; and L. then transferred the stock to the customer. The broker had previously privately appropriated this debenture to the safety of the customer, and, when he sold it, had no authority from the customer for so doing. The broker became bankrupt, and received a first-class certificate, with protection; but upon appeal, the court, for the above, and other misconduct, suspended the certificate for five years. Wryghte, Ex parte, 26 L. J., Bk. 33—L. J.

Fraudulent Preference.—A trader, when involved in difficulties, and hopelessly insolvent, deposited the deeds of property, of which he was the surviving trustee, with his brother, who was entitled to the property for life under the will of which the bankrupt was such trustee, as a security for a debt owing to the brother. The commissioner held, that this was a fraudulent preference, and refused any certificate, and withheld protection. On appeal, the decision was affirmed, but protection was granted valcat quantum. Barton, In re, 31 L. J., Bk. 71; 6 L. T. 142—L. J.

1. Departing the Realm.

A trader who was not engaged in business, except as owner of two small sailing vessels, kept no regular accounts. He contracted with a shipbuilder for the repair of one of the vessels, and the amount claimed for the repair was far beyond the contract price, by reason of alteration alleged to be beyond the contract. Cross actions were brought, and settled by arbitration. The trader left England in a feeling of irritation at the result of the proceedings, and was declared bankrupt on the petition of the shipbuilder. He had on a former occasion compounded with his creditors, paying them less than 15s. in the pound, but had been forced into this proceeding by misfortune:—Held, that his conduct in quitting England was censurable, but would be sufficiently punished by suspending his certificate for twelve months, and allowing it as one of the second class. Hodgson, Ex parte, 3 De G., Mac. & G. 547.

m. Filing Incorrect Statement of Accounts.

The issue of an order of discharge, on appeal, was suspended on the ground that the bankrupt's statement of accounts was incorrect, and a reference was directed to the commissioner to allow such amendments thereof as he should approve. Clark, Ex parte, 8 L. T. 814.

n. Refusing to exercise Profession for Benefit of Creditors.

A professional singer having refused to exercise her musical talents for the benefit of her creditors, the commissioners refused her an order of discharge, and withheld protection. On appeal, the decision was reversed. Ellison, Ex parte, 8 L. T. 407.

o. Where Certificate of Conformity previously Refused.

Under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 160.—The court will not establish any general rule for the government of cases that arise under this section, being of opinion that all such cases must be determined upon their own peculiar circumstances. Matheson, In re, 31 L. J., Bk. 23; 8 Jur., N. S. 371; 6 L. T. 203; 10 W. R. 256—L. J.

The court, however, considers that the section gives it power to grant an order of discharge, after the expiration of three years; notwithstanding there may have been criminal acts committed by the bankrupt, upon which the court might originally have refused an order for his discharge. Ib.

3. CONDITIONS ANNEXED TO CERTIFICATE.

Not to affect Remedy on particular Debt.—A condition annexed to the grant of a certificate that it should not protect the property or person of the bankrupt in respect of a particular debt, was discharged, as being contrary to the policy of the bankrupt laws, though the bankrupt, in contracting the debt, had been guilty of gross misconduct towards the creditor. Anderton, Ex parte, 1 De G. & J. 298; 26 L. J., Bk. 54.

Payment to be Made in respect of Debts.—It was in general inexpedient to annex to a certificate of conformity a condition requiring any payment to be made in respect of debts. Harnaden, In re, 3 De G. & J. 489; 28 L. J., Bk. 18; 5 Jur., N. S. 852; 32 L. T., O. S. 348; 7 W. R. 280.

Where, therefore, a bankrupt holding a situation under government at a small salary, and carrying on a trade which was entirely conducted by his wife, had been induced by her to continue it too long after it became a losing concern:—Held, that the certificate ought not to have been made conditional on the bankrupt paying annually out of his salary a sum towards payment of his debts. Ib.

A, who was a surgeon and an apothecary, had shortly before his bankruptcy, and while hopelessly insolvent, allowed a creditor to obtain judgment against him, by means of which that creditor immediately before the bankruptcy obtained payment in full. The bankrupt allowed this judgment to be obtained by the advice of his solicitor, who was also the solicitor of the creditor, and under such circumstances that there was much ground for contending that it was a collusive and fraudulent preference. A court of law decided that the judgment was not void as a fraudulent preference, but was valid. The commissioner granted a certificate, with a condition annexed that it should not protect after-acquired property till the bankrupt had paid 5s. in the pound, assigning as one reason the character of the bankrupt's business, which did not materially depend on capital:—Held, first, that the circumstances of the case did not take it out of the general rule, that the granting of certificates with such conditions annexed was inexpedient. Culhane, Ex parte, 25 L. J., Bk. 60; 2 Jur., N. S. 863—L. J.

Held, secondly, that although it had been decided at law that the transaction as to the judgment did not technically amount to a fraudulent preference, still the conduct of the bankrupt in respect of it was not to be justified, and regard must be had to it on the question of the certificate, which was therefore suspended. Ib.

4. TIME OF OPERATION.

After-acquired Property.—The order of discharge granted to a bankrupt takes effect from the time the order is pronounced by the commissioner, and not from the expiration of the time allowed for appealing when the order is drawn up. Unless the order is annulled, property acquired by a bankrupt between the two periods passes to the bankrupt, and not to his assignees. Bell, Ex parte, 32 L. J., Bk. 50; 9 Jur., N. S. 856; 8 L. T. 481; 11 W. R. 738.

5. RESCINDING OR ANNULING.

A case of mere suspicion of fraud is insufficient to ground an application to rescind an order of discharge, but on the application of the assignee a petition of appeal was allowed to stand over for six weeks to afford time for further investigation. Angerstein, In re, 9 Jur., N. S. 763; 8 L. T. 223.

It is a good answer to a plea of bankruptcy, that the certificate was obtained by fraud. Horn v. Ion, 4 B. & Ad. 78; 1 N. & M. 627.

All the creditors of a debtor except one agreed to accept a composition, and, having the necessary majority, gave the debtor his discharge. The dissentient creditor applied to the county court to have the order of discharge rescinded on the grounds that it had been granted without proper care and from motives of benevolence. It appeared that the creditors did not wish to see the debtor ruined, but also that the main part of the debtor's property consisted of an equity of redemption, which might have taken time to realize. The county court judge refused the application:—Held that no case of fraud had been proved, and consequently that the creditor was not entitled to the order he asked for. Linsley, Ex parte, Harper, In re, 42 L. J., Bk. 109; 29 L. T. 77; 21 W. R. 909. Affirmed, 9 L. R., Ch. 290; 43 L. J., Bk. 84; 29 L. T. 857.

6. AGREEMENTS IN CONSIDERATION OF NOT OPPOSING DISCHARGE.

Under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 202.—A contract or security made or given in trust for a creditor, for securing the payment of money due by a bankrupt, as a consideration or with intent to persuade him to forbear opposing the final examination of the bankrupt, was not rendered void by 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 202. Taylor v. Wilson, 5 Ex. 251; 19 L. J., Ex. 241; 14 Jur. 336.

The creditors of a bankrupt having assented to a composition of 3s. 6d. in the pound, to which the plaintiff, who was a creditor, was not a party, the same creditors afterwards signed a petition for annulling the adjudication of bankruptcy, which the plaintiff refused to sign unless the defendant would give him his guarantee for 167l., in part payment of his debt. The defendant accordingly, without the knowledge of the other creditors, gave the plaintiff his guarantee, whereupon the latter signed the petition:—Held, in an action on the guarantee, that the same was not in contravention of 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 268, and was not fraudulent. Smith v. Saltzman, 9 Ex. 535; 23 L. J., Ex. 177.

A security given by a bankrupt to a creditor, with intent to persuade such creditor to forbear opposing the allowance of the bankrupt's certificate, was only void as between immediate parties to it, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 202; in the hands of a bona fide indorsee for value, it was an available instrument. Goldsmid v. Hampton, 27 L. J., C. P. 286; 4 Jur., N. S. 1108.

The 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 202, did not apply to a bill of exchange accepted by a bankrupt in blank before, but not dated or drawn until after the allowance of his certificate. Goldsmid v. Hampton, 5 C. B., N. S. 94; 27 L. J., C. P. 286; 4 Jur., N. S. 1108.

Non assumpsit (by statute) might be pleaded under the above enactment in an action on a bill or note. Weeks v. Argent, 16 M. & W. 817; 16 L. J., Ex. 209; 11 Jur. 525.

Under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 125.—A guarantee for the payment of goods to be supplied to a bankrupt by a creditor, given with intent to persuade the creditor to sign the certificate, was void by 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 125. Hankey v. Cobb, 1 G. & D. 47; 1 Q. B. 490; 5 Jur. 891.

Where money is given to a creditor to induce him to sign a bankrupt's certificate, the certificate so obtained is void. Sievers v. Boswell, 4 Scott, N. R. 165; 3 M. & G. 524.

Under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110.—An agreement by the attorney of an insolvent with one of the creditors, who had given notice of opposing the insolvent's discharge, to pay such creditor a sum of money in consideration that he would withdraw his opposition, was void; as being contrary to the policy of the Insolvent Debtors Act, 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, and a fraud upon the other creditors. Hall v. Dyson, 17 Q. B. 785; 21 L. J., Q. B. 224. See Heaclyne v. Sieley, 18 Q. B. 443; 21 L. J., Q. B. 305.

Under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 166.—This section has not a retrospective operation. Reed v. Wiggins, 13 C. B., N. S. 220; 32 L. J., C. P. 131; 7 L. T. 423; 11 W. R. 148.

Therefore the repeal of s. 202 of 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, does not make available, even in the hands of a bona fide holder for value without notice, a negotiable instrument declared void by the repealed section, where the indorsement was made and the instrument became due after that act came into operation. Id.; S. P., Reeves v. Hawkes, 6 L. T. 53.

Obtaining by a Bribe—Penalty—Scotch Bankruptcy Act.—By the Scotch Bankruptcy Act, 1856, (19 & 20 Vict. c. 79), if any creditor shall receive a gratuity, or enter into any secret or collusive agreement for facilitating the bankrupt's discharge, such creditor shall not only forfeit his claim against the estate, but pay to the trustee double the amount of the gratuity:—Held, that a creditor who had been secretly induced by a sum of money to acquiesce in a dividend which he had previously opposed, was subject to the penalties of the statute, although he had stipulated for and obtained an assurance when receiving the money that it should not come from the other creditors, and although he returned the amount with interest immediately on being told that his conduct in accepting it was a breach of the law, and was censured. Carter v. M'Laren, 2 L. R., H. L. (Sc.) 120.

7. EFFECT OF DISCHARGE.

a. Generally.

Bars all Provable Debts.—The certificate protects the goods, as well as the person, of the bankrupt, from all debts provable under the commission. Davis v. Shapley, 1 B. & Ad. 54.

Claim not Provable.—The plaintiff rented a room of the defendant, who was tenant of the whole house under P., the owner. The defendant's rent being in arrear, P. put in a distress, and seized the plaintiff's goods. To obtain the release of his goods, the plaintiff was obliged to pay 15l. to P. The defendant then became bankrupt, and obtained his order of discharge; subsequently to which the plaintiff commenced an action to recover from the defendant compensation for the injury and loss sustained by the plaintiff in consequence of the defendant allowing the rent to be in arrear:—Held, that the right of action was not barred by the discharge in bankruptcy, inasmuch as the defendant was not liable, "by reason of any contract or promise to a demand in the nature of damages," within s. 153 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, so as to make the claim of the plaintiff provable under the bankruptcy. Johnson v. Shapley, 4 L. R., Q. B. 700; 38 L. J., Q. B. 318; 20 L. T. 909; 17 W. R. 1098; 10 B. & S. 727.

Distress—Replevin.—A landlord distrained the goods of A. on his tenant's premises for rent in arrear. The tenant afterwards became bankrupt, and obtained his certificate. A. having brought replevin:—Held, that the bankrupt's certificate did not extinguish the debt, and therefore that the landlord had a right in replevin at the suit of A. to avow for a return of the distress. Newton v. Scott (in error), 10 M. & W. 471; 12 L. J., Ex. 488—Ex. Ch. Affirming, S.C., 9 M. & W. 434; 6 Jur. 510.

Divorce—Alimony.—An order of discharge protects a bankrupt from any proceeding to enforce payment of alimony, in respect of which he has been attached before the order of discharge was granted, and a rule to shew cause why sequestration should not issue against his estate will therefore be discharged. Dickens v. Dickens, 2 S. & T. 645; 31 L. J., Mat. Cas. 183; 7 L. T. 395.

Debt and Costs.—When in an action on a contract brought before bankruptcy a verdict and judgment are obtained after bankruptcy, and the defendant is arrested for debt and costs, a certificate of conformity entitles him to be discharged in respect of both, though the costs are not provable under the bankruptcy. Simpson v. Mirabita, 4 L. R., Q. B. 257; 38 L. J., Q. B. 76; 20 L. T. 275; 17 W. R. 589; 10 B. & S. 77.

Order for Costs made after Discharge.—Judgment was given against the petitioners in a suit to establish their legitimacy in 1860, and they were condemned to pay the costs of the suit. They appealed against the judgment, and in 1861 one of them obtained a discharge in the Court of Bankruptcy from all his outstanding liabilities under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 70, s. 5. In 1869 the appeal was dismissed, and in 1870 an order was made on the petitioner to pay the costs of the original suit. On motion by the petitioner to rescind the order, the court held, that as the appeal was still pending in 1861, the debt did not exist until the order was made in 1870, and therefore was not discharged by the bankruptcy. Shedden v. Att.-Gen., 23 L. T. 282.

Divorce—Co-Respondent—Damages and Costs.]

—A decree having been made in a suit of dissolution of marriage, whereby the co-respondent was condemned in damages and costs, and an order issued that the damages should be paid into the registry within three weeks from the time such order was served upon him, and before the expiration of that period, and before the costs had been taxed, the co-respondent, on his own petition, was adjudicated a bankrupt, and subsequently he obtained an order of discharge:—Held, that as both the damages and costs were debts which might have been proved under the bankruptcy, and were covered by the order of discharge, the court could not allow an attachment to issue against the co-respondent for their non-payment. Wood v. Wood and Stanger, 3 L. R., D. 467; 37 L. J., Mat. Cas. 25.

Overseer—Default of Distress—Imprisonment.]

—An auditor having certified a balance to be due from an overseer, which was not paid within seven days, an information was laid against him before justices, who declined to act, on the ground that since the information he had obtained an order of discharge in bankruptcy. A rule nisi was thereupon obtained for a distress warrant, and made absolute, no cause being shewn. A distress warrant having issued, to which there was a return of nulla bona, the justices again declined to act:—Held, that the balance certified by the auditor was a debt, and that the mode of enforcing payment in default of sufficient distress by warrant of commitment did not make the non-payment an offence, and therefore the bankruptcy was a discharge. Reg. v. Master or Martin, 4 L. R., Q. B. 285; 38 L. J., M. C. 73; 19 L. T. 733; 17 W. R. 442; 10 B. & S. 42.

Debt incurred by the Fraud or Breach of Trust of a Partner.]—The 49th section of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 71), which enacts that, "an order of discharge shall not release the bankrupt from any debt or liability incurred by means of any fraud or breach of trust," is not confined to a fraud or breach of trust committed by the bankrupt personally. Therefore, where a debt has been incurred by one of several partners for which the partnership is liable, and the partnership goes into liquidation under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, a partner who has received his order of discharge is not thereby released from such debt if it was incurred by fraud, though he himself was innocent of such fraud. Cooper v. Prichard, 11 Q. B. D. 351; 52 L. J., Q. B. 526; 48 L. T. 848; 31 W. R. 834—C. A.

Contracts in Foreign Countries.]—A bankrupt is discharged by his certificate as to all contracts in any part of the world. Armani v. Castrique, 13 M. & W. 443; 14 L. J., Ex. 36.

A certificate obtained under an English commission operates as a discharge of the debts of Scotch creditors, provable under the commission. Bank of Scotland v. Stein, 1 Rose, 462.

A certificate of conformity, obtained under a commission in England, is a bar to an action for a debt contracted by the bankrupt at Calcutta previously to his bankruptcy, although the creditor had no notice of the commission, and was resident at Calcutta. Edwards v. Ronald, 1 Knapp, P. C. C. 259.

So, where, in a suit instituted in the Dutch colonial court at Demerara, for the recovery of the balance of an account for sugars, consigned to and received by the defendant and his partner in London, the defendant pleaded his bankruptcy in England, of which the plaintiffs had notice, but had not proved their debt under it:—Held, that the bankruptcy and certificate were a discharge of the debt. Odwin v. Forbes, Buck, 57.

— Jurisdiction of Colonial Court to Inquire into Frauds.]

—Although an adjudication in bankruptcy, followed by a certificate of discharge in England under the bankrupt laws, has the effect of barring any debt which the bankrupt may have contracted in any part of the world, and of putting an end to any claim; such proceedings do not supersede the authority of the court of Barbadoes to inquire into frauds and offences committed against the law of insolvent debtors in that island, in a proceeding had there previously to the adjudication of bankruptcy in England, the insolvent having again placed himself within the jurisdiction of that court. Gill v. Barron, 2 L. R., P. C. 157; 37 L. J., P. C. 33.

After a previous Insolvency.]—A debtor obtained his discharge under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, after giving the usual warrant of attorney to the provisional assignee. He afterwards became bankrupt, and obtained his order of discharge under the bankruptcy:—Held, that his after-acquired property remained liable to the claim of the official assignee for payment of his debts under the insolvency. Pain, Ex parte, 3 L. R., Ch. 639; 37 L. J., Bk. 21; 18 L. T. 753; 16 W. R. 833.

b. On Co-Debtors and Sureties.

All the three forms of proceeding in the case of an insolvent debtor, contained in the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, viz., by an adjudication of bankruptcy under s. 6, a liquidation by arrangement under s. 125, and a composition under s. 126, are (though different in form) "proceedings in bankruptcy." The general enactments, therefore, in ss. 49 and 50 apply to all discharges under the statute, and consequently an order of discharge in each of the three cases operates only to release the debtor in whose favour it is given, leaving his solvent co-debtor still liable to be sued separately by a joint creditor who has been a party to the release of the insolvent debtor. Megrath v. Gray, 9 L. R., C. P. 216; 43 L. J., C. P. 63; 30 L. T. 16; 22 W. R. 409.

When a principal debtor is discharged by a resolution under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 125, his surety remains liable in the same manner as in an ordinary bankruptcy, although the reso-was satisfied on the evidence was a bona fide creditor. The bankrupt left on the 28th of October, 1872, having two days previously signed a declaration admitting his inability to pay his debts. The securities bore date the 30th of September; but they were not executed till after that day. The deeds were engrossed in the office of the bankrupt on the 10th of October, and were executed on the 14th of October. They were not stamped till after the bankrupt absconded. The clerk had been pressing for security during August and September, and it had been promised; and the drafts of the securities were prepared in September:—Held, on a suit by the trustee to set aside the securities as being a fraudulent preference, that the pressure and promise of security were sufficient to rebut the presumption of a fraudulent preference arising from the circumstances, and would sustain the deeds even if the knowledge of the insolvency was brought home to the clerk. Smith v. Pilgrim, 2 Ch. D. 127; 34 L. T. 408.

Pressure—Effect of.—When a trader, before becoming bankrupt on his own petition, assigns all his property to a particular creditor, under pressure, and without any fraud or intention to prefer the creditor, such as would have made the assignment a fraudulent preference, or void against creditors if bankruptcy had not ensued, the assignment is not voidable by the assignees in bankruptcy, although necessarily and to the knowledge of the creditor calculated to prevent the trader from paying the rest of his creditors, and thereby to defeat the operation of the bankrupt laws. Jones v. Harber, 6 L. R., Q. B. 77; 40 L. J., Q. B. 59; 23 L. T. 606; 19 W. R. 248.

Payment under Demand.—A fortnight previously to the date of a debtor filing a petition for liquidation, his solicitor lent him 200*l.* on the security of a bill of sale. At the same time as he handed the debtor a cheque for this amount, he presented him with his bill of costs, which amounted to 87*l.*, and the debtor paid it out of the money advanced:—Held, not a fraudulent preference, as the presentation of the bill of costs amounted to a demand for payment. Boyle, Ex parte, Collett, In re, 25 L. T. 550—L. JJ.

Goods returned to Vendor under Pressure.—A trader, being in insolvent circumstances, applied to a creditor to whom he owed 2,500*l.* for goods supplied in the way of business, to supply him with more goods on credit. The creditor refused to supply any more goods unless the debtor paid 200*l.* on account of the goods previously supplied. The debtor said he could not pay the money, and on being pressed by the creditor, he offered to return goods to the amount of the 200*l.*, which he did not want. This the creditor agreed to, and the goods were accordingly returned to him. On the same day the debtor filed a petition for liquidation:—Held, that the delivery of the goods to the creditor was not a fraudulent preference. Topham, Ex parte, Walker, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 614; 42 L. J., Bk. 57; 28 L. T. 716; 21 W. R. 655.

Held, also, that the trustee in the liquidation was not entitled to have the goods given up by the creditor on the ground that the delivery to him was on condition of his supplying fresh goods, which he had never done. Id.

Pressure by Surety.—Bankers agreed to allow their customer W. to overdraw his account to the extent of 1,800*l.* upon his brother, father and the bank manager becoming sureties for him to that amount. W.'s overdraft exceeded 2,400*l.*, and the bankers repeatedly pressed him to reduce his account within the limits of their security. Subsequently the manager, at an interview with W., who said "he was fast," pressed him to square his account, whereupon he handed to the manager 2,460*l.* in cheques and bills, against which he had drawn largely. The same evening the manager wrote to W. that the bank would not honour any more of his cheques. W. filed a liquidation petition within a week after this interview, and the creditors having resolved upon a liquidation by arrangement, the trustee claimed repayment of the 2,460*l.* upon the ground that the delivery of the cheques and bills constituted a fraudulent preference and an act of bankruptcy:—Held, in the absence of evidence to shew that the payment was made with a view to release the sureties, or otherwise than in the ordinary course of a current account, the general lien of the bankers attached for their benefit; and that the payment was neither a fraudulent preference within s. 92, nor an act of bankruptcy within s. 6 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. Carlisle Banking Company, Ex parte, Walton, In re, 36 L. T. 552. Affirmed, 5 Ch. D. 882.

Withdrawing Balance from Bankers to defeat Attachment—Payment without Pressure.—L., being on the eve of bankruptcy, drew out all his balance at his bankers, and sent it to K., who was employed by him as accountant, and to whom he owed a considerable sum. His object in sending the money to K. was to prevent its being attached by another creditor, who had issued a writ against him. K. took back the money, and refused to accept it unless the debtor consented to his paying himself out of it. After some discussion, the debtor agreed to this, and K. accordingly appropriated 421*l.*, part of the sum entrusted to him, in satisfaction of his own debt. The evidence did not establish that there had been anything which amounted to pressure for payment on the part of K. before the occasion on which he took back the money to L. Three days afterwards L. stopped payment, and soon afterwards presented his petition for liquidation:—Held, that the act of the debtor in drawing out the balance from the bankers for the purpose of defeating the creditor who was suing him was in itself an act of bankruptcy, and that the payment of the 421*l.* to K. was a fraudulent preference. Halliday, Ex parte, Liebert, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 283; 28 L. T. 324; 21 W. R. 348.

Pressure immaterial when Transaction Fraudulent in its Inception.—A creditor suggested to his debtor that the latter should buy goods on credit from other persons, and should with the proceeds of the sale pay off the debt due to the former. The debtor adopted the suggestion, and out of the proceeds of the sale of goods which he had obtained on credit he made several payments on account of the debt. There was evidence that the payments were made under pressure from the creditor. The debtor afterwards filed a liquidation petition:—Held, that, as the transaction was fraudulent in its inception, it was immaterial that the payments were made under pressure, but that they must be set aside as being fraudulent preferences. Reader, Ex parte, Wrigley, In re, 20 L. R., Eq. 763; 44 L. J., Bk. 139; 32 L. T. 36.

Pressure by Creditor knowing of impending Bankruptcy.—On the 17th of February a trader told one of his creditors that he was about to stop payment. The creditor then pressed for security for his debt, and threatened to commence proceedings against the debtor at once, if he did not fulfil a verbal promise which he had made on the 17th of January (when the debt was contracted), to supply the creditor with goods, or their equivalent, as security. The creditor had on the 14th of February, before he knew that the debtor was about to stop payment, pressed the debtor for the promised security, and the debtor had then again promised to give it. On the 19th of February the debtor delivered two bills of exchange, accepted by some other firms, to a third person, telling him to hand them to the creditor. On the 24th of February the debtor filed a liquidation petition, and on the 10th of March he was adjudicated a bankrupt:—Held, that the delivery of the bills of exchange amounted to a fraudulent preference of the creditor, and that it was void as against the trustee in the bankruptcy under s. 92. Hall, Ex parte, Cooper, In re, 19 Ch. D. 580; 51 L. J., Ch. 556; 46 L. T. 549—C. A.

Inasmuch as the threat to bring an action could have no influence on a man who was just about to become bankrupt, there was no real pressure exerted by the creditor on the 17th of February, and the prior pressure on the 14th of February having been ineffectual, could not be taken into account. Id.

Stock Exchange Creditors.—The rules of the Stock Exchange provide that a member who is unable to meet his engagements on the Stock Exchange shall be declared a defaulter, and thereupon cease to be a member, and shall not be re-admitted unless he shall pay at least one-third of his Stock Exchange debts; also, that the official assignees of the Stock Exchange shall obtain from the defaulter and examine his books of account, collect his assets, and administer his estate in conformity with the directions of the Stock Exchange creditors. A member of the Stock Exchange, being unable to meet his engagements, was declared a defaulter. His Stock Exchange liabilities amounted to 24,790*l.*, and he also owed 107,000*l.* to another creditor. His assets amounted to 8,000*l.*, including 5,000*l.*, his balance at his bankers. The secretary of the Stock Exchange gave notice to the bankers not to part with the balance. Next day the debtor attended with his books of account a meeting of his Stock Exchange creditors, and stated to them that he had no outside creditors. He was then informed that if he could pay to his Stock Exchange creditors a dividend of 13*s.* 4*d.* in the pound, his re-admission would not be opposed. He accordingly, in accordance with the request of the official assignees, handed to them a cheque for the 5,000*l.*, and out of this sum a dividend of 3*s.* 4*d.* was distributed among the Stock Exchange creditors. The debtor subsequently filed a liquidation petition, and was adjudicated a bankrupt:—Held, that the payment of 5,000*l.* was a cessio bonorum, and also a fraudulent preference within s. 92 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and that the trustee in the bankruptcy was entitled to recover the money from the official assignees of the Stock Exchange. Tomkins v. Saffery, 3 App. Cas. 213; 47 L. J., Bk. 11; 37 L. T. 758; 26 W. R. 62. Affirming N. C., nom. Saffery, Ex parte, Cooke, In re, 4 Ch. D. 555; 35 L. T. 715; 25 W. R. 218.

Pressure—Payment not owing to Pressure.—A. obtained a loan from B., his brother-in-law, to enable him to set up in business as a publican. B. subsequently and repeatedly pressed A. for repayment. A. thereupon sold his public-house business, and paid B. in full. Shortly afterwards A. filed a petition for liquidation; his total assets amounted to 29*l.* 2*s.* 8*d.* There was evidence that the debtor would have paid his brother-in-law without pressure, inasmuch as he did not wish him to lose anything:—Held, that under the circumstances, the fact of pressure by the creditor for his debt was unimportant, and that the payment was a fraudulent preference and void under s. 92 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. Wheatley, Ex parte, Grimes, In re, 45 L. T. 80.

c. Must be in Contemplation of Bankruptcy.

Bankruptcy must follow within Three Months.]

—The meaning of s. 92 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, is, that an act which would otherwise be a fraudulent preference cannot be impeached unless a bankruptcy follows within three months. Liverpool and London Guarantee and Accident Insurance Company, In re, Gallagher's case, 46 L. T. 54; 30 W. R. 378.

Liquidation Proceedings—Pleading.—A plea that the plaintiff's claim is founded on a contract giving him a fraudulent preference over other creditors of a debtor in liquidation, must aver that proceedings in the liquidation had commenced or were imminent when the contract was entered into. McKewan v. Sanderson, 15 L. R., Eq. 229; 42 L. J., Ch. 296; 28 L. T. 159.

When Debtor dies without being adjudicated.]

—The creditor of an insolvent debtor, who dies without having been adjudicated bankrupt, is entitled to the benefit of any payment or security made or given by the debtor, although such payment or security would in case of bankruptcy have been set aside as a fraudulent preference. Middleton v. Pollock, Elliott, Ex parte, 2 Ch. D. 104; 45 L. J., Ch. 293.

E. placed in the hands of her solicitor a sum of money for investment. He died insolvent without investing the money, and after his death there was found in the safe at his office a memorandum dated a fortnight before his death, the contents of which had not been communicated to E. By this memorandum, the solicitor declared himself trustee of certain leaseholds then in mortgage to himself, and of a bill of exchange which he had indorsed to E., to secure the repayment of the sum placed in his hands. In a creditor's suit for the administration of the solicitor's estate:—Held, that even if the solicitor executed the memorandum with the knowledge of his insolvency, still E. was entitled prius, confess this plea to be true, and go on with the case as to the other defendant. Pascall v. Horsley, 3 C. & P. 372.

9. PROMISE TO PAY DEBT BARRED BY DISCHARGE.

Before 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 204.—A promise by a bankrupt after the issuing the fiat, and a few days before his certificate was signed, to pay a pre-existing debt, notwithstanding the certificate, was good, unless the contract either appeared on the face of it, or was shewn to be, illegal or fraudulent. Kirkpatrick v. Tattersall, 13 M. & W. 766; 1 C. & K. 577; 14 L. J., Ex. 209; 9 Jur. 214.

— Promise in Writing under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16.—On an issue whether a certificated bankrupt had given a written promise signed by him after his bankruptcy, so as, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 131, to revive a claim barred by the certificate, the following letter was produced, written by him:—"Mr. S. begs to inform the plaintiffs that he will take an early opportunity of settling their account; but Mr. S. objects to give his bill. Mr. S. regrets that he has been prevented from answering the letter before." Evidence of the amount due was given:—Held, that the letter was sufficiently signed. Lobb v. Stanley, 5 Q. B. 574; D. & M. 635; 13 L. J., Q. B. 117; 8 Jur. 462.

— Promise to repay Surety.—A declaration set forth a guarantee, whereby, in consideration that a banking company would make advances to the defendant, the plaintiff undertook to guarantee the payment of sums advanced not exceeding 250*l.*, that the company made advances to the defendant, who afterwards became bankrupt, and that at the time of his bankruptcy there was due to the company for such advances a sum exceeding 250*l.*; that, after the issuing of the fiat, the defendant promised the plaintiff, that if, by virtue of the guarantee, the plaintiff should be called upon to pay the company the 250*l.*, the defendant would repay the same to the plaintiff when it should be in his power, notwithstanding he should previously obtain his certificate, and interest on the sum; and that the plaintiff, being called upon under the guarantee, paid to the company 250*l.*, of which the defendant had notice. Breach, non-payment:—Held, no objection to the promise, that it was made before certificate. Earle v. Oliver, 2 Ex. 71.

Held, also, that the mere liability to repay the plaintiff was an equally good consideration to support the promise as an existing debt. Id.

Held, also, that the conditional promise to pay when the defendant was able, was good as supported by the original consideration. Id.

Held, also, that the promise to pay interest was supported by the same consideration as the original promise. Id.

Under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 204.—A bond is a contract, promise or agreement within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 204; and therefore a bond given by a bankrupt for payment of a debt barred by his certificate is void. Kidson v. Turner, 3 H. & N. 581; 27 L. J., Ex. 492.

A bankrupt gave, after certificate, a promissory note for a debt incurred before his bankruptcy; at the time he did so, such a debt was recoverable on a promise in writing made after certificate. It was subsequently enacted, by 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 204, that no bankrupt should be liable on such a promise. After this enactment, money was paid on account of the debt, and a fresh note given for the balance:—Held, that the original note being valid, the note for the balance was valid also; and the debt secured by it a good debt on which to found an adjudication in bankruptcy. Edwards, Ex parte, 35 L. J., Bk. 11; 11 Jur., N. S. 896; 13 L. T. 338; 14 W. R. 67.

Under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 164—Consideration for Bill of Sale.—In 1859, W. became insolvent and obtained his discharge. The defendant was at that time a scheduled creditor for 200*l.* In 1865, W. gave to the defendant a bill of sale on his furniture and effects to cover the prior debt of 200*l.* and further advances with interest at 5*l.* per cent. Sundry payments were made by W., who was charged 15*l.* per cent. interest; and the amount due, apart from the 200*l.*, was reduced to 38*l.* In February, 1867, W. gave the defendant a note of hand for 100*l.* The defendant then seized under the bill of sale, and sold the furniture and effects for 121*l.*, paying thereout 40*l.* due to the landlord. W. became bankrupt in October, 1867:—Held, that the 200*l.* due prior to the insolvency could not be revived; that the bill of sale was a security only for the advances made thereon with interest at 5*l.* per cent., and not for any further advances; that the seizure was illegal, and the sum of 40*l.* paid to the landlord was an improper payment; and that the 121*l.* realized by the sale must be refunded. Peckman v. Harrison, 14 L. R. Eq. 484.

Under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 71.—A promise to pay a debt barred by bankruptcy is a mere nudum pactum, notwithstanding the Bankruptcy Repeal Act, 1869. James v. Phelps, 20 W. R. 92.

A debtor and his creditors entered into a deed of composition while the Act of 1861 was in operation, which deed was to have the same effect on his debts as if the debtor had been discharged in bankruptcy. After the repeal of the statute by 32 & 33 Vict. c. 83, s. 20, the debtor gave a bill of exchange to one of his creditors who was barred by the composition deed, for his old debt:—Held, that the operation of s. 164 upon this transaction was preserved by the saving clause in s. 20; and the bill was therefore void. Rimini v. Van Praagh, 8 L. R. Q. B. 1; 42 L. J., Q. B. 1; 27 L. T. 540; 21 W. R. 107.

To a declaration by an indorsee against the acceptor, of two bills of exchange made in January, 1870, he pleaded that there was no other consideration for the bills than a debt barred by a composition deed entered into by him with his creditors in 1869, under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861:—Held, that the plea was good. Id.

A promise by a debtor to pay a debt barred by a discharge under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 71, s. 49, is nudum pactum, and its breach does not afford a cause of action. Heather v. Webb, 2 C. P. D. 1; 46 L. J., C. P. 89; 25 W. R. 253.

— New Consideration.—Where a debtor, after having obtained an order of discharge under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, promises, for a new and valuable consideration, to pay a debt which by virtue of s. 49 has been released by the discharge, an action lies against him for the amount of the debt. Heather v. Webb, supra, distinguished. Jakeman v. Cook, 4 Ex. D. 26; 48 L. J., Ex. 165; 27 W. R. 171.

Contract to pay Creditor after Composition accepted, but before Payment of all Installments.—It is only after a composition has been fully worked out and paid, that the debtor is in the position of a discharged bankrupt, so as to enable him for a new consideration to enter into a binding contract to pay in full the debt of one of the creditors bound by the resolution to accept a composition. Such an agreement entered into prior to the completion of the composition, is in contravention of good faith and the spirit of the bankruptcy laws, and void. Jakeman v. Cook (4 Ex. D. 26) distinguished. Barrow, Ex parte, Andrews, In re, 18 Ch. D. 464; 50 L. J., Ch. 821; 45 L. T. 197—C. A.

XV. FRAUDULENT PREFERENCES.

1. UNDER STATUTES PRIOR TO THE BANKRUPTCY ACT, 1869.

a. Generally.

Elements of Fraudulent Preference.—In order to constitute a fraudulent preference there must be the concurrence of three circumstances: first, the trader must contemplate his own immediate bankruptcy; secondly, he must himself make the distribution; and thirdly, the distribution must be different from what a court of bankruptcy would make. The absence of any one of these ingredients will prevent the distribution from being impeached as a fraudulent preference. Bourne v. Graham, 2 Jur., N. S. 1225.

It is not necessary to shew that the creditor preferred was in any way party to any fraud or undue action. Id.

— Intention to benefit Creditor.—In order that a payment should constitute a fraudulent preference, it is not necessary that the bankrupt should have intended to benefit the creditor to whom the payment is made, or that the creditor should have derived benefit from such payment. Marshall v. Lamb, D. & M. 315; 5 Q. B. 115; 13 L. J., Q. B. 75; 7 Jur. 850.

Where a banker informed a creditor of his intention to stop payment, with the view of giving him an opportunity of withdrawing his own private moneys, and the creditor communicated this information to another creditor, who in consequence drew out his account, and the jury found that it was not the bankrupt's intention that the second creditor should obtain a preference:—Held, that the money paid to the second creditor did not constitute a fraudulent preference. Belcher v. Jones, 2 M. & W. 258; M. & H. 34; 1 Jur. 72.

Payment to Principal in order to Prefer Surety.—Where a bankrupt, in contemplation of bankruptcy, pays money to A., his banker, to redeem bills of exchange in his hands, for the payment of which B. is ultimately responsible, with a view to make a fraudulent preference of B., the assignees cannot recover back the amount from A. Abbott v. Pomfret, 1 Scott, 470; 1 Bing., N. C. 462; 1 Hodges, 24.

VOL. I.

Payment to Husband to redeem Ante-nuptial Liability of Wife as Surety.—The defendant's wife having before her marriage become, as surety, joint and several maker with F. of a promissory note, afterwards, at the suggestion of her husband, applied to F. for money to enable him to take up the note. F., being then insolvent, voluntarily paid the amount of the note to the defendant in contemplation of bankruptcy and by way of fraudulent preference. The defendant afterwards paid the money to an indorsee of the note:—Held, that the assignees of F., who afterwards became bankrupt, were entitled to recover the money from the defendant as money had and received to their use. Groom v. Watts, 4 Ex. 727; 19 L. J., Ex. 154.

Partners—Payment of Separate Debt out of Partnership Assets in Fraud of Partner.—Where one of two partners has, in fraud of the other and by way of fraudulent preference, indorsed bills of exchange of the firm to a separate creditor of his, in payment of a private debt, and has afterwards become bankrupt, his assignees may treat the indorsement as void as against them, and, if the indorsement is invalid also as against the solvent partner by reason of the creditor having taken the bills with knowledge of the fraud, the assignees and such solvent partner may sue jointly in trover for the recovery of the bills from such creditor. Heilbut v. Nevill, 4 L. R., C. P. 354; 38 L. J., C. P. 273; 20 L. T. 490; 17 W. R. 853.

Under Jamaica Insolvent Act.—A Jamaica insolvent act provided, that if any person, in contemplation of insolvency, should transfer any of his estate to any creditor for the benefit of such creditor, such transfer should be deemed fraudulent and void as against the official assignee of such person: provided always, that no such transfer should be so deemed fraudulent and void unless made within six months before a declaration of insolvency:—Held, that transfers of property made by a party in insolvent circumstances, if they occurred within six months before a declaration of insolvency, were absolutely void, although there was no evidence of any fraudulent preference. Nunes v. Carter, 4 Moore, P. C. C., N. S. 222; 1 L. R., P. C. 342; 36 L. J., P. C. 12; 15 W. R. 239.

b. Must be Voluntary.

General Principles.—In an action by assignees to recover back from a creditor of the bankrupts the amount of a debt paid him by the bankrupts, which the assignees alleged to have been paid by way of fraudulent preference, the judge directed the jury, first, that if the bankrupts were induced to make the payment by pressure of the creditor, the verdict should be for him; secondly, that if they were not influenced by the pressure, but acted voluntarily and with a view to give a preference to the creditor in the event of a bankruptcy, the verdict should be for the assignees; and, thirdly, that if the payment was made under the influence of the pressure of the creditor, and also with a desire to give a preference to the creditor in the event of a bankruptcy, the verdict should be for him:—Held, that the direction was right. Brown v. Kempson, 19 L. J., C. P. 169.

In an action by assignees to recover back money alleged to have been paid by the bankrupt to the defendant, by way of fraudulent preference, in contemplation of bankruptcy, the judge, assuming that there had been such a degree of importunity on the part of the creditor as would, under ordinary circumstances, repel the presumption of the payment being voluntary, left it to the jury to say, whether it was made in consequence of that importunity, or with a view to a fraudulent preference of the defendant:—Held, that this was a proper direction. Cook v. Pritchard, 6 Scott, N. R. 34; 5 M. & G. 329; 12 L. J., C. P. 121.

Payments made pursuant to Prior Agreement are not Voluntary.—If A. advances money to B., an insolvent trader, for the purpose of enabling him to execute an order for goods, upon the terms of being repaid out of the price of the goods, a payment made by B. to A. out of the price when received is not a fraudulent preference. Hunt v. Mortimer, 5 M. & R. 12; 10 B. & C. 44.

Prima facie a trader, who, on the eve of bankruptcy, hands over to a creditor assets which ought to be rateably distributed among all his creditors, must be taken to have acted in fraud of the law. But if circumstances exist which tend to explain and give a different character to the transaction, and to shew that the debtor acted from a different motive, these circumstances ought to be left to the jury; and the proper direction in such a case is, that unless the jury come to the conclusion that the debtor had the intention of defeating the law, and preventing the due distribution of his assets, by preferring one creditor at the expense of the rest of his creditors, the transaction stands good in law. The whole question turns upon the intention of the trader in disposing of his goods to the particular creditor. Bills v. Smith, 6 B. & S. 314; 34 L. J., Q. B. 68; 11 Jur., N. S. 154; 12 L. T. 22; 13 W. R. 407.

W., being in embarrassed circumstances, but in good general credit, applied to his brother C. for the loan of 500*l.* C. procured the required sum from his bankers, upon the terms that it should be repaid on the 1st of July following, and advanced the amount to W., who, upon being informed of the terms, undertook to repay it on that day. A few days before the 1st of July, W. told C. that he should be able to repay the money upon the day appointed, which he accordingly did, without any pressure or application on the part of C. On the 1st of July W. was hopelessly insolvent, and on the 22nd of September he became bankrupt. In an action by the assignees to recover the amount, upon the ground that it had been paid by way of fraudulent preference, the judge told the jury that if the bankrupt, though aware that bankruptcy was unavoidable, and though no application had been made for payment, paid the debt simply in discharge of the obligation he had entered into to pay on a given day, without any view of giving a preference to this particular creditor at the expense of the rest, the payment was not a fraudulent preference, within the meaning of the bankruptcy laws:—Held, no misdirection. Id.

The effect of pressure by a creditor upon a debtor, in legalising a payment made in consequence, is only that it rebuts the presumption of an intention on the part of the debtor to act in fraud of the law, from which fraudulent intention alone arises the invalidity of the transaction. Id.

Debt not Due is not conclusive Evidence that Payment is Voluntary.—Payment by a trader, who contemplates bankruptcy, of a debt not then due, upon a bona fide request of the creditor, is not in law a voluntary payment; the fact of the debt not being due is merely a circumstance for the jury in considering the question of fraudulent preference. Strachan v. Barton, 11 Ex. 647; 25 L. J., Ex. 182.

If a debtor gives goods out of his shop in part payment of a bond, not then due, and shortly afterwards becomes bankrupt, the mere circumstance of the bond not being due will not alone vitiate the part payment. Hartshorn v. Slodden, 2 B. & P. 582; 4 Esp. 60.

Payments under Legal Process—On Arrest.]

—A., on being arrested, gave a bail-bond to the sheriff, but did not perfect bail, by which the sheriff became fixed. Proceedings having been taken on the bail-bond, a judge made an order, on an application by the bail, that proceedings should be stayed on payment of debt and costs, which were accordingly paid by A.'s attorneys on the 27th October. A. had supplied his attorneys with a sum of money towards the payment of the debt and costs on the 10th October, and on the 14th he became bankrupt:—Held, that this was a payment under process of law, and that the assignees of A. had no right to recover the money back from the party to whom it was paid. Belcher v. Mills, 2 C., M. & R. 150; 1 Gale, 142; 5 Tyr. 715.

A defendant having been arrested in an action for a debt, paid the amount to the sheriff, with 10*l.* for costs, and the sheriff paid the same into court. The defendant became bankrupt before putting in special bail, or paying in an additional sum of 10*l.*, pursuant to 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, s. 2:—Held, that his assignees were not entitled to the money and costs paid into court. Cooke v. Bell, 11 W. R. 732.

—Threat of Arrest.]—Although voluntary payments are not protected, yet payments enforced by coercion of law are valid against the assignees. Foster v. Allanson, 2 T. R. 479.

If a bankrupt gives a preference to a creditor under the apprehension of legal process, however groundless, such preference is binding. Thompson v. Freeman, 1 T. R. 155.

Where a party made a payment to the defendant on the eve of bankruptcy, and after a threat by the defendant to arrest him:—Held, that, notwithstanding such a threat, the motives and state of mind of the bankrupt at the time of payment may properly be left to the jury, upon a question whether the payment was voluntary or compulsory. Cook v. Rogers, 7 Bing. 438; 5 M. & P. 353.

—Threat of Criminal Process.]—A transfer on the eve of bankruptcy, for fear of criminal process, is valid. De Tastet, Ex parte, 1 Mont. 154.

A transfer of property made on the eve of bankruptcy, but under the apprehension that a degree of force, civil or criminal, is about to be applied, is valid. Id.

A transfer by one of two partners on the eve of bankruptcy, under circumstances which overcome the free will of the party, such as the apprehension of a prosecution for forgery, is valid. De Tastet v. Carroll, 2 Rose, 462; 1 Stark. 88.

Where a draft for money was intrusted to a broker to buy Exchequer bills for his principal, and the broker received the money, and misapplied it by purchasing American stock and bullion, intending to abscond with it and go to America, and did accordingly abscond, but was taken before he quitted England, and thereupon surrendered to the principal the securities for the American stock and the bullion, who sold the whole and received the proceeds:—Held, that the principal was entitled to withhold the proceeds from the assignees of the broker, who became bankrupt on the day on which he so received and misapplied the money. Taylor v. Plumer, 2 Rose, 415; 3 M. & S. 562.

—Threat of Distraint.—Money paid to a landlord by a bankrupt tenant, to avoid a threatened distress, is a protected payment. Stevenson v. Wood, 5 Esp. 200.

A bankrupt proposed, after an act of bankruptcy, to dispose of a beneficial lease; but the purchaser refused to take it unless five quarters' rent in arrear to the landlord were first paid. After a negotiation between the bankrupt and the landlord, who knew the situation of the former, the rent was paid out of the money which the purchaser had agreed to give for the lease, there being at the time of the transaction no distress on the premises, but the landlord having a right of re-entry:—Held, that the assignee of the bankrupt could not recover from the landlord the rent so paid him. Mavor v. Croome, 8 Moore, 171; 2 Bing. 261.

Payment made in consequence of Creditor's Act is not Voluntary.—In order to render a preference on the eve of bankruptcy valid, it is not necessary that there should be a threat or pressure, with an immediate power of rendering it available by taking legal steps. Van Casteel v. Booker, 2 Ex. 691; 18 L. J. Ex. 9.

To defeat a payment or transfer made to a creditor, the assignees must shew it to be fraudulent as against the body of creditors, by proving it to be voluntary on the part of the bankrupt and in contemplation of his bankruptcy; and if it is made in consequence of the act of the creditor, it is not voluntary. Ib.

To determine whether a fraudulent preference has been given by a bankrupt to one of his creditors by a payment, it will be for the jury to say whether the payment was voluntary, and without any pressure by the creditor, and was made when the debtor knew that he must be a bankrupt, and in contemplation of bankruptcy. Green v. Bradford, 1 C. & K. 449.

In order to constitute pressure, it is not necessary that legal proceedings should have been resorted to; for, if the pressure was such, that it overweighed the bankrupt's own inclination, and induced him to pay against his will, that would be sufficient pressure within the meaning of the bankrupt laws. Ib.

Payment made under Pressure by Surety for Debt.—O. and S., bankers at B., in the country, being in want of funds to meet an expected run upon their bank, obtained from some friends a guarantee for 3,000*l.*, upon the strength of which the defendants, bankers in London, advanced to O. and S. 3,000*l.* The guarantee was signed by the sureties on the understanding with O. and S. that the money should be returned if they found themselves, notwithstanding the advance, unable to meet the run. The defendants knew nothing of this understanding. S. having received from the defendants in London the 3,000*l.* in notes and gold, in a box, took the money down to B., and saw O., his partner; and, finding that it was impossible to meet the run, O. and S. discussed the propriety of returning the money. While discussing it they received a letter from F., one of the sureties, saying that, as the case was hopeless, O. and S. could not honourably retain the money, and that it ought to be returned; and F. afterwards, in an interview, again urged upon them the return of the money. S. stated that this letter, and the subsequent application from F., operated upon their minds in coming to the conclusion to return the money. The box containing the money was returned to the defendants unopened; O. and S. suspended payment the next day, and afterwards became bankrupts. In an action by their assignees, to recover from the defendants the 3,000*l.*:—Held, that O. and S., in returning the money, were influenced not solely by their own wish, but also by the application from the surety; and that therefore the return of the money was not purely voluntary, and did not amount to a fraudulent preference. Edwards v. Glyn, 2 El. & El. 29; 28 L. J., Q. B. 350.

Held, also, by Erle, J., and Crompton, J., that the money was advanced on the specific understanding, and clothed with the specific trust, that it should be returned if the run could not be met; that, as the purpose for which it was advanced had failed, O. and S. had only a legal, and not also an equitable, title to the money; and that therefore the interest in such money did not pass to their assignees. Ib.

Promissory Notes—Payment to Holder—Holder Agent for Payee.—In 1837, A., being in embarrassed circumstances, executed a deed to secure to his creditors a composition of 7*s.* in the pound. B., a creditor, refused to sign the deed, until A. made B. a promise to give him security for the difference between the composition and the full amount of the debt. Pursuant to that agreement, A. subsequently handed over to B. his promissory notes payable to B. or order. B. indorsed the notes, and paid them into his bankers at Leeds, to whom B. was in the habit of indorsing all bills and notes received by him, and drawing generally on account. When the notes were at maturity, the London correspondents of the Leeds bankers presented them to A., by whom they were paid. A. continued to deal with B. down to his bankruptcy (in 1840), without ever complaining of the transaction or attempting to set off the payments made in respect of the notes against the subsequent demands of B. against him. No evidence was given to shew the state of the account between B. and the Leeds bankers at the time of the payments, or that A. knew the character in which the notes were held by the bankers who presented them. In an action for money paid by A. to the use of B., brought by the assignees of A. to recover back the amount of these notes, the judge left it to the jury to say, whether or not the payment was voluntary, and told them, that, if the payment was made to the bankers as agents only, it must be considered as voluntary; and that, if they found the payment to be voluntary, and to have been made with a full knowledge of the circumstances, they must find for B., otherwise for the plaintiff. The court directed a new trial, in order that the attention of the jury might be more precisely called to the question—whether A. knew the character in which the bankers presented the notes for payment, namely, whether as agents of B. or as holders for value. Gibson v. Bruce, 5 M. & G. 399; 6 Scott, N. R. 309; 12 L. J., C. P. 132.

c. Must be in Contemplation of Bankruptcy.

A party who seeks to avoid a payment or transfer of goods, on the ground that it was voluntarily made by the trader in contemplation of bankruptcy, must shew, not merely that the trader was insolvent when it was made, but also that he then contemplated bankruptcy. Morgan v. Brundett, 5 B. & Ad. 289.

Probability of Bankruptcy.—In order to constitute a fraudulent preference, so as to avoid a payment made by a trader, it must be a voluntary preference, and made in actual contemplation of bankruptcy; it is not enough to shew that the party was in such a state of insolvency and embarrassment as to render bankruptcy a probable event. Atkinson v. Brindall, 2 Scott, 369; 2 Bing. N. C. 225; 1 Hodges, 336.

Embarrassed Circumstances.—From a person being in embarrassed circumstances it does not necessarily follow that he contemplates bankruptcy, as he may hope that his affairs may rally and come round. Green v. Bradfield, 1 C. & K. 449.

Whether or not a voluntary payment made by a trader in insolvent circumstances, and on the verge of bankruptcy, to a particular creditor, is void as being a fraud upon the bankrupt laws, is a question of fact for the jury, depending upon the mind and intention of the party at the time of making the payment, to be collected from the surrounding circumstances. Gibson v. Boutts, 3 Scott, 229.

If his condition and conduct are such as to evince clearly a contemplation on the part of the trader that his embarrassment must of necessity end in bankruptcy, the jury will not be warranted in coming to any other conclusion than that the transaction is fraudulent. Id.

But, inasmuch as every man has, down to the time of committing an act of bankruptcy, sole right of dominion over his property, such a payment cannot be held to be a fraudulent preference where the bankrupt, at the time of making it, appears to entertain a bonâ fide hope or expectation that he may be extricated from his difficulties without being made a bankrupt. Id.

Payment made to avoid Bankruptcy.—A payment by a trader after he has committed an act of bankruptcy, and when he contemplated the probability of bankruptcy, is not a preference, if made to enable him to stand his ground. Vachar v. Cocks, 1 B. & Ad. 145; M. & M. 353.

In an action to recover money paid by a bankrupt in contemplation of bankruptcy, on the ground of fraudulent preference, the declarations of the bankrupt as to the state of his affairs, made about the time of the transaction, but unconnected with it, are receivable in evidence. So, also, are letters received by him, refusing to advance him money, for the purpose of shewing the fact of such refusal, but not as evidence of other facts stated in them. Id.

Composition paid after Failure of Composition Proceedings.—A., a trader, being in embarrassed circumstances, offered his creditors a composition of 7s. 6d. in the pound, which was refused by the majority of them, and by B. among the number. B. filed an affidavit in bankruptcy, and, on the 13th of March, served on A. a copy and a notice, demanding payment pursuant to 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 8, and he also served a notice on an auctioneer, who had advertised the sale of A.'s goods, not to proceed with the sale. The goods were sold, and out of the proceeds a payment was made, on the 6th of April, to a creditor of the amount of the composition of his debt:—Held, that this was a fraudulent preference. Gibson v. Muskett, 4 M. & G. 161; 3 Scott, N. R. 427.

Where Payment such as to cripple Debtor.—If country bankers in embarrassment, and after they have stopped payment, deliver to their London banker, upon the faith that assistance will be given by him, bills and notes of such an amount that if assistance is not given the bank must fail, and such assistance is not given, it is a preference, although at the time there is not any contemplation of an act of bankruptcy. Simpson v. Sykes, 6 M. & S. 295.

2. UNDER THE BANKRUPTCY ACT, 1869.

a. Generally.

Statutory Definition—Value of Old Decisions.]

—In determining whether a transaction amounts to a fraudulent preference the court ought now to have regard simply to the statutory definition contained in s. 92 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. The decisions on the subject before the Act may be useful as guides, but the standards laid down in them must not be substituted for that which is laid down in the Act. Griffith, Ex parte, Wilcoxon, In re, 23 Ch. D. 69; 52 L. J., Ch. 717; 48 L. T. 450; 31 W. R. 878—C. A.

Elements of Fraudulent Preference.—The Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 92, has not altered the law with respect to fraudulent preferences, and it is still necessary, in order to constitute a fraudulent preference, that the conveyance or transfer should be made voluntarily and in contemplation of bankruptcy. Craven, Ex parte, 10 L. R., Eq. 648; 39 L. J., Bk. 33; 23 L. T. 563; 18 W. R. 1022. Affirmed, sub nom. Craven, Ex parte, Tempest, In re, 6 L. R., Ch. 70; 40 L. J., Bk. 22; 23 L. T. 650; 19 W. R. 137—L. J.

To make an assignment of goods or payment of money a fraudulent preference, the delivery or payment must be made in immediate contemplation of bankruptcy, and must be altogether voluntary on the part of the bankrupt. Beverly, In re, 4 Ir. R., Eq. 198.

Where creditors get an opportunity of impeaching a transaction as a fraudulent preference by filing a charge, and decline to do so, the court will decide in favour of the bankrupt; but if the case was one that ought to have been inquired into, the creditor taking evidence to ascertain facts, will get his costs. Ib.

Intention to Prefer.]—A payment by a bankrupt to a creditor, shortly before his bankruptcy, being impeached as a fraudulent preference, the case was tried before a jury, to whom the points submitted were: first, whether the bankrupt, when he made the payment, was unable to pay his debts as they became due; secondly, whether he made it with a view to give that creditor a preference over his other creditors; and, thirdly, whether the payment was made by the bankrupt voluntarily and without real pressure, bankruptcy being reasonably imminent. The jury found in the affirmative on the first and third points, and in the negative on the second. On these findings the county court judge ordered the money paid to be refunded; but the chief judge reversed this decision:—Held, that the decision of the chief judge was right, for that the jury having found as a fact that the payment was not made with a view to giving the creditor a preference, and no proceedings being taken to set aside their verdict, this finding disposed of the whole case, and the finding on the third issue was immaterial, that issue being calculated to mislead the jury. Bolland, Ex parte, Cherry, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 24; 25 L. T. 646; 20 W. R. 136. Affirming S. C. nom. Matthew, Ex parte, Cherry, In re, 25 L. T. 276; 19 W. R. 1005.

A payment in the ordinary course of business made by a debtor in embarrassed circumstances does not amount to a fraudulent preference, provided that the creditor acted bona fide, and the evidence shews that the debtor did not intend the payment to be preferential. Ib.

Payment a few days before stopping payment, and less than three months before bankruptcy, by an agent to his principal of a sum of money payable in the ordinary course of business, without any intention to prefer such creditor being proved, is not a fraudulent preference within the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 92. Blackburn, Ex parte, Cheesebrough, In re, 12 L. R., Eq. 358; 40 L. J., Bk. 79; 25 L. T. 76; 19 W. R. 973.

A creditor receiving payment of a sum due to him without any knowledge of the insolvent condition of the debtor's affairs, is within the exception contained in the last part of the same section. Ib.

—Mixed Motive.]—If a payment is made from a mixed motive, though one object of the payment is to prefer the creditor, the payment is not fraudulent within the bankrupt law. Taylor v. Thompson, 4 Ir. R., C. L. 129.

In order that a payment of money or a transfer of property made by a debtor in favour of one of his creditors should be void as a fraudulent preference under s. 92, it is sufficient that the preferring the creditor should have been the substantial, effectual, or dominant view with which the debtor made it; it is not necessary that it should have been his sole view. Hill, Ex parte, Bird, In re, 23 Ch. D. 695; 52 L. J., Ch. 903; 49 L. T. 278; 32 W. R. 177—C. A.

—Creditor's Knowledge of Insolvency.]—In order to constitute a fraudulent preference the inability of the debtor to pay out of his own moneys, and the intention to prefer a particular creditor, should be clearly established; yet, unless it is also established that the creditor or payee was conscious of such inability, and concurred in or assented to the preference, so as to be a partaker in the fraud, his rights cannot be prejudicially affected by s. 92, but are within the saving clause. Putman, Ex parte, Crawford, In re, 30 L. T. 335; 22 W. R. 569. Affirmed, nom. Keran, Ex parte, Crawford, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 752.

C., a manufacturer in England, was in the habit of purchasing flax from P., in Belgium, whose sister he had married. In August, 1872, he owed upwards of 4,000*l.* to P., as the executrix of her mother's estate; and also 800*l.* on the current account between P. and himself; and being pressed by her for payment he promised to send 2,350*l.* on account of the debt to the estate. On the 4th of November, 1872, C. sent bills to the amount of 4,000*l.* to P., who received the proceeds, and applied 2,350*l.* towards the debt to her mother's estate, and carried the rest to the account current between C. and herself, and with that sum and other sums afterwards remitted she purchased flax, and consigned it to C. C. was at that time in insolvent circumstances, and on the 5th of November committed an act of bankruptcy, on which he was adjudicated bankrupt on the 28th of November. The trustee claimed the 4,000*l.*, as having been paid to P. by way of fraudulent preference:—Held, that there was no fraudulent preference. Ib.

Two of the principal creditors of a debtor had a meeting with him, at which he admitted that unless he could get assistance from his friends he must become bankrupt:—Held, that one of the creditors might, notwithstanding the meeting, obtain payment from the debtor of a debt previously due. Topham, Ex parte, Walker, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 614; 42 L. J., Bk. 57; 28 L. T. 716; 21 W. R. 655.

Withdrawing from Speculation.]—A firm, though insolvent, may withdraw from or put an end to a current speculation, the result of which is still uncertain, on the best terms procurable, without any imputation of fraud; so also, the abandonment of a speculation whilst the result is uncertain may be both honest and politic, as it entirely differs from undue preference of one creditor to others after a debt has been incurred. Miller v. Barlow, 3 L. R., P. C. 733; 8 Moore P. C. C., N. S. 127.

Provisions only Apply as between Debtor and Creditors strictly so called.]—The provisions of s. 92 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, apply only to transactions between a debtor and persons who are, in the strict sense of the words, his creditors. Kelly, Ex parte, Smith, In re, 11 Ch. D. 306; 48 L. J., Bk. 65; 40 L. T. 404; 27 W. R. 830—C. A.

In Consideration of not Opposing Composition.]—A declaration alleged that A. was indebted to the plaintiff in 7,218*l.* upon certain bills of exchange drawn and accepted by A., and was also indebted to other persons, and being unable to pay the alleged several liabilities, he filed his petition, and instituted proceedings in the Bankruptcy Court, for liquidation by arrangement or composition with his creditors, and in consideration that the plaintiff would not oppose such petition or proceedings or take proceedings in bankruptcy against A., the defendant guaranteed

An assignment of goods at sea as a collateral security for a debt, and a subsequent indorsement of a bill of lading, are good as against the assignees of the assignor, who committed an act of bankruptcy between the assignment of the goods and the indorsement of the bill of lading. Lempriere v. Pasley, 2 T. R. 485.

D., a captain of a vessel belonging to the defendant, entered into an agreement with the defendant, under which he was to have command of the vessel for a voyage to India and back, and to have for his own use the cabin accommodation for passengers, for which he was to pay the owner a certain sum. For purposes of his own D. abandoned the ship before her arrival in India, whereupon the command was assumed by F., the chief mate; after D. had left the ship, he wrote to F., giving him directions as to the disposal of certain property of his then on board. The owner, as soon as he became acquainted with the fact of D. having quitted the ship, wrote to F., confirming him in the command, and desiring him to retain everything on board belonging to D., who was largely indebted to him. D. returned to England, and on the 18th October, 1834, at the instance of the defendant, wrote him the following letter:—"I hereby authorize and request you to keep possession of all cabin furniture and other property of mine on board the Bolton, when she arrives, and to place the value of the same to the credit of my account with you." On the 18th December, a fiat issued against D. upon an act of bankruptcy committed by him on the 2nd. The vessel arrived in London on the 5th December:—Held, that the defendant had such a possession of the goods before the bankruptcy as to entitle him to retain them as against D.'s assignees, by virtue of the authority of the 18th October. Belcher v. Oldfield, 8 Scott, 221; 6 Bing., N. C. 102.

h. Goods returned by Bankrupt to Seller.

A trader ordered bags of wool of the defendants (merchants) in December, which were delivered 19th February following; and by the course of dealing, the trader had the option of returning the wool, for which he had no call, though previously ordered. The trader being from home when the bags were delivered, on his return, the same day, he gave directions not to have them opened or entered in his books, but only weighed off to see that they agreed with the invoice, he being then in embarrassed circumstances, and intending not to take them into the account of his stock, if he found himself unable to pursue his business. On the 4th and 5th of March, being then insolvent, he returned the bags with a letter declaring his situation, and hoping they would not object to take back the wool, and requesting a line of approbation thereof; which approbation was given, after an act of bankruptcy committed the same day the letter was sent:—Held, that by the trader keeping possession of the goods so long, his option (which ought to have been exercised on the receipt of them) was gone; and that being in a state of insolvency and on the eve of bankruptcy, he had not the power of restoring the goods to the vendors, and that the assignees were entitled to the property. Neate v. Ball, 2 East, 117.

A trader ordered goods from the country, to be sent to another place for the purpose of being afterwards sent to his correspondent abroad, which was the usual course of his dealing; it was competent for him, upon his becoming insolvent, but before an act of bankruptcy, to agree bonâ fide to give up the goods to the defendants from whom they were ordered, upon a claim of right of stoppage in transitu; and the circumstance of the trader having called a meeting of his creditors, and taken legal advice, and being encouraged by the result of such meeting and advice to give up the goods, was evidence for the jury to find that they were given up bonâ fide, and not from any motive of voluntary and undue preference to the defendants, though done by him in a situation of impending bankruptcy at the time. Dixon v. Baldwin, 5 East, 175.

A. purchased goods of B. on October 8th, for the purpose of exportation; but finding that he must stop payment, and that he could not apply the goods to the purpose for which they were bought, he returned them to B. on October 16th. On the 17th he stopped payment; but expecting remittances from abroad more than sufficient to pay his debts, had no doubt but his creditors would give him time; they however refusing, he was made bankrupt on November 2nd. In an action by the assignees against B. for the value of the goods:—Held, that the jury was warranted in finding, that the delivery of the goods to B. was not made in contemplation of bankruptcy. Fidgeon v. Sharp, 1 Marsh, 196; 2 Rose, 153; 5 Taunt. 539.

Where a sale of goods has been completed by actual delivery to the buyer, who afterwards becomes insolvent before they are paid for, he cannot rescind the contract, and return the goods, with the consent of the seller, so as to give the seller a preference to his other creditors. Barnes v. Freeland, 6 T. R. 80.

If the consignee of goods, upon discovering his insolvency, gives notice to the wharfinger not to deliver the consignment, the goods remain in the consignor. Bartram v. Farebrother. 4 Bing. 579; 1 M. & P. 515.

i. Warrants of Attorney.

On an issue, whether a warrant of attorney was given by way of fraudulent preference, and therefore not protected, in order to shew such warrant of attorney was given in contemplation of bankruptcy, it is not necessary to shew that any particular act of bankruptcy was in contemplation, or that the giver had in view the approaching distribution of his property under the bankrupt laws. Aldred v. Constable, 4 Q. B. 674; 12 L. J., Q. B. 253; 7 Jur. 509.

Evidence that the giver of the warrant of attorney had in view approaching imprisonment for debt and insolvency, is evidence for the jury that he gave it in contemplation of bankruptcy. Id.

j. Partnership Transactions.

A payment by a partner, who has committed an act of bankruptcy, of a partnership debt due before the bankruptcy, to a creditor who has notice of the act of bankruptcy, was not protected by 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 82. Craven v. Edmonson, 8 Bing. 734; 4 M. & P. 623.

Where two partners have stopped payment, and a commission of bankruptcy is taken out against one of them, a debtor to the firm, who knows of the stoppage, cannot refuse to pay money due to them, on the ground that the other may have was valid, and could not be set aside as being a fraudulent preference. Ib.

The motive or view which may have actuated the debtor wholly or partially is not material, unless it has also induced him, without pressure or just request from his creditor, to give him a preference over his other creditors. Ib.

The assignment of a security to a particular creditor, even when bankruptcy is inevitable, if the assignment is not made voluntarily, is not necessarily a fraudulent preference. The Heart of Oak, 39 L. J., Adm. 15.

Conveyances made pursuant to Prior Agreement are not Voluntary.—In October, 1869, a creditor visited his debtor's place of business, and seeing that the business was mismanaged, asked him to pay off the money. The debtor proposed to give security on a certain property, but the property being insufficient, it was arranged that the creditor should take it in satisfaction of part of his debt, and on the 6th of December the debtor and creditor went to a solicitor and instructed him to draw a conveyance accordingly. Owing to the illness of the solicitor the matter was delayed and the conveyance was not executed till the 3rd of February, 1870. On the 22nd of March the debtor filed a petition for liquidation.—Held, that as the conveyance was executed in pursuance of the verbal agreement made in December in consequence of the application of the creditor, it was not, according to the cases decided under the old law, a fraudulent preference; and that the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 92, does not avoid as a fraudulent preference an act which was not such under the old law. Tempest, Ex parte, Craven, In re, 6 L. R., Ch. 70; 40 L. J., Bk. 22; 23 L. T. 650; 19 W. R. 137.

Bill of Sale to be given if Required.—A. lent money to B., the latter verbally promising to give A. a bill of sale when required. No bill of sale was required during the life of A., but after her death and four years after the money was lent, her executor hearing rumours against the debtor's solvency asked for and obtained a bill of sale from the debtor, which comprised substantially the whole of his property. It was agreed that the executor should not put the bill of sale in force unless the debtor's other creditors were pressing him, and the debtor promised that if any legal process was issued against him he would give notice to the executor. Afterwards the debtor gave the executor notice of a process issued against him, and the executor thereupon seized and sold the goods by a forced sale advertised only three days before it took place.—Held, that the giving of the bill of sale was a fraudulent preference, and that the proceeds of sale must be paid to the trustee. Bolland, Ex parte, Gibson, In re, 8 Ch. D. 230; 38 L. T. 326; 26 W. R. 481.

A debtor gave promissory notes for the amount of his debt, which notes contained the words "security to be given by bill of sale when required." One year afterwards the creditor required security, and six weeks after the request the debtor gave him a bill of sale over a portion only of his property, which was registered; he having afterwards petitioned for liquidation, the creditor took possession under his bill of sale.—Held, that the bill of sale was not bad as a fraud on the Bills of Sale Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 36), nor as a fraudulent pre-

Held, also, that the interval of six weeks between the request for security and the execution of the bill of sale was not in itself sufficient so to disconnect the two as to make the bill of sale voluntary. Ib.

When a bill of sale comprising the whole of the grantor's property is given on the eve of his bankruptcy to secure a pre-existing debt, and it is attempted to support it by an agreement alleged to have been made at the time when the money was advanced, it is for the court to judge from all the surrounding circumstances whether the agreement was a bona fide one, or whether the giving of the bill of sale was purposely postponed in order to protect the grantor's credit. Kilner, Ex parte, Barker, In re, 13 Ch. D. 245; 41 L. T. 520; 28 W. R. 269; 44 J. P. 264—C. A.

The fact that the agreement was to give the bill of sale "if or when required" by the creditor does not of itself necessarily invalidate it. Ib.

The court will require a very clear explanation of the delay in the execution of the bill of sale, and the onus is on the person who sets up the prior agreement to prove, not only its existence, but its bona fides. Ib.

A shipbuilder had an account with his bankers, which fluctuated largely. In August, 1874, the bankers asked for some statement about his account. He then offered to give them security on a ship he was building. The bankers declined to take the security then, but said that circumstances might arise which would make it desirable for them to accept the security, and he promised to let them have it when required. In October following the bankers requested him to give the security, and he assigned the ship accordingly.—Held, that in the absence of other evidence to prove that the bankers knew in August that he was insolvent, the transaction did not amount either to a fraud on the Bills of Sale Act or to a fraudulent preference under the 92nd section of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, so as to render the assignment to the bankers invalid. Winter, Ex parte, Hodgkin, Ex parte, Softley, In re, 20 L. R., Eq. 746; 44 L. J., Bk. 107; 33 L. T. 62; 24 W. R. 68.

Bill of Sale to be Signed on Loss of Confidence.—Shortly before a trader filed a liquidation petition he executed a bill of sale of substantially the whole of his property, to secure the repayment of an advance which had been made to him two months previously. At the time when the advance was made the borrower agreed to give a bill of sale to secure it; but the agreement was that the bill of sale was not to be signed until the lender "lost confidence" in the borrower.—Held (reversing the decision of Bacon, C. J.), that this amounted to an agreement to postpone the giving of the bill of sale until the grantor should be on the verge of bankruptcy; and that; consequently, it could not support the deed. Burton, Ex parte, Tunstall, In re, 13 Ch. D. 102; 41 L. T. 571; 28 W. R. 268—C. A.

Security by Solicitor to his Clerk pursuant to Verbal Promise.—A solicitor, shortly before absconding as an insolvent debtor, had given securities to his clerk, who the court ruptcy, directed his broker, who had authority to distrain for rents due to him, to pay a certain sum to B. in satisfaction of a debt, and the broker bonâ fide agreed with B. to pay him as soon as he received the rents, and after this A. became bankrupt:—Held, that the assignees of A. could not recover this sum from the broker, though he did not in fact pay it over to B. till after the commission issued. Bedford v. Perkins, 3 C. & P. 90.

2. UNDER THE BANKRUPTCY ACT, 1869.

a. Fraudulent Conveyances.

i. What are.

a. Assignments of Debtor's Property.

See also ante, IV., ACT OF BANKRUPTCY.

When Creditor entitled to have set aside.—The result of the authorities decided upon 13 Eliz. c. 5, is, first, that where a debt contracted antecedently to the settlement exists, a subsequent creditor has the same rights as an antecedent creditor would have against the settlor; and secondly, that whether or not the settlor had any intention to defraud his creditors, a creditor having a debt existing at the date of the settlement, has a right to have the settlement set aside if the ultimate effect of it is to delay or defraud him with regard to his debt. Freeman v. Pope, 39 L. J. Ch. 148. Affirmed, 5 L. R., Ch. 538; 39 L. J., Ch. 689; 21 L. T. 816; 18 W. R. 906—C. A.

A bill of sale of all the grantor's then existing and after-acquired property, by way of mortgage to secure an existing debt and future advances, is not necessarily void under the statute 13 Eliz. c. 5. It will only be void if it is not made bonâ fide, i.e., if it is a mere cloak for retaining a benefit to the grantor. Nor, if the time be past within which the execution of the deed is an act of bankruptcy, available for adjudication against the grantor, or within which the deed can be set aside as a fraudulent preference, can it be treated as void under the bankruptcy law. Games, Ex parte, Bamford, In re, 12 Ch. D. 314; 40 L. T. 789; 27 W. R. 744—C. A.

The defendant received from M., a member of a trading firm, a bill of lading for brandy, for the purpose of landing and warehousing it, which he did, entering the brandy at M.'s request in his own name and paying charges amounting to 47*l*. Afterwards, and whilst he still had the bill of lading in his possession, an acceptance which had been given by the firm to the defendant for 245*l*. for the hire of a ship falling due, and the firm not being able to meet it, the defendant consented to take M.'s acceptance at seven days for a balance of account, including the hire and the 47*l*., upon receiving M.'s authority to sell the brandy if the bills were not met. This acceptance not being met, the defendant sold the brandy. The firm was afterwards adjudicated bankrupt, and the trustee sued the defendant in trover for the value of the brandy. The transaction was bonâ fide, but the brandy formed in fact the whole property of the firm:—Held, that although the transaction under which the defendant obtained power to sell the brandy might be a "conveyance, gift, delivery or transfer" within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 6, sub-s. 2, it was not fraudulent within the meaning of the act, because the defendant's consent to give the bankrupt seven days' time to pay the debts due, taking his acceptance at seven days, was an equivalent for the power of sale given to the defendant. Philps v. Hornstedt, 1 Ex. D. 62—Ex. Ch. Affirming, 8 L. R., Ex. 26; 42 L. J., Ex. 12; 21 W. R. 174.

When an unregistered bill of sale of goods has been given to B. by A. and kept secret, and not acted upon, and subsequently the goods have been sold to a purchaser, and the proceeds of the goods paid to B., the payment to B. cannot be set aside, although A. was insolvent at the time, and bankruptcy followed shortly afterwards. Wilson, Ex parte, 29 L. T. 860; 22 W. R. 241—L. J.

The purchaser at the same time bought the bankrupt's stock-in-trade, being nearly all the rest of his property, and gave a bill of exchange for the price. This bill was handed to B. for the benefit of the creditors, but not indorsed to him:—Held, that the whole transaction was not an assignment of the bankrupt's whole property for the benefit of his creditors. Id.

Private Arrangement not Binding on Creditors.—W. was a partner in the firm of W. & Co. and also carried on another business separately from the partnership on his own private account. W.'s private transactions in the latter business involved him in irretrievable losses, the other partners in the firm excluded him from their partnership, purchasing his share for 749*l*. 15*s*., so as to prevent the partnership accounts being interfered with in the proceedings under W.'s prospective bankruptcy:—Held, that this arrangement between the partners, although within the terms of their deed of association, did not bind third parties, and that the trustee for the creditors of W. was entitled to an account of the partnership assets and profits. Warden, Ex parte, Williams, In re, 21 W. R. 51.

Retaking Possession.—B. sold certain furniture, stock-in-trade, &c., together with the goodwill and book debts of her business as a baker to Y. for a certain price payable by quarterly instalments of 15*l*. each, subject to a proviso for B.'s retaking possession on default in payment of the instalments. Y. made default, and B. resumed possession on the 7th of November, 1870. Y. was adjudicated a bankrupt on the 24th November, 1871:—Held, that the retaking of possession was not fraudulent or void as against the trustee in the bankruptcy. Batchelor, Ex parte, Young, In re, 20 W. R. 826.

Y. also made an assignment to B. of the whole of his (Y.'s) property in repayment of a subsisting debt; the deed was within twelve months of the adjudication:—Held, that the deed was fraudulent and void as against the trustee in bankruptcy. Id.

Dissolution of Partnership invalid.—A partnership of two was dissolved, the outgoing partner assigning to the continuing partner all his share in the partnership assets, and the latter covenanting to pay the partnership debts. At the date of the assignment the firm was insolvent, as was also each of the partners. The firm being shortly afterwards adjudged bankrupt:—Held, that the transaction was void; that it did not operate as a conversion of the outgoing partner's property into the separate estate of the continuing partner; and that the whole of the property, as it existed belonging to the bankrupts at the date of the assignment, must still be considered as remaining the joint property, and must be administered and distributed as such under the bankruptcy among the joint creditors. Mayou, Ex parte, Edwards-Wood, In re, 4 De G., J. & S. 664.

Assignment on Demand pursuant to Agreement.]—Two traders, brothers, obtained advances amounting to 500*l.* from their father and brother in various sums, and in 1870, on the last advance of 250*l.*, they signed an agreement that they would, on demand, assign the lease of their premises and their business, stock-in-trade, and book debts to the creditors, with a proviso that if they should repay the sums advanced the agreement should be void, but if they should fail to do so a valuation should be made, and the balance, if any, should be paid to the debtors. At the same time the lease was deposited with the same creditors as a security for the due performance of the agreement. In 1873, the debtors became embarrassed, and the creditors demanded the execution of an assignment in pursuance of the agreement, which was accordingly executed, and the balance of the valuation of the property, amounting to 123*l.*, was paid to the debtors. The assignment included substantially the whole of the debtor's property, and the creditors took possession of it forthwith. A few days afterwards the debtors filed a petition for liquidation, and the trustee applied to have the deed of assignment of 1873 declared void :—Held, that the agreement of 1870 became a binding security on demand being made, and that the assignment of 1873, being based upon it, was valid. Isard, Ex parte, Cook, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 271; 43 L. J., Bk. 31; 30 L. T. 7; 22 W. R. 342.

Consideration for.]—A trader on the 28th of August executed a bill of sale of substantially the whole of his property to secure a debt for which the grantee had recovered judgment on the 3rd of July, and another debt which he owed the grantee. The grantor had on the 4th of July written a letter to the grantee, undertaking, in the event of his not issuing execution on the judgment, to execute to him on demand a bill of sale to secure the judgment debt and such other sums as he owed him. The grantee did not enter into any agreement not to enforce the judgment, but in fact he did not issue execution. On the 29th of August another creditor levied execution at the grantor's place of business, and on the 1st of September the grantor filed a liquidation petition. He had between the 4th of July and the 29th of August received by the carrying on of his business sums amounting to 10,000*l.* :—Held, that no equivalent had been given for the bill of sale, and that it was void as against the trustee in the liquidation. Cooper, Ex parte, Baum, In re, 10 Ch. D. 313; 48 L. J., Bk. 40; 39 L. T. 521; 27 W. R. 298—C. A.

Growing Crops.]—A bill of sale of growing crops does not require registration under the Bills of Sale Act, 1854. Payne, Ex parte, Cross, In re, 11 Ch. D. 539; 40 L. T. 563; 27 W. R. 808—C. A. And see Brantom v. Griffiths, 2 C. P. D. 212; 46 L. J., C. P. 408; 36 L. T. 4; 29 W. R. 313—C. A.

On the 2nd of May a farmer executed a bill of sale of his furniture and growing crops, being the whole of his property, to P., the only consideration for it being the forbearance of P. to seize the property under a bill of sale given to him four months previously, as he alleged, for value, and not registered. On the 3rd of May the grantor gave a bill of sale of the same property to C. in consideration of a present advance of money. C. had no notice of P.'s bill of sale. Neither of the bills of sale was registered. C. took possession of the property on the 20th of August, and P. on the 23rd of August. On the 26th of August the grantor filed a liquidation petition, and on the 1st of October he was adjudicated a bankrupt :—Held, that P.'s bill of sale was void as against the trustee in bankruptcy of the grantor as an act of bankruptcy, and that C.'s bill of sale, so far as regarded the furniture, was also void as against the trustee for want of registration, notwithstanding the fact that he had no notice of the act of bankruptcy to which the trustee's title related back. Ib.

But, as to the growing crops, held, that C.'s bill of sale was a protected transaction by virtue of ss. 94 and 95 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and was therefore good as against the trustee. Ib.

The fact that a bill of sale is set aside as void against the trustee in bankruptcy of the grantor does not entitle the trustee to stand in the place of the grantee, and thus acquire priority over the grantee under a valid bill of sale subsequently executed by the grantor. Ib.

Voluntary Settlements.]—A settlor, at the time of making a voluntary settlement, made a statement of his assets and liabilities, shewing a balance in his favour. He was incurring heavy liabilities as managing director of a company, and from transactions on the Stock Exchange. Nine months after the date of the settlement he called a meeting of his creditors, and laid before them a statement shewing himself to be insolvent, and subsequently he became bankrupt :—Held, that the burden was upon him to shew solvency at the date of the settlement. Crossley v. Eliworthy, 12 L. R., Eq. 158; 40 L. J., Ch. 480; 24 L. T. 607; 19 W. R. 842.

Seem, that damages recovered in an action commenced after the settlement for inducing the settlor to become a member of a company by false and fraudulent misrepresentations made previously to the settlement must be taken into consideration in estimating the settlor's solvency at the date of the settlement. Ib.

A distribution by a debtor, when in a weak state of mind and of body, of the whole of his property among his children, partly in consideration of annuities for his life, partly by voluntary settlement, and partly by pecuniary gifts, is void as against creditors under 13 Eliz. c. 5, the children being aware at the time that the creditors' claims would be defeated, though the debtor had no such intention. Cornish v. Clark, 14 L. R., Eq. 184; 42 L. J., Ch. 14; 26 L. T. 494; 20 W. R. 897.

In the absence of an actual intent to defeat, delay, or hinder creditors, a voluntary settlement, made by a settlor in embarrassed circumstances, but having property not included in the settlement, ample for payment of the debts owing by him at the time of making it, may be supported against creditors, although debts due at the date of the settlement may to a considerable amount remain unpaid. Kent v. Riley, 14 L. R., Eq. 190; 41 L. J., Ch. 569; 27 L. T. 263; 20 W. R. 852.

A voluntary settlement whereby the settlor to the benefit of the security as against the other creditors; for, as the solicitor retained no benefit for himself, the gift was bonâ fide within 13 Eliz. c. 5. Ib.

Security to Bankers to enable Debtor to carry on Business.—A company having largely overdrawn its banker's account, and wanting further accommodation for the purpose of carrying on its business, made an equitable mortgage of the bulk of its property to the bank. Six months afterwards the company was wound up:—Held, that such security did not operate as a fraudulent preference, and that the bank was entitled to the full benefit of it. Patent File Company, In re, Birmingham Banking Company, In re, 23 L. T. 484; 19 W. R. 44. Affirmed, 6 L. R., Ch. 83; 43 L. J., Ch. 190.

B. had overdrawn his account at his bankers' and the bankers, four months before he became a bankrupt, obtained a charge from him to secure this account, on moneys coming to him from third parties;—Held, that the charge was good, and that no case of fraudulent preference had been proved. London and County Bank, Ex parte, Brown, In re, 16 L. R., Eq. 391; 42 L. J., Bk. 112; 29 L. T. 73.

3. EFFECT OF PREFERENCE.

The effect of bankruptcy upon a fraudulent preference, is not to put the goods in the same situation as if they were actually the goods of the bankrupt, so as to vest them at once by the bankruptcy in the assignees, independently of any election on their part, other than their acceptance of the office of assignee, but by a transfer which is a fraudulent preference, the property vests in the transferee, subject to be divested by the assignees at their election, and the title of the transferee is perfect, except so far as it is avoided by the assignees. Newnham v. Stevenson, 10 C. B. 713; 20 L. J., C. P. 111; 15 Jur. 360.

The commencement of an action of trover, which may be abandoned at any time, and which assumes that the goods came into the possession of the defendant lawfully, cannot, without more, be taken to be an election on the part of the assignees to avoid the transfer. Ib.

4. REMEDIES IN RESPECT OF PREFERENCE.

Right of Trustee to Proceeds.—When goods have been assigned to a creditor by a debtor on the eve of bankruptcy under circumstances which make it a fraudulent preference, and the goods have been sold by the creditor before the bankruptcy, it is immaterial that the adjudication was on the bankrupt's own petition, so that the fraudulent preference was not void as an act of bankruptcy to which the assignees' title could relate; the assignees may still recover the proceeds from the creditor, inasmuch as a transaction amounting to a fraudulent preference is voidable at the election of the assignees, as contrary to the spirit of the bankruptcy laws. Marks v. Feldman, 5 L. R., Q. B. 275; 39 L. J., Q. B. 101; 10 B. & S. 371—Ex. Ch.

When only Individual Creditor would be benefited.—When the result of recovering property alleged to have been delivered to a creditor by way of fraudulent preference would not be for the benefit of the creditors at large, but of an individual creditor who claims a security on it, the trustee ought not to take proceedings for the recovery of the property himself; nor will the individual creditor be allowed to take them in his name. Cooper, Ex parte, Zucco, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 510; 44 L. J., Bk. 121; 33 L. T. 3; 23 W. R. 782.

XVI. FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES AND PROTECTED TRANSACTIONS.

1. UNDER STATUTES PRIOR TO THE BANKRUPTCY ACT, 1869.

a. Sale of Goods.

Where a trader on the eve of bankruptcy makes a collusive sale of his goods to A., the assignees cannot maintain trover for them, without proving a demand and refusal. Nixon v. Jenkins, 2 H. Bl. 135.

A fraudulent sale of goods by a bankrupt to a creditor, in order to keep up his sinking credit, to prefer this one and cheat the others, is void. Martin v. Peutress, 4 Burr. 2477.

A. purchased of B., a hop merchant, a library, and paid him the value; B. at that time had committed an act of bankruptcy, of which A. had no knowledge:—Held, that the assignees could not recover the value of the books, without at least tendering the price, inasmuch as the payment made by A. was declared valid by 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 82; and, in order to give full effect to that enactment, A. must at least have a lien on the books in respect to which he had made the payment, until the assignees tendered him the sum paid. Hill v. Farnell, 9 B. & C. 45.

A trader in prison employed an auctioneer to sell goods, who sent him the proceeds by the hands of the defendant; the trader became bankrupt by lying two months in prison:—Held, that his assignees could not recover from the defendant, who was a mere bearer, the money he had so received and paid over. Coles v. Wright, 4 Taunt. 198; 2 Rose, 110. And see Tope v. Hockin, 7 B. & C. 101; 9 D. & R. 881.

In an action by the assignees of bankrupts, to recover the value of goods alleged to have been delivered to the defendant in contemplation of bankruptcy; evidence that the goods were delivered in payment and satisfaction of a debt due from the bankrupts to the defendant, does not support a plea alleging that the goods were bonâ fide sold and delivered to defendant by the bankrupts before the issuing of a fiat and without notice of an act of bankruptcy, and that the defendants bonâ fide paid for them. Backhouse v. Jones, 1 Scott, 148.

Evidence that other creditors of the bankrupts, to whom goods had been delivered under similar circumstances, had subsequently given them up to the assignees or paid their value, is irrelevant and inadmissible. Ib.

A bankrupt, previously to his bankruptcy, deposited timber with wharfingers, to be kept at their wharf, and delivered on payment of the wharfage. On the 7th February, 1848, a fiat issued against him. The bankrupt, after the fiat, sold the timber, and between September, 1848, and January, 1849, it was delivered to the purchaser by the wharfinger, who had no notice of bankruptcy. In trover, by the assignees:—Held, that the wharfingers were not liable for the value of the timber, being protected by 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 84. Cannan v. South Eastern Railway Company, 7 Ex. 843; 21 L. J., Ex. 257.

b. Gifts of Money.

To Children.—Money given by a father, who is a trader, to his son, to advance him in a partnership trading concern, was not within 1 Jac. 1, c. 15, s. 5, and could not be recovered from the son by the assignees of the father, who afterwards became bankrupt. Kensington v. Chantler, 2 M. & S. 36.

A fraudulent gift of money, in contemplation of insolvency, may be avoided by the assignees. Abell v. Daniell, M. & M. 370.

Where a bankrupt, in the habit of supplying his son with money to pay his bills, gave him 200*l.* just before he stopped payment, being at the time insolvent, but not expecting to become a bankrupt:—Held, that the question for the jury, in an action by his assignees against the son to recover that money, was whether it was given in the ordinary course of maintaining his son, or as a fraudulent preference of the son over the creditors, made in contemplation of insolvency. Such gift of money was not within the meaning of 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 73. Id.

c. Claims of Lien.

Where a master and part owner of a vessel consigned her to the defendants, who were ship-brokers, on the usual terms of commission, on which the ship's papers were handed over to them, and they made disbursements on his account; and he was afterwards arrested, and lay in prison more than two months, on which a commission was issued against him, and the plaintiffs were appointed his assignees: and whilst he was in prison, the defendants adjusted their account with him, and received the balance due to them, on account of their disbursements, and at the same time delivered to him the ship's papers:—Held, in an action by the assignees for the recovery of such balance, that they were not entitled to recover, as the defendants had a lien on the papers until their account was adjusted and paid; and that neither the bankrupt nor his assignees could have disposed of the vessel before the papers were given up. Thompson v. Beaton, 7 Moore, 548; 1 Bing. 145.

Semble, that 2 & 3 Vict. c. 29, operated to protect a claim of general lien on goods of a bankrupt coming into the hands of the party before the fiat, without notice of an act of bankruptcy. Bowman v. Malcolm, 11 M. & W. 833; 12 L. J., Ex. 397.

The bankrupt, a woolstapler at Huddersfield, was in the habit of directing purchases of wool to be consigned to the defendant, a wharfinger and shipping agent at Hull, who forwarded them to him at Huddersfield. In July, 1841, the bankrupt purchased wool in Scotland, which was paid for by E., his agent there, and by him forwarded to the defendant at Hull. Part of the wool, consisting of ten bales, arrived at Hull on the 27th of September, and a portion of it was, at ten o'clock on that morning, taken possession of by the defendant, the remainder being taken possession of by him between ten o'clock and four. E., who had not been repaid the advances made by him for the purchase of wool, received a letter from the bankrupt on the 21st of September, which, after informing him of his insol-veny, directed him to get the wool and do the best he could to save himself; and, accordingly, on some day between the 26th September and the 1st October, he gave directions to the defendant to seize the wool. The remaining portion of the wool arrived on the 3rd October, and was delivered into the defendant's warehouses on the 6th, 7th, and 8th of that month. An act of bankruptcy was committed on the 22nd of September, the fiat was dated and issued on the 27th, and was signed between twelve o'clock and two o'clock, but it did not appear at what hour it was delivered out. The defendant, who claimed to retain the wool in payment of a general balance, had been in the habit of sending to the bankrupt, together with the goods, printed delivery orders, which stated that all goods were considered as general lien, subject not only to freight but also to the balance of any former account due from the owners or consignors. These orders had been seen more than once in the bankrupt's hands, and, on one occasion, the weights therein stated had been altered by him. The defendant claimed to retain the wool as a lien in respect of a general balance:—Held, in trover by the assignees to recover the value of the wool, that the agent E. had no right to the goods, that the defendant had not a general lien, and that the assignees were entitled to recover the value of the whole. Id.

d. Attachments of Money and Goods.

B., by charter-party, hired a ship of the owners, to carry a cargo to Hayti, and engaged to find a homeward cargo. On the ship's arrival at Hayti, B. assigned the cargo to C. as a security for advances. The hire not having been paid, the owners, under a judgment of a court at Hayti, attached the cargo in the hands of C. to discharge the claim for hire; and B. having declined to find a homeward cargo, the captain procured one for the owners, who received the freight on its arrival in London:—Held, on B.'s having become bankrupt subsequently to the assignment, that his assignees could not recover from the owners the proceeds of the cargo attached at Hayti, or of the homeward freight. Kymer v. Larkin, 5 Bing. 71; 1 M. & P. 183.

A., a foreign merchant, purchased in his own name, but on account and with the money of B., a British merchant, bank shares in the French funds. The latter drew bills on A. which he accepted, on the security of such shares standing in his name; and these bills were assigned by B. for a valuable consideration to C., a British subject. Before they became due, B. authorized A. by letter to sell the bank shares, in order to reimburse himself against the bills. Before the letter arrived, A. had stopped payment, and afterwards became bankrupt, and the bills were dishonoured: B. also afterwards became bankrupt. C., by process in the foreign country, attached the bank shares standing in the name of A. for the debts due to him on the bills; and the court there decreed that the bank shares should be sold, and the proceeds should be applied first to pay a debt due from B. to A., and afterwards to retire the bills. Under this decree C. received a certain sum of money on account of the bills:—Held, that the assignees of A. could not recover such sum back, as money belonging to B. Cazenove v. Prevost, 5 B. & A. 70.

A judgment creditor of G. obtained a judge's order attaching the debts due from the garnishee, and ordering the latter to attend and shew cause why he should not pay the judgment creditor the debt due to G. The only claim of G. against the garnishee was on a contract for the sale of goods, by which the garnishee had undertaken to give bills payable at certain periods not elapsed. The garnishee, without waiting for any further order, gave the judgment creditor his promissory note for the amount becoming due to G., payable by instalments, and paid one instalment after notice of an act of bankruptcy by G. :—Held, that the order and note and payment were no answer to an action by G.'s assignees against the garnishee on his original contract with G. Turner v. Jones, 1 H. & N. 878 ; 26 L. J., Ex. 262.

From the time of the service upon a garnishee of an ex parte order of attachment, under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 62, the debt due to the judgment debtor is bound in the hands of the garnishee, but subject to 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 184, for the distribution of the bankrupt's property. Holmes v. Tutton, 5 El. & Bl. 65 ; 24 L. J., Q. B. 346 ; 1 Jur., N. S. 975.

e. Mortgages.

If a mortgagor in possession becomes bankrupt, and the mortgagee gives notice to the tenants to pay him the by-gone rents, a payment to the mortgagee is good against the assignees of the mortgagor. Pope v. Biggs, 9 B. & C. 245.

M., a trader engaged in extensive concerns, was in perilous circumstances, and likely to become bankrupt, although not suspected, from January, 1831, to January, 1832, when he actually became bankrupt. Among others, he owed his son 12,000*l.*, which debt, upon his son's marriage, was settled on the son's wife. In May, 1831, some of M.'s property in Middlesex was released from mortgage, and M., at the request of his son, on the 1st July, 1831, conveyed it to the trustees under his son's marriage settlement, as a security for or in discharge of the debt due from him to his son. The transfer was not registered or otherwise made public till after M.'s bankruptcy. A jury having found that it was not made voluntarily by way of fraudulent preference, or in contemplation of bankruptcy, the court refused to grant a new trial. Belcher v. Prittie, 4 M. & Scott, 295 ; 10 Bing. 408.

On a suit instituted by the assignees of a bankrupt mortgagor for payment of the surplus of the proceeds of the mortgaged property, which had been sold by transferees of the mortgage :—Held, that the transferees were entitled to tack a debt insufficiently secured by a previous mortgage of other property made to them directly, although they took the transfer after and with notice of the adjudication of bankruptcy. Selby v. Pomfret, 3 De G., F. & J. 595.

A trader, being indebted to the defendant in 570*l.* upon a balance of account for goods, and being pressed for payment, as an inducement for forbearance executed a deed by which he mortgaged to the defendant the public-house in which he carried on his business, and assigned to him his trade and other fixtures, with a covenant for payment, with interest, by instalments, the period for payment extending over several months, and a proviso that on payment of the instalments the deed was to be void, but on default the defendant might enter and sell. He continued his business, receiving supplies of goods and advances from the defendant, and making various payments to creditors, until he became bankrupt :—Held, that the deed was not void as a fraudulent preference, for even if made in contemplation of bankruptcy, it was not voluntary, but procured by pressure on the part of the defendant. Hale v. Allnutt, 18 C. B. 505 ; 25 L. J., C. P. 267 ; 2 Jur., N. S. 904.

If the deed had been made with a view to give the defendant a fraudulent preference, the trader being uninfluenced by the pressure, it would have been void, notwithstanding the pressure ; but as the pressure exercised some influence on his mind, there was no fraudulent preference. Id.

A solicitor paid off with his own money a mortgage debt on a client's property, which was thereupon re-conveyed to the client. The solicitor took the title-deeds by way of equitable mortgage, with a written memorandum. Afterwards he induced another client to advance a smaller sum on a proposed mortgage of the property. The money was paid to the solicitor by the second client, and a mortgage was prepared for execution by the first client, who, however, never executed it, nor was aware of the intended security. The title-deeds were kept by the solicitor apart from other deeds of the mortgagor, but were not placed in any box of the proposed mortgagee. On the solicitor becoming bankrupt :—Held, that the second client had a valid security on the property as against the assignees, and the property having been sold by arrangement :—Held, that he was entitled to be paid his principal and interest and costs in priority to any claim on the part of the assignees in respect of the residue of the sum secured. Hirtzel, Ex parte, 3 De G. & J. 464.

f. Delivery of Bills or Cheques as Security.

Where a bankrupt, seven days before his bankruptcy, deposited a bill by way of security with a party, without indorsing it, for a valuable consideration, an order was made that the bankrupt should indorse it, no question being raised as to its being a fraudulent preference. Rhodes, Ex parte, 2 Deac. 394 ; 3 Mont. & Ayr. 207.

A. desired leave to place certain long bills in B.'s hands, and to be allowed permission to draw, without renewal, bills of shorter dates, and desired B. to calculate the sum to be drawn for, allowing commission ; and the long bills indorsed by A. were inclosed to B. in the same letter. B. answered, that, agreeably to A.'s wishes, he had discounted the bills, and then specified the amount to be drawn for. This transaction is not an exchange or sale of bills upon discount, but a deposit of the long bills, on condition of being allowed to draw shorter bills ; and B., having accepted A.'s bills, and such acceptances being dishonoured in consequence of B.'s bankruptcy, and the long bills having remained in specie in B.'s hands at the time of his bankruptcy, and B.'s assignees having afterwards received the value of them, A. may recover the amount of them as money had and received to his use. Parke v. Eliason, 1 East, 544.

A. sold goods to B., for which the latter was to pay by a bill at three months ; B. gave a cheque on his bankers (who were also the bankers of A.) requiring them to pay A. on demand, in a bill at three months ; A. paid the cheque to the bankers, and took no bill from them; but the amount was transferred in the bankers' books from B.'s account to A.'s with the knowledge of both; the bankers failed before the cheques became due:—Held, that A. could not recover the value of the goods against B. Bolton v. Richard, 6 T. R. 139; 1 Esp. 106.

A trader, in contemplation of bankruptcy and without solicitation, put three cheques in the hands of his clerk, to be delivered to a creditor at the counting-house of the latter; but, before they were delivered, the creditor called upon the trader, and demanded payment of his debt:—Held, that the intention to give a voluntary preference not having been consummated, this was a valid payment. Bayley v. Ballard, 1 Camp. 416.

A trader, in a state of insolvency, and concealing himself from his general creditors, after a secret act of bankruptcy, in part payment of a debt delivered a bill to a creditor who was acquainted with his place of retreat, and with whom he was in friendly communication:—Held, that this was not a payment protected by 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 82. Bagnall v. Andrews, 7 Bing. 217; 4 M. & P. 839.

A banker is not justified in paying the drafts of a person who has placed money in his hands, after he has notice of an act of bankruptcy committed by him. Verney v. Hankey. 2 T. R. 113.

Payment of a debt by a cheque may be a fraudulent preference. Simpson, Ex parte, 1 De Gex. 9; 14 L. J., Bk. 1; 8 Jur. 1150.

On Saturday, the 11th of September, 1841, the firm of H. & S., merchants, being in difficulties, determined, with the advice of their solicitor, to suspend payment on the following Monday. They accordingly, at about five o'clock on Saturday afternoon, sent to their bankers a written notice not to make any further payments. But about half-an-hour previously to their sending such notice, they drew on their bankers three cheques for various amounts, which they gave to three different creditors, one of whom was brother to H. & S.'s confidential clerk, and another a cousin of Mr. H., and the third their solicitor, and neither of whom appeared to have previously pressed for immediate payment. Each of the cheques was received and cashed before the notice not to make further payments was sent to the bank. H. & S. never resumed payment, and were ultimately declared bankrupts:—Held, that these payments were made by way of fraudulent preference, and constituted an act of bankruptcy. Id.

Securities given by an uncertificated bankrupt to a creditor, for debts contracted subsequently to and without notice of the bankruptcy, will be valid as against his assignees. Casneau, In re, 2 Jur., N. S. 157.

A. agreed with B. to purchase goods, and pay for them three days after delivery. The goods were delivered, and on the third day, A. being unable to pay, B. drew a bill of exchange on A. at two months for their price, which A. himself promised to discount the following week. B. retained the bill in his own hands and did not dispose of it. B. continuing to press A. for payment, A., on the 10th of November, signed a paper, requesting a creditor of his to pay the amount of his debt to B. On the 19th of November, being the day on which the bill fell due, A. was adjudicated a bankrupt on his own petition. The creditor having paid the sum to A.'s assignees, B. claimed the money. The evidence shewing to the satisfaction of the court that the bill was given only as a security, that there was no intention to depart from the terms of the original contract, and that pressure had been put upon A.:—Held, that the signing of the paper was not an act of fraudulent preference, and that B. was entitled to the debt. Seals, Ex parte, 10 L. T. 315—L. J.

g. Delivery of Goods as Security.

The facts that the debtor, being pressed for payment by one creditor, and being unable to pay him, went to another creditor, and, declaring that he must close his shop unless he could sell his stock, induced him to accept an assignment of his stock, partly for the debt already due to him, and partly for a fresh advance, do not constitute evidence of a fraudulent preference of such creditor, nor of any fraudulent intent, so as to invalidate the assignment as against the creditors under a subsequent bankruptcy. Hell v. Simpson, 2 H. & N. 410; 26 L. J., Ex. 363.

Where the act of delivering goods by a trader to secure the defendant, who was under acceptances for him, payable at a future day, was clearly not voluntary on the trader's part, but made in consequence of the urgency of the defendant (evidenced by the proposal for giving such security originating with him), it is immaterial to consider whether the trader had his bankruptcy in contemplation at the time; nor will the transaction, being bona fide and not colourable, be impeached by the secrecy with which the delivery was made by the trader, in order to save his own credit in the view of the world. Crosby v. Crouch, 11 East, 256; 2 Camp. 166.

When a trader, being pressed by a creditor for payment or security, one or other of which he said he would have, gave a bill of sale of certain wools and cloths in a mill, apparently the whole of his stock, and immediately left his business and home, and became a bankrupt; this, inasmuch as the act done did not redeem the trader, even from any present difficulty, which is the ordinary motive for such an act when really done under the pressure of a threat, is evidence that it was not done under such pressure, but voluntarily, and with a view to prefer the particular creditor, in contemplation of bankruptcy; and is therefore void against the other creditors of the bankrupt. Thornton v. Hargreaves, 7 East, 544.

A trader may make a transfer of his goods, on the eve of bankruptcy, to a creditor who compels him so to do by any threat; but a voluntary and fraudulent preference is an act moving from the trader, whereby he elicits to favour a particular creditor. Reed v. Ayton, Holt, 503.

If a bankrupt, on the eve of his bankruptcy, fraudulently delivers goods to one of his creditors, the assignees may disaffirm the contract, and recover the value of the goods in trover; but if they bring assumption, they affirm the contract, and then the creditor may set off his debt. Smith v. Hobson, 4 T. R. 211.

Whether a trader in embarrassed circumstances, who delivers goods to a creditor in discharge of his debt, does it in contemplation of bankruptcy, is a question of fact for the jury. Fidgen v. Sharpe, 5 Taunt. 359; 1 Rose, 153; 1 Marsh. 196.

An assignment of goods at sea as a collateral security for a debt, and a subsequent indorsement of a bill of lading, are good as against the assignees of the assignor, who committed an act of bankruptcy between the assignment of the goods and the indorsement of the bill of lading. Lempriere v. Pasley, 2 T. R. 485.

D., a captain of a vessel belonging to the defendant, entered into an agreement with the defendant, under which he was to have command of the vessel for a voyage to India and back, and to have for his own use the cabin accommodation for passengers, for which he was to pay the owner a certain sum. For purposes of his own D. abandoned the ship before her arrival in India, whereupon the command was assumed by F., the chief mate; after D. had left the ship, he wrote to F., giving him directions as to the disposal of certain property of his then on board. The owner, as soon as he became acquainted with the fact of D. having quitted the ship, wrote to F., confirming him in the command, and desiring him to retain everything on board belonging to D., who was largely indebted to him. D. returned to England, and on the 18th October, 1834, at the instance of the defendant, wrote him the following letter:—"I hereby authorize and request you to keep possession of all cabin furniture and other property of mine on board the Bolton, when she arrives, and to place the value of the same to the credit of my account with you." On the 18th December, a fiat issued against D. upon an act of bankruptcy committed by him on the 2nd. The vessel arrived in London on the 5th December:—Held, that the defendant had such a possession of the goods before the bankruptcy as to entitle him to retain them as against D.'s assignees, by virtue of the authority of the 18th October. Belcher v. Oldfield, 8 Scott, 221; 6 Bing. N. C. 102.

h. Goods returned by Bankrupt to Seller.

A trader ordered bags of wool of the defendants (merchants) in December, which were delivered 19th February following; and by the course of dealing, the trader had the option of returning the wool, for which he had no call, though previously ordered. The trader being from home when the bags were delivered, on his return, the same day, he gave directions not to have them opened or entered in his books, but only weighed off to see that they agreed with the invoice, he being then in embarrassed circumstances, and intending not to take them into the account of his stock, if he found himself unable to pursue his business. On the 4th and 5th of March, being then insolvent, he returned the bags with a letter declaring his situation, and hoping they would not object to take back the wool, and requesting a line of approbation thereof; which approbation was given, after an act of bankruptcy committed the same day the letter was sent:—Held, that by the trader keeping possession of the goods so long, his option (which ought to have been exercised on the receipt of them) was gone; and that being in a state of insolvency and on the eve of bankruptcy, he had not the power of restoring the goods to the vendors, and that the assignees were entitled to the property. Neate v. Ball, 2 East, 117.

A trader ordered goods from the country, to be sent to another place for the purpose of being afterwards sent to his correspondent abroad, which was the usual course of his dealing; it was competent for him, upon his becoming insolvent, but before an act of bankruptcy, to agree bonâ fide to give up the goods to the defendants from whom they were ordered, upon a claim of right of stoppage in transitu; and the circumstance of the trader having called a meeting of his creditors, and taken legal advice, and being encouraged by the result of such meeting and advice to give up the goods, was evidence for the jury to find that they were given up bonâ fide, and not from any motive of voluntary and undue preference to the defendants, though done by him in a situation of impending bankruptcy at the time. Dixon v. Baldwin, 5 East, 175.

A. purchased goods of B. on October 8th, for the purpose of exportation; but finding that he must stop payment, and that he could not apply the goods to the purpose for which they were bought, he returned them to B. on October 16th. On the 17th he stopped payment; but expecting remittances from abroad more than sufficient to pay his debts, had no doubt but his creditors would give him time; they however refusing, he was made bankrupt on November 2nd. In an action by the assignees against B. for the value of the goods:—Held, that the jury was warranted in finding, that the delivery of the goods to B. was not made in contemplation of bankruptcy. Fidgion v. Sharp, 1 Marsh, 196; 2 Rose, 153; 5 Taunt. 539.

Where a sale of goods has been completed by actual delivery to the buyer, who afterwards becomes insolvent before they are paid for, he cannot rescind the contract, and return the goods, with the consent of the seller, so as to give the seller a preference to his other creditors. Barnes v. Freeland, 6 T. R. 80.

If the consignee of goods, upon discovering his insolvency, gives notice to the wharfinger not to deliver the consignment, the goods remain in the consignor. Bartram v. Farebrother, 4 Bing. 579; 1 M. & P. 515.

i. Warrants of Attorney.

On an issue, whether a warrant of attorney was given by way of fraudulent preference, and therefore not protected, in order to shew such warrant of attorney was given in contemplation of bankruptcy, it is not necessary to shew that any particular act of bankruptcy was in contemplation, or that the giver had in view the approaching distribution of his property under the bankrupt laws. Aldred v. Constable, 4 Q. B. 674; 12 L. J., Q. B. 253; 7 Jur. 509.

Evidence that the giver of the warrant of attorney had in view approaching imprisonment for debt and insolvency, is evidence for the jury that he gave it in contemplation of bankruptcy. Id.

j. Partnership Transactions.

A payment by a partner, who has committed an act of bankruptcy, of a partnership debt due before the bankruptcy, to a creditor who has notice of the act of bankruptcy, was not protected by 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 82. Craven v. Edmonson, 6 Bing. 734; 4 M. & P. 623.

Where two partners have stopped payment, and a commission of bankruptcy is taken out against one of them, a debtor to the firm, who knows of the stoppage, cannot refuse to pay money due to them, on the ground that the other may have committed an act of bankruptcy; in which case his assignees might call upon the debtor to pay a moiety of the money a second time. Prickett v. Dowd, 3 Camp. 131; 1 Rose, 224.

A., B., C. & D. were partners in a banking house at Liverpool, and C. & D. also carried on a separate mercantile concern in London; S., having accepted bills payable at the house of C. & D., employed A., B., C. & D. to get them paid accordingly, and agreed to deposit with them good bills, indorsed by him, for the purpose of enabling them so to do. A., B., C. & D. debited S. in account for his acceptances, and credited him for all the bills which he deposited; some of the bills so deposited by S. were remitted by A., B., C. & D., upon the general account between the two houses; and before any of the acceptances of S. became due, both houses failed, and S. was obliged to pay his own acceptances:—Held, that the assignees of C. & D. were entitled to retain against S. the bills remitted to them by A., B., C. & D. Bolton v. Fuller, 1 B. & P. 539.

Held also that it made no difference that one of the bills remitted did not arrive in London till after the bankruptcy of C. & D., though sent by A., B., C. & D. before that event. Ib.

Where one of two partners, who were country bankers, became bankrupt, and the defendants, being holders of their notes, obtained payment of part of them from the London banker at whose house they were payable, out of the funds in their hands belonging to the country bank, and the solvent partner, knowing of the bankruptcy, procured a debtor to the firm to give his bill in part satisfaction of his debt, and indorsed and delivered the same to the defendants, in payment of the residue of the notes in their hands, and afterwards became bankrupt, and no fraud was stated:—Held, that the assignees could not recover the money so paid to them by the London banker, nor the proceeds of the bill. Harvey v. Crickett, 5 M. & S. 336.

If one of two partners becomes bankrupt, the solvent partner may, for a valuable consideration and without fraud, dispose of the partnership effects; and if he afterwards fails, the assignees, under a joint commission against both, cannot maintain trover against the bona fide vendee of such partnership effects. For v. Hanbury, Cowp. 445.

Where one of two partners in trade had, after an act of bankruptcy, accepted a bill in the name of the firm, without the privity of his co-partner:—Held, that in the hands of an innocent indorsee it was an available security. Lacy v. Woolcott, 2 D. & R. 458.

After the bankruptcy of one of two joint owners of goods, the solvent joint owner may authorize the sale of the goods, and the broker who sells pursuant to such authority may set it up as a defence in an action by the assignees of the joint owner, who has become bankrupt, under the plea of non detinet. Morgan v. Marquis, 9 Ex. 145; 2 C. L. R. 276; 23 L. J., Ex. 21.

The circumstance that the broker was in the first instance employed by the bankrupt, and had no knowledge of any other person being interested in the goods, is immaterial; nor is the broker estopped from setting up the joint ownership by having sent to the assignees an account in which the goods were stated to have been sold for the bankrupt alone. Ib.

A., after the bankruptcy of his partner B., believing the firm to be solvent, paid in partnership money to C., their banker, to meet current engagements, and the money was so applied. A. afterwards became bankrupt also. This payment is valid, and C. is not liable for the amount to the assignees of B. and of A. Woodbridge v. Swann, 1 N. & M. 725; 4 B. & Ad. 633.

One of two partners, after committing an act of bankruptcy, handed over a bank post bill and some silver to the agent of the drawer of a bill of exchange accepted by the partners, and which was just about to become due, for the purpose of protecting such bill. Such handing over was found a fraudulent preference, and to have been in contemplation of bankruptcy. On the same day, but a few hours later than the time of handing over the note and the money, the other partner committed an act of bankruptcy:—Held, that the act of the partner who had committed the act of bankruptcy before he handed over the property was not binding, and that the assignees of the two partners might recover the value of the property. Burt v. Moulst, 1 C. & M. 525; 3 Tyr. 564.

After an act of bankruptcy committed by one partner, the other delivered goods of their joint property to a creditor for a joint debt, and died; and afterwards a commission issued against the surviving partner:—Held, that the creditor, by virtue of such delivery by the solvent partner, became tenant in common of the goods with the assignees of the bankrupt, by relation back of the act of bankruptcy, which was in the lifetime of the solvent partner, and consequently that the assignees could not maintain trover against such creditor. Smith v. Oriell, 1 East, 368.

Money paid by one partner to another, before the bankruptcy of the latter, for the purpose of being paid over as his liquidated share of a debt to their joint creditor, if it is not so applied, is provable as a debt under the commission of the bankrupt partner, although the solvent partner was not called upon to repay the debt to the joint creditor till after the bankruptcy of the other. Wright v. Hunter, 1 East, 20; 5 Ves. 792.

After an act of bankruptcy committed by one of two partners, joint effects were sent away, which came to the defendant's hands; then the solvent partner died, leaving the defendant his executor; and afterwards a commission of bankruptcy was taken out against the surviving partner, and his estate assigned to the plaintiffs:—Held, that they were tenants in common with the solvent partner, and after his decease, with his representatives, by relation of law from the act of bankruptcy, and could therefore maintain trover against the defendant claiming under such solvent partner. Smith v. Stokes, 1 East, 363.

A trustee, with the consent of his cestui que trust, pledged Madras government notes held by him in trust for the benefit of a firm of which he was a partner. The notes were afterwards redeemed, and delivered to the firm. Subsequently the firm, without the consent of the cestui que trust, pledged them for a similar purpose. The firm being insolvent and bankruptcy imminent, the trustee redeemed the notes with partnership assets, indorsed them to himself personally, and replaced them in his private chest. The firm became bankrupt:—Held, that there was no fraudulent preference. Sinclair v. Wilson, 20 Beav. 324; 24 L. J., Ch 537; 1 Jur., N. S. 967.

k. Seizing Debtor's Goods.

A railway company contracted with R., that he should build a bridge for the company on the railway; he was to provide instruments and materials; and, if the company's architect considered that R. did not proceed with expedition, the company, on seven days' notice, might employ other workmen, and, in that case, might use the implements and materials of R., which, for the time being, should be used by him about the works; and he was to repay all additional expenses. The company was to have a lien on the implements and materials which should be upon the ground whereon the bridge was to be built, as a security for the completion of the works, R. undertaking to execute such deeds as counsel for the company should advise for confirming the lien. A fiat issued against R. on 31st July, on which day the company took possession of the implements and materials used by him. On the 1st of August, the company gave notice as provided in the contract; on the 2nd of August, they commenced completing the bridge, and, in so doing, used some of the materials, and detained the rest:—Held, that the agreement was lawful, not being made in contemplation of bankruptcy. Hawthorn v. Newcastle-on-Tyne and North Shields Railway Company, 3 Q. B. 734, n.; 2 Railw. Cas. 288.

Held, secondly, that the company was not entitled to use the implements and materials till the expiration of the seven days' notice, and that the previous use was a conversion. Id.

Held, thirdly, that they were entitled to a lien upon all such implements and materials used, as were upon any land possessed by the company, on which the building of the bridge was, in a popular sense, being carried on; but not to a lien upon the materials of a temporary railway constructed for bringing articles to the bridge from an adjoining river, nor to a crane at the end of such temporary railway, not being on the company's land. Id.

Held, fourthly, that these rights of the company were not invalidated by the possession of the bankrupt, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 72, he being the true owner; nor by other implements and materials so used having been removed without any objection from the company's architect, the lien being a shifting one, and attaching to such articles as were brought from time to time, and ceasing as to such only as were removed; nor by the implements and materials not being scheduled. Id.

By an agreement between a guarantee society and H., after reciting that he was about to enter the service of a gas company, the society agreed with him to indemnify the company to the extent of 250*l.* against any loss that might occur through his dishonesty, and he agreed with the society that if they should receive any notice of any irregularity, default or claim intended to be made under the guarantee, it should be lawful for them by their officers, or any person authorized by them, to enter his house, and take possession of his goods; and, in case they should be called upon to make any payment under the guarantee, to sell the goods for their own indemnification. The guarantee was given accordingly, and H. having afterwards been guilty of dishonest conduct, the gas company called upon the society to pay the sum guaranteed. Thereupon the society, and the company by their authority, entered and seized his goods. Meanwhile he had committed an act of bankruptcy, but of that, at the time of entry and seizure, neither the society nor the gas company had notice. He was subsequently adjudicated bankrupt, and his assignees brought an action for the entry and seizure against the guarantee society and gas company:—Held, that the agreement, and the entry and seizure of his goods under its provisions, constituted a transaction with the bankrupt protected by 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 133, and that his assignees were not entitled to recover. Krehl v. Great Central Gas Company, 5 L. R., Ex. 289; 39 L. J., Ex. 197; 23 L. T. 72; 18 W. R. 1035.

l. Other Cases.

Under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 133, contracts, dealings, and all transactions entered into with a bankrupt bonâ fide before the fiat and the filing of the petition, are valid, notwithstanding a prior act of bankruptcy, provided the party to the transaction with the bankrupt had not notice of the act of bankruptcy. Brewin v. Short, 5 El. & Bl. 227; 24 L. J., Q. B. 297; 1 Jur., N. S. 798.

Under the same section, any act by the owner of goods in the possession of the bankrupt, which, if done before the act of bankruptcy, would have prevented the application of s. 125, is a transaction within s. 133, if done without notice of an act of bankruptcy. As if the owner demanded from the bankrupt possession of the goods. Id.

But where the owner, knowing that it was intended by the trader to execute an assignment of all his goods for the benefit of his creditors, went to take possession, but found the assignee under the assignment, which was an act of bankruptcy, in possession, and, upon stating why he came, was told by the assignee that he was too late, for that the assignee was in possession under the assignment, and the trader afterwards was made bankrupt:—Held, not to be within the protection of sect. 133, nothing appearing before the notice of the assignment beyond an intention to demand the goods. Id.

S., being indebted to the defendant, executed to him as security a bill of sale of his goods. Afterwards, on the 12th February, 1863, S., in whose apparent order and disposition the goods remained, was arrested and went to prison. On the 16th the defendant, knowing that S. had been arrested, left notice demanding repayment with S.'s wife, and immediately afterwards took possession of the goods, and sold them. On the 18th the defendant petitioned the Court of Bankruptcy in formâ pauperis, and on the 23rd was brought up to the county court, and adjudicated a bankrupt:—Held, that under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 103, the adjudication, though made upon the 23rd, had relation back to the 12th, the date of the committal of S. to prison, and that the goods being then in his apparent order and disposition, with the consent of the true owner, passed to the assignees, s. 133 of the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, affording no protection in such a case. Bramwell v. Eglinton, 5 B. & S. 39; 33 L. J., Q. B. 130; 10 Jur., N. S. 583; 12 W. R. 551; 10 L. T. 295. Affirmed, 1 L. R., Q. B. 494; 35 L. J., Q. B. 163; 7 B. & S. 537—Ex. Ch.

Held, also, that, assuming the defendant to have been premature in taking possession of the goods under the bill of sale immediately after demand for payment and non-compliance therewith, there was nothing to prevent him from taking possession after the lapse of a reasonable time before the 23rd of February, the date of the bankruptcy. Id.

A trader took possession of goods under an agreement with the owner that he should keep possession for a twelvemonth on payment of a certain sum; but if the money was not paid on a certain day, the owner should be at liberty to retake them. The goods continued in the possession of the trader until the stipulated time for payment, when, the money not having been paid, the owner sold them after an act of bankruptcy committed by the trader, but before the fiat issued:—Held, that this was a transaction protected by 2 & 3 Vict. c. 29, s. 1. Young v. Hope, 2 Ex. 105.

A., a trader, on the 2nd October, gave B., one of his creditors, an order for money drawn by a board of guardians of the poor on their treasurer, payable to A., but not to bearer or order. On the 4th October A. committed an act of bankruptcy, of which B. had notice on the 5th. On the 9th, the treasurer paid B. the amount of the order. A fiat issued against A. on the 22nd November:—Held, that A.'s assignees could not recover the amount of the order, as this was a transaction protected by 2 & 3 Vict. c. 29, s. 1, and that the transaction was, so far as the bankrupt was concerned, complete on the 2nd October. Green v. Bradfield, 1 C. & K. 449.

Where a bankrupt, whose property had been seized in execution, with a view of protecting himself, sent to request a friendly creditor, but who knew nothing of his being in bankrupt circumstances, to issue execution against him, which was done accordingly:—Held, that the transaction was not protected or rendered valid by 2 & 3 Vict. c. 29, s. 1. Hall v. Wallace, 7 M. & W. 353; 5 Jur. 198.

Giving cash for a bank post bill was a payment within the protection, extended by 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 82, to all payments really and bona fide made to any bankrupt before the commission. Willis v. Bank of England, 4 A. & E. 21; 5 N. & M. 478.

Payment of bills to support the credit of a declining trader, without notice of any act of bankruptcy, is not fraudulent. Foxcroft v. Devonshire, 2 Burr. 931; 1 W. Bl. 193.

On the 29th December, 1842, A. distrained for 120*l.* for rent due to him from B. at Michaelmas, the goods of B. being then in the possession of C., to whom they had been conveyed by deed on the 13th December, in trust for B.'s creditors. On the 3rd January, 1843, it was agreed between A. and C. that the rent should be paid, A. consenting to forego the quarter's rent due at Christmas. The goods were accordingly appraised and condemned at 136*l.*, being the amount of the rent and expenses, and that sum was handed over to A. On the 9th January a fiat issued against B., the act of bankruptcy being the execution of the deed:—Held, that so much of the sum paid to A. as exceeded a year's rent was not money received to the use of the assignees. Lackington v. Elliott, 7 M. & G. 538; 8 Scott, N. R. 275; 13 L. J., C. P. 153; 8 Jur. 695.

The true owner of goods, in the order and disposition of a bankrupt at the time of the act of bankruptcy may, at any time before the filing of the petition, not having notice of the act of bankruptcy (even though in contemplation of bankruptcy), remove the goods out of the bankrupt's possession, and retain the same as against the assignees; and although the assignees afterwards obtain an order from the court for the sale of the goods, such order, being ex parte, does not bind the true owner; nor can they, under such circumstances, maintain an action against him, whose removal of the goods is a dealing or transaction protected under s. 133. Graham v. Furber, 2 C. L. R. 10; 14 C. B. 134; 23 L. J., C. P. 10; 18 Jur. 61.

A. and B., brothers, partners in trade, and B. being indebted to the partnership, B. borrowed 500*l.* from a loan company, which was secured by a bond of C. (the uncle of A. and B.) and two other persons, and by a policy of assurance on B.'s life. Of this sum B. paid 400*l.* into the partnership funds. B. afterwards executed a warrant of attorney in favour of C., to indemnify him against the consequences of the bond. B. having made default in payment of the premiums on the policy, the company called on C. for payment under this bond; whereupon C. entered up judgment on the warrant of attorney against B., and issued a fi. fa. which was levied on the partnership effects on the 5th August, 1840. At that time A. and B. were in a state of hopeless insolvency. On the 7th August, another fi. fa., at the suit of another creditor, was issued against B., and levied on the partnership effects. On the 8th August, A., in the name of the partnership, indorsed and delivered to C., on account of his claim against B., bills of exchange drawn by A. and B. for 81*l.*, which were paid at maturity; and on the 10th, A. paid to C., on the same account out of the moneys of the firm, a further sum of 80*l.* in cash. On the 11th a docket was struck against A. and B., and on the 12th a fiat issued against them, grounded on an act of bankruptcy committed on the 5th August, and on the 13th they were adjudged bankrupts:—Held, that the assignees were entitled to recover from C. the amount of the payments made to him on the 8th and 10th August, and that these were not protected by 2 & 3 Vict. c. 29, s. 1, not being payments really and bona fide made, even though C. was assumed to have received them without notice of the bankruptcy. Turquand v. Vanderplank, 10 M. & W. 180; 12 L. J., Ex. 132.

After notice of trial given in an action on a bill of exchange, the defendant obtained an order for a commission to examine witnesses abroad, on payment into court of a portion of the claim. The money was paid in accordingly, but the commission was not acted on. The defendant having subsequently become bankrupt, and assignees appointed, the plaintiff obtained leave to proceed with the action, which was tried, and the defendant not appearing, a verdict was given for the plaintiff:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the money which had been paid into court, and that he was not deprived of this right by 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 184. Murray v. Arnold, 3 B. & S. 287; 32 L. J., Q. B. 11; 9 Jur., N. S. 461; 7 L. T. 385; 11 W. R. 147.

Money paid into court, under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, s. 2, was not a payment to a creditor within the protection of 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 82. Ferrall v. Alexander, 1 D. P. C. 132.

Payments out of court to a plaintiff under 43 Geo. 3, c. 43, s. 2, were protected against the assignees. Reynolds v. Wedd, 4 Bing. N. C. 694; 6 D. P. C. 728; 6 Scott, 699; 1 Arn. 230; 2 Jur. 495.

A., being a trader, before any act of bankruptcy, directed his broker, who had authority to distrain for rents due to him, to pay a certain sum to B. in satisfaction of a debt, and the broker bonâ fide agreed with B. to pay him as soon as he received the rents, and after this A. became bankrupt :—Held, that the assignees of A. could not recover this sum from the broker, though he did not in fact pay it over to B. till after the commission issued. Bedford v. Perkins, 3 C. & P. 90.

2. UNDER THE BANKRUPTCY ACT, 1869.

a. Fraudulent Conveyances.

i. What are.

a. Assignments of Debtor's Property.

See also ante, IV., ACT OF BANKRUPTCY.

When Creditor entitled to have set aside.]—The result of the authorities decided upon 13 Eliz. c. 5, is, first, that where a debt contracted antecedently to the settlement exists, a subsequent creditor has the same rights as an antecedent creditor would have against the settlor; and secondly, that whether or not the settlor had any intention to defraud his creditors, a creditor having a debt existing at the date of the settlement, has a right to have the settlement set aside if the ultimate effect of it is to delay or defraud him with regard to his debt. Freeman v. Pope, 39 L. J. Ch. 148. Affirmed, 5 L. R., Ch. 538; 39 L. J., Ch. 689; 21 L. T. 816; 18 W. R. 906—C. A.

A bill of sale of all the grantor's then existing and after-acquired property, by way of mortgage to secure an existing debt and future advances, is not necessarily void under the statute 13 Eliz. c. 5. It will only be void if it is not made bonâ fide, i.e., if it is a mere cloak for retaining a benefit to the grantor. Nor, if the time be past within which the execution of the deed is an act of bankruptcy, available for adjudication against the grantor, or within which the deed can be set aside as a fraudulent preference, can it be treated as void under the bankruptcy law. Games, Ex parte, Bamford, In re, 12 Ch. D. 314; 40 L. T. 789; 27 W. R. 744—C. A.

The defendant received from M., a member of a trading firm, a bill of lading for brandy, for the purpose of landing and warehousing it, which he did, entering the brandy at M.'s request in his own name and paying charges amounting to 47*l.* Afterwards, and whilst he still had the bill of lading in his possession, an acceptance which had been given by the firm to the defendant for 245*l.* for the hire of a ship falling due, and the firm not being able to meet it, the defendant consented to take M.'s acceptance at seven days for a balance of account, including the hire and the 47*l.*, upon receiving M.'s authority to sell the brandy if the bills were not met. This acceptance not being met, the defendant sold the brandy. The firm was afterwards adjudicated bankrupt, and the trustee sued the defendant in trover for the value of the brandy. The transaction was bonâ fide, but the brandy formed in fact the whole property of the firm :—Held, that although the transaction under which the defendant obtained power to sell the brandy might be a "conveyance, gift, delivery or transfer" within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 6, sub-s. 2, it was not fraudulent within the meaning of the act, because the defendant's consent to give the bankrupt seven days' time to pay the debts due, taking his acceptance at seven days, was an equivalent for the power of sale given to the defendant. Philps v. Hornstedt, 1 Ex. D. 62—Ex. Ch. Affirming, 8 L. R., Ex. 26; 42 L. J., Ex. 12; 21 W. R. 174.

When an unregistered bill of sale of goods has been given to B. by A. and kept secret, and not acted upon, and subsequently the goods have been sold to a purchaser, and the proceeds of the goods paid to B., the payment to B. cannot be set aside, although A. was insolvent at the time, and bankruptcy followed shortly afterwards. Wilson, Ex parte, 29 L. T. 860; 22 W. R. 241—L. J.

The purchaser at the same time bought the bankrupt's stock-in-trade, being nearly all the rest of his property, and gave a bill of exchange for the price. This bill was handed to B. for the benefit of the creditors, but not indorsed to him :—Held, that the whole transaction was not an assignment of the bankrupt's whole property for the benefit of his creditors. Id.

Private Arrangement not Binding on Creditors.]—W. was a partner in the firm of W. & Co. and also carried on another business separately from the partnership on his own private account. W.'s private transactions in the latter business involved him in irretrievable losses, the other partners in the firm excluded him from their partnership, purchasing his share for 749*l.* 15*s.*, so as to prevent the partnership accounts being interfered with in the proceedings under W.'s prospective bankruptcy :—Held, that this arrangement between the partners, although within the terms of their deed of association, did not bind third parties, and that the trustee for the creditors of W. was entitled to an account of the partnership assets and profits. Warden, Ex parte, Williams, In re, 21 W. R. 51.

Retaking Possession.]—B. sold certain furniture, stock-in-trade, &c., together with the goodwill and book debts of her business as a baker to Y. for a certain price payable by quarterly instalments of 15*l.* each, subject to a proviso for B.'s retaking possession on default in payment of the instalments. Y. made default, and B. resumed possession on the 7th of November, 1870. Y. was adjudicated a bankrupt on the 24th November, 1871 :—Held, that the retaking of possession was not fraudulent or void as against the trustee in the bankruptcy. Batchelor, Ex parte, Young, In re, 20 W. R. 826.

Y. also made an assignment to B. of the whole of his (Y.'s) property in repayment of a subsisting debt; the deed was within twelve months of the adjudication :—Held, that the deed was fraudulent and void as against the trustee in bankruptcy. Id.

Dissolution of Partnership invalid.]—A partnership of two was dissolved, the outgoing partner assigning to the continuing partner all his share in the partnership assets, and the latter covenanting to pay the partnership debts. At the date of the assignment the firm was insolvent, as was also each of the partners. The firm being shortly afterwards adjudged bankrupt :—Held, that the transaction was void; that it did not operate as a conversion of the outgoing partner's property into the separate estate of the continuing partner; and that the whole of the property, as it existed belonging to the bankrupts at the date of the assignment, must still be considered as remaining the joint property, and must be administered and distributed as such under the bankruptcy among the joint creditors. Mayou, Ex parte, Edwards-Wood, In re, 4 De G., J. & S. 664.

Assignment on Demand pursuant to Agreement.—Two traders, brothers, obtained advances amounting to 500*l.* from their father and brother in various sums, and in 1870, on the last advance of 250*l.*, they signed an agreement that they would, on demand, assign the lease of their premises and their business, stock-in-trade, and book debts to the creditors, with a proviso that if they should repay the sums advanced the agreement should be void, but if they should fail to do so a valuation should be made, and the balance, if any, should be paid to the debtors. At the same time the lease was deposited with the same creditors as a security for the due performance of the agreement. In 1873, the debtors became embarrassed, and the creditors demanded the execution of an assignment in pursuance of the agreement, which was accordingly executed, and the balance of the valuation of the property, amounting to 123*l.*, was paid to the debtors. The assignment included substantially the whole of the debtor's property, and the creditors took possession of it forthwith. A few days afterwards the debtors filed a petition for liquidation, and the trustee applied to have the deed of assignment of 1873 declared void:—Held, that the agreement of 1870 became a binding security on demand being made, and that the assignment of 1873, being based upon it, was valid. Icard, Ex parte, Cook, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 271; 43 L. J., Bk. 31; 30 L. T. 7; 22 W. R. 342.

Consideration for.—A trader on the 28th of August executed a bill of sale of substantially the whole of his property to secure a debt for which the grantee had recovered judgment on the 3rd of July, and another debt which he owed the grantee. The grantor had on the 4th of July written a letter to the grantee, undertaking, in the event of his not issuing execution on the judgment, to execute to him on demand a bill of sale to secure the judgment debt and such other sums as he owed him. The grantee did not enter into any agreement not to enforce the judgment, but in fact he did not issue execution. On the 29th of August another creditor levied execution at the grantor's place of business, and on the 1st of September the grantor filed a liquidation petition. He had between the 4th of July and the 29th of August received by the carrying on of his business sums amounting to 10,000*l.*:—Held, that no equivalent had been given for the bill of sale, and that it was void as against the trustee in the liquidation. Cooper, Ex parte, Baum, In re, 10 Ch. D. 313; 48 L. J., Bk. 40; 39 L. T. 521; 27 W. R. 298—C. A.

Growing Crops.—A bill of sale of growing crops does not require registration under the Bills of Sale Act, 1854. Payne, Ex parte, Cross, In re, 11 Ch. D. 539; 40 L. T. 563; 27 W. R. 808—C. A. And see Brantom v. Griffiths, 2 C. P. D. 212; 46 L. J., C. P. 408; 36 L. T. 4; 29 W. R. 313—C. A.

On the 2nd of May a farmer executed a bill of sale of his furniture and growing crops, being the whole of his property, to P., the only consideration for it being the forbearance of P. to seize the property under a bill of sale given to him four months previously, as he alleged, for value, and not registered. On the 3rd of May the grantor gave a bill of sale of the same property to C. in consideration of a present advance of money. C. had no notice of P.'s bill of sale. Neither of the bills of sale was registered. C. took possession of the property on the 20th of August, and P. on the 23rd of August. On the 26th of August the grantor filed a liquidation petition, and on the 1st of October he was adjudicated a bankrupt:—Held, that P.'s bill of sale was void as against the trustee in bankruptcy of the grantor as an act of bankruptcy, and that C.'s bill of sale, so far as regarded the furniture, was also void as against the trustee for want of registration, notwithstanding the fact that he had no notice of the act of bankruptcy to which the trustee's title related back. Id.

But, as to the growing crops, held, that C.'s bill of sale was a protected transaction by virtue of ss. 94 and 95 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and was therefore good as against the trustee. Id.

The fact that a bill of sale is set aside as void against the trustee in bankruptcy of the grantor does not entitle the trustee to stand in the place of the grantee, and thus acquire priority over the grantee under a valid bill of sale subsequently executed by the grantor. Id.

Voluntary Settlements.—A settlor, at the time of making a voluntary settlement, made a statement of his assets and liabilities, shewing a balance in his favour. He was incurring heavy liabilities as managing director of a company, and from transactions on the Stock Exchange. Nine months after the date of the settlement he called a meeting of his creditors, and laid before them a statement shewing himself to be insolvent, and subsequently he became bankrupt:—Held, that the burden was upon him to shew solvency at the date of the settlement. Crossley v. Elworthy, 12 L. R., Eq. 158; 40 L. J., Ch. 480; 24 L. T. 607; 19 W. R. 842.

Semble, that damages recovered in an action commenced after the settlement for inducing the settlor to become a member of a company by false and fraudulent misrepresentations made previously to the settlement must be taken into consideration in estimating the settlor's solvency at the date of the settlement. Id.

A distribution by a debtor, when in a weak state of mind and of body, of the whole of his property among his children, partly in consideration of annuities for his life, partly by voluntary settlement, and partly by pecuniary gifts, is void as against creditors under 13 Eliz. c. 5, the children being aware at the time that the creditors' claims would be defeated, though the debtor had no such intention. Cornish v. Clark, 14 L. R., Eq. 184; 42 L. J., Ch. 14; 26 L. T. 494; 20 W. R. 897.

In the absence of an actual intent to defeat, delay, or hinder creditors, a voluntary settlement, made by a settlor in embarrassed circumstances, but having property not included in the settlement, ample for payment of the debts owing by him at the time of making it, may be supported against creditors, although debts due at the date of the settlement may to a considerable amount remain unpaid. Kent v. Riley, 14 L. R., Eq. 190; 41 L. J., Ch. 569; 27 L. T. 263; 20 W. R. 852.

A voluntary settlement whereby the settlor takes the bulk of his property out of the reach of his creditors, shortly before engaging in trade of a hazardous character, may be set aside in a suit on behalf of creditors who became such after the settlement, though there are no creditors whose debts arose before the date of the settlement, and though when the settlement was made it was doubtful whether the arrangements under which the settlor was to engage in the business would take effect. Mackay v. Douglas, 14 L. R. Eq. 106; 41 L. J., Ch. 539; 26 L. T. 721; 20 W. R. 652.

When a voluntary settlement is made on the eve of the settlor engaging in trade, the burden rests upon him of shewing that he was in a position to make it. Ib.

In order to set aside a voluntary settlement as being void as against creditors, it is not necessary to shew that the settlor contemplated becoming actually indebted. It is sufficient if he contemplated a state of things which might result in bankruptcy or insolvency. Ib.

A debtor is not entitled to set up, as a defence to a suit to set aside a voluntary settlement, a release contained in an inspectorship deed by which he vested all his property in the inspectors, the settlement or the existence of the property comprised in it not having been disclosed at the time the inspectorship deed was executed. Ib.

Where a clergyman, with an annual income of nearly 1,000*l.*, made in 1863 a voluntary settlement in favour of his god-daughter, and died in 1868 in insolvent circumstances, owing to his bankers the balance of a debt which had been contracted prior to the date of the settlement, a creditor, whose debt was contracted subsequently to the settlement, obtained a decree to set aside the settlement as fraudulent, within 13 Eliz. c. 5; although, having regard to the income and means of the settlor, the court was of opinion that in executing the settlement he had no intention whatever to cheat his creditors at that time. Ib.

A trader made a voluntary settlement of real estate which was subject to a mortgage, and covenanted with the trustees of the settlement to pay the interest on the mortgage, and, at their request, to pay off the principal of the mortgage debt. At the time of making the settlement the settlor was able to pay all his debts, exclusively of the mortgage debt, but not inclusive of it. He became bankrupt within ten days after the date of the settlement:—Held, that, inasmuch as the settlement comprised the whole estate, and not merely the equity of redemption, the settlement was void as against the trustee in bankruptcy under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 91. Huxtable, Ex parte, Conibeer, In re, 45 L. J., Bk. 59; 34 L. T. 605; 24 W. R. 685—C. A.

In 1858 a man, who was not then engaged in trade, and who owed no debts, made a voluntary settlement of 1,000*l.* The trusts of the deed were, a life estate to himself determinable on bankruptcy, then a life estate to his wife for her separate use, then trusts for the children of the marriage, and an ultimate remainder to the settlor. In 1873 he for the first time engaged in trade. In 1875 he was adjudicated a bankrupt:—Held, that the settlement was void in toto as against the trustee. Pearson, In re, Stephens, Ex parte, 3 Ch. D. 807; 35 L. T. 68; 25 W. R. 126.

A trader, doing business to the amount of 100,000*l.* per annum, executed two voluntary settlements in favour of his wife, the first being two years and the second one year before his death. By the first he settled two policies of assurance, each for 1,000*l.*; by the second he settled his furniture, worth about 1,000*l.* An inquiry into the state of his affairs having been directed, it was found that at the date of the first settlement his debts would have exceeded his assets by 1,293*l.*, and at the date of his second settlement his debts were 10,726*l.* over his assets. A bill was filed by a creditor, whose debt was contracted after the first, but before the second settlement, to set aside both deeds. No debt was proved to exist which had been contracted at the date of the first settlement:—Held, that as the settlor's debts exceeded his assets when both deeds were executed, he was then insolvent, and the deeds must be declared fraudulent and void as against the plaintiff and his other creditors. Taylor v. Coenen, 1 Ch. D. 636; 34 L. T. 18.

A term of years was bequeathed to the wife of one who was not then a trader. Subsequently he, while perfectly solvent, executed a deed purporting to convey all his interest in the term of years to his wife for her sole benefit. He then became a trader, and afterwards became bankrupt:—Held, that the deed was not void as against his assignees, who therefore were not entitled as of right to the term of years. Cross, In re, 19 W. R. 153.

Held, also, that as he, under 27 Eliz. c. 4 (1*r.*), could have defeated the deed by a subsequent conveyance for value, the assignees, if permitted by the court, could also defeat it; and that the court had power to direct the assignees to do so, but that, under the circumstances, the court would not exercise this power. Ib.

A voluntary settlement was executed, in 1865, by a trader who, in 1874, filed his petition for liquidation:—Held, that the settlement was governed by the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 91, and that, as the trader was unable to shew that he was solvent at the time it was executed, it was void as against the trustee. Davson, Ex parte, Davson, In re, 19 L. R., Eq. 433; 44 L. J., Bk. 49; 32 L. T. 101; 23 W. R. 354.

Ability to pay all Debts.]—In determining whether a trader who has executed a voluntary settlement was, within the meaning of s. 91 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, "at the time of making the settlement able to pay all his debts without the aid of the property comprised in such settlement," the value of the implements of his trade and of the goodwill of his business is not, if he was intending to continue his business, to be taken into account. At any rate, if that value is to be taken into account, it can only be such a value as would be realized at a forced sale. Per Lindley, L. J.: It is essential that the settlor should be able to pay his debts in the way in which he is proposing to pay them, i.e., in the ordinary course of his business, if he is proposing to continue it. A trader, who had for many years carried on the business of a baker, and had saved some money, being about to purchase a grocery business, which he intended to carry on in addition to the other, made a voluntary settlement of the bulk of his property for the benefit of his wife and children. He afterwards bought the grocery business, and carried it on for about six months, but lost money by it. He then sold it for as much money as he had given for it, and afterwards carried on the baker's business alone, until, about three years after the execution of the settlement, he filed a liquidation petition, his liabilities largely exceeding his assets. The debts which he owed at the date of the settlement had been all paid :—Held, that, under the circumstances, the settlement was void against the trustee in the liquidation under s. 91 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. Russell, Ex parte, Butterworth, In re, 19 Ch. D. 588 ; 51 L. J., Ch. 521 ; 46 L. T. 113 ; 30 W. R. 584—C. A.

Settlement of Leasehold Property to which Liability is attached.—A settlement of leasehold property, to which liability is attached, is of necessity a settlement for valuable consideration, and cannot therefore be avoided as a voluntary settlement under s. 91 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, even though no other consideration be given. Doble, Ex parte, Doble, In re, 38 L. T. 183 ; 26 W. R. 407.

A. being subject to a possible liability as surety for D., assigned the lease of his farm and the chattels thereon to his children B. and C., they undertaking to pay him an annuity of 50l. At the date of this assignment D. was insolvent, although it did not appear that the fact was known to B. and C. Apart from the property assigned to B. and C., A. had not sufficient at the date of that assignment to discharge his liability as surety, and when upon the failure of his principal to pay the debt, he was called upon to do so, he made default, and was subsequently adjudicated a bankrupt. Upon an application by the trustees to have it declared that the assignment to B. and C. was void under s. 91 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869 :—Held, that the assignment of the leaseholds was not voluntary on the ground that the assignment of leasehold property to which a liability is attached is necessarily a conveyance for valuable consideration. Id.

Conveyance to Trustees for exclusive Benefit of Creditors assenting to Deed.—A trader, in insolvent circumstances, executed a deed of arrangement by which he conveyed all his property to trustees, who were to carry on his business and to collect his debts and to pay a dividend to such of his creditors as were parties to or assented to the deed. In case of any creditors refusing to assent to the deed, the trustees were empowered to hand over such creditors' dividend to the debtor. The deed was executed with the object of defeating executions which might prevent the equal distribution of the debtor's property among his creditors. The creditors who had not assented to the deed obtained a judgment and put in an execution on goods included in the deed and in the actual possession of the trustees :—Held, that the deed was fraudulent under 13 Eliz. c. 5, and that the trustees had no property in the goods seized as against the creditors. Spencer v. Slater, 4 Q. B. D. 13 ; 48 L. J., Ch. 480 ; 39 L. T. 424 ; 27 W. R. 134.

Substantial Advance.—In February, 1865, a builder mortgaged to his uncle the whole of his property, real and personal, present and future, to secure 450l. previously due, and 300l. then advanced. The deed was not registered under the Bills of Sale Act. He became bankrupt on the 20th July, 1866, and on the 4th August notice of the deed was given to the assignees :—Held, that as there was a substantial advance made at the time of the deed, it justified the execution of the deed, which was, therefore, not fraudulent or void under 13 Eliz. c. 5 ; and that, even if it was originally an act of bankruptcy, the lapse of twelve months and upwards between its execution and the fiat would, under the Bankruptcy Act, 1849, s. 88, render it valid. Allen v. Bonnett, 5 L. R., Ch. 577 ; 23 L. T. 437.

Substantial Exception.—A substantial exception to a conveyance of the whole of a trader's property is where he retains so much as may enable him to continue his business. Id.

Trustee of Voluntary Settlement not Purchaser for Valuable Consideration.—The word "purchaser" in s. 91 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, means a buyer in the ordinary commercial sense, not a purchaser in the legal sense of the word. Therefore, the trustee of a post-nuptial settlement of leaseholds for the benefit of the settlor's wife and children is not a purchaser of the property for valuable consideration within the meaning of s. 91. Hillman, Ex parte, Pumfrey, In re, 10 Ch. D. 622 ; 48 L. J. Bk. 77 ; 40 L. T. 177 ; 27 W. R. 567—C. A.

Evidence to prove Consideration.—C., in 1855, mortgaged a house to the plaintiff in fee, handing over to him the deed of conveyance to himself, with the receipt of the vendors indorsed. In 1851, C. had made a voluntary conveyance of the house to trustees in trust for his wife and children, the consideration expressed being natural love and affection :—Held, that though evidence might be adduced to shew that valuable consideration had been in fact given for the settlement, such evidence must be of a most conclusive kind, and that on the evidence adduced the mortgage must prevail. Lery v. Creighton, 22 W. R. 605—L. J.

A husband, by will, left his house and business establishment to his wife for life, and after her death to his son, and a pecuniary legacy to his daughter. The son borrowed the money from his sister, and as security he and his mother gave his sister a bill of sale on the property left to them. In an issue between the sheriff and an execution creditor as to the bona fides of the bill of sale :—Held, that to shew the nature of the transaction, the will, though unproved, ought to have been received in evidence as a signed declaration of the former owner of the property before it passed out of his possession. O'Sullivan v. Burke, 9 Ir. R., C. L. 105.

Bill of Sale in substitution for Unregistered Bill—Fraud on Bankruptcy Laws.—In order to secure an advance by F. to P., the liquidating debtor, a bill of sale of part of P.'s property was on the 30th of March, 1876, executed by P. to F. on the agreement that the deed should not be registered for six (and afterwards for nine) months, if P. would execute a new bill of sale when called upon to do so. Accordingly, at intervals of about twenty-one days, the bill of sale was renewed fourteen times, the fifteenth and last deed being executed on the 11th of January, 1877. The first and last only of the series were stamped, and the last only was registered. Each deed recited a loan at the date of the deed of the amount purported to be thereby secured; but in fact there was only one loan, increased on two occasions by further advances. In the interval, that is to say, on the 26th of September, 1876, the debtor committed an act of bankruptcy by neglecting to satisfy a summons served by B., a creditor; and on the 6th of December B. served on the debtor a petition for adjudication in bankruptcy, under which a receiver was appointed on the 9th of December. The petition for liquidation was filed on the 18th of January, 1877; and on the 5th of February, F., the bill of sale holder, purchased and took an assignment of the debt of B.:—Held, that whatever might be the validity of the bill of sale of the 11th of January, 1877, at law, it was wholly invalid in bankruptcy, on the grounds that it purported to convey property which was then vested in the receiver, that it was based on an untrue recital, and that it was part of a scheme to defeat the operation of the bankruptcy laws; and that the title of the trustee in liquidation related back to the act of bankruptcy under the debtor summons. Furber, Ex parte, Pellew, In re, 6 Ch. D. 181; 36 L. T. 668.

Held, also, that the purchase by the bill of sale holder of the summoning creditor's debt, though it might purge the act of bankruptcy as between the debtor and creditor, could not abrogate the proceedings in bankruptcy, so as to defeat the rights of the other creditors. Ib.

Partnership Transactions.]—S., who was in partnership with B., indorsed bills of exchange belonging to the partnership to N., in payment of a private debt which he owed him, but such indorsement was a fraudulent preference, and N. had notice of its being a fraud on the firm. S. subsequently committed an act of bankruptcy, on which he was made bankrupt, and N. received the amount of the several bills of exchange at maturity:—Held, that the amount so received by N. was received to the use of the assignees of S., and B., the solvent partner, and that they jointly could sue N. for such amount as money had and received to their use. Heilbut v. Nevill, 5 L. R., C. P. 478; 39 L. J., C. P. 245; 22 L. T. 662; 18 W. R. 898—Ex. Ch.

B. Assignments on Marriage.

Of Lands not included in the Articles.]—By marriage articles, in June, 1865, the intending husband covenanted with the intending trustees to pay off the incumbrances on a leasehold estate, and to convey it to them, free from incumbrances, upon the trusts therein declared. In July, 1869, the husband being (according to his own account) pressed by one of the trustees to perform the covenant to convey to them the estate comprised in the articles of June, 1865, freed from incumbrances, and being unable to do so, proposed to convey other lands in lieu upon the trusts of the marriage articles. The husband's interest in the substituted lands, owing to the incumbrances thereon, was worth little more than his interest in the lands subject to the original articles. The husband, who subsequently, in January, 1870, became bankrupt, swore that in July, 1869, he neither apprehended nor contemplated bankruptcy. At that time legal proceedings were pending which resulted in an award against him for 7,847l., in November, 1869:—Held, first, that the settlement of July, 1869, must be declared fraudulent and void against creditors, in so far as it affected to convey property not included in the marriage articles of June, 1865. Gates v. Fabian, Wieland, In re, 19 W. R. 61.

Held, secondly, that the trustees of the marriage articles might claim to prove under the bankruptcy in behalf of the trust fund, but that they must both join in the proof. Ib.

Trustee proving for Funds in Bankruptcy.]—A trader by his marriage settlement covenanted that he would pay 6,000l. to the trustees on or before a given day, to be held by them on the trusts of the settlement. Before the money was payable he filed a petition for liquidation by arrangement:—Held, that a covenant for payment of a sum of money not specifically earmarked was not within the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 91, as a covenant for the future settlement of money or property in which the trader had no interest at the date of his marriage, and that the trustees were entitled to prove against his estate for the 6,000l., less the value of the settlor's life interest, which they were entitled to retain. Bishop, Ex parte, Tonnes, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 718; 42 L. J., Bk. 107; 28 L. T. 862; 21 W. R. 716. Affirming, 28 L. T. 567; 21 W. R. 559.

Conveyance of future Property.]—A trader, in April, 1868, executed a settlement upon his marriage, by which he settled certain specific chattels upon trust for the benefit of his wife and the issue of the marriage. The settlement also contained a covenant by the settlor with the trustees that all future real or personal estate which he should at any time during the coverture be possessed of, or entitled to, or should otherwise acquire by devolution, gift, devise, bequest, purchase, accumulation, or otherwise howsoever, should be conveyed and assigned to the trustees upon the trusts thereby declared. In 1870, the settlor bought shares in a company. In February, 1873, he was adjudicated a bankrupt. At this time the shares were standing in his name, but the certificates were in the possession of his wife's father, and they were afterwards delivered to the trustees of the settlement. It was shewn that the settlor was solvent at the date of the settlement:—Held, that the covenant was void as against the creditors, and that the trustee under the bankruptcy was entitled to the shares. Bolland, Ex parte, Clint, In re, 17 L. R., Eq. 115; 43 L. J., Bk. 16; 29 L. T. 543; 22 W. R. 152.

Fraudulent Recitals do not invalidate.]—C., who carried on the business of a flax spinner at the Shepley Mills in partnership with R., by a settlement made in contemplation of his marriage, after reciting that he was indebted to his intended wife in 20,000l., covenanted to pay the 20,000l. to the trustees of the settlement, upon trust that as soon as he should become owner in fee simple of the Shepley Mills estate, which he had agreed to purchase, they should advance the 20,000l. to him on the security of the same estate; and it was declared that the trustees should stand possessed of the 20,000l. and the securities for the same upon trust to pay the income to his intended wife for life for her separate use, and after her death to C. during his life or until he should become bankrupt, with remainder in trust for the children of the marriage, and in default of children, for his wife absolutely. The recital that C. was indebted to his intended wife was entirely false, and C. was at the time of the marriage in insolvent circumstances; but the wife had no knowledge of the insolvency of her husband, and understood nothing about the recitals of the arrangement as to the 20,000*l.*, except that that sum was to be settled. C. subsequently purchased the Shepley Mills estate, and mortgaged it to the trustees of the settlement for securing 20,000*l.*, but no money actually passed between the parties. C., and also his firm, afterwards became bankrupt, and a bill was filed by the trustee in C.'s bankruptcy against C. and his wife, the trustees of the settlement, and the trustee in the bankruptcy of the firm, praying that the settlement and the mortgage might be set aside as fraudulent against the creditors; and that the rights of all parties might be declared:—Held, that, notwithstanding the falsity of the recitals, the settlement and the mortgage deed were valid against the creditors so far as concerned the interests of the wife and the children. Keenan v. Crawford, 6 Ch. D. 29; 46 L. J., Ch. 729; 37 L. T. 322; 25 W. R. 49—C. A.

Held, that it would be premature to decide any question as to the future life interest of C. contingent on his wife's death in his lifetime. Id.

Held, also, that as the plaintiff's case had entirely failed, the court had no power to decide any question between the trustees of the settlement and their co-defendant, the trustee in the bankruptcy of the firm. The husband and wife having joined in their defence, the bill was dismissed against them both with costs. Id.

Covenant to settle Share under Will.]—A trader, who was entitled under his father's will to a share in his property, subject to a power for the widow to appoint among himself and the other children, on his marriage covenanted to settle his share whether appointed or unappointed. The widow appointed one-third to him and the remainder to other children, and subsequently he became bankrupt:—Held, that the covenant was not void under s. 91 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. Andrews, In re, 7 Ch. D. 635; 38 L. T. 137; 26 W. R. 572.

Policies of Assurance.]—In April, 1870, a trader effected two policies of assurance on his own life. In April, 1871, he surrendered them to the office and received in exchange two policies at the same premiums and entitled to the same privileges as the former ones, and expressed to be for the benefit of his wife if she survived him, but for his own benefit if she predeceased him. In January, 1873, he became a liquidating debtor, and in the August following he died without having obtained his discharge. It was alleged by the widow that the premiums on the new policies were paid out of her separate moneys. The trustee under the liquidation claimed the policies:—Held, that as the policies effected in 1870 had no surrender value the obtaining of the new policies in lieu thereof was not a settlement of property within the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 91, and that consequently the new policies were protected by the Married Women's Property Act, 1870, s. 10, and the widow was entitled to their benefit. Holt v. Everett, 2 Ch. D. 266; 45 L. J., Ch. 433; 34 L. T. 599; 24 W. R. 471—C. A.

The 91st section of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, has been so far modified by the Married Women's Property Act, 1870, s. 10, that a policy of insurance effected by a trader for the benefit of his wife or children in pursuance of the latter act is, in the event of his bankruptcy, valid as against his trustee, subject to a charge in favour of the trustee of an amount equal to all the premiums that it can be proved were paid by the trader with intent to defraud his creditors. Id.

ii. Setting aside.

A. made a voluntary conveyance of property in order to protect it from his creditors, and in pursuance of an arrangement with his creditors three years afterwards made under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, s. 110, he filed a bill for a reconveyance:—Held, that his illegal purpose did not preclude him from obtaining relief. Symes v. Hughes, 9 L. R., Eq. 475; 39 L. J., Ch. 304; 22 L. T. 462.

In order to set aside a voluntary settlement as fraudulent against creditors, it is not necessary to prove an actual intention to delay creditors present to the mind of the settlor at the time. If the necessary consequence of the settlement is to hinder or delay creditors, the intention will be presumed. Freeman v. Pope, 5 L. R., Ch. 538; 39 L. J., Ch. 689; 21 L. T. 816; 18 W. R. 906.

A testator, with a view of placing property out of the control of liquidators, conveyed it to his stepdaughter absolutely, and, as she alleged, by way of gift. The conveyance purported to be for a valuable consideration, but was in fact voluntary. Subsequently the claims of the liquidators were satisfied out of other property belonging to the testator:—Held, that there was a resulting trust in favour of the testator, and that the property must be reconveyed for the benefit of his estate. Couttas v. Swan, 22 L. T. 539; 18 W. R. 746.

The trustee of a bankrupt's estate applied, under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 72, to the Court of Bankruptcy to declare a bill of sale, made by the bankrupt previously to his bankruptcy, fraudulent and void as against himself as trustee, and to order the assignee under the bill of sale, who had previously to the bankruptcy sold the goods comprised therein, to pay over the proceeds of the sale to himself as such trustee. The Court of Bankruptcy having made the order prayed for, and the assignee having accordingly paid over the proceeds of the sale:—Held, that the trustee could not afterwards bring an action of trover against the assignee under the bill of sale to recover the difference between the value of the goods and the amount realized by the sale, inasmuch as by the proceedings in bankruptcy to recover the proceeds of the sale he had affirmed such sale and waived the tort. Smith v. Baker, 8 L. R., C. P. 350; 42 L. J., C. P. 155; 28 L. T. 637.

The grantee of a bill of sale and the trustee in bankruptcy of the grantor were in concurrent possession of the property comprised in it. The grantee had taken possession first. The trustee impeached the validity of the bill of sale. Before the question of its validity had been decided, the grantee forcibly removed part of the property:—Held, that, notwithstanding the fact that the grantee had taken possession first, the removal was an unlawful act, and that the grantee must pay the trustee's costs of a motion to compel the restoration into the joint possession of the property which had been removed. Fells, In re, Andrews, Ex parte, 4 Ch. D. 509; 46 L. J., Bk. 23; 36 L. T. 38; 25 W. R. 382.

Forged Conveyance—Rights of Trustee as representing Bankrupt.—M. wrote to B. to the effect that he had forged B.'s name by putting it with his own to a bill of exchange for 100*l.*, which would become due in a few days. He implored B. to meet the bill, and offered, if he would do so, to give him a bill of sale of all his property to secure what he owed him. B., who was already an unsecured creditor of M. for 100*l.*, paid the 100*l.* bill and took a bill of sale of all M.'s property to secure 200*l.* Three weeks later B. entered and sold the property and satisfied his debt. The following month M. was adjudicated a bankrupt, the act of bankruptcy alleged being the execution of the bill of sale. The trustee applied for an order that B. should refund the proceeds of sale received by him, on the ground that the bill of sale was void as being given only for a past debt, and as being the price of a bargain for the concealment of a felony:—Held, that the wrong done not being an offence against the bankrupt law, the trustee was in no better position than the bankrupt would have been, and that, the latter having been a party to the wrong, the maxim "In pari delicto potior est conditio possidentis" would have applied, and no action could have been maintained. Mapleback, In re, Butt, Ex parte, 4 Ch. D. 150; 46 L. J., Bk. 14; 35 L. T. 503; 25 W. R. 103; 13 Cox, C. C. 374—C. A. Reversing, 35 L. T. 172.

Advance Repayable in Monthly Instalments—Monthly Tenancy.—A member of a building society borrowed 7,500*l.* from the society, which was to be repaid in a series of monthly instalments of 7*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* each, including interest at 7 per cent. The instalments were payable at the monthly meetings of the society, and, if the member neglected to pay them when due, he became liable to a fine at the rate of 5 per cent. per month on the total amount in arrear and unpaid at each meeting. To secure the loan he executed to the trustees of the society a mortgage of real estate. The deed contained a proviso that if the member should fail for three monthly meetings to pay his subscription, interest, fines, or other moneys, or to observe the regulations of the society, or in the event of his becoming bankrupt, the mortgagees might enter into possession or receipt of the rents of the mortgaged property. And "for the better securing the payments which by the rules of the society ought to be made by the mortgagor," it was agreed that, if the mortgagees should at any time become entitled to enter into possession or receipt of the rents, and the mortgagor should then or afterwards be in the occupation of the whole or part of the property, he should during such occupation be tenant thereof from month to month to the mortgagees, at a monthly rent equal in amount to the moneys which ought to be paid monthly by the mortgagor from time to time for subscriptions, interest, fines, and other moneys under the rules, and that the tenancy should commence on the day up to which he should have fully paid all and every part of such subscriptions, interest, fines, and other moneys, and the rent for the period intervening between the commencement of the tenancy and the day on which the trustees should be entitled to enter into possession or receipt of rents should be payable and paid on that day, and the monthly rent due upon and subsequently to that day should become due monthly in advance, and be payable at the monthly meetings, the first payment of rent becoming due on the day on which the mortgagees should first become entitled to enter into possession. Power was given to the mortgagees to determine the tenancy by fourteen days' notice. The deed was not executed by the mortgagees, nor was it registered under the Bills of Sale Act. The mortgagor committed default in his payments, and was afterwards adjudicated a bankrupt:—Held, that the attornment clause, and distresses levied under it for rent which accrued due both before and after the commencement of the bankruptcy, were valid as against the trustee in the bankruptcy. Voisey, Ex parte, Knight, In re, 21 Ch. D. 442; 52 L. J., Ch. 121; 47 L. T. 362; 31 W. R. 19—C. A. Affirming, S. C., sub nom. Isherwood, Ex parte, 46 L. T. 539.

Williams, Ex parte (7 Ch. D. 138); Stockton Iron Furnace Company, In re (10 Ch. D. 335); and Jackson, Ex parte (14 Ch. D. 725), discussed. Ib.

Held, that it was no objection to the attornment clause that the monthly rent was fluctuating in amount. Ib.

A rent, the amount of which may fluctuate according to the happening of certain events, is not an uncertain rent. Ib.

Tenancy at Will.—Held, also, that the tenancy under the attornment clause was not made by s. 1 of the Statute of Frauds a tenancy at will. Ib.

Distress for Year's Rent—Further Distress for Half Year.—On the 5th of September, 1881, a tenant holding a lease for twenty-one years filed his petition for liquidation. On the 13th of September the landlord distrained for a year's rent due, according to the terms of the lease, upon the 24th of March, 1881. Trustees in the debtor's liquidation were appointed on the 13th of October, 1881; and on the 25th of October the landlord distrained for a further six months' rent, due on the 29th of September. On the 14th of November the trustees in the liquidation disclaimed the lease, pursuant to leave granted by the court:—Held, that the landlord, having levied his distress for rent after the commencement of the bankruptcy, could only distrain for one year, according to the 34th section of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869; and that the second distress was therefore invalid. Dyke, Ex parte, Morrish, In re, 22 Ch. D. 410; 52 L. J., Ch. 570; 48 L. T. 303; 31 W. R. 278—C. A. Affirming, 47 L. T. 26; 30 W. R. 952.

Agreement for Sale or Hire of Chattels—Power of Distress.—Agreement for the hire of railway waggons for the term of five years at a yearly rent of 10*l.* apiece, with power to the lessors, when the rent should be in arrear for seven days, to distrain goods on the lessee's premises, and sell, &c., as landlords may on distress for rent, the lessee at the end of the term to have the option of purchasing the waggons for 5s. each. The lessee having gone into liquidation, the lessors distrained under the agreement. The agreement being admitted to be of a usual character having regard to the subject-matter, a motion in an action by the debtor and the receiver under his petition to restrain proceedings upon the distress was refused. The agreement and the distress thereunder were held not to be in fraud of the general creditors in the lessee's bankruptcy. A power to distrain will not by itself in an ordinary case render such an agreement fraudulent against creditors in bankruptcy. Leman v. Yorkshire Railway Waggon Company, 50 L. J., Ch. 293; 29 W. R. 466.

Distress by Gas Company under Statutory Powers.—The special act of a gas company empowered it to levy by distress all sums of money due to it for the supply of gas, the amount of which should not be disputed, and provided that any justice on application, might inquire into and ascertain the amount due, and issue his warrant accordingly for levying the same. By s. 16 of the Gasworks Clauses Act, 1847 (incorporated with the special act), money due to a gas company for gas supplied is spoken of as rent. The company, after one of its customers had filed a liquidation petition, and with notice of the petition, proceeded to seize his goods under distress warrant granted by the justices in respect of money due for gas supplied to him within a year before the filing of the petition:—Held, that the company did not come within the words "landlord or other person to whom any rent is due from the bankrupt" in s. 34 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, but that the distress was a legal process against the estate of the debtor in respect of a provable debt, which the court had, under s. 13, or under r. 260 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1870, power to restrain. Hill, Ex parte, Roberts, In re, 6 Ch. D. 63; 46 L. J., Bk. 116; 37 L. T. 45; 25 W. R. 784—C. A.

Mortgage—Attornment Clause.—A mortgage of smelting works to secure the repayment of an advance of 55,000*l.*, contained, in addition to the ordinary clauses, a covenant by the mortgagee that, if the interest was punctually paid as it became due, and all the covenants contained in the deed (other than the covenant for payment of the principal) were performed, and the mortgagor should not have become bankrupt or have taken proceedings for liquidation by arrangement or composition with his creditors, and should not have parted with the possession of the mortgaged property, and should not have ceased to carry on his business thereon, then the mortgagee would not for a period of five years require payment of the principal. And the mortgagor attorned tenant from year to year to the mortgagee in respect of the mortgaged property at the yearly rent of 20,000*l.*, to be paid half-yearly on the days on which the interest on which the mortgage debt was made payable. The deed was not registered under the Bills of Sale Act, 1854. The letting value of the property was not more than 3,000*l.* per annum. Four months after the execution of the mortgage the mortgagor filed a liquidation petition, and the mortgagee afterwards claimed the right to distrain the chattels upon the mortgaged property for a year's rent under the attornment clause:—Held, that the arrangement was a mere device to give the mortgagee an additional security in the event of the mortgagor's bankruptcy, and was, therefore, in that event, void, as a fraud upon the bankrupt law, and that s. 34 did not protect a distress levied for a mere sham rent. Williams, Ex parte, Thompson, In re, 7 Ch. D. 138; 47 L. J., Bk. 26; 37 L. T. 764; 26 W. R. 274—C. A.

Though an attornment clause in a mortgage deed is a valid clause, if it constitutes a real relation of landlord and tenant between the mortgagee and the mortgagor, and a distress levied for the rent fixed by the clause will be good as against the trustee in the bankruptcy of the mortgagor, and will thus enable the mortgagee to obtain a security upon chattels of the mortgagor, the proceeds of which would otherwise have been distributed among his creditors, yet, if the rent fixed by the clause be so excessive that the court comes to the conclusion that it was not intended to create a real rent or a real tenancy, but that the clause was a mere device to enable the mortgagee, in the event of the bankruptcy of the mortgagor, to obtain an additional security upon chattels which would otherwise have been distributed among his creditors, the clause and any distress levied under it, even though before the commencement of the bankruptcy, will be invalid as against the trustee in the bankruptcy of the mortgagor, as being a fraud upon the bankruptcy law. Jackson, Ex parte, Bowes, In re, 14 Ch. D. 725; 43 L. T. 272; 29 W. R. 253—C. A.

—Attornment to Second Mortgagee—Fair Rent.—An attornment by a mortgagor to a second mortgagee is valid, notwithstanding the fact that the mortgagor has already attorned tenant to the first mortgagee of the same property. And if the amount of the rents fixed by the two attornment clauses is a fair rent of the property, so that there is no fraud on the bankruptcy law, valid distresses can be levied by both mortgagees after the commencement of the bankruptcy of the mortgagor. Morton v. Woods (4 L. R., Q. B. 293) explained and followed. Punnett, Ex parte, Kitchin, In re, 16 Ch. D. 226; 50 L. J., Ch. 212; 44 L. T. 226; 29 W. R. 129—C. A.

—Tenancy from Year to Year or at Will.—A mortgage deed contained an attornment clause whereby A. (the mortgagor) attorned and became tenant from year to year to B. (the mortgagee) for and in respect of the mortgaged premises, at the yearly rent of 800*l.*, to be paid by equal quarterly payments. And it was thereby agreed that it should be lawful for B., at any time after three months from the date of the mortgage, without giving previous notice of his intention so to do, to enter upon and take possession of the premises whereof A. had attorned tenant, and to determine the tenancy created by the aforesaid attornment. A. filed a liquidation petition, and on the same day a receiver was appointed, who entered into possession of A.'s estate and effects. Notice of the petition and of the appointment of a receiver was sent to B., who two days later, by virtue of the attornment clause, distrained upon the goods and chattels on the mortgaged premises for a half-year's rent then due:—Held, that a tenancy from year to year and not a tenancy at will was created by the attornment clause, and that B. was entitled, under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 34, to distrain for the rent due to him from A. at the time of filing the liquidation petition. Morton v. Woods (4 L. R., Q. B. 293) explained. Queen's Benefit Building Society, or Blake, Ex parte, Threlfall, In re, 16 Ch. D. 274; 50 L. J., Ch. 318; 44 L. T. 74; 29 W. R. 128—C. A.

— What Amount of Rent may be Distrained for.—B. executed a mortgage of certain real property to secure the payment of 12,500*l.*, with interest at 4*l.* 15*s.* per cent., payable half-yearly, on the 8th May and 8th November in each year; and the deed contained a clause by which the mortgagor attorned tenant from year to year to the mortgagees at the yearly rent of 593*l.* 15*s.*, that being the exact amount of the interest reserved by the deed, and payable on the same days. Subsequently by a parol agreement the days of payment were changed to the 1st July and the 1st January. The mortgagor subsequently filed his petition, and composition-resolutions having been resolved upon, the mortgagees, on the 19th November, 1880, distrained for a half-year's rent under the attornment clause, although, at that time, in accordance with an arrangement which had been previously entered into and acted upon by both parties, the interest had been paid by the trustees appointed under the composition proceedings down to July 1, 1880. Upon the application of the trustees, the county court judge decided that the mortgagees were only entitled to receive the amount of rent or interest from the 1st July:—Held, that the mortgagees were entitled to the full amount for which they had distrained, and that the balance, after payment of the interest then due, was applicable for the reduction of the principal debt. Harrison, Ex parte, Betts, In re, 18 Ch. D. 127; 50 L. J., Ch. 832; 45 L. T. 290; 30 W. R. 38—C. A. Affirming, S. C. 44 L. T. 616; 29 W. R. 668, sub. nom. Tempest, Ex parte.

Burden of Proof on Person claiming Protection.—The burden of proof is on the person who claims the protection of the proviso at the end of s. 92 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, as "a payee in good faith." Tate, Ex parte, 35 L. T. 531; 25 W. R. 52—C. A.

Semble, that that proviso applies not only to cases of fraudulent preference under s. 92, but also to cases of "a fraudulent conveyance, gift, delivery, or transfer of the debtor's property, or any part thereof," under s. 6, sub-s. 2. Id.

Where Consideration is pre-existing Debt.—The concluding words of s. 92 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 71), giving protection to payments, &c., made as therein mentioned, apply to a creditor of the bankrupt and not merely to his transferee. Butcher v. Stead, 7 L. R., H. L. 839; 44 L. J., Bk. 129; 33 L. T. 541; 24 W. R. 463.

When, therefore, a person sold goods to another as upon a cash credit, and, just before the credit expired, received from the vendee, then on the eve of bankruptcy, payment for those goods, being at the time of such payment, entirely without knowledge or even suspicion of the true state of the vendee's circumstances, he was held to be protected. Id.

S., a calico merchant at Manchester, sold calico in September, 1873, to M. and W., calico printers there, on the usual terms of the Manchester market, which would have made payment due on the 2nd of December. M. and W. were at the time of the purchase (though quite unknown to S.) in insolvent circumstances. In November M. and W. sold a large portion of their stock-in-trade, and directed their cashier to pay their trade creditors. The cashier did so, and on the 22nd of November paid S., taking discount and rebate of interest in the ordinary way. M. and W. were largely indebted to other persons for advances, and on banking accounts. On the 3rd of December, M. and W. filed a petition for liquidation, and a trustee was appointed. The trustee sought to get back the money which had been paid to S.:—Held, that S. was protected as "a payee in good faith, and for valuable consideration," within the words of s. 92 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. Id. Affirming, 9 L. R., Ch. 595; 30 L. T. 482; 22 W. R. 721.

On the 6th of June, 1871, G., a dealer in oil, borrowed 400*l.* of N., his brother-in-law, the money to be repaid in a month. The money not having been repaid when due, N. pressed for it and ultimately placed the matter in the hands of his solicitors, who gave G. till the end of July to pay. On the 1st of August, G. asked N. for further time, and N. said he must have a speedy settlement or he should take proceedings. G. said he would do what he could during the week. On the 5th of August he went to N. and said he had no money, but that he had some oil, and that if N. could induce a firm of B. & Co., in which he had formerly been a partner, to buy it, he should be paid out of the proceeds. N. went to B. and explained the circumstances to him, and ultimately B. consented to treat with G. G. then went to B., and, in the result, a contract was entered into by B. on behalf of his firm to buy fourteen casks of oil from G. At this time G. had, in fact, no oil, but on the 9th of August he ordered fourteen casks from W. on credit, and this oil was by G.'s directions sent to B. & Co. G. never paid for it, and had no means of doing so when he ordered it. On the 15th of August G. called at the warehouse of B. & Co. to settle the purchase, and by his order B. & Co. paid to N. the amount of his loan and interest, and paid the balance of the price of the oil to G. On the 6th of April, 1872, G. was adjudicated a bankrupt, the act of bankruptcy being the filing of a petition for liquidation on the 7th of March. The trustee afterwards applied to the county court to set aside the payment of the 400*l.* to N. as a fraudulent preference and an act of bankruptcy. The case was tried before a jury, who found that when the transaction took place the oil was substantially the whole of the bankrupt's property; that to the knowledge of N. he was insolvent; and that the transfer was not made bona fide, but fraudulently without pressure, with a view of giving N. a preference over the other creditors of G. The judge thereupon held that the transaction was void as an act of bankruptcy, and a fraudulent preference, and ordered N. to pay to the trustee the sum which he had received. On appeal, held, that the purchase of the oil was a bona fide transaction in the ordinary course of trade, and that N. was a payee in good faith, and for valuable consideration; that there was no act of bankruptcy and no fraudulent preference. Norton, Ex parte, Golden, In re, 16 L. R., Eq. 397; 21 W. R. 402.

The proviso in s. 92 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, in favour of a purchaser, payee, or incumbrancer, in good faith and for valuable consideration, extends to a case where the consideration is the payment of a pre-existing debt. Ib.

At the time when a bill of sale was executed, the mortgagee had notice of an act of bankruptcy committed by the mortgagor, upon which he was afterwards adjudicated a bankrupt. The money secured by the deed consisted in part of a sum paid by the mortgagee in discharge of the claim of the holder of two prior registered bills of sale executed before the act of bankruptcy was committed. The old bills of sale were not transferred to the new mortgagee, and satisfaction of them was entered up. The new bill of sale was registered:—Held, that the new bill of sale was valid as against the trustee in the bankruptcy to the extent of the sum paid to the prior mortgagee. Harris, Ex parte, James, In re, 19 L. R., Eq. 253; 44 L. J., Bk. 51; 31 L. T. 621; 23 W. R. 536.

Bona fide Sale not a Fraudulent Preference.]

—A., a liquidating debtor and C. the creditor, as trustees and executors under a will, kept an account at the B. Bank. The debtor having overdrawn the trust account, and misappropriated the money, in order to recoup the trust estate, sold some wool to G., who advanced 2,050*l.* on account of the purchase-money, which it was agreed should be determined by valuation. The county court judge considered the advance of 2,050*l.* to be a loan, and the transfer and delivery of the wool a fraudulent preference of G., and ordered G. to repay to the trustee in the liquidation the price of the wool:—Held, on appeal (reversing the decision of the court below), that the transaction was a bona fide sale, and that as neither a debt nor a loan had ever existed prior to the contract for the purchase and sale, no case of fraudulent preference could arise. Gaunt, Ex parte, Wilkinson, In re, 43 L. T. 448.

Fraudulent Purchase by Bankrupt—Non-completion of Purchase—Deposit-money paid to Stakeholder—Forfeiture.]—W. having secretly realized the greater part of his available property and effects, absconded with the proceeds. W. was subsequently adjudicated a bankrupt, and on the 4th of October, 1882, the plaintiff was appointed a trustee of the estate. On the 10th of October, W. entered into an agreement in an assumed name with F. for the purchase of certain house property, and paid to the defendant, as stakeholder under the agreement, a certain sum by way of deposit, which it was admitted formed part of the proceeds of the secret realization. The agreement provided, inter alia, that the deposit-money should be forfeited to the vendor if the purchaser neglected or failed to complete the purchase. W. was shortly afterwards arrested and convicted as an absconding bankrupt, and the purchase of the property was consequently never completed. It was admitted that both the defendant and F. had acted throughout bona fide in the ordinary course of business, and that the non-completion of the agreement was not caused by any default on the part of F. The plaintiff having claimed to have the deposit-money paid over for the benefit of the bankrupt's estate:—Held, that, inasmuch as it was of the essence of the contract that the deposit-money should be forfeited if the purchase was not completed, such money belonged to F. and could not be followed by the trustee of the bankrupt's estate. Collins v. Stimson, 11 Q. B. D. 142; 52 L. J., Q. B. 440; 48 L. T. 828.

Assignment of whole Property—Payment to Bankers.]

—A judgment creditor, who had issued execution upon the property of his insolvent debtor, agreed to make him a substantial advance for the alleged purpose of enabling him to carry on his business, upon the understanding come to at a meeting at which all the parties to the transaction were present, that the advance should be applied in paying the bankers of the debtor, who had pressed for payment of a debt of 2,000*l.*, and threatened to make the debtor a bankrupt if they were not paid, and also in paying off two other debts due to solicitors employed in the transaction. A bill of sale over substantially the whole of the debtor's property was given by the debtor to the execution creditor, on the 9th of September, 1882, to secure the execution debt and the fresh advance. The fresh advance was applied in payment of the debts to the bankers and the solicitors. On the 11th of September, possession under the bill of sale was taken by the grantee. On the 13th of September, the debtor filed a liquidation petition, and the trustees impeached the bill of sale and the above-mentioned payments:—Held, that the effect of the granting of the bill of sale being to prevent the debtor from carrying on his business, the bill of sale and also the payments to the solicitors were fraudulent and void; but that the payment to the bankers, who had acted bona fide, was protected by the saving clause of s. 92 of the act. Clater, Ex parte, Denison, Ex parte, Wilkinson, In re, 48 L. T. 648.

iii. Transactions protected by Sections 94 & 95.

Meaning of Sections.]—The meaning of s. 94, sub-s. 3, of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, is in effect the same as that of s. 133 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1849. Wright, In re, Arnold, Ex parte, 3 Ch. D. 70; 45 L. J., Bk. 130; 35 L. T. 21; 24 W. R. 977—C. A.

What is a Dealing—Rescission of Contract.]

A trustee under a liquidation by arrangement of the affairs of a debtor, in a first count, sued the defendants on a contract made between them and the debtor, for a breach of the contract in not delivering either to the debtor before liquidation or to the trustee after the liquidation, a quantity of iron according to the terms of the contract. The second count stated that it was agreed between the defendants and the debtor as in the first count, and that before the liquidation the defendants delivered a portion of the iron under the contract to the debtor, who made default in payment of the price; and afterwards the trustee elected to take the benefit of the contract, and was ready to pay in cash the full amount for the portion of iron already delivered, and to pay for the residue in cash on delivery, and to perform the contract, in all things on his part, whereof the defendants had notice, and waived formal tender of such amount. Yet they did not, nor would deliver to the trustee the residue of the iron, but neglected and refused so to do, and wholly refused any further to perform the contract on their part, whereby the trustee lost the benefit of the contract. Plea, that before any breach of the agreement on the part of the defendants, and before the commencement of the liquidation, or the filing by the debtor of a petition for liquidation, and before notice to the defendants of any act of bankruptcy by the debtor, he exonerated and discharged them from the agreement, and from any further performance of the same, and the defendants say that the dealing and transaction were made in good faith:—Held, that the plea was good, and that the exoneration thereby shewn was a "dealing for valuable consideration," between the parties within the protection of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 94, sub-s. 3. Checkland v. McNiel, 32 L. T. 367.

— Notice to Sheriff by Landlord.—A trader's goods were seized by the sheriff under a judgment obtained after the debtor had committed an act of bankruptcy. The landlord of the house where the trade was carried on gave notice to the sheriff that he claimed to distrain the goods for arrears of rent. Afterwards the trader was adjudicated bankrupt upon the act of bankruptcy:—Held, that the notice to the sheriff was not a dealing with the bankrupt under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 94. Dooman, Ex parte, Lake, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 51; 42 L. J., Bk. 30; 27 L. T. 528; 21 W. R. 94.

— Garnishee Order.—A garnishee order, attaching a debt due to a bankrupt, is not a "dealing" with the bankrupt within s. 94, sub-s. 3, of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. Pillers, Ex parte, Curtoys, In re, 17 Ch. D. 653; 50 L. J., Ch. 691; 44 L. T. 691; 29 W. R. 575—C. A. Reversing, 44 L. T. 224; 29 W. R. 568.

A judgment creditor, therefore, who prior to the presentation of a bankruptcy petition against the debtor, but after the commission of an act of bankruptcy of which he had no notice, has served a garnishee order nisi attaching moneys due to the debtor from a third party, is not entitled to the debts attached as against the trustees in bankruptcy. Ib.

Whether such an order is "an attachment against goods" of a bankrupt within s. 95, sub-s. 2, quære. Ib.

But, if it is, it is not within the protection of s. 95, sub-s. 3, unless the garnishor has obtained actual payment of the attached debt from the garnishee before the order of adjudication. Ib.

— Building Contract providing for taking Possession in Bankruptcy.—A building contract contained stipulations that in the event of the insolvency or bankruptcy of the builder, the architect of the proprietors should have power, after two clear days' notice, to appoint other persons to complete the work, and should also in such case have power to seize and retain all materials, plant and implements, and might either proceed with the work or sell them and apply the proceeds to the completion of the work; and that in the event of the contract being put an end to as aforesaid, the contractor should not remove either work, materials, implements, scaffolding, or plant from the premises, but all materials and work should be left or appropriated for the use of whosoever might be appointed to finish the work. After being engaged on the contract for about eighteen months, and receiving sums on account thereof, which covered the value of the materials, plant and implements then upon the premises, the contractor filed a petition for liquidation. Three days afterwards the proprietors gave him notice that they intended to employ other means to finish the work, and claimed the materials, plant and implements under the contract. It did not appear whether the proprietors at that time had notice of the petition, but they had such notice before the expiration of two days, and before they took possession:—Held, that under the contract the proprietors acquired a right to a lien upon the goods in the events which happened; and that the contract and the possession taken thereunder was a transaction protected by s. 94, sub-s. 3, of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and not invalidated by the act of bankruptcy. Dickin, Ex parte, Waugh, In re, 4 Ch. D. 524; 46 L. J., Bk. 26; 35 L. T. 769; 25 W. R. 258.

— Forfeiture of Materials in Event of Builder's Bankruptcy—Fraud on Bankruptcy Law.—An agreement, dated the 17th of September, 1878, between an owner of land and a builder provided that, in consideration of the rent thereby reserved and certain agreements on the part of the builder, the landowner would, as the builder should erect and completely cover in the messuages thereafter agreed to be erected by him, demise to him a piece of land for ninety-nine years, at a yearly rent of 300*l.* And the builder agreed to erect and completely finish forty houses, each of a specified value, within fifteen months from the date of the agreement, and vigorously and effectually to proceed continuously with all buildings once commenced by him on the ground, and to accept leases of the land and houses as the same should be erected and covered in. Until the leases should be granted the builder was to hold the premises subject to the payment of the rent, and to the observance and performance of his part of the terms and stipulations of the agreement, and subject to the power of distress and entry in default of any of the stipulations on his part, or on his becoming bankrupt or insolvent, in either of which cases all improvements, materials, and effects on the land, or adjacent thereto, which should not have been actually demised to the builder, should become absolutely forfeited to the landlord, but without prejudice to any right of action which might have accrued to him under the agreement (which was not to be construed as an actual demise), and the landlord was to be at liberty to re-enter and take possession of the ground, premises, chattels and effects, and to relet or sell the same, or otherwise to use and enjoy the same, as fully as if the agreement had never been made. In January, 1879, the builder filed a liquidation petition. At this time there was a large quantity of building materials on the land comprised in the agreement, which had been placed there by the builder. Up to the time of the filing of the petition the builder had made no default in performing his agreement:—Held, that the provisions for forfeiture of the materials to the landlord on the bankruptcy of the builder was void, as contrary to the policy of the bankruptcy law, and that the materials on the land were the property of the trustee in the liquidation. Jay, Ex parte, Harrison, In re, 14 Ch. D. 19; 42 L. T. 600; 28 W. R. 449; 44 J. P. 409—C. A. Reversing, S. C., nom. Meads, Ex parte, Harrison, In re, 49 L. J., Bk. 47; 41 L. T. 560; 28 W. R. 308.

— Seizing under Bill of Sale.—The holder of a bill of sale, given to secure a debt, received notice on the 10th of March from the debtor's solicitor that the debtor was about to file a liquidation petition. The creditor at once sent a man to demand payment of the debt, and to take possession of the property comprised in the bill of sale if payment was not made. Possession was obtained on the 11th of March. The petition had been filed on the 10th of March, but neither the creditor nor the man who was sent to take possession knew this until after possession had been obtained:—Held, that the taking possession of the property was a dealing with the debtor for valuable consideration which was protected by s. 94, sub-s. 3; that it took the goods out of the order and disposition of the bankrupt notwithstanding the prior act of bankruptcy; and that the creditor was entitled to retain the property as against the trustee under the liquidation. Wright, In re, Arnold, Ex parte, 3 Ch. D. 70; 45 L. J., Bk. 130; 35 L. T. 21; 24 W. R. 977—C. A.

Payment to Debtor of Purchase-money after Adjudication.—A debtor, after the presentation of a bankruptcy petition against him, but before adjudication, entered into a contract for the sale of leasehold property, the purchaser paying a deposit. After adjudication, the purchaser, who had no knowledge of the adjudication or of the bankruptcy petition, or of the commission of any act of bankruptcy by the vendor, paid the remainder of the purchase-money to the bankrupt, and obtained possession of the title-deeds and of the property, but no assignment to him was executed. On an application by the purchaser to the Court of Bankruptcy for an order that the trustee should assign the property to him:—Held, that, the trustee being the legal owner of the property, subject to the equity of the purchaser to have it assigned to him on payment of the balance of the purchase-money, the purchaser could not enforce his equitable right except upon paying to the trustee the balance of the purchase-money. Rabbige, Ex parte, Pooley, In re, 8 Ch. D. 367; 38 L. T. 663; 26 W. R. 646—C. A.

Post-dated Cheque—Bankruptcy of Payee before Date of Cheque—Duty of Drawer to stop Cheque.—The drawer of a post-dated cheque given for value is under no obligation to stop its payment before its date for the benefit of a third person. If, for instance, before the date of payment the drawer receives notice of an adjudication of bankruptcy, made against the payee since the delivery of the cheque to him upon an act of bankruptcy committed by him before the delivery, he is not bound, for the benefit of the bankrupt's creditors, to give notice to his bankers not to pay the cheque, and thus expose himself to the risk of an action by a bonâ fide holder of the cheque for value. If the cheque was originally delivered by the drawer to the payee, in good faith and for value, and without notice of an act of bankruptcy previously committed by the payee, on which an adjudication is subsequently made, the transaction is protected by s. 94, sub-s. 3 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and the trustee in the bankruptcy cannot recover the amount of the cheque from the drawer. Richdale, Ex parte, Palmer, In re, 19 Ch. D. 409; 51 L. J., Ch. 462; 46 L. T. 116; 30 W. R. 262—C. A. Reversing, 51 L. J., Ch. 61; 45 L. T. 557; 30 W. R. 124, sub nom. Armstead, Ex parte.

Re-assignment of Goods after Revocation of Assignment for Benefit of Creditors.—A debtor caused a deed to be prepared by B. her attorney, whereby she assigned all her stock-in-trade and effects to M. in trust for her creditors. This deed was intended to protect her property from executions in case certain offers about to be submitted to her creditors were not accepted. The assignment was executed by the debtor and trustee on 17th February, 1870, and formal possession of the property was given under it to the latter. A meeting of creditors was then held. The existence of the deed was never communicated to them, but proposals were made to them which they accepted; whereupon it became necessary to borrow money, and B. applied to K., who advanced 400l. to the debtor on the security of a bill of sale over all her property. This instrument was drawn up by B. and executed at his office by the debtor in the presence of K. A re-assignment of even date was made by M. to the debtor, of his trust estate in her property. The debtor's goods were subsequently seized and removed to the premises of M. by B., then acting for K., under the bill of sale. On the 22nd March the debtor was adjudicated a bankrupt, having filed a declaration of insolvency. An action having been brought by the trustee against B. & M. for the conversion of the goods:—Held, that whether the assignment to M. of all the effects in trust for creditors was or was not an act of bankruptcy, K. had no notice of it; for even assuming that he had employed B. as his attorney in the preparation of the bill of sale, yet the relations thereby established between them would not be such that the knowledge of B. of the assignment to M. would be constructive knowledge in K.; that the re-assignment by M. to the debtor was valid, notwithstanding her bankruptcy; and that K., being therefore a bonâ fide mortgagee for value without notice of a prior act of bankruptcy, was protected; and consequently had a valid title to the goods as against the trustee. Brittain v. Brown, 24 L. T. 504.

Payment to Guardians by Overseer after Petition Filed.—Three days after filing his petition for liquidation, one of the overseers of a parish paid into the bank, to the credit of the treasurer of a board of guardians of the union, a sum of 55l. in respect of a call for a contribution from the poor rates, which had been previously made upon the overseers by the board of guardians. The trustee in the liquidation claimed the money so paid as being money divisible amongst the creditors:—Held, that the payment into the bank was a dealing with the bankrupt within

s. 94, sub-s. 3 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and was protected accordingly. Atcham Board of Guardians, Ex parte, Dickinson, In re, 46 L. T. 238; 30 W. R. 644.

Executions.]—See EFFECT OF BANKRUPTCY, post.

Effect as regards Bills of Sale Act.]—The protecting provisions of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, ss. 94, 95, have no operation as regards a transaction which is made void by the Bills of Sale Act, 1854. Attwater, Ex parte, Turner, In re, 5 Ch. D. 27; 46 L. J., Bk. 41; 35 L. T. 682; 25 W. R. 206—C. A.

3. NOTICE OF ACT OF BANKRUPTCY TO INVALIDATE TRANSACTIONS.

a. Generally.

What Amounts to Notice.]—Notice of an act of bankruptcy means knowledge thereof, or wilfully abstaining from acquiring such knowledge. Bird v. Bass, 6 M. & G. 143; 6 Scott, N. R. 928.

Notice Indefinite as to Nature of Act of Bankruptcy.]—A notice by a bankrupt to an execution creditor, that he has committed several acts of bankruptcy, is a sufficient notice of a prior act of bankruptcy. Udal v. Walton, 14 M. & W. 254; 14 L. J., Ex. 262; 9 Jur. 515; S. P., Arthur v. Whitworth, 6 Jur. 323.

Notice that a trader had committed an act of bankruptcy, without specifying the act, or stating of what the act consisted, is sufficient notice of an act of bankruptcy. Turner v. Hardcastle, 11 C. B., N. S. 683; 31 L. J., C. P. 193; 5 L. T. 748.

A. having recovered judgment against B., issued execution and seized his goods under a f. fa. on the 3rd of December, 1851. On the morning of the 5th, a notice was given to A. by the solicitors of certain of B.'s creditors, who afterwards prosecuted a petition in bankruptcy against him. This notice stated that it was given on behalf of several creditors of B., that he had committed an act of bankruptcy, and also that he had, on the 4th (the previous day) executed a conveyance of all his property to trustees for the benefit of his creditors. On the afternoon of the 5th, the goods which had been taken in execution were sold. The petition in bankruptcy was presented on the 11th of December, and on the following day B. was adjudicated a bankrupt. In an action by his assignees against A. to recover the proceeds of the goods so sold after an act of bankruptcy, and notice—Held, that the notice was sufficient. Hope v. Meek, 10 Ex. 829; 25 L. J. Ex. 11.

Notice of Intention to Commit.]—A letter from a bankrupt to a creditor, saying that he had resolved not to open his bank on Monday, does not amount to notice of an act of bankruptcy, but is only notice of an intention to commit an act of bankruptcy. Hallifax, Ex parte, 2 Mont., D. & D. 544; S. P., Glyn, Ex parte, 6 Jur. 839.

A creditor who receives notice of his debtor's intention to commit an act of bankruptcy is not bound to inquire whether the act has been committed, but is entitled to avail himself of his remedies just as if he had received no such notice. Wright, In re, Arnold, Ex parte, 3 Ch. D. 70; 45 L. J., Bk. 130; 35 L. T. 21; 24 W. R. 977—C. A.

Nature of Act.]—Notice that a party has executed a deed conveying all his property for the benefit of his creditors, is notice of an act of bankruptcy. Lackington v. Elliott, 7 M. & G. 538; 8 Scott, N. R. 275; 13 L. J., C. P. 153; 8 Jur. 695.

Notice of a docket having been struck was not notice of a prior act of bankruptcy, within 2 & 3 Vict. c. 29, s. 1. Hocking v. Accraman, 1 D., N. S. 434; 12 M. & W. 170; 13 L. J., Ex. 34.

Evidence that the defendant, in an action by assignees, was aware that the bankrupt had left his home and place of business in difficulties, and contrary to the rules of his employment as postmaster, and had not returned, is evidence of the defendant's knowledge of an act of bankruptcy, by absenting with intent to delay and defeat creditors. Smith v. Osborn, 1 F. & F. 267.

— Filing Declarations of Insolvency.]—

Under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 122, s. 22, the filing of a declaration of insolvency was of itself a complete act of bankruptcy, without being followed by an advertisement of the same in the Gazette, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 6. Therefore, where a trader gave execution creditors notice that he had filed a declaration of insolvency, and thereby committed an act of bankruptcy, this was a sufficient notice of a prior act of bankruptcy to deprive the creditors of the protection of 2 & 3 Vict. c. 29, s. 1. Follett v. Hoppe, 5 C. B. 226; 17 L. J., C. P. 76; 11 Jur. 974.

A trader, having been arrested on a ca. sa., at the suit of the defendant, who, as well as the sheriff's officer, had received a notice of a prior act of bankruptcy, paid over a portion of his assets to the officer, in order to procure his discharge, and the officer paid over the amount to the defendant.—Held, that the bankrupt's assignees were entitled to recover back from the defendant the amounts paid in an action for money had and received. Id.

A trader, being indebted to the defendant, on the 1st of July filed a declaration of insolvency, pursuant to 5 & 6 Vict. c. 122, s. 22, and, on the following day, gave notice thereof to the defendant. At a subsequent period of the same day the defendant levied an execution on the trader's goods. A fiat in bankruptcy issued on the day following.—Held, that the act of bankruptcy dated from the time of filing the declaration of insolvency, and that the defendant, having had notice thereof, was not entitled to the proceeds of the execution within 2 & 3 Vict. c. 29, s. 1. Green v. Laurie, 1 Ex. 335; 17 L. J., Ex. 61; 11 Jur. 997.

— Filing Petition for Arrangement.]—

Notice to an execution creditor that his debtor has filed a petition for arrangement under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 76, is notice of an act of bankruptcy within s. 133, provided an adjudication is filed within two months after the petition for arrangement is dismissed. Edwards v. Gabriel, 6 H. & N. 701; 30 L. J., Ex. 245; 7 Jur., N. S. 634; 4 L. T. 303; 9 W. R. 669. Affirmed, 7 H. & N. 520; 31 L. J., Ex. 113; 8 Jur., N. S. 592; 10 W. R. 95—Ex. Ch.

To whom given—Clerk to Creditor's Attorney.]

—An intimation given by a clerk of a defendant's attorney to a clerk of the plaintiff's attorney, that the defendant had committed an act of bankruptcy, the clerk to whom it is given not being shewn to be a managing clerk, or to have communicated the matter to his principal, is not such a notice as will defeat an execution. Penneil v. Stephens, 7 C. B. 987; 7 D. & L. 133; 18 L. J., C. P. 291; 13 Jur. 766.

— Marriage Settlement.]—A trader, previously to and in consideration of his marriage, which was solemnized in pursuance of an engagement of several years' standing, the fulfilment of which had been delayed by circumstances not connected with the state of his affairs, made a settlement of part of his property. After his marriage he was adjudged bankrupt. Before the execution of the settlement he had, to the knowledge of the intended wife, committed acts of bankruptcy subsequently to his contracting the debt due to the petitioning creditor, and within twelve months before the adjudication:—Held, that the settlement was invalid as against the assignees. Fraser v. Thompson, 4 De G. & J. 659.

A trader, being in insolvent circumstances, covenanted, by an ante-nuptial settlement, to pay 500*l.* to trustees, to be held by them upon trust for such persons as the intended wife should appoint, and subject thereto upon trust for the intended wife for life for her separate use, then for the husband for life, and then, as to the capital, in trust for the survivor. The settlement also extended to property belonging to the intended wife, who was wholly unaware of the intended husband's insolvency:—Held, on the husband's bankruptcy, that the settlement was valid against the assignees, and entitled the trustees to prove for the 500*l.* McBurnie, Ex parte, 4 De G., Mac. & G. 441; 21 L. J., Bk. 15; 16 Jur. 807.

— Sheriff's Officer.]—Notice to a sheriff's officer in possession under a fi. fa. of an act of bankruptcy committed by the defendant, is not notice to the execution creditor. Ramsay v. Eaton, 10 M. & W. 22; 2 D., N. S. 219; 6 Jur. 489.

— Creditor's Solicitor.]—Where an act of bankruptcy had been committed, and the fact was communicated to the attorney of an execution creditor, previously to the issuing of a fi. fa. sued out by such attorney:—Held, sufficient (although the fiat issued after the writ was lodged with the sheriff, and notwithstanding the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 29, s. 1) to render the execution of no validity as against the assignees. Rothwell v. Timbreil, 1 D., N. S. 778; 6 Jur. 691.

Solicitor acting for Creditor's Solicitor.]

—On the 22nd November, 1858, an execution was put into the house of W., a trader. He left his house on the 23rd, and thereby committed an act of bankruptcy. On the 24th, U., an attorney at S., was informed by the attorney of the creditors that W. had committed an act of bankruptcy. On the morning of the 25th U. received a letter from the attorneys of the execution creditor, instructing him in the matter, which, after directing him to get an assignment from the sheriff, ended thus, "You will be good enough to let this have your immediate attention, as, if anything is to be done, it must be done quickly." After the receipt of this letter, U. was told by the auctioneer that he had received notice that W. had committed an act of bankruptcy. U. sent for the sheriff's officer, who said that he had also received notice. U. nevertheless told the officer to get an assignment to the execution creditor executed by the sheriff, which was accordingly done. On the evening of the 25th U. wrote to the attorneys of the execution creditor, saying, "I fear my services have been called in when too late." In an action against the execution creditor by the assignees of W., who had been adjudged a bankrupt—Held, that the letter of the attorneys for the execution creditor constituted U. such an agent of the execution creditor that notice to him of an act of bankruptcy was notice to the execution creditor; and that the information U. received, and his letter to the attorneys for the execution creditor, shewed that he had notice of an act of bankruptcy before the execution of the assignment. Brewin or Brown v. Briscoe, 2 El. & El. 116; 28 L. J., Q. B. 329; 5 Jur., N. S. 1206; 7 W. R. 584.

— One of Two Co-Plaintiffs.]—If execution is issued in the name of two parties jointly interested as co-plaintiffs, and one knows of an act of bankruptcy already committed by the defendant, his knowledge is prima facie the knowledge of both, and the execution was not protected by 2 & 3 Vict. c. 29, s. 1, even though the execution was, in fact, sued out by one party only of whose knowledge there was no evidence. Edwards v. Cooper, 11 Q. B. 33.

— When given—Sent by Post.]—A party to whom notice of an act of bankruptcy is sent by post is not to be deemed to have had notice until the day when, in the ordinary course of post, he would receive the letter containing it. Loader v. Hiscock, 1 F. & F. 132.

Notice of prior Act of Bankruptcy—Onus of Proof lies on Person supporting the Transaction.]

—Where a person claims protection against the title of the trustee relating back to an act of bankruptcy committed prior to the transaction sought to be protected, the onus lies on the person supporting the transaction to prove that it was entered into without notice of the prior act of bankruptcy, not on the trustee to prove such notice. Cartwright, Ex parte, Joy, In re, 44 L. T. 883—C. A.

b. Under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869.

Notice must be Specific.]—The notice of an act of bankruptcy, in order to invalidate an execution, ought to convey specific information as to the facts constituting the act of bankruptcy, and ought not to leave room for doubt. Beans v. Hallam, 6 L. R., Q. B. 713; 40 L. J., Q. B. 229; 24 L. T. 939; 18 W. R. 1158.

A notice stating circumstances, which may or may not amount to an act of bankruptcy, is insufficient. Id.

A creditor obtained judgment against a non-trader, and issued a fi. fa. The sheriff seized thereunder his goods. Prior to the seizure, he had executed a deed of assignment of all his estate and effects for the benefit of his creditors, and thereby committed an act of bankruptcy. On the day after the seizure, the attorneys of the debtor wrote to the attorney of the execution creditor a letter as follows:—"B. made an assignment of what goods he had, and it was arranged that his daughter should raise the money, but this we find was never finally arrived at." The sheriff sold the goods under the execution; and the debtor was adjudicated a bankrupt on the next day:—Held, that the letter of the attorneys was insufficient as a notice of the act of bankruptcy; and that the execution creditor was entitled to the proceeds of the sale. Ib.

Notice of Petition is a sufficient Notice.]—A notice to an execution creditor which states that a petition in bankruptcy against the execution debtor has been filed on a date, at a court, and by a person named in the notice, is sufficient notice of an act of bankruptcy to prevent the execution being a protected transaction within 32 & 33 Vict. c. 71, s. 95, sub-s. 3, since such creditor ought to know that the petition would contain a statement that the debtor has committed an act of bankruptcy. Hooking v. Acraman (12 M. & W. 170) commented on; Lucas v. Dicker, 6 Q. B. D. 84; 50 L. J., Q. B. 190; 43 L. T. 429; 29 W. R. 115—C. A.

Notice of Facts sufficient without Creditor drawing Inference of Law.]—A person having notice of facts from which a court or jury would infer that an act of bankruptcy had been committed, must be considered as having notice that an act of bankruptcy had been committed, notwithstanding his oath that he did not in fact draw the inference. Snowball, Ex parte, Douglas, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 534; 41 L. J., Bk. 49; 26 L. T. 894; 20 W. R. 786.

"Available for Adjudication."]—The expression "notice of any act of bankruptcy available for adjudication" used in s. 31 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, means notice of an act of bankruptcy which would have been available for the making of the particular adjudication under which the proof is tendered. Crosbie, Ex parte, Bedell, In re, 7 Ch. D. 123; 47 L. J., Bk. 19; 37 L. T. 583; 26 W. R. 119—C. A.

Therefore a creditor who contracted a debt with a bankrupt with notice only of an act of bankruptcy committed by him more than six months before the presentation of the petition upon which the adjudication is made is not precluded by s. 31 from proving under the adjudication. Ib.

The words "notice of an act of bankruptcy available for adjudication" in ss. 94 and 95 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, mean notice of an Act of bankruptcy which would have been available for the making of the adjudication actually made, that is, an act of bankruptcy committed within six months from the presentation of the petition on which the adjudication was founded. Gilbey, Ex parte, Bedell, In re, 8 Ch. D. 248; 47 L. J., Bk. 49; 38 L. T. 728; 26 W. R. 768—C. A.

A., a trader, committed an act of bankruptcy. More than six months afterwards he was adjudicated a bankrupt upon a second such act. Between the dates of the first and second acts, money was paid to him by a depository having notice at that time of the first act of bankruptcy:

—Held, that the payment was protected by s. 94, sub-s. 2 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. Quilter, Ex parte, Barnes, In re, 30 W. R. 739—C. A.

The appellants claimed to retain money in respect of a transaction in relation to the property of the bankrupt, entered into by them at a time when they had notice of an act of bankruptcy committed by the bankrupt, to which the title of the trustee related back, but committed more than six months before the presentation of the petition on which he was subsequently adjudicated a bankrupt, on the ground that they were protected by s. 95, sub-s. 1, as having had no notice of an act of bankruptcy available for adjudication:—Held, that they were not protected. Tilleard, Ex parte, Barnes, In re, 30 W. R. 568. Practically overruled by preceding case.

Debtor Summons.]—After the plaintiff had commenced an action against the defendant for dissolution of partnership, the plaintiff took out a debtor summons against the defendant. The defendant failed to comply with it, and the plaintiff filed a petition of bankruptcy against him based on the summons. Another creditor afterwards took out a debtor summons against the defendant, and, on his non-compliance with it, filed a petition and obtained adjudication of bankruptcy against him. Before the adjudication, and without notice of the act of bankruptcy on which it was based, the plaintiff entered into an agreement with the defendant for compromise of the action, which the trustees in the bankruptcy sought to impeach as void against the creditors:—Held, that although the non-compliance with the plaintiff's debtor summons was not an act of bankruptcy available for adjudication on the petition of the particular creditor who obtained the adjudication against the defendant, it was an act of bankruptcy "available for adjudication" within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 94, and therefore the agreement for compromise between the plaintiff and defendant was not a protected transaction under that section. Crosbie, Ex parte, 7 Ch. D. 123, distinguished, and the judgment of James, L. J., explained. Hood v. Newby, 21 Ch. D. 605, 52 L. J., Ch. 204; 47 L. T. 721; 31 W. R. 185—C. A.

— Failure to pay Composition.]—On the 12th of November a debtor filed a liquidation petition. The creditors resolved to accept a composition. The debtor failed to pay it when due, and on the 28th of May he was adjudicated a bankrupt upon a petition filed on the 29th of April, the act of bankruptcy being the filing of the liquidation petition. On the 29th of March he had executed a mortgage of leasehold property, in substitution for a mortgage, given to the same creditor two years before the liquidation petition was filed, of a lease which afterwards turned out to be void:—Held, that though, when the mortgage of the 29th of March was executed, the mortgagee had notice of the filing of the liquidation petition, yet it was not notice of an act of bankruptcy then available for adjudication against the debtor, and consequently that the mortgage was protected by the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 95. Hoare, Ex parte, Walton, In re, 16 L. R., Eq. 625; 43 L. J., Bk. 38; 29 L. T. 140; 21 W. R. 909.

Executions against Goods—Onus is on Creditors.]—In the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 95, sub-s. 3, "act of bankruptcy" means an act of bankruptcy which has been committed prior to the time of seizure. Schulte, Ex parte, Matanile, or Matulle, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 409; 30 L. T. 478; 22 W. R. 462.

The onus is on the execution creditor, who claims the protection of that section to prove that he had no notice of any prior act of bankruptcy. Ib.

Notice to the sheriff's officers in possession under an execution of an act of bankruptcy is not notice to the creditor. Ib.

XVII. LIQUIDATION BY ARRANGEMENT UNDER THE BANKRUPTCY ACT, 1869.

1. PETITION FOR LIQUIDATION.

By Lunatic not so Found.]—A liquidation petition cannot be signed by a next friend on behalf of a lunatic not so found by inquisition:—Semble, that, in the case of a lunatic so found by inquisition, the Court of Lunacy might have jurisdiction to direct that a liquidation petition should be signed on his behalf. Cohen, Ex parte, Cohen, In re, 13 Ch. D. 183; 39 L. T. 645; 27 W. R. 387—C. A.

Misdescription of Debtor.]—A debtor described himself in his liquidation petition by his business address only, omitting all mention of his private residence:—Held, that this was a misdescription; that the defect was not a mere formal one, but was a matter of substance; and that resolutions passed by the creditors in favour of a liquidation by arrangement ought not to be registered. Jerningham, Ex parte, Jerningham, In re, 9 Ch. D. 466; 47 L. J., Bk. 116; 39 L. T. 186; 27 W. R. 157—C. A.

An application for leave to amend the petition, and summon a fresh first meeting of the creditors, was refused. Ib.

The debtor presented his petition for liquidation upon the 31st August, 1881. He therein described himself as an engineer, giving a private address. Previously thereto, and down to February, 1881, he had carried on business at first in partnership, but afterwards by himself, as an iron founder, at another address. In February he made over this business to his (the debtor's) father, but until the month of May in that year, it was continued to be carried on in the debtor's name. On the 30th August the debtor's furniture, which formed, as it appeared, the whole of his assets, was seized by the sheriff under an elegit:—Held, that the description in the petition was insufficient and misleading, and that resolutions for liquidation by arrangement and giving to the debtor his immediate discharge could not be registered upon this ground, and also that the resolutions were passed in the interest of the debtor, and not of the creditors. Kershaw, Ex parte, Woodhouse, In re, 45 L. T. 687.

In a statement of affairs produced by a debtor, he described some of his assets as the lease of a house No. 15, Motcombe Street, Belgrave Square, but in his petition described himself as of 165, Ferndale Road, Clapham, in the county of Surrey, and, on being examined, admitted that he occasionally slept at Motcombe Street:—Held, that the description of the debtor was insufficient. Pulbrook, Ex parte, Lloyd, In re, 48 L. T. 128.

When Objection to be taken.]—Any objection to the description of a debtor in the advertisement in the Gazette must be taken before the registration of the resolutions passed by the creditors. Cooper, Ex parte, Green, In re, 39 L. T. 260.

Trustee not bound by Misdescription.]—When a trader-debtor falsely describes himself as a non-trader in his petition for liquidation, the trustee of his estate is not stopped from proving that he is a trader. Ross, Ex parte, Hare, In re, 28 L. T. 450; 21 W. R. 560.

Farmer and Cattle Dealer described as "Cattle Dealer."]—A farmer, who had also carried on the business of a cattle dealer, filed a liquidation petition, in which he gave his correct address, but described himself only as a cattle dealer:—Held, by Bacon, C. J., and by the Court of Appeal, that this was not a misdescription such as to invalidate the proceedings, and that the resolutions passed by the creditors ought to be registered. But leave was given to amend the petition by adding the description "farmer." Kirkwood, Ex parte, Mason, In re, 11 Ch. D. 724; 40 L. T. 566; 27 W. R. 806—C. A.

Where Assets very Small.]—A debtor who has practically no assets distributable among his creditors is not entitled to file a liquidation petition. Aaronson, Ex parte, Aaronson, In re, 7 Ch. D. 713; 47 L. J., Bk. 60; 38 L. T. 243; 26 W. R. 470—C. A.

A debtor filed a liquidation petition, and the creditors unanimously resolved to accept a composition of 3d. in the pound. The debts were 130*l.*; the assets amounted to 7*l.* The registrar refused to register the resolutions, though no creditor opposed, on the ground that there were no "available assets for distribution among the creditors":—Held, that, as all the requirements of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and the rules had been complied with, the resolutions must be registered. Elworthy, Ex parte, Elworthy, In re, 20 L. R., Eq. 742; 44 L. J., Bk. 123; 32 L. T. 699; 23 W. R. 790.

The statement of a debtor who had filed a liquidation petition shewed that his debts amounted to 540*l.*, and that his assets were only 32*l.* The creditors resolved upon a liquidation. One creditor opposed the registration of the resolutions:—Held, that the petition was an abuse of the procedure of the court, and that the registration had been rightly refused. Staff, Ex parte, Staff, In re, 20 L. R., Eq. 775; 44 L. J., Bk. 137; 32 L. T. 40; 23 W. R. 950.

There is no absolute rule that a debtor who has no assets cannot file a liquidation petition. Hudson, Ex parte, Walton, In re, 22 Ch. D. 773; 52 L. J., Ch. 581; 47 L. T. 674; 31 W. R. 372—C. A.

Second Petition.]—A debtor filed a petition for liquidation, but his statement shewed no available assets. The creditors nevertheless passed a resolution for a composition of one shilling in the pound, which was accordingly paid to them. The resolution not having been filed within the three days limited by the 284th rule, the debtor presented a second petition under which the creditors passed a similar resolution:—Held, that the presentation of the second petition was regular, and that the resolution to accept the composition ought to be registered. Where there has been actual payment of a composition no security is necessary. Thomas, Ex parte, Pres., In re, 40 L. T. 835.

Petition Filed after Office Hours.—A liquidation petition which is in fact filed by a debtor in the proper office is good, although it may have been filed after office hours. Jones, Ex parte, Williams, In re, 42 L. T. 157.

Effect of Filing—Vesting of Property in Trustee.—Filing a petition for liquidation by arrangement is an act of bankruptcy, and the vesting of the debtor's goods in the trustee relates back to the filing of the petition; so that an execution creditor, with notice of the petition, cannot seize the goods of the debtor, and hold them as against a subsequently-appointed trustee. Duignan, Ex parte, Bissell, In re, 11 L. R., Eq. 604; 40 L. J., Bk. 33; 24 L. T. 237; 19 W. R. 711. Affirmed, 6 L. R., Ch. 605; 40 L. J., Bk. 68; 25 L. T. 284; 19 W. R. 1127.

— Where Composition accepted.—After a petition has been filed by a debtor for liquidation by arrangement, it is at the option of the requisite majority of creditors to determine whether the liquidation shall be effected by means of the appointment of a trustee, or whether they shall accept a composition, the debtor being left in possession of his assets. If the creditors adopt the latter course, there is then no power to deprive secured creditors of their securities; no relation of title to any act of bankruptcy prior to the presentation of the petition; nor anything in which the creditors who have resolved to receive a composition have any interest, beyond enforcing the performance of that condition on which they agreed to accept the composition. Birmingham Gaslight and Coke Company, Ex parte, Adams, In re, 11 L. R., Eq. 204; 40 L. J., Bk. 1; 24 L. T. 42; 19 W. R. 123.

Debtor Dying after Filing.—A debtor filed a petition for liquidation by arrangement, and the same day notices were sent out convening a general meeting of creditors. He died the following day. The creditors desired that proceedings might be continued as if he were alive:—Held, that the court had no jurisdiction to order the continuation of the proceedings. Obbard, In re, 24 L. T. 145; 19 W. R. 563.

2. STAYING BANKRUPTCY PROCEEDINGS.

A creditor, having presented a petition for an adjudication against his debtor, ought not to have his proceedings stayed by injunction merely because before the adjudication is actually made the debtor himself presents a petition for liquidation by arrangement or composition. Dimond, Ex parte, Williams, In re, 5 L. R., Ch. 743; 39 L. J., Bk. 47; 23 L. T. 292; 18 W. R. 1123.

Petition Filed by one of Joint Debtors.—When a creditor of joint debtors is proceeding against them jointly, and one of them takes proceedings for liquidation of his affairs, the court will not restrain the proceedings of his creditor against his joint creditors. De Vecchj, In re, Isaacs, Ex parte, 6 L. R., Ch. 58; 40 L. J., Bk. 19; 22 L. T. 523; 19 W. R. 38.

3. MEETINGS OF CREDITORS, THEIR DEBTS AND RIGHT TO VOTE.

Notice to be given to all Creditors.—When a petition has been presented and a resolution passed at a meeting of creditors, such resolution cannot be registered unless all the creditors have received notice of the meeting. Rogers, Ex parte, 22 L. T. 283.

Signing Notice summoning Meeting.—It is not necessary that the notice summoning the first general meeting of creditors under a liquidation petition should be signed by the debtor's attorney with his own hand. Hirst, Ex parte, Hirst, In re, 18 L. R., Eq. 704; 43 L. J., Bk. 130.

The notice is sufficient if the attorney's name is subscribed by his clerk by his direction. Ib.

Proof of Notice.—Rules 97 and 98 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1870, apply to bankruptcy only, and do not apply to liquidation by arrangement or composition. Dean, Ex parte, Dean, In re, 13 Ch. D. 313; 41 L. T. 602; 28 W. R. 204—C. A.

The affidavit, made in accordance with r. 256, of the posting to creditors of notices of a general meeting under a liquidation petition, is only prima facie, not conclusive, evidence that the creditors have received the notices. Ib.

The registrar has a judicial discretion to require further evidence of the receipt of the notices, and, if satisfied that some of the creditors have not received notice, to direct the summoning of a fresh meeting, and the Court of Appeal will not interfere with the exercise of his discretion, unless very clearly satisfied that he has exercised it wrongly. Ib.

Place of Meeting.—The affidavit of a debtor filed with his liquidation petition stated that Stone would be the most convenient place for the meeting of the creditors, but the notices sent out by the registrar to the creditors summoned them to meet at Stafford:—Held, that, as no formal order had been made by the court to change the place of meeting mentioned in the affidavit, the proceedings were invalid, and that the resolutions passed by the creditors could not be registered. But leave was given to the debtor to summon a fresh first meeting. Mayer, In re, Lewis, Ex parte, 4 Ch. D. 519; 46 L. J., Bk. 33; 35 L. T. 915; 25 W. R. 275.

Adjourning Meeting.—In liquidation by arrangement a resolution to adjourn a meeting is an "ordinary resolution," and therefore must be decided by a majority in value of the creditors present, personally or by proxy, at the meeting and voting on such resolution. Orde, Ex parte, Horsley, In re, 6 L. R., Ch. 881; 40 L. J., Bk. 60; 25 L. T. 400; 19 W. R. 1103.

— After Rejection of Resolution for Composition.—At the first meeting under a liquidation petition the debtor offered a composition. His solicitor took the votes of the creditors and found that the requisite majority in favour of it could not be obtained, but the question was not formally put from the chair, nor was any resolution reduced into writing. A resolution to adjourn the meeting was then carried, and at the adjourned meeting the debtor's offer was accepted, and the resolution to accept it was duly confirmed at the second meeting. The resolution for adjournment was written and signed, and filed with the proceedings:—Held, that the adjournment and all the subsequent proceedings were invalid, the offer having been rejected by the first meeting. Till, Ex parte, Ratcliffe, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 631; 44 L. J., Bk. 103; 32 L. T. 521; 23 W. R. 670. Reversing S. C., 32 L. T. 504; 23 W. R. 636.

— Removing Proof used at First Meeting.]

—When the creditors at the first meeting, under a petition for liquidation, only voted an adjournment, a proof which had been inadvertently admitted, and in respect of which the creditor had voted for the adjournment, may be taken off the file, under circumstances shewing that the party in whose name the proof was made as the principal was only an agent in the matter. Anon., 22 L. T. 151.

Summoning fresh Meeting of Creditors.]

The power to direct a fresh meeting to be summoned extends not only to a case where, through accident or mistake on the part of the debtor, no valid resolution has been passed, but also to a case where, owing to a mistake on the part of the creditors, or from any other cause, no valid resolution has been passed. Terrell, In re, Sheffield and Rotherham Joint Stock Banking Company, Ex parte, 4 Ch. D. 293; 46 L. J., Bk. 47; 35 L. T. 646; 25 W. R. 153—C. A. See Mayer, In re, 4 Ch. D. 519; 46 L. J., Bk. 33; 35 L. T. 915; 25 W. R. 275. Buckley, Ex parte, Buckley, In re, 16 Ch. D. 513; 44 L. T. 39; 29 W. R. 920—C. A.

A debtor, who was a member of a partnership firm, filed a petition for liquidation. In the statement produced by the debtor to the first meeting of his creditors, he made no distinction between his joint and separate debts and assets. The creditors passed a resolution for liquidation, but by reason of the irregularity of the debtor's statement, the resolution was not registered. The debtor then obtained an order to summon a fresh first meeting:—Held, that inasmuch as no valid resolution could have been passed at the meeting, and, consequently, the creditors had had no opportunity of expressing their opinion as to a liquidation, the court was justified in permitting a fresh first meeting. Gibbs, Ex parte, Webb, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 382; 44 L. J., Bk. 73; 32 L. T. 292; 23 W. R. 529.

Right to Vote—Production of Bills of Exchange.]—It is sufficient for the validity of the vote of a creditor who holds bills of exchange or promissory notes signed by the debtor if he produces the bills or notes before the registration of the resolutions upon which he has voted. Ashworth, Ex parte, Hoare, In re, 18 L. R., Eq. 705; 43 L. J., Bk. 142; 30 L. T. 906; 22 W. R. 925.

The creditors of a debtor at their first meeting resolved on an adjournment. Some of the creditors who voted in favour of the adjournment held bills of exchange and bonds of the debtor, which they did not produce. If their votes had been rejected the adjournment would not have been duly carried. At the adjourned meeting these creditors produced their bills of exchange and bonds, and a liquidation was then resolved upon:—Held, that the production of the bills and bonds at the adjourned meeting was sufficient. Id.

— Secured Creditor.]—If a secured creditor votes without producing his security, his vote is valid, but his security is forfeited. Id.

Whether a secured creditor, who in his proof states his security, and afterwards votes at a liquidation meeting in respect of his whole debt, thereby abandons his security, quære. Ball, Ex parte, Shepherd, In re, 10 Ch. D. 667; 48 L. J., Bk. 57; 27 W. R. 563—C. A.

— Amount of Debt unascertained — Annuity.]

—A debtor who filed a liquidation petition had, by a separation deed between himself and his wife, covenanted to pay to a trustee an annuity, during the joint lives of himself and his wife, for the maintenance of the wife and a child of the marriage. The annuity was to cease in case the husband and wife should cohabit again:—Held, that the value of the annuity not having been ascertained, the trustee was not entitled to vote in respect of it at a meeting of creditors under the petition. Pearce, Ex parte, Grieces, In re, 13 Ch. D. 262; 41 L. T. 742; 28 W. R. 404—C. A.

— Untaxed Costs.]—A liquidating debtor was indebted to a creditor in 357*l.* recovered by verdict, and costs, which had not been taxed. The creditor attended the first meeting of creditors, and stated in his affidavit that the debtor was indebted to him in 357*l.* on the verdict and an amount of costs which he estimated at 200*l.*; and claimed to vote in respect of the aggregate amount. The creditor had been restrained by injunction from taking any further proceedings in the action:—Held, that the estimated amount of untaxed costs was an unliquidated debt within the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 16, sub-s. 3, and that he could not vote in respect thereof. Ruffle, Ex parte, Dummelow, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 997; 42 L. J., Bk. 82; 29 L. T. 384; 21 W. R. 932.

The proper course for the creditor to pursue was either to apply for leave to sign judgment and tax his costs, or else to swear to such a sum as the costs when taxed would at least amount to. Id.

— By Creditor who has Sold his Debt.]

The fact that a creditor who has signed a notice summoning a general meeting for the purpose of removing the trustee, and who has voted at the meeting in favour of a resolution for removing the trustee, had previously sold his debt to another creditor, will not invalidate the notice or the resolution. Evans, Ex parte, Baum, In re, 13 Ch. D. 424; 49 L. J., Bk. 25; 42 L. T. 384; 28 W. R. 500—C. A.

Practice on Voting.]—All creditors present, personally or by proxy, are to be considered as voting on every resolution so long as their proofs are in the hands of the chairman. Ord, Ex parte, Horsley, In re, 6 L. R., Ch. 881; 40 L. J., Bk. 60; 25 L. T. 400; 19 W. R. 1103.

The assent of each such creditor must be evidenced by his signing the resolution when reduced to writing, and if he does not sign it, he must be taken to have voted in the negative. Ib.

A creditor who does not wish to vote on any resolution must, before the resolution is put, withdraw his proof. Ib.

A resolution for adjournment requires to be passed with the same formalities as other resolutions. Ib.

At a meeting of creditors resolutions were proposed for a liquidation by arrangement. A large creditor attended by proxy and opposed the resolutions, and voted against them on the show of hands, but afterwards signed them. If this creditor should be excluded, the resolutions were not passed by the requisite majority:—Held, that the resolutions were duly passed and ought to be registered; for that, according to the act, the votes of the signing creditors were determined by their signatures; and the course which they had taken at the meeting could not be looked to. Pooley, Ex parte, Russell, In re, 5 L. R., Ch. 722; 40 L. J., Bk. 41; 23 L. T. 275; 18 W. R. 1013.

At a meeting of creditors, called in pursuance of a petition for liquidation by arrangement, resolutions were proposed. They were opposed, and on a show of hands, several creditors, including a principal creditor, voted against the resolutions. This creditor afterwards signed the resolutions. And a requisite majority of assents was thus obtained, which would not have been the case if this creditor had been dissentient:—Held, that the resolutions ought to be registered, the evidence afforded by the signature being conclusive, whatever might have been the conduct of the voters at a show of hands. Ib.

A creditor, who is present at a general meeting of creditors under a liquidation petition, cannot be considered as present on behalf of another creditor for whom he holds a proxy, notwithstanding the fact that the proxy is on the file of proceedings, unless he has done some act to shew that he intends to be present on that occasion on behalf of his principal as well as on his own behalf. Orde, Ex parte (6 L. R., Ch. 881), distinguished. Evans, Ex parte, Baum, In re, 13 Ch. D. 424; 49 L. J., Bk. 25; 42 L. T. 384; 28 W. R. 500—C. A.

— Authority conferred by Proxy.—The appointment of a proxy under the Bankruptcy Act and rules only confers on the person so appointed an authority to represent his principal; it does not necessarily follow that he in fact represents his principal on all subsequent occasions when he is present at a meeting, unless he would have no right to be present in any other capacity. Ib.

— Blank Proxy—Implied Authority to insert Name.—A creditor of a liquidating debtor, who signs a proxy in blank and sends it to his solicitor, who forwards it to the debtor's solicitor, without any express instructions as to the use to be made of it, thereby confers on him an implied authority to fill up the proxy with his own name and to vote on his behalf. Duce, Ex parte, Whitehouse, In re, 13 Ch. D. 429; 42 L. T. 385; 28 W. R. 501—C. A.

A proxy paper signed by a creditor, leaving the name of the proxy in blank, may be filled up by the person to whom the creditor has intrusted

it, with a verbal authority to use it, and that when so filled up it will be valid. Lancaster, Ex parte, 5 Ch. D. 911; 46 L. J., Bk. 90; 37 L. T. 674; 25 W. R. 669—C. A. Reversing 46 L. J., Bk. 55; 36 L. T. 72; 25 W. R. 380.

At a first meeting of creditors resolutions for composition were moved; the votes were ascertained, shewing the resolutions were not carried. The debtor's solicitor then put in a proof for another debt, and voted as proxy in respect of it. This vote was admitted, and by means of it the requisite majority was created, and the resolutions were declared to be carried:—Held, that the whole matter was in fieri, and that the vote was properly admitted. Ib.

Proxy on Behalf of Lunatic Creditor.—The committee of the estate of a lunatic who is a creditor of a liquidating debtor has no power, without the sanction of the Court of Lunacy, to appoint a proxy to vote on behalf of the lunatic in the liquidation proceedings, or to waive any of his rights against the debtor's estate. Ball, Ex parte, Shepherd, In re, 10 Ch. D. 667; 48 L. J., Bk. 57; 40 L. T. 141; 27 W. R. 563—C. A.

Objection to Creditors Voting.—An objection to the proof of a creditor who has voted at the first meeting of creditors on a composition resolution is in time if taken at the second meeting. Weil, Ex parte, Mentrop, In re, 5 Ch. D. 345; 46 L. J., Bk. 84; 36 L. T. 533; 25 W. R. 552—C. A.

Semble, that the objection would be in time if taken after the second meeting and before the registration of the resolution. Ib.

4. DEBTOR'S STATEMENT OF AFFAIRS.

Joint and Separate Debts and Assets.—In a petition for liquidation it is the duty of the debtor in his statement of affairs to distinguish between his joint and separate assets and liabilities. Cockayne, Ex parte, 15 L. R., Eq. 218; 42 L. J., Bk. 71; 28 L. T. 678; 21 W. R. 749.

Where a debtor had not so distinguished his assets and debts, and the registrar in consequence refused to register a special resolution for liquidation by arrangement:—Held, that this decision was correct. Ib.

When a liquidating debtor has been formerly in partnership, his statement of affairs must shew which are his joint and which are his separate assets and liabilities, and if the statement produced at the first meeting of the creditors does not shew this distinction, the resolutions passed at the meeting are invalid and will not be registered. Gibbs, Ex parte, Webb, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 382; 44 L. J., Bk. 73; 32 L. T. 292; 23 W. R. 592.

A debtor, who in his liquidation petition describes himself as having been formerly in partnership, ought in his statement of affairs to distinguish between his joint and separate debts and assets, or to state expressly that no debts and no assets of the former partnership exist. Buckley, Ex parte, Buckley, In re, 16 Ch. D. 513; 44 L. T. 39; 29 W. R. 920—C. A.

If the statement of affairs fails to do this, resolutions passed by the creditors under the petition ought not to be registered. The court, however, granted leave to summon a fresh first meeting of the creditors. Ib.

Statement should not be supplemented by Affidavit.—The statement of affairs ought not to be supplemented by affidavits filed after the meeting of the creditors. Ib.

Accuracy of Statement.—In the statement of affairs of a debtor who had filed a liquidation petition, there was inserted a large debt due to an illegal association. At the first meeting of creditors a liquidation was resolved on:—Held, that the resolutions ought to be registered. Day, Ex parte, 1 Ch. D. 699; 45 L. J., Bk. 53; 33 L. T. 867; 24 W. R. 492.

Jurisdiction of Registrar.—When a liquidation has been resolved upon, the registrar on the application to register the resolution has no jurisdiction to entertain any question as to the accuracy of the debtor's statement of affairs. Walter, Ex parte, Webb, In re, 2 Ch. D. 326; 45 L. J., Bk. 105; 34 L. T. 701; 24 W. R. 834—C. A.

It is for the statutory majority of the creditors to decide as to the sufficiency of the debtor's statement, and all inquiries as to the correctness of the different items of the debtor's statement must be made at the meeting of the creditors, and not before the registrar on the application for registration. Ib.

When Objection should be taken.—If the majority of the creditors has passed the resolution not for the benefit of the creditors at large, but from motives of kindness to the debtor, the objection should be raised on the application for registration; but if the debtor's statement is fraudulent, the question of fraud ought not to be entered into on the application for registration, but a distinct application should be made to rescind the resolution, or to vacate the registration if it has been registered. Ib.

Same Statement used on two Occasions.—Registration of the resolutions passed by the creditors under a liquidation petition having been refused, leave was given to the debtor, a trader, to summon a fresh first meeting of the creditors. The fresh meeting was held more than two months after the original meeting, but the debtor produced the same statement of his affairs as he had produced at the original meeting:—Held, that there being no evidence that the state of the debtor's affairs had changed in the interval, it could not be taken that the statement was necessarily inaccurate. Early, Ex parte, Golding, In re, 13 Ch. D. 300; 42 L. T. 298; 28 W. R. 310—C. A.

Creditor's Knowledge of Inaccuracy.—The statement of the debts and assets of a liquidating debtor shewed that his assets covered his liabilities, but his principal assets consisted of houses which were heavily mortgaged. The majority of creditors passed a resolution to accept a composition of 10s. in the pound. A dissentient creditor applied to set aside all the proceedings, producing evidence that the debtor had undervalued his property. The debtor filed an affidavit stating that his creditors accepted the composition with a full knowledge of the state of his property, and from a desire to assist him and prevent his being completely ruined, and also to avoid waiting for the realization of the property, which would have taken a considerable time:—Held, that as the dissentient creditor, as well as the others, knew that the assets exceeded the liabilities, there was no ground for setting aside the proceedings. Linsley, Ex parte, Harper, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 290; 43 L. J., Bk. 84; 29 L. T. 857.

5. OMISSION TO INSERT CREDITOR'S NAME AND DEBT IN STATEMENT OF AFFAIRS.

A certificate of discharge obtained by a debtor who has filed a petition for liquidation by arrangement under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 125, is valid against a creditor, whose name has been omitted by the debtor from the list of creditors delivered to the registrar. Elmslie v. Corrie, 4 Q. B. D. 295; 48 L. J., Q. B. 462; 40 L. T. 150; 27 W. R. 279—C. A. Affirming S. C., 39 L. T. 107.

The certificate of discharge of a liquidation debtor is a good answer to a claim in respect of a debt due before the discharge, though the creditor's name was omitted from the debtor's statement, and though he had no notice of the proceedings in liquidation. Heather v. Webb, 2 C. P. D. 1; 46 L. J., C. P. 89; 25 W. R. 253.

To a statement of defence, setting up that the defendant was discharged from the claim by an order of discharge obtained by him as the result of proceedings for liquidation by arrangement subsequently to the accrual of the claim, the plaintiffs replied that they had had no notice of the liquidation proceedings until long after they had been concluded, and that the defendant had not inserted their names as his creditors, or their debt in any list, statement or document forming any part of the proceedings, and that subsequently to the close of the proceedings the defendant had promised to pay the claim:—Held, a bad reply. Ib.

Restraining Action.—An action having been brought against the debtor by a creditor whose name was not inserted in the debtor's statement of affairs, and who had no notice of the liquidation proceedings, the debtor obtained an injunction restraining further proceedings in the action:—Held, that the right of the creditor had been prejudiced by the resolutions, and that the action ought not to be restrained. Harold, Ex parte, Meade, In re, 3 Ch. D. 119; 45 L. J., Bk. 121; 34 L. T. 649; 24 W. R. 903.

Holder of Bill of Exchange.—In the statement of debts produced by a debtor at the meetings of creditors, at which resolutions for accepting a composition were passed, the debtor had inserted the amount coming due on two bills of exchange, and the name and address of the drawer as the creditor, believing the drawer to be the holder of the bills. The bills had, in fact, been negotiated:—Held, that the actual holder, having had no notice of the meeting of creditors, was not bound by the resolutions to accept a composition. Mathewes, Ex parte, Angel, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 304; 44 L. J., Bk. 128; 32 L. T. 631; 23 W. R. 730.

A mistake made inadvertently by a debtor in the statement of his debts, will not be allowed to be corrected, unless he takes steps for doing so within a reasonable time after finding out the mistake. Ib.

Fraudulent Omission—Remedy of Creditor.—

A certificate of discharge, obtained by a debtor who has filed a petition for liquidation by arrangement under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, is a defence to an action by a creditor whose name has been fraudulently omitted by the debtor from the list of creditors delivered to the registrar, the only remedy of such creditor being to apply to the Court of Bankruptcy to vacate the registration and cancel the certificate. Wadsworth v. Pickles; 5 Q. B. D. 470; 49 L. J., Q. B. 454; 43 L. T. 410; 28 W. R. 628.

Entry of Creditor as fully Secured.—A debtor, in his statement of affairs, entered A. as a creditor, fully secured. The creditors accepted a composition of 10s. in the pound. A. did not attend or take any part at either of the meetings, nor prove any debt under the petition. The debtor paid the composition to all the creditors except A. Two years afterwards the debtor filed a second petition, whereupon A. realized his security, and claimed to prove under the first petition for the balance remaining due:—Held, that he was not bound by the debtor's statement of his affairs, and that he was entitled to prove for the balance found due to him, and be paid the composition payable upon such balance. Hodgkinson, Ex parte, Bestwick, In re, 1 Ch. D. 702; 45 L. J., Bk. 78; 34 L. T. 73. Affirmed, 2 Ch. D. 485; 45 L. J., Bk. 148; 34 L. T. 784; 24 W. R. 938—C. A.

6. EXAMINATION OF THE DEBTOR.

When to be Held.—The proper time for investigating the affairs of a debtor, who has filed a petition for liquidation by arrangement with his creditors, is at the meetings of creditors; and the registrar has no power, upon the presentation to him for registration of a resolution for composition, to direct an examination before him of the debtor or other witnesses. Lery, Ex parte, Varbetian, In re, 11 L. R., Eq. 619; 40 L. J., Bk. 40; 24 L. T. 332; 19 W. R. 586.

Order granted on prima facie Case.—When a person is entitled to stand as a creditor of a debtor whose estate is being wound up in liquidation, he is entitled to have an order for the examination of the debtor under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 96, as extended by the r. 166, on making out a prima facie case for such examination in accordance with the requirements of r. 172. Swift, Ex parte, Russell, In re, 26 L. T. 226—L. J.

Questions limited to State of Assets.—Under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 125, sub-s. 3, a debtor is only bound to answer such questions as are properly put for the purpose of shewing the state of the assets; he is not bound to answer vexatious questions or questions put by a creditor for the purpose of obtaining information to be used in a matter not affecting the interests of the creditors. Hope, In re, 9 Ch. D. 398; 47 L. J., Bk. 78; 38 L. T. 762; 27 W. R. 7—C. A. Affirming 38 L. T. 537.

Semble, that the effect of r. 301 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1870, is to make the creditors, if they act bona fide, the sole judges whether the debtor has given sufficient information as to his affairs. Id.

Debtor entitled to Advice of Solicitor.—A liquidating debtor attending at the first meeting of his creditors to answer inquiries, under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 126, sub-s. 4, is entitled to the advice of his solicitor as to whether a question is material. Mackenzie, Ex parte, Helliwell, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 88; 44 L. J., Bk. 14; 31 L. T. 421; 23 W. R. 121.

A refusal to answer proper questions would be a ground of objection to the registration of the resolutions. Id.

When a paper was put into the debtor's hand, and he was asked the question whether it was written by his authority; but the paper was not read to the meeting nor was his solicitor allowed to see it, and, by his solicitor's advice, he refused to answer the question:—Held, that this was no ground for refusing the registration of the resolutions, though the question put was really material. Id.

Any questions should be put so that the meeting generally may see their materiality. Id.

Answers form Part of Statement of Affairs.—The answers given by a debtor at a liquidation meeting to questions put to him by the creditors respecting his affairs are to be taken as part of his statement of affairs. Aaronsen, Ex parte, Aaronsen, In re, 7 Ch. D. 713; 47 L. J., Bk. 60; 38 L. T. 243; 26 W. R. 470—C. A.

7. THE RESOLUTIONS.

a. Generally.

Must be reduced to Writing.—The provision in r. 275, Bankruptcy Rules, 1870, that "only such resolutions as are reduced into writing and signed by or on behalf of the statutory majority of creditors at a meeting shall be taken cognizance of by the court," refers only to resolutions in favour of liquidation by arrangement or the acceptance of a composition. Till, Ex parte, Ratcliffe, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 631; 44 L. J., Bk. 103; 32 L. T. 521; 23 W. R. 670.

Cannot be Signed after Filing.—When a special resolution for liquidation has been filed by the person intrusted with it, it is too late for a creditor to sign it. Thorne, Ex parte, Butlin, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 722; 42 L. J., Bk. 60; 29 L. T. 122; 21 W. R. 766.

Resolution Rejected—Withdrawal of Opposition allowed.—At the meeting of the creditors of a debtor, whose proofs amounted to 50,075*l.* 3*s.* 1*d.*, fifty-two creditors out of fifty-nine voted for a resolution for liquidation by arrangement; but, because the proofs of the fifty-two assenting creditors amounted only to 32,072*l.* 0*s.* 1*d.*, which sum fell short of three-fourths of the 50,075*l.* 3*s.* 1*d.*, the resolution was lost. Among those who voted for bankruptcy (as opposed to liquidation by arrangement) were a banker, a creditor for 6,963*l.* 15*s.* 11*d.*, and F. & Co., creditors for 1,425*l.* 4*s.* 6*d.* Both of them voted by proxy, and both of them were desirous subsequently to withdraw their vote, and vote for liquidation by arrangement, in which case the requisite three-fourths in value would be obtained:—Held, under the peculiar circumstances of the case, that the banker and F. & Co. might be deemed assenting creditors to the liquidation by arrangement. Wheeler, In re, 20 W. R. 199.

But every case of the kind must be dealt with according to its own circumstances. Ib.

Proper Resolutions—Money Paid in Satisfaction of Creditors' Right to apply to Court.]—Resolutions to the effect that the affairs of the debtor should be liquidated by arrangement and not by bankruptcy, that if the bankrupt should within a month pay 4,000*l.*, and give a bond to the trustee for a further sum of 5,000*l.*, he should have a discharge, and that the sum of 4,000*l.* was to be deemed a satisfaction of the creditors' rights to apply to the court in reference to the pay or half-pay of the debtor, are proper resolutions. Poolley, Ex parte, Russell, In re, 5 L. R., Ch. 722; 40 L. J., Bk. 41; 23 L. T. 275; 18 W. R. 1013.

— Good in Form, Bad in Substance.]—Resolutions which in form are resolutions for liquidation by arrangement, but amount in fact to resolutions for a composition, are an evasion of the act, and ought not to be registered. Harold, Ex parte, Meade, In re, 3 Ch. D. 119; 45 L. J., Bk. 121; 34 L. T. 649; 24 W. R. 903.

The creditors of a debtor who had filed a liquidation petition resolved that his affairs should be liquidated by arrangement, and appointed a trustee; that, on payment by the debtor to the trustee of a sum equal to 1*s.* in the pound on the amount of the debts, he should be entitled to have his discharge; and that the payment should be made by three instalments of 4*d.* in the pound, at six, twelve, and eighteen months from the registration of the resolutions. No second meeting was summoned to confirm these resolutions, but they were registered:—Held, that the arrangement was, in substance, a composition; that it amounted to an evasion of the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 126, and that the resolutions ought not to have been registered. Ib.

Where some Resolutions ultra vires, rest may be Registered.]—A debtor, partner in a firm, having filed a petition for liquidation by arrangement, a general meeting of his creditors was held, at which the requisite majority of his joint and separate creditors passed a resolution agreeing to the liquidation, appointing a trustee and committee of inspection, and granting the debtor his discharge. The resolution also contained a clause authorizing the trustee to sell to the mother of the debtor his reversionary interest under his father's will at such a price as would pay the costs of the liquidation and a composition of 1*s.* in the pound to his separate creditors. This resolution was registered:—Held, that the clause authorizing the trustee to sell the reversionary interest was ultra vires and void; but that the rest of the resolutions were not thereby rendered invalid, and that the liquidation must proceed in the ordinary course. Browning, Ex parte, Marks, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 583; 43 L. J., Bk. 129; 30 L. T. 481; 22 W. R. 638.

When some of the resolutions passed by creditors are ultra vires, the court has power to direct the registration of the rest. Ashworth, Ex parte, Hoare, In re, 18 L. R., Eq. 705; 43 L. J., Bk. 142; 30 L. T. 906; 22 W. R. 925.

— Resolutions may be Registered as to Part.]—The creditors of a debtor passed resolutions for liquidation by arrangement, and appointed a trustee with power to sell the estate at such price as should be sufficient to pay a composition of 7*s.* 6*d.* in the pound to the creditors. The registrar registered the resolutions for the liquidation and the appointment of a trustee, but struck out the remaining resolutions as ultra vires:—Held, that the registrar had full power to strike out the void resolutions, and register the others. Frampton, Ex parte, Watkins, In re, 45 L. T. 720.

Application to register Notice to Creditors.]—A creditor who has objected to a proof tendered at a meeting under a liquidation petition, and has had his objection marked upon the proof, ought to have notice given to him, either by the registrar or by the person whose duty it is to register the resolutions passed at the meeting, of the time when and the place where the application for the registration of the resolutions is to be heard. Lancaster, Ex parte, 5 Ch. D. 911; 46 L. J., Bk. 90; 37 L. T. 674; 25 W. R. 669—C. A.

A creditor, who had objected to a proof of debt, had no notice given to him of the application to register the resolutions carried by means of that proof, and they were registered in his absence. He afterwards applied to the county court judge to vacate the registration, and upon the hearing of this application he insisted upon some technical objections, but did not ask to have the creditor, whose proof he had objected to, cross-examined, or adduce any evidence to shew the invalidity of the debt:—Held, that the irregularity had been cured, and that the registration ought not to be vacated. Ib.

Registrar cannot direct Issue.]—Upon an application under the 295th Bankruptcy Rule to register the resolutions passed by the creditors, the registrar has no power to direct an issue to be tried by a jury as to the existence of a debt, but must decide the matter himself or refer it to the judge. Williams, Ex parte, Beetonson, In re, 46 L. T. 241; 30 W. R. 491.

Registration of Resolutions after Adjudication.]—When there has been a simple adjudication in bankruptcy, without any stay of proceedings, and resolutions are afterwards duly passed in favour of liquidation, it is the duty of the registrar to register such resolutions, whatever may be the consequences of such registration. Davis, Ex parte, Russ, In re, 2 Ch. D. 231; 45 L. J., Bk. 61; 34 L. T. 259; 24 W. R. 684. But see next case.

The registrar has no power to register a resolution for liquidation or composition after an adjudication of bankruptcy has been made; unless the adjudication has been made under r. 266 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1870, in which case the adjudication is intended to be merely ancillary to the liquidation. Davis, Ex parte (2 Ch. D. 231), overruled. Milward, Ex parte, Stanley, In re, 16 Ch. D. 256; 50 L. J., Ch. 166; 44 L. T. 73; 29 W. R. 167—C. A.

After an ordinary adjudication of bankruptcy has been made (not an adjudication merely for the purpose of protecting the debtor's property pending proceedings for liquidation or composition) the creditors have no power to pass resolutions for either liquidation or composition, and such resolutions if passed will be inoperative. Milward, Ex parte (supra), explained and fol-

A certificate of discharge, obtained by a person who has filed a petition for liquidation under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, in an action by a creditor, who has been fraudulently omitted from the list of creditors delivered to the Court of Bankruptcy, is a valid remedy of such creditor, and the Court of Bankruptcy may cancel the certificate. Pickles, 5 Q. B. D. 43 L. T. 410; 28 W.

Entry of Creditors.—A creditor, in his capacity as a creditor, cannot attend or vote at a meeting of the creditors, nor prove his debt, except by a second petition.

Registration—Locus standi to Oppose.]—From the hearing of an application to register liquidation resolutions, no one has a locus standi to be heard in opposition but a creditor who has previously proved a debt in the mode prescribed by the rules. A person who claims to be a creditor, and in that character to oppose the registration, cannot prove his debt when he comes before the registrar to oppose. If he has not previously proved a debt he cannot be heard. Bagster, Ex parte, Bagster, In re, 24 Ch. D. 477; 49 L. T. 272; 32 W. R. 215—C. A.

Locus Standi of Creditor withdrawing Proof.]—A person who alleged that he was a creditor tendered a proof of debt at the first meeting of the creditors, but withdrew it. He attended before the registrar to oppose the registration of the resolutions passed by the creditors:—Held, by Bacon, C. J., and semble, per James, L. J., that the objector had no locus standi, and the registrar could not put his proof on the file for the purpose of giving him a locus standi. Duce, Ex parte, Whitehouse, In re, 13 Ch. D. 429; 42 L. T. 385; 28 W. R. 501—C. A.

b. Validity with Reference to Amount of Assets or Dividends.

Assets.]—Where a debtor has practically no assets distributable among his creditors, resolutions for a liquidation by arrangement ought not to be registered, even though they do not include a discharge to the debtor. Aaronson, Ex parte, Aaronson, In re, 7 Ch. D. 713; 47 L. J., Bk. 60, 38 L. T. 243; 26 W. R. 470—C. A.

The statement of a debtor who had filed a liquidation petition shewed that his debts amounted to 540*l.*, and that his assets were only 32*l.* The creditors resolved upon a liquidation. One creditor opposed the registration of the resolutions.—Held, that the petition was an abuse of the procedure of the court, and that the registration had been rightly refused. Staff, Ex parte, Staff, In re, 20 L. R., Eq. 775; 44 L. J., Bk. 137; 32 L. T. 40; 23 W. R. 930.

... filed a liquidation petition, and the creditors unanimously resolved to accept a composition of 3*d.* in the pound. The debts were 1,000*l.*; the assets amounted to 7*l.* The registrar refused to register the resolutions, though no creditor opposed, on the ground that there were no "available assets for distribution among the creditors."—Held, that, as all the requirements of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and the rules had been complied with, the resolutions must be registered. Elworthy, Ex parte, Elworthy, In re, 20 L. R., Eq. 742; 44 L. J., Bk. 123; 32 L. T. 699; 23 W. R. 790.

Power of Majority not to be Used out of Motives of Kindness to Debtor.]—The power of the majority of creditors, under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 126, to resolve to accept a composition which will be binding on the minority must be exercised bona fide for the benefit of the creditors and not out of motives of kindness to the debtor. Page, Ex parte, 2 Ch. D. 323; 43 L. J., Bk. 119; 34 L. T. 638; 24 W. R. 502—C. A. Therefore, where a resolution was passed for the acceptance of an offer by the debtor to pay 1*s.* in the pound in twelve months, without security, and his own estimate of his assets shewed that he could have paid 5*s.*:—Held, that the registrar had rightly refused to register the resolution. Id.

The statement of affairs of a debtor who had filed a liquidation petition shewed that his debts amounted to 11,358*l.*, while his assets were only 75*l.* Of the debts the preferential claims amounted to 127*l.* The creditors, by the proper statutory majority, resolved to accept a composition of 1*s.* in the pound, to be paid within one month after registration of the resolution, no security for its payment being offered. One of the dissentient creditors opposed the registration:—Held, that the resolution could not have been passed in the interests of the creditors, but must have been passed for the benefit of the debtor; that it therefore was not binding on the dissentient minority, and that the registrar was right in refusing to register it. Terrell, In re, Sheffield and Rotherham Joint Stock Banking Company, Ex parte, 4 Ch. D. 293; 46 L. J., Bk. 47; 35 L. T. 646, 648; 25 W. R. 153—C. A.

Where Debtor has bona fide Claims.]—Want of bona fides will not necessarily be imputed to liquidation resolutions, however small the assets immediately available may be, if the debtor has substantial bona fide claims which are the subject of pending litigation. Hope, Ex parte, Hope, In re, 9 Ch. D. 398; 47 L. J., Bk. 78; 38 L. T. 762; 27 W. R. 7—C. A.

In Absence of Fraud, Resolutions must be Registered.]—The statutory majority of the creditors of a liquidating debtor passed a resolution accepting a composition of 6*d.* in the pound, which was subsequently duly confirmed:—Held, that in the absence of fraud, the resolution must be registered. Williams, Ex parte, 36 L. T. 324; 25 W. R. 432.

The creditors of a debtor, whose statement of affairs shewed that his debts amounted to 534*l.* and his assets to 85*l.*, resolved on a liquidation by arrangement, and gave the debtor an immediate discharge. The registration was opposed by one creditor, who had, after the filing of the petition, seized the whole of the debtor's goods.

der a fi. fa. :—Held, that the resolutions could be treated as any abuse of the procedure of court, or as having been passed malâ fide.
y. Ex parte, Golding, In re, 13 Ch. D. 300; 11. T. 298; 28 W. R. 310—C. A.

Opposition by Judgment Creditor.—The statement of affairs of a debtor who had filed a liquidation petition shewed that his debts were 1,759*l.* and his assets 85*l.*, the latter sum being subject to a deduction in respect of preferential debts. The creditors resolved upon a liquidation by arrangement, and gave the debtor an immediate discharge. They also voted 10*l.* for the remuneration of the trustee. The registration of the resolutions was opposed by a creditor who had brought an action against the debtor for 182*l.*, but who had been restrained from proceeding with his action. He was in a position to sign judgment and issue execution so soon as the injunction should be dissolved :—Held, that, notwithstanding the small amount of the assets, the resolutions ought to be registered, the contest being really whether the assets, such as they were, should be distributed among the creditors generally, or be swept away by the judgment creditor, and this although the judgment creditor offered in the Court of Appeal to undertake to present a bankruptcy petition against the debtor.
Mathews, Ex parte, Sharpe, In re, 16 Ch. D. 655; 50 L. J., Ch. 284; 44 L. T. 117—C. A.

c. Vacating or Setting Aside.

Fraud or Malpractices.—The court will not rescind the registration of resolutions for composition on the ground of misstatement of assets by the debtor except upon evidence sufficient to convict him of a misdemeanor under the Debtors Act, 1869, s. 11, sub-s. 6. Law, In re, Hart, Ex parte, 47 L. J., Bk. 88.

A liquidating debtor whose statement of affairs shewed debts amounting to 5,146*l.*, with assets 3,485*l.*, was proved to have estimated six specified debts at 63*l.* 15*s.* 7*d.* only in his statement of affairs, while in the course of the next two years he recovered 249*l.* 3*s.* 8*d.* in respect of them. On an application by a creditor to rescind the registration of the resolutions on the ground that the debtor had fraudulently misstated his assets :—Held, that the evidence being insufficient to establish an intent to defraud, the application must be dismissed, but without costs. Ib.

—Application not Barred by Delay.—Held, also, that the application, under the circumstances, was not barred by delay, though made more than two years after the date of the resolutions. Ib.

Creditor accepting Benefits cannot impugn Resolution.—A creditor who dissents from, but who accepts the composition paid under resolutions adopted for the liquidation by arrangement of a debtor's affairs, cannot, the debtor having duly received his discharge and certificate, on default being afterwards made in the payment of a part of the composition, impugn the validity of the resolutions and sue on the original debt. Lewis v. Leonard, 5 Ex. D. 165; 49 L. J., Ex. 309; 42 L. T. 351; 28 W. R. 719—C. A.

Certificate of Discharge, Effect of.—The certificate of discharge given by the registrar to a debtor whose affairs are liquidated by arrangement is conclusive evidence of the validity of the liquidation proceedings. Ib.

The defendants filed a petition for liquidation by arrangement or composition under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and at the first meeting of creditors a resolution was passed that the defendants' discharge might be granted on a certificate of the committee of inspection and trustee to that effect. At a subsequent meeting of creditors for the purpose of considering a scheme for the settlement of the defendants' affairs, it was resolved that the whole estate should be sold to one of the defendants in consideration of his paying a dividend of 8*s.* in the pound secured by four promissory notes payable at successive dates. The certificate of discharge was granted. The plaintiff was a creditor and proved on the estate to the full amount of his debt. Three of the promissory notes were paid to all the creditors including the plaintiff, but default was made in payment of the fourth :—Held, first, that the certificate of discharge was, by force of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, ss. 49, 125, conclusive evidence of the validity of the proceedings under the liquidation, and that the discharge was valid. Ib.

Held, secondly, that the plaintiff having received and retained a dividend could not be heard to object to the resolutions. Ib.

When a resolution to discharge a liquidating debtor has been passed by the statutory majority and registered, the registration will be vacated if it is shewn that any one of the votes of the majority was obtained by a malpractice on the part of the debtor, such as bribing the creditor to give his vote, even though, if the vote thus procured were struck off, the statutory majority in favour of the discharge would remain. Baum, Ex parte, Baum, In re, 7 Ch. D. 719; 47 L. J., Bk. 48; 38 L. T. 367; 26 W. R. 568—C. A.

—Time.—An application to vacate the registration of a resolution on the ground of fraud or mala fides is not an appeal to which the limit of twenty-one days applies. Ib.

—Jurisdiction of High Court of Justice.—The High Court of Justice has jurisdiction to inquire and decide whether fraud has been committed in the registration of a resolution for liquidation by arrangement under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, ss. 125, 127. Eyre v. Smith, 2 C. P. D. 435; 37 L. T. 417; 25 W. R. 871—C. A.

Therefore when in an action of debt the defendant pleads that he has liquidated his affairs by arrangement and that the debt sued for is provable under the proceedings, the plaintiff is at liberty to reply and prove that the registration of the resolution for liquidation in the Court of Bankruptcy has been procured by fraud, and is therefore invalid. Ib.

Locus Standi—Appeal against Cancellation of Registration.—Creditors who have not been heard before the registrar on an application to register have nevertheless a locus standi to appeal against an order cancelling the registration. Walter, Ex parte, Webb, In re, 2 Ch. D. 326; 45 L. J., Bk. 105; 34 L. T. 701; 24 W. R. 834—C. A.

ditors, and thereby committed an act of bankruptcy. On the day after the seizure, the attorneys of the debtor wrote to the attorney of the execution creditor a letter as follows:—"B. made an assignment of what goods he had, and it was arranged that his daughter should raise the money, but this we find was never finally arrived at." The sheriff sold the goods under the execution; and the debtor was adjudicated a bankrupt on the next day:—Held, that the letter of the attorneys was insufficient as a notice of the act of bankruptcy; and that the execution creditor was entitled to the proceeds of the sale. Id.

Notice of Petition is a sufficient Notice.—A notice to an execution creditor which states that a petition in bankruptcy against the execution debtor has been filed on a date, at a court, and by a person named in the notice, is sufficient notice of an act of bankruptcy to prevent the execution being a protected transaction within 32 & 33 Vict. c. 71, s. 95, sub-s. 3, since such creditor ought to know that the petition would contain a statement that the debtor has committed an act of bankruptcy. Hocking v. Acraman (12 M. & W. 170) commented on; Lucas v. Dicker, 6 Q. B. D. 84; 50 L. J., Q. B. 190; 43 L. T. 429; 29 W. R. 115—C. A.

Notice of Facts sufficient without Creditor drawing Inference of Law.—A person having notice of facts from which a court or jury would infer that an act of bankruptcy had been committed, must be considered as having notice that an act of bankruptcy had been committed, notwithstanding his oath that he did not in fact draw the inference. Snowball, Ex parte, Douglas, In re, 7 L. R., Ch. 534; 41 L. J., Bk. 49; 26 L. T. 894; 20 W. R. 786.

"Available for Adjudication."—The expression "notice of any act of bankruptcy available for adjudication" used in s. 31 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, means notice of an act of bankruptcy which would have been available for the making of the particular adjudication under which the proof is tendered. Crosbie, Ex parte, Bedell, In re, 7 Ch. D. 123; 47 L. J., Bk. 19; 37 L. T. 583; 26 W. R. 119—C. A.

Therefore a creditor who contracted a debt with a bankrupt with notice only of an act of bankruptcy committed by him more than six months before the presentation of the petition upon which the adjudication is made is not precluded by s. 31 from proving under the adjudication. Id.

The words "notice of an act of bankruptcy available for adjudication" in ss. 94 and 95 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, mean notice of an Act of bankruptcy which would have been available for the making of the adjudication actually made, that is, an act of bankruptcy committed within six months from the presentation of the petition on which the adjudication was founded. Gilbey, Ex parte, Bedell, In re, 8 Ch. D. 248; 47 L. J., Bk. 49; 38 L. T. 728; 26 W. R. 768—C. A.

A., a trader, committed an act of bankruptcy. More than six months afterwards he was adjudicated a bankrupt upon a second such act. Between the dates of the first and second acts, money was paid to him by a depository having notice at that time of the first act of bankruptcy:

—Held, that the payment was protected by s. 94, sub-s. 2 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. Quilter, Ex parte, Barnes, In re, 30 W. R. 739—C. A.

The appellants claimed to retain money in respect of a transaction in relation to the property of the bankrupt, entered into by them at a time when they had notice of an act of bankruptcy committed by the bankrupt, to which the title of the trustee related back, but committed more than six months before the presentation of the petition on which he was subsequently adjudicated a bankrupt, on the ground that they were protected by s. 95, sub-s. 1, as having had no notice of an act of bankruptcy available for adjudication:—Held, that they were not protected. Tilleard, Ex parte, Barnes, In re, 30 W. R. 568. Practically overruled by preceding case.

Debtor Summons.—After the plaintiff had commenced an action against the defendant for dissolution of partnership, the plaintiff took out a debtor summons against the defendant. The defendant failed to comply with it, and the plaintiff filed a petition of bankruptcy against him based on the summons. Another creditor afterwards took out a debtor summons against the defendant, and, on his non-compliance with it, filed a petition and obtained adjudication of bankruptcy against him. Before the adjudication, and without notice of the act of bankruptcy on which it was based, the plaintiff entered into an agreement with the defendant for compromise of the action, which the trustees in the bankruptcy sought to impeach as void against the creditors:—Held, that although the non-compliance with the plaintiff's debtor summons was not an act of bankruptcy available for adjudication on the petition of the particular creditor who obtained the adjudication against the defendant, it was an act of bankruptcy "available for adjudication" within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 94, and therefore the agreement for compromise between the plaintiff and defendant was not a protected transaction under that section. Crosbie, Ex parte, 7 Ch. D. 123, distinguished, and the judgment of James, L. J., explained. Hood v. Newby, 21 Ch. D. 605, 52 L. J., Ch. 204; 47 L. T. 721; 31 W. R. 185—C. A.

Failure to pay Composition.—On the 12th of November a debtor filed a liquidation petition. The creditors resolved to accept a composition. The debtor failed to pay it when due, and on the 28th of May he was adjudicated a bankrupt upon a petition filed on the 29th of April, the act of bankruptcy being the filing of the liquidation petition. On the 29th of March he had executed a mortgage of leasehold property, in substitution for a mortgage, given to the same creditor two years before the liquidation petition was filed, of a lease which afterwards turned out to be void:—Held, that though, when the mortgage of the 29th of March was executed, the mortgagee had notice of the filing of the liquidation petition, yet it was not notice of an act of bankruptcy then available for adjudication against the debtor, and consequently that the mortgage was protected by the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 95. Hoare, Ex parte, Walton, In re, 16 L. R., Eq. 625; 43 L. J., Bk. 38; 29 L. T. 140; 21 W. R. 909.

Executions against Goods—Onus is on Creditors.—In the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 95, sub-s. 3, "act of bankruptcy" means an act of bankruptcy which has been committed prior to the time of seizure. Schulte, Ex parte, Matanlé, or Matulle, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 409; 30 L. T. 478; 22 W. R. 462.

The onus is on the execution creditor, who claims the protection of that section to prove that he had no notice of any prior act of bankruptcy. Ib.

Notice to the sheriff's officers in possession under an execution of an act of bankruptcy is not notice to the creditor. Ib.

XVII. LIQUIDATION BY ARRANGEMENT UNDER THE BANKRUPTCY ACT, 1869.

1. PETITION FOR LIQUIDATION.

By Lunatic not so Found.—A liquidation petition cannot be signed by a next friend on behalf of a lunatic not so found by inquisition:—Semble, that, in the case of a lunatic so found by inquisition, the Court of Lunacy might have jurisdiction to direct that a liquidation petition should be signed on his behalf. Cohen, Ex parte, Cohen, In re, 13 Ch. D. 183; 39 L. T. 645; 27 W. R. 387—C. A.

Misdescription of Debtor.—A debtor described himself in his liquidation petition by his business address only, omitting all mention of his private residence:—Held, that this was a misdescription; that the defect was not a mere formal one, but was a matter of substance; and that resolutions passed by the creditors in favour of a liquidation by arrangement ought not to be registered. Jerningham, Ex parte, Jerningham, In re, 9 Ch. D. 466; 47 L. J., Bk. 115; 39 L. T. 186; 27 W. R. 157—C. A.

An application for leave to amend the petition, and summon a fresh first meeting of the creditors, was refused. Ib.

The debtor presented his petition for liquidation upon the 31st August, 1881. He therein described himself as an engineer, giving a private address. Previously thereto, and down to February, 1881, he had carried on business at first in partnership, but afterwards by himself, as an iron founder, at another address. In February he made over this business to his (the debtor's) father, but until the month of May in that year, it was continued to be carried on in the debtor's name. On the 30th August the debtor's furniture, which formed, as it appeared, the whole of his assets, was seized by the sheriff under an elegit:—Held, that the description in the petition was insufficient and misleading, and that resolutions for liquidation by arrangement and giving to the debtor his immediate discharge could not be registered upon this ground, and also that the resolutions were passed in the interest of the debtor, and not of the creditors. Kershaw, Ex parte, Woodhouse, In re, 45 L. T. 687.

In a statement of affairs produced by a debtor, he described some of his assets as the lease of a house No. 15, Motcombe Street, Belgrave Square, but in his petition described himself as of 165, Ferndale Road, Clapham, in the county of Surrey, and, on being examined, admitted that he occasionally slept at Motcombe Street:—Held, that the description of the debtor was insufficient. Pulbrook, Ex parte, Lloyd, In re, 48 L. T. 128.

— When Objection to be taken.—Any objection to the description of a debtor in the advertisement in the Gazette must be taken before the registration of the resolutions passed by the creditors. Cooper, Ex parte, Green, In re, 39 L. T. 260.

— Trustee not bound by Misdescription.—When a trader-debtor falsely describes himself as a non-trader in his petition for liquidation, the trustee of his estate is not estopped from proving that he is a trader. Ross, Ex parte, Hare, In re, 28 L. T. 450; 21 W. R. 560.

— Farmer and Cattle Dealer described as "Cattle Dealer."—A farmer, who had also carried on the business of a cattle dealer, filed a liquidation petition, in which he gave his correct address, but described himself only as a cattle dealer:—Held, by Bacon, C. J., and by the Court of Appeal, that this was not a misdescription such as to invalidate the proceedings, and that the resolutions passed by the creditors ought to be registered. But leave was given to amend the petition by adding the description "farmer." Kirkwood, Ex parte, Mason, In re, 11 Ch. D. 724; 40 L. T. 566; 27 W. R. 806—C. A.

Where Assets very Small.—A debtor who has practically no assets distributable among his creditors is not entitled to file a liquidation petition. Aaronson, Ex parte, Aaronson, In re, 7 Ch. D. 713; 47 L. J., Bk. 60; 38 L. T. 243; 26 W. R. 470—C. A.

A debtor filed a liquidation petition, and the creditors unanimously resolved to accept a composition of 3d. in the pound. The debts were 180*l.*; the assets amounted to 7*l.* The registrar refused to register the resolutions, though no creditor opposed, on the ground that there were no "available assets for distribution among the creditors":—Held, that, as all the requirements of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and the rules had been complied with, the resolutions must be registered. Elworthy, Ex parte, Elworthy, In re, 20 L. R., Eq. 742; 44 L. J., Bk. 123; 32 L. T. 699; 23 W. R. 790.

The statement of a debtor who had filed a liquidation petition shewed that his debts amounted to 540*l.*, and that his assets were only 32*l.* The creditors resolved upon a liquidation. One creditor opposed the registration of the resolutions:—Held, that the petition was an abuse of the procedure of the court, and that the registration had been rightly refused. Staff, Ex parte, Staff, In re, 20 L. R., Eq. 775; 44 L. J., Bk. 137; 32 L. T. 40; 23 W. R. 950.

There is no absolute rule that a debtor who has no assets cannot file a liquidation petition. Hudson, Ex parte, Walton, In re, 22 Ch. D. 773; 52 L. J., Ch. 584; 47 L. T. 674; 31 W. R. 372—C. A.

Second Petition.—A debtor filed a petition for liquidation, but his statement shewed no available assets. The creditors nevertheless passed a resolution for a composition of one shilling in the pound, which was accordingly paid to them. The resolution not having been filed within the three days limited by the 284th rule, the debtor presented a second petition under which the creditors passed a similar resolution:—Held, that the presentation of the second petition was regular, and that the resolution to accept the composition ought to be registered. Where there has been actual payment of a composition no security is necessary. Thomas, Ex parte, Freeman, In re, 40 L. T. 835.

Petition Filed after Office Hours.—A liquidation petition which is in fact filed by a debtor in the proper office is good, although it may have been filed after office hours. Jones, Ex parte, Williams, In re, 42 L. T. 157.

Effect of Filing—Vesting of Property in Trustee.—Filing a petition for liquidation by arrangement is an act of bankruptcy, and the vesting of the debtor's goods in the trustee relates back to the filing of the petition; so that an execution creditor, with notice of the petition, cannot seize the goods of the debtor, and hold them as against a subsequently-appointed trustee. Duignan, Ex parte, Biasell, In re, 11 L. R., Eq. 604; 40 L. J., Bk. 33; 24 L. T. 237; 19 W. R. 711. Affirmed, 6 L. R. Ch. 605; 40 L. J., Bk. 68; 25 L. T. 286; 19 W. R. 1127.

— Where Composition accepted.—After a petition has been filed by a debtor for liquidation by arrangement, it is at the option of the requisite majority of creditors to determine whether the liquidation shall be effected by means of the appointment of a trustee, or whether they shall accept a composition, the debtor being left in possession of his assets. If the creditors adopt the latter course, there is then no power to deprive secured creditors of their securities; no relation of title to any act of bankruptcy prior to the presentation of the petition; nor anything in which the creditors who have resolved to receive a composition have any interest, beyond enforcing the performance of that condition on which they agreed to accept the composition. Birmingham Gaslight and Coke Company, Ex parte, Adams, In re, 11 L. R., Eq. 204; 40 L. J., Bk. 1; 24 L. T. 42; 19 W. R. 123.

Debtor Dying after Filing.—A debtor filed a petition for liquidation by arrangement, and the same day notices were sent out convening a general meeting of creditors. He died the following day. The creditors desired that proceedings might be continued as if he were alive:—Held, that the court had no jurisdiction to order the continuation of the proceedings. Obbard, In re, 24 L. T. 145; 19 W. R. 563.

2. STAYING BANKRUPTCY PROCEEDINGS.

A creditor, having presented a petition for an adjudication against his debtor, ought not to have his proceedings stayed by injunction merely because before the adjudication is actually made the debtor himself presents a petition for liquidation by arrangement or composition. Dimond, Ex parte, Williams, In re, 5 L. R., Ch. 743; 39 L. J., Bk. 47; 23 L. T. 292; 18 W. R. 1123.

Petition Filed by one of Joint Debtors.—When a creditor of joint debtors is proceeding against them jointly, and one of them takes proceedings for liquidation of his affairs, the court will not restrain the proceedings of his creditor against his joint creditors. De Vecchi, In re, Isaacs, Ex parte, 6 L. R., Ch. 58; 40 L. J., Bk. 19; 22 L. T. 523; 19 W. R. 38.

3. MEETINGS OF CREDITORS, THEIR DEBTS AND RIGHT TO VOTE.

Notice to be given to all Creditors.—When a petition has been presented and a resolution passed at a meeting of creditors, such resolution cannot be registered unless all the creditors have received notice of the meeting. Rogers, Ex parte, 22 L. T. 283.

Signing Notice summoning Meeting.—It is not necessary that the notice summoning the first general meeting of creditors under a liquidation petition should be signed by the debtor's attorney with his own hand. Hirst, Ex parte, Hirst, In re, 18 L. R., Eq. 704; 43 L. J., Bk. 130.

The notice is sufficient if the attorney's name is subscribed by his clerk by his direction. Ib.

Proof of Notice.—Rules 97 and 98 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1870, apply to bankruptcy only, and do not apply to liquidation by arrangement or composition. Dean, Ex parte, Dean, In re, 13 Ch. D. 313; 41 L. T. 602; 28 W. R. 204—C. A.

The affidavit, made in accordance with r. 256, of the posting to creditors of notices of a general meeting under a liquidation petition, is only prima facie, not conclusive, evidence that the creditors have received the notices. Ib.

The registrar has a judicial discretion to require further evidence of the receipt of the notices, and, if satisfied that some of the creditors have not received notice, to direct the summoning of a fresh meeting, and the Court of Appeal will not interfere with the exercise of his discretion, unless very clearly satisfied that he has exercised it wrongly. Ib.

Place of Meeting.—The affidavit of a debtor filed with his liquidation petition stated that Stone would be the most convenient place for the meeting of the creditors, but the notices sent out by the registrar to the creditors summoned them to meet at Stafford:—Held, that, as no formal order had been made by the court to change the place of meeting mentioned in the affidavit, the proceedings were invalid, and that the resolutions passed by the creditors could not be registered. But leave was given to the debtor to summon a fresh first meeting. Mayer, In re, Lewis, Ex parte, 4 Ch. D. 519; 46 L. J., Bk. 33; 35 L. T. 915; 25 W. R. 275.

Adjourning Meeting.—In liquidation by arrangement a resolution to adjourn a meeting is an "ordinary resolution," and therefore must be decided by a majority in value of the creditors present, personally or by proxy, at the meeting and voting on such resolution. Orde, Ex parte, Horsley, In re, 6 L. R., Ch. 881; 40 L. J., Bk. 60; 25 L. T. 400; 19 W. R. 1103.

— After Rejection of Resolution for Composition.—At the first meeting under a liquidation petition the debtor offered a composition. His solicitor took the votes of the creditors and found that the requisite majority in favour of it could not be obtained, but the question was not formally put from the chair, nor was any resolution reduced into writing. A resolution to adjourn the meeting was then carried, and at the adjourned meeting the debtor's offer was accepted, and the resolution to accept it was duly confirmed at the second meeting. The resolution for adjournment was written and signed, and filed with the proceedings:—Held, that the adjournment and all the subsequent proceedings were invalid, the offer having been rejected by the first meeting. Till, Ex parte, Ratcliffe, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 631; 44 L. J., Bk. 103; 32 L. T. 521; 23 W. R. 670. Reversing S. C., 32 L. T. 504; 23 W. R. 636.

— Removing Proof used at First Meeting.—When the creditors at the first meeting, under a petition for liquidation, only voted an adjournment, a proof which had been inadvertently admitted, and in respect of which the creditor had voted for the adjournment, may be taken off the file, under circumstances shewing that the party in whose name the proof was made as the principal was only an agent in the matter. Axon, 22 L. T. 151.

— Summoning fresh Meeting of Creditors.—The power to direct a fresh meeting to be summoned extends not only to a case where, through accident or mistake on the part of the debtor, no valid resolution has been passed, but also to a case where, owing to a mistake on the part of the creditors, or from any other cause, no valid resolution has been passed. Terrell, In re, Sheffield and Rotherham Joint Stock Banking Company, Ex parte, 4 Ch. D. 293; 46 L. J., Bk. 47; 35 L. T. 646; 25 W. R. 153—C. A. See Mayer, In re, 4 Ch. D. 519; 46 L. J., Bk. 33; 35 L. T. 915; 25 W. R. 275. Buckley, Ex parte, Buckley, In re, 16 Ch. D. 513; 44 L. T. 39; 29 W. R. 920—C. A.

A debtor, who was a member of a partnership firm, filed a petition for liquidation. In the statement produced by the debtor to the first meeting of his creditors, he made no distinction between his joint and separate debts and assets. The creditors passed a resolution for liquidation, but by reason of the irregularity of the debtor's statement, the resolution was not registered. The debtor then obtained an order to summon a fresh first meeting:—Held, that inasmuch as no valid resolution could have been passed at the meeting, and, consequently, the creditors had had no opportunity of expressing their opinion as to a liquidation, the court was justified in permitting a fresh first meeting. Gibbs, Ex parte, Webb, In re, 10 L. R., Ch. 382; 44 L. J., Bk. 73; 32 L. T. 292; 23 W. R. 529.

— Right to Vote—Production of Bills of Exchange.—It is sufficient for the validity of the vote of a creditor who holds bills of exchange or promissory notes signed by the debtor if he produces the bills or notes before the registration of the resolutions upon which he has voted. Ashworth, Ex parte, Hoare, In re, 18 L. R., Eq. 705; 43 L. J., Bk. 142; 30 L. T. 906; 22 W. R. 925.

The creditors of a debtor at their first meeting resolved on an adjournment. Some of the creditors who voted in favour of the adjournment held bills of exchange and bonds of the debtor, which they did not produce. If their votes had been rejected the adjournment would not have been duly carried. At the adjourned meeting these creditors produced their bills of exchange and bonds, and a liquidation was then resolved upon:—Held, that the production of the bills and bonds at the adjourned meeting was sufficient. Ib.

— Secured Creditor.—If a secured creditor votes without producing his security, his vote is valid, but his security is forfeited. Ib.

Whether a secured creditor, who in his proof states his security, and afterwards votes at a liquidation meeting in respect of his whole debt, thereby abandons his security, quære. Ball, Ex parte, Shepherd, In re, 10 Ch. D. 667; 48 L. J., Bk. 57; 27 W. R. 563—C. A.

— Amount of Debt unascertained—Annuity.—A debtor who filed a liquidation petition had, by a separation deed between himself and his wife, covenanted to pay to a trustee an annuity, during the joint lives of himself and his wife, for the maintenance of the wife and a child of the marriage. The annuity was to cease in case the husband and wife should cohabit again:—Held, that the value of the annuity not having been ascertained, the trustee was not entitled to vote in respect of it at a meeting of creditors under the petition. Pearce, Ex parte, Grieves, In re, 13 Ch. D. 262; 41 L. T. 742; 28 W. R. 404—C. A.

— Untaxed Costs.—A liquidating debtor was indebted to a creditor in 357*l.* recovered by verdict, and costs, which had not been taxed. The creditor attended the first meeting of creditors, and stated in his affidavit that the debtor was indebted to him in 357*l.* on the verdict and an amount of costs which he estimated at 200*l.*; and claimed to vote in respect of the aggregate amount. The creditor had been restrained by injunction from taking any further proceedings in the action:—Held, that the estimated amount of untaxed costs was an unliquidated debt within the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 16, sub-s. 3, and that he could not vote in respect thereof. Ruffle, Ex parte, Dummelow, In re, 8 L. R., Ch. 997; 42 L. J., Bk. 82; 29 L. T. 384; 21 W. R. 932.

The proper course for the creditor to pursue was either to apply for leave to sign judgment and tax his costs, or else to swear to such a sum as the costs when taxed would at least amount to. Ib.

— By Creditor who has Sold his Debt.—The fact that a creditor who has signed a notice summoning a general meeting for the purpose of removing the trustee, and who has voted at the meeting in favour of a resolution for removing the trustee, had previously sold his debt to another creditor, will not invalidate the notice or the resolution. Evans, Ex parte, Baum, In re, 13 Ch. D. 424; 49 L. J., Bk. 25; 42 L. T. 384; 28 W. R. 500—C. A.

— Practice on Voting.—All creditors present, personally or by proxy, are to be considered as voting on every resolution so long as their proofs are in the hands of the chairman. Orde, Ex parte, Horsley, In re, 6 L. R., Ch. 881; 40 L. J., Bk. 60; 25 L. T. 400; 19 W. R. 1103.

The assent of each such creditor must be evidenced by his signing the resolution when reduced to writing, and if he does not sign it, he must be taken to have voted in the negative. Ib.

A creditor who does not wish to vote on any resolution must, before the resolution is put, withdraw his proxy. Ib.

A resolution for adjournment requires to be passed with the same formalities as other resolutions. Ib.

At a meeting of creditors resolutions were proposed for a liquidation by arrangement. A large creditor attended by proxy and opposed the resolutions, and voted against them on the show of hands, but afterwards signed them. If this creditor should be excluded, the resolutions were not passed by the requisite majority:—Held, that the resolutions were duly passed and ought to be registered; for that, according to the act, the votes of the signing creditors were determined by their signatures; and the course which they had taken at the meeting could not be looked to. Pooley, Ex parte, Russell, In re, 5 L. R. Ch. 722; 40 L. J., Bk. 41; 23 L. T. 275; 18 W. R. 1013.

At a meeting of creditors, called in pursuance of a petition for liquidation by arrangement, resolutions were proposed. They were opposed, and on a show of hands, several creditors, including a principal creditor, voted against the resolutions. This creditor afterwards signed the resolutions. And a requisite majority of assentients was thus obtained, which would not have been the case if this creditor had been dissentient:—Held, that the resolutions ought to be registered, the evidence afforded by the signature being conclusive, whatever might have been the conduct of the voters at a show of hands. Ib.

A creditor, who is present at a general meeting of creditors under a liquidation petition, cannot be considered as present on behalf of another creditor for whom he holds a proxy, notwithstanding the fact that the proxy is on the file of proceedings, unless he has done some act to shew that he intends to be present on that occasion on behalf of his principal as well as on his own behalf. Orde, Ex parte (6 L. R. Ch. 881), distinguished. Evans, Ex parte, Baum, In re, 13 Ch. D. 424; 49 L. J., Bk. 25; 42 L. T. 384; 28 W. R. 500—C. A.

— Authority conferred by Proxy.—The appointment of a proxy under the Bankruptcy Act and rules only confers on the person so appointed an authority to represent his principal; it does not necessarily follow that he in fact represents his principal on all subsequent occasions when he is present at a meeting, unless he would have no right to be present in any other capacity. Ib.

— Blank Proxy—Implied Authority to insert Name.—A creditor of a liquidating debtor, who signs a proxy in blank and sends it to his solicitor, who forwards it to the debtor's solicitor, without any express instructions as to the use to be made of it, thereby confers on him an implied authority to fill up the proxy with his own name and to vote on his behalf. Duce, Ex parte, Whitehouse, In re, 13 Ch. D. 429; 42 L. T. 385; 28 W. R. 501—C. A.

A proxy paper signed by a creditor, leaving the name of the proxy in blank, may be filled up by the person to whom the creditor has intrusted

it, with a verbal authority to use it, and that when so filled up it will be valid. Lancaster, Ex parte, 5 Ch. D. 911; 46 L. J., Bk. 90; 37 L. T. 674; 25 W. R. 669—C. A. Reversing 46 L. J., Bk. 55; 36 L. T. 72; 25 W. R. 380.

At a first meeting of creditors resolutions for composition were moved; the votes were ascertained, shewing the resolutions were not carried. The debtor's solicitor then put in a proof for another debt, and voted as proxy in respect of it. This vote was admitted, and by means of it the requisite majority was created, and the resolutions were declared to be carried:—Held, that the whole matter was in fieri, and that the vote was properly admitted. Ib.

Proxy on Behalf of Lunatic Creditor.—The committee of the estate of a lunatic who is a creditor of a liquidating debtor has no power, without the sanction of the Court of Lunacy, to appoint a proxy to vote on behalf of the lunatic in the liquidation proceedings, or to waive any of his rights against the debtor's estate. Ball, Ex parte, Shepherd, In re, 10 Ch. D. 667; 48 L. J., Bk. 57; 40 L. T. 141; 27 W. R. 563—C. A.

Objection to Creditors Voting.—An objection to the proof of a creditor who has voted at the first meeting of creditors on a composition resolution is in time if taken at the second meeting. Weil, Ex parte, Mcntrop, In re, 5 Ch. D. 345; 46 L. J., Bk. 84; 36 L. T. 533; 25 W. R. 552—C. A.

Semble, that the objection would be in time if taken after the second meeting and before the registration of the resolution. Ib.

4. DEBTOR'S STATEMENT OF AFFAIRS.

Joint and Separate Debts and Assets.—In a petition for liquidation it is the duty of the debtor in his statement of affairs to distinguish between his joint and separate assets and liabilities. Cockayne, Ex parte, 15 L. R., Eq. 218; 42 L. J., Bk. 71; 23 L. T. 678; 21 W. R. 749.

Where a debtor had not so distinguished his assets and debts, and the registrar in consequence refused to register a special resolution for liquidation by arrangement:—Held, that this decision was correct. Ib.

When a liquidating debtor has been formerly in partnership, his statement of affairs must shew which are his joint and which are his separate assets and liabilities, and if the statement produced at the first meeting of the creditors does not shew this distinction, the resolutions passed at the meeting are invalid and will not be registered. Gibbs, Ex parte, Webb, In re, 10 L. R. Ch. 382; 44 L. J., Bk. 73; 32 L. T. 292; 23 W. R. 592.

A debtor, who in his liquidation petition describes himself as having been formerly in partnership, ought in his statement of affairs to distinguish between his joint and separate debts and assets, or to state expressly that no debts and no assets of the former partnership exist. Buckley, Ex parte, Buckley, In re, 16 Ch. D. 513; 44 L. T. 39; 29 W. R. 920—C. A.

If the statement of affairs fails to do this, resolutions passed by the creditors under the petition ought not to be registered. The court, however, granted leave to summon a fresh first meeting of the creditors. Ib.

Statement should not be supplemented by Affidavit.]—The statement of affairs ought not to be supplemented by affidavits filed after the meeting of the creditors. Ib.

Accuracy of Statement.]—In the statement of affairs of a debtor who had filed a liquidation petition, there was inserted a large debt due to an illegal association. At the first meeting of creditors a liquidation was resolved on:—Held, that the resolutions ought to be registered. Day, Ex parte, 1 Ch. D. 699; 45 L. J., Bk. 53; 33 L. T. 867; 24 W. R. 492.

— Jurisdiction of Registrar.]—When a liquidation has been resolved upon, the registrar on the application to register the resolution has no jurisdiction to entertain any question as to the accuracy of the debtor's statement of affairs. Walter, Ex parte, Webb, In re, 2 Ch. D. 326; 45 L. J., Bk. 105; 34 L. T. 701; 24 W. R. 834—C. A.

It is for the statutory majority of the creditors to decide as to the sufficiency of the debtor's statement, and all inquiries as to the correctness of the different items of the debtor's statement must be made at the meeting of the creditors, and not before the registrar on the application for registration. Ib.

— When Objection should be taken.]—If the majority of the creditors has passed the resolution not for the benefit of the creditors at large, but from motives of kindness to the debtor, the objection should be raised on the application for registration; but if the debtor's statement is fraudulent, the question of fraud ought not to be entered into on the application for registration, but a distinct application should be made to rescind the resolution, or to vacate the registration if it has been registered. Ib.

Same Statement used on two Occasions.]—Registration of the resolutions passed by the creditors under a liquidation petition having been refused, leave was given to the debtor, a trader, to summon a fresh first meeting of the creditors. The fresh meeting was held more than two months after the original meeting, but the debtor produced the same statement of his affairs as he had produced at the original meeting:—Held, that there being no evidence that the state of the debtor's affairs had changed in the interval, it could not be taken that the statement was necessarily inaccurate. Early, Ex parte, Golding, In re, 13 Ch. D. 300; 42 L. T. 298; 28 W. R. 310—C. A.

— Creditor's Knowledge of Inaccuracy.]—The statement of the debts and assets of a liquidating debtor shewed that his assets covered his liabilities, but his principal assets consisted of houses which were heavily mortgaged. The majority of creditors passed a resolution to accept a composition of 10s. in the pound. A dissentient creditor applied to set aside all the proceedings, producing evidence that the debtor had undervalued his property. The debtor filed an affidavit stating that his creditors accepted the composition with a full knowledge of the state of his property, and from a desire to assist him and prevent his being completely ruined, and also to avoid waiting for the realization of the property, which would have taken a considerable time:—Held, that as the dissentient creditor, as well as the others, knew that the assets exceeded the liabilities, there was no ground for setting aside the proceedings. Linsley, Ex parte, Harper, In re, 9 L. R., Ch. 290; 43 L. J., Bk. 84; 29 L. T. 857.

5. OMISSION TO INSERT CREDITOR'S NAME AND DEBT IN STATEMENT OF AFFAIRS.

A certificate of discharge obtained by a debtor who has filed a petition for liquidation by arrangement under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 125, is valid against a creditor, whose name has been omitted by the debtor from the list of creditors delivered to the registrar. Elmalie v. Corrie, 4 Q. B. D. 295; 48 L. J., Q. B. 462; 40 L. T. 150; 27 W. R. 279—C. A. Affirming S. C., 39 L. T. 107.

The certificate of discharge of a liquidation debtor is a good answer to a claim in respect of a debt due before the discharge, though the creditor's name was omitted from the debtor's statement, and though he had no notice of the proceedings in liquidation. Heather v. Webb, 2 C. P. D. 1; 46 L. J., C. P. 89; 25 W. R. 253.
